Selection..............................Banjo Club
Song—"Song of the Steeple",
Columbia College Quartette
A Few Remarks....................George Taggart Song—"Standing on the Corner",
Clarence Cree
Ballad—"I Wonder"..........Elmer E. Runyon
Plantation Medley..............Double Quartette
Xylophone Solo............Fletcher D. Hallock
Topical Song....................Will N. Runyon
Finale..........Minstrel Troupe and Orchestra

The troupe was an aggregate of exceptional talent, and all won much praise and applause. The soloists all were encored, and all the jokes were laughed at. When there was sentiment, it was appreciated, even by the burlesquing Bones and Tambos, who wept crocodile tears. When there was fun—and it was always in evidence in some part of the stage—the buoyancy of hearts inspired forgetfulness of the weariness of standing in a crowd.

Some of the gags were wanderers recaptured—as that of the man who put business before pleasure and so appeared at the show instead of attending his mother-in-law's funeral, and who could find no complaint for her death—but even the backnumbers were given with a refreshing vim, and were spiced by the many new ones. A woman riding horseback up a hill was said to be like a big girl giving a little girl a little dog, because she gave a little gal a pup. Even this did n't cause a stampede for fresh air, but on the contrary the mirthful people cried like Oliver Twist for more.

George Hallock came in for a great ad in one of Stevens's gags. After Bones had wondered why Hallock as a temperance man did n't keep prohibition goods, he went on to explain that owing to the hard times all the goods in the store had taken a drop; that the first time he took one of Hallock's umbrellas out it got soaked; that when he put on a pair of Hallock's pants he found them full and after they had been worn out in the night dew they were the tightest pair he ever saw; that a coat he got of Hallock got on a terrible tear; and that one day when he went in the store he could n't find a collar that would stand up.

This; the audience heard, and shrieked with delight. Perhaps it was the way George told it. He was always funny, and a great hit. He was particularly good in his song, which Wade Whipple wrote especially for the occasion, and for which he was called out again and again. It ran:

IF BARNUM WERE ALIVE.
(AS SUNG BY GEORGE O. STEVENS.)

In traveling through the nation,
Alive to observation,
By day or night
Some novel sight
Will more than common note invite;
And when with application
To study them we strive,
We wonder where some folks would be—
If Barnum were alive.

CHORUS.

Ha, ha, ha! Ha, ha, ha!
There's some funny show,
Ha, ha, ha! Ha, ha, ha!
Everywhere we go.
And when such illustration
Assails our observation
We wonder where some folks would be—
If Barnum were alive.

Our city pas discerning
To trolley progress turning,
Will grant their prayer
If they will swear
To pave with gold the thoroughfare,
And give them of their earning
Per cent 'bout 25—
Now where as sharpers would they be,
If Barnum were alive! CHO—

Just note our Plainfield coppers—
As detectives they are whoppers—
So sleek and sly
When rogues they'd spy
A very shrewd disguise they try.
Brass buttons and blue toppers
To wear they do contrive—
Now where d'ye think these chaps would be,
If Barnum were alive! CHO—

There's Mr. Elmer Runyon—
He's neither corn nor bunion—
Beneath the hat
That covers pat
The man who knows just where he's [at,
Though bald as any onion,
Great thoughts within him strive—
You could not get him in a cage,
If Barnum were alive. CHO—

A health unto our Billy!
The chap who willy nilly
With song and jest
In genius drest
Will jar the buttons off your vest;
And up Fame's pathway hilly
At top he'll soon arrive,
And be the greatest show on earth—
Though Barnum were alive. CHO—

'Twould please me to continue
This song that seems to win you,
But there's no doubt
That I'm about
Of respiration quite played out;
And if my vocal sinew
To strain I'd further strive,
You'd shortly find that I would be,
Like Barnum—not alive. CHO—

Wade Whipple is the pen name for another Stevens, an uncle of George. The score as well as the verse was by him, except that W. E. MacClymont harmonized the chorus.

George Taggart was at his best, and his best can't be beat by any ordinary humorist. He came out in a Paderewski wig, checkered trousers that could be heard clear to Westfield, and a long linen duster that had been shredded into carpet rags. He explained his condition by saying he had been toying with Mr. McQuaide's dog. He said dawg, and looked hurt when some one told him to say dog. "That's all right",—he replied—"I know that dog is right generally—but you have n't met this animal."

A New York friend of his—he continued—had spent Blizzard day with him, seeing the Plainfield country: they had viewed the City Park, and he being used to Central Park confessed he had never seen anything like this; after enjoying the fountains and the statues they had taken a glimpse at Hotel Albino, and searched through the Public Library in an effort to find the public. They had inspected the residence of J. Parker Mason, famous for being the place where all the euchre prizes went; and they had skated on the New Brooklyn or New Market lake—he did n't know which, as he never could tell those two cities apart. Mr. Taggart concluded his running fire of witticisms with a realistic recitation of the New York Sun's great new poem "And the Young Man Sat and Waited". He was recalled, and gave a burlesque of Henry Irving, which was admirable and enjoyed.

As if Elmer Runyon had not already been reminded of his Bill Nyeness, a fly was represented as taking possession of his cranium, and saying that as there was no heir apparent it had usurped the crown. Thomas Van Boskerck was reported to have named his horse "Oyster" because he made the saddle rock. Thus with jest and song merry and musical went the minstrel show. One of the chief hits of the night was the original song of Will Runyon, the genius and joker, who is always enthusiastically welcomed in public or private entertainment. He sang, with repeated recalls and amid uproarious applause, the following:

IF THE MAYOR WOULD ONLY GIVE HIS JOB TO ME.
(AS WRITTEN AND SUNG BY WM. N. RUNYON.)

I'll sing, dear friends, of several things that I would surely do—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me;
I'd reform the City Government and all the people too—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me:
I'd appoint J. Parker Mason to be Justice of the Peace,
And Charlie Fisk would get a job as Captain of Police;
With this great pair the greengoods men their victims could not fleece—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me.

CHORUS.

Oh, well, well, I really cannot tell
Of all the changes you would quickly see;
But you bet your hat we would all get fat—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me.

I'd build a fine new Court House and the dearest little Jail—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me:
I'd feed the inmates every day on buckwheat cakes and quail—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me;
I'd make Fred Andrews warden, and his ways so debonnaire
Would give the city prison such a real Hope Chapel air
That all the ministers in town would spend their Summers there—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me. CHO—

A message to the City Fathers I would quickly send—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me;
And one reform much needed, I should strongly recommend—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me:
I would n't kick because they lay those sewer pipes so slow,
Nor if on Charlie Corwin's head more hair should start to grow,
But I would make that trolley run where someone wants to go—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me. CHO—

The young men too who live in town, would quickly change their ways—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me;
I'd make a model set of them inside of thirty days—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me:
I'd capture Jimmy Leonard for my confidential clerk,
For Corporation Counsel I would nominate Bill Kirk,
And I'd have the Council pass a law to make Pete Matthews work—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me. CHO—

The Courier-News and Daily Press would never scrap and fight—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me;
They would print nice things about each other every single night—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me!
I'd mesmerize the Editors, and then there would be fun—
For out would come The Press and say "The Courier yanks the bun",
And the Courier-News in turn would call The Press "A Number 1"—
If the Mayor would only give his job to me. CHO—

Now Mr. Gilbert, let me say, that you need never fear—
If you 'll only give your lovely job to me;
I 'll give you lots of work to do throughout the coming year—
If you 'll only give your lovely job to me;
I 'll hire the alleys downstairs, and I 'll set you there to bowl,
I 'll bring the town around each night to cheer you as you roll,
I 'll warrant you a steady line of pleasure, bless your soul!—
If you 'll only give your lovely job to me. CHO—

Mr. Freeman deserves praise, and won it, for his excellent singing of the difficult "Bedouin Love Song". "I've Been Working on the Levee" was a particularly appreciated melody by the double quartette, Messrs. Walz, G. B. Schoonmaker, Lewis, Clark, Runyon, Cokefair, Freeman, and W. N. Runyon. The Columbia College Quartette, Messrs. Miller, Denicke, Janes and Castleman, gave delightful music. The banjo club afforded full enjoyment through the deft fingers of Messrs. F. D. Hallock, J. H. Hallock, R. D. Schoonmaker, G. F. Schoonmaker, Taylor, and Lehman. Fletcher D. Hallock spread wonder and amazement by his xylophone solos, performed entirely by peculiar cluckings of his tongue in exact reproduction of the notes of the xylophone, the illusion being heightened and at the same time made amusing by the manipulation of a mallet on chunks of kindling wood strung together and held stretched by the funny end men. Elmer Runyon's sweet tenor voice charmed as ever, and nothing could be funnier than Mr. Cree's thoroughly coon song about "My Baby—my honey—my sweet one—my Zulu!"

The finale was a medley of melody.

A good-enough show for any town, the audience said of the minstrels; and there was more to come. This was a one-act farce-comedy, produced, after a short interval, by the following company of Plainfield amateurs:

Mrs. Effingham, a young widow,
Mrs. J. Parker Mason
Mrs. Marabout, a volatile society woman,
Mrs. L. W. Serrell, Jr.
Mrs. Coddington, a mamma with a daughter to bring out..........Mrs. Irving H. Brown
Arabella Coddington, a daughter with nothing to say..............Mrs. William L. Saunders
Arthur Rutledge, an innocent offender,
Richard L. Colburn
Mr. Walton, a social cynic..........Fred W. Walz
Mr. Grayson, a tender and true young man,
Henry L. Bogert
Bertie Appleby..........................George Taggart
Gen. Sabretache, a thunder and blazes old man,
[illegible] Anthony
Mr. [illegible], a [illegible]
Irving H. Brown
Thomas, the butler..............William E. Cock

The story of the play has already been told in these columns, and will not bear telling too often, if it is to hold together. Mrs. Burton Harrison is fashionable and clever, and her little social comedies read well enough; but "Tea at Four o'Clock" wasn't worth the effort expended on it by such an earnest and talented cast. The staging was perfect, under the personal supervision of J. Parker Mason, the scene being the walled garden adjoining Mrs. Effingham's Lenox house. It was hard work for the actors to make themselves silly and insincere. Not much, therefore, could be done with any of the parts, though Mr. Anthony did by much energy throw considerable character into the bombastic Sabretache of the fierce mustaches. Mrs. Serrell had the role of a deceitful gadabout, with which she was by nature unsympathetic; her faint and recovery were a clever bit of acting, and gave a glimpse of the ability she would show in a better part.

Mrs. Mason was regal in a rich gown, queenly with the manners of a superb hostess, and altogether admirable in her womanly traits as revealed in her love for Rutledge; but it is not necessary for her to adopt the stage appearance of any of Mrs. Harrison's mild heroines to appear well gowned, cordially entertaining, and womanly. Mrs. Brown had the distasteful task of trying to bury her amiability in the part of an ambitious but ungracious and even vixenish parent. Mrs. Saunders has the ability and experience to give interest to even a trivial assignment, and was amusing with her schoolgirl awkwardness, her society fright, and her fiction about the duel.

Mr. Walz was refreshing because of his personal breeziness, and not through any merit of his role. Mr. Cock was seen to less advantage than in former plays, and thus one of Plainfield's best amateurs was buried. Mr. Brown was compelled by the author to make himself tiresome, and proved his faithfulness to histrionic art by doing so. Mr. Taggart must have been as unpleasant to himself in Mrs. Harrison's creation of a vacuous mentality as his stammering was to an audience already kept too long. Mr. Bogert was at least earnest and persevering. Mr. Colburn had little to do but look handsome and gracefully enfold Mrs. Effingham in his arms; but not every man could fulfil those requirements as successfully as he did.

For the sake of Mrs. Burton Harrison's pride it is to be hoped that her copy of this issue of The Daily Press will miscarry in the mails, for it is not likely to be conducive to her peace of mind or soothing to her nerves to learn that one of her plays fell flat after a minstrel show.

When it all was over, people said little about the "Tea", but they did say much about the mirth and music that preceded it. And most of all they talked about the jam.

PATRONESSES.

Mrs M E Edgerton
" W E Lowe
Miss E Schipper
Mrs G H Goddard
Miss E Cock
" N Haviland
Mrs J W Reinhart
" F H Andrews
" D T VanBuren
" R L Burnett
" E N Erickson
" C A Marsh
" F O Herring
" W L Saunders
" G W VanBoskerck
" J Parker Mason
" J T Scott
" L W Serrell Jr
" J G Foster
" W E Stewart
" W P Smith
" L G Timpson
" A C Vail
" E Woltmann
" H Hastings
" D F Ginna
" G Randall
" F H Wills
" J T Baker
" M S Ackerman
" G W Endicott
" C C Cokefair
" B A Hegeman Jr
" A Gilbert
" G A Chapman
Mrs O T Waring
" E L Walz
" I H Brown
" M W Tyler
" J K Myers
" H O Fleming
" C P Ralli
" W J Roome
" H M Stockton
" E W Hedges
" J W DeGraff
" H P Talmadge.
Miss Ella Serrell
Mrs W Haviland
" A Atterbury
" H L Bogert
" S A Ginna
" J Edgar Corlies
" A C Baldwin
" C A Reed
" G Evans
" H Lapsley
" J B Dumont
" S Huntington
" L N Lovell
" E R Ackerman
" J H Ackerman
" J E Tracy
" T Rushmore
" R Rushmore
" C E Abbott
" E L Finch
" C Wharton Jr
" R Cox
" M I Cooley

OUR CLIMATE COMPARED.

Southern California and Plainfield Not So Widely Divergent As Might Be Supposed.

Hugh D. Vail, brother of Mahlon Vail of this city sends to The Press the following interesting comparison of the weather of his home, Santa Barbara, for 1894, with that of Plainfield for the same period:

	At Plainfield	At S. B.
Mean temperature of the year.......	52.9	59.6
Mean temperature of the Summer.	72.2	63.4
Mean temperature of the Winter...	31.9	51.5
Mean temperature of the Spring...	51.1	56.2
Mean temperature of the Fall.......	53.9	62
Mean temperature coldest month..	28.1	49.7
Mean temperature warmest month.	76.4	65.9
Highest temperature in the year...	100	94
Lowest temperature in the year....	1	33
Yearly variation in temperature...	99	61
Mean of daily variation............	20.7	16.3
Mean of monthly variation..........	50	36
Number of clear days...............	88	215
Number of fair days................	174	70
Number of cloudy days..............	103	80
Number of days when the rainfall was over 1.100 inches............	139	37
Total precipitation in inches........	58.6	10.1

The above comparison—says Mr. Vail—ought to convince any one who examines it that this is not the very hot place during Summer, that all South California is generally supposed to be by persons in the east.

Lawyer C. L. Murphy.

Among the successful applicants to the Supreme Court in Trenton for admission to the bar of New Jersey was Clarence L. Murphy of this city. Lawyer Murphy will practice in this city, and intends to [illegible] about March 1.

DRAMA AND OPERA

GRAND OPERA GIVES PLACE TO EXCLUSIVE GERMAN OPERA.

Mansfield Serves Notice on Nashville that He Won't Play There Any More. Langtry and Potter Come Back With Lustreless Plumes. The New York Programme.

There is one characteristic about distinguished theatrical immigrants to this country which has attracted the attention of veteran theatergoers in New York, and that is the extraordinary repertory which the English players present in the course of a short season in this city. Complaints of American actors about the financial success of such players as Henry Irving, Beerbohm Tree and the Kendals are very bitter, and as a rule it is held that there is something unpatriotic in patronizing English players so lavishly, and treating our own comedians and character actors with indifference. It has been pointed out time and again that the sort of people who visit the theater when alien actors are playing are entirely different from the ordinary attendants when native actors hold the boards. Gray heads are numerous in all the audiences to which Mr. Irving, Mr. Tree and the Kendals play. The fact is that the repertory of these actors appeals to playgoers who have had years of experience. The drama is almost a passion with thousands of people in New York, and it is no unusual thing for one man to book seats for every change of play of one of the visiting companies. With the exception of Mr. Mansfield, American actors do not seem to have energy or resources enough to present a series of dramas with completeness in the course of two or three weeks' time. Mr. Goodwin, for instance, plays one drama all the year around, and so do Mr. Drew, Mr. Sothern, Mr. Crane and other stars of their magnitude. Most of them would start back aghast at the idea of setting forth six or eight plays in the course of a month's engagement in any one city.

RICHARD MANSFIELD.

Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Potter will both appear in New York before long, but the excitement which once attended their coming is entirely a thing of the past. When these two well known women first appeared with their theatrical companies in this city together there was some attempt at rivalry and a great amount of gossip about them. Mrs. Langtry's movements were followed as though she was a royal personage, and society and the world at large was aghast at Mrs. Potter's move in going upon the professional stage. But since that time these things are accepted as a matter of course. Both ladies now play in little one night towns to small receipts, and their talk is not of the Prince of Wales or society, but of the amount of money which they expect to play to during the rest of the week. It is all done on a commercial basis. Mrs. Potter, like Mrs. Langtry, shows traces of the lapse of years and the hardships of continual traveling and acting.

When the curtain goes up at the Metropolitan on the 28th inst. it will disclose the ship that is bearing Isolde to Cornwall, this being the first time in many years that Wagner's famous love drama has been given here. The work has been fittingly selected by Mr. Walter Damrosch to inaugurate the season of German opera to be given here under his direction. The works to be performed this season consist of "Die Walkure," "Siegfried," "Goetterdaemmerung," "Lohengrin," "Tristan und Isolde," "Tannhaeuser" and "Die Meistersinger."

Preparations are well advanced at some of the theaters for the early displacement of the current plays. A set of new scenery is being painted at the Fifth Avenue for "His Wife's Father," the new comedy which William H. Crane is to produce there. Mr. Crane and his company are rehearsing this piece while finishing his Southern tour. In the meantime, Fanny Davenport is on the Fifth Avenue stage with "Gismonda." At Hoyt's "A Milk White Flag" is holding its place for the short period, at the end of which "The Foundling" is to come in. "The Fatal Card" will soon give way at Palmer's to Mrs. Langtry, who will bring out two or three pieces newly adapted from French and German sources. "The District Attorney" will remain at the American to the end of a fifth week. "The Old Homestead" is going on at the Star, "Humanity" at the Fourteenth Street, "Mme. Sans Gene" at the Broadway, and "Rob Roy" at the Herald Square. It is a bustling week at Abbey's, where Beerbohm Tree appears.

Agnes Booth will appear in next season's production of "The Sporting Duchess." William Lackaye is to go a-starring in "Two of Him," a new piece by William C. Hudson. Charles H. Hoyt is said to contemplate a comic opera. Cissie Loftus will return to the London music halls in April. Irene Perry, who retired from the stage upon marrying Albert Weber, is acting again in Boston. Richard Mansfield wrote to a Nashville journal that he would never act in that city again, because he had been adversely criticised there. Sarah Bernhardt's next role will be in "Tragolbalbus," a new work by a son-in-law of Victor Hugo. Mme. Janauschek is going on a Shakespearean lecture tour. Clara Morris, who has not acted this season, will resume next winter. The Smith-DeKoven opera for Lillian Russell will have Napoleon for one of its characters. Maggie Mitchell has let Gladys Wallace have "Fanchon" to use next season. The Kendals have tried in Boston, without success, an English piece called "A Leader of Men."

LINWARD.

Delia Danahay—You needn't put on so many airs, Irene McGinty, 'cause yer got a dash in yer fambly. My aunt ain't [illegible] posed to live wid my brother Chim[illegible] [illegible] which is catchin'.

ROYAL

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

LIVING PICTURES OF 1776.

A Martha Washington Tea Gives an Idea of Colonial Society.

Powdered hair and colonial costumes, together with a liberal display of the red, white and blue, gave the parlors of the First Presbyterian Church an air of patriotism last night, when the women of the Sunday-school served a Martha Washington tea, that was appropriate to the day.

The character of Martha, who was the presiding functionary of tea, was portrayed by Mrs. J. M. Bettman, and that of George by George O. Stevens.

At the head of the serving table Martha poured coffee and at the other end Mrs. Ladd poured tea, while flitting in and out among the seven other tables the following young women served the guests: Misses Blish, Ladd, Overton, Herring, VanWinkle, Vermeule, Petrie, Dayton, Glenn and Remsen.

The following were the committee who had general charge of the affair: Mesdames Bettman, Ladd, Dunn, Pope, Misses Blish, Remsen, Blair and Petrie.

The supper was given for the benefit of the carpet fund, and a handsome sum was realized for that purpose.

HELPING THE NEEDY.

Splendid Continued Work of the Organized Aid Association.

The District Committee of the Citizens Organized Aid Association met last evening in the hospitable parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church. The agent was present, and reported for two weeks 26 applications for assistance, of which 13 were new cases, making a total of 428 separate cases since the organization of the association. Of the applications ten were for coal, and eleven for food. Assistance had been afforded by the Ladies Relief Association. Two cases were referred to the Congregational Church, one to Monroe Chapel, one to the Roman Catholic Church, and one to the Borough of North Plainfield. The advice of the Committee was asked by the Ladies Relief as to two cases of recent origin, and the request made for the appointment of a friendly visitor in one case.

Park Club Junior Dance.

A very delightful dance was held last night in the Park clubhouse.

The matrons were Mrs. B. A. Hegeman and Mrs. Geo. Evans. The belles of the evening were the Misses Reinhart, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Miss Alice Barlow, Miss Safford and Miss Middleditch.

The following were others present: Mrs C Stillman, G Rider, J Kirkner, Paul and Louis Toyne, Bert and Francis Foster, Miss E Tracy, A McCreedy, Mr Rodman, Miss E Kyte, Fred Fish, Miss Juges, F Foster, F B Smith, H Patten, H Day, Allan Laing, H Williams, Miss Day, F Baker, Maud and James Middleditch, W Abbott, A Woltmann and cousin, A West, J Brower, Dr F C Ard, Carl Brown, Miss Alice Barlow, Howard Turrill, F L Herbert, Kate Miller, Blanche Wells, E Faber, W Place, Miss Safford, W Hull, C McGee, Harry McGee, J Daniels, H Wells, H Rushmore, L Pangborn and Mrs C Lyman.

The waltz and twostep were the favorite dances, and had many encores. The music was furnished by Coade and Rogers.

Blue and Gold.

A card party was held Thursday evening at the home of Miss Mabel Force on West Fourth street.

The following were present: The Misses Mills, L Messersmith, Edith Darby, Etta Raybert, Ida Henry of Bound Brook, Clara Williams, Alice Lee, Harriet Filmer, Lena Smalley; John De Meza, Will Moore, Albert Kershaw, Charlie Close and Bert Henry of Bound Brook, Bert and Will Woodland, Russell Johnson, Will Dunn, Ed. Lane, Robert Clark, Ernest Willard, and Arthur Albertus.

The tally-cards were heart-shaped, those for the men being blue, and for the gentler sex, gold.

The first prizes were won by Miss Lena Smalley and Arthur B. Albertus. The consolation prizes went to Miss Filmer and Charles Close.

At the conclusion of the games, refreshments were served, and Miss Etta Raybert gave a recitation in her usual excellent manner, and Robert Clark sang a solo.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

IN THE BOROUGH.

Washington's Birthday Well Celebrated by the Schools.

Washington's Birthday was celebrated at the North Plainfield Public School Thursday with interesting exercises. A number of visitors attended and enjoyed with the school the entertainment provided.

The programme of the higher classes was as follows:

Music—The National Morn..........School
Recitation—The True Glory of Washington, Miss Susie Milne [Powell
Recitation—The Twenty-second of February, Miss May McLaughlin [Bryant
Recitation—Maxims of Washington, Pupils of Fifth Grade
Recitation—A Boy's Protest, Kenneth Anderson
Recitation—The Vow of Washington, Chas Everett [Whittier
Music—The Ark of Freedom..........School
Reading—Contrast between Napoleon and Washington..........Clifford Braider
Recitation—Ode to Washington..........Holmes Frank MacDonald
Recitation—Maxims of Washington, Pupils of Sixth Grade
Recitation—History of "Yankee Doodle", Edwin Lowenhauft
Reading—History of "Hail Columbia", Miss Tina Voebl
Music—Medley of National Songs..........School
Recitation—History of Our Flag, Fred Bettman
Recitation—Our Flag..........Montgomery Miss Alice Barker.
Recitation—Address to the Flag, Robert Terrill
Recitation—Present Number of Stars in the Flag..........Fred Bonney
Recitation—Flag of the Rainbow, Miss May Conroy
Music—Flag of the Free, Pupils of the Eighth Grade
Recitation—The Good Old Days, Chas. Woolston
Reading—The Declaration of Independence, William Loizeaux
Recitation—The Song of Peace..........Miller Miss Hattie Squier.
Recitation—Ode to Washington..Butterworth Lydie Loizeaux
Music—The Battle Cry of Freedom......School

The programme of the lower classes was as follows:

Singing—"America".
Opening poem..........Miss Isabel Lane
Washington's Life in Poetry—Edward Overton, Frank Codwise, Albert Utzinger, John VanHorn, Fred Armstrong.
Sketch of his Life—Leonard Mantz, Chris Utzinger, Miss Angelina Jackson, Miss Mary Geiger, Willie Linnett, Frank Rockfellow, Miss Agnes Bailey, Joe Parkinson, Willie Nischwitz, Miss Mary Woolston, Charles Powell.
Singing—"Mount Vernon Bells".
Appearance and Traits—Gussie Korman, Geo. Egel, John Brown, Salve Kiftalti, Thomas MacCallum, Grover Cashon.
My Native Land..........Harry Woodland
Singing—Native Land.
Selections.
Louisa Ebel, Lowndes Smith, Ray Stevens, Lillie Breakey, Stryker Hoagland.
Flag Selections — Edith Kreutzfeldt, Minnie Nischwitz, Hazel Martin, Grace Powell, Edw Springer
Singing—Beautiful Flag Selections — Willie Gaub, Bertie Hanson, Samuel Watson, Chas Smith, Edith Mantz, Raymond Martin, Harry Martin, Kitty Rutledge, Maud Emmons, Mary Cain, Chas Lewis Singing—Fling Out the Joyful Banner.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

N. T. Pike of Somerset street is confined with rheumatism.

Mrs. Seymour G. Smith is ill with the grip. Fred Smith is recovering.

Mrs. M. H. Pike of Rockview avenue has gone to Baltimore to spend several weeks.

Albert Runyon is again at his desk in Boice, Runyon & Co's office, after a four-weeks illness.

Miss Billings of Deerfield, Mass., is visiting her sister, Miss Louise H. Billings of East Fifth street.

Barzila Randolph and family of Dunellen have taken up their residence in their house on Grove street.

The marriage of E. M. Lunger to Adelaide Corield took place Thursday evening at the parsonage of Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

The Whist Club of the Lady Cyclers will enjoy a theatre party March 2, attending "Too Much Johnson" in the Standard Theatre.

Max Hansen, who has been suffering from Bright's disease at his home on Liberty street for three months, is not improved in his condition.

Mrs. Morgan S. Taylor of Rockview avenue, her daughter Miss Taylor, and son Fred Taylor, sailed today by Steamship Kaiser William, for Algiers.

Thomas J. Young of North Plainfield has decided to leave Plainfield April 1, and will live with his daughter in Brooklyn. Wm. F. Debele has bought his house and will reside there.

Whist was enjoyed Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss L. Maltby of Plainfield avenue. Mrs. Auguste Saltzman and Miss Mary M. French won the first prizes, and Miss Arline Crane and Miss Hogan secured the second prizes.

A delicious supper was enjoyed in the Country Clubhouse after the play Thursday night. Those participating were Mr and Mrs J Parker Mason, Mr and Mrs W L Saunders, Mr and Mrs Irving Brown, Mr and Mrs L W Serrell, Jr, Mr and Mrs F O Herring, Mr Taggart, Mrs Charles J Taggart, Mr and Mrs Henry Bogart, Fred Walz, Richard Coltman and J S Anthony.

Miss Clara Bolby and friends were sweeter last evening than nature had originally made them, inasmuch as they gathered together at her home on Hethwood avenue to participate in a taffy-pull last evening. Those with their fingers in the molasses were the Misses Josie Banks, Grace Adams, Lillie Bergel, Tiney Smith, Messrs. Will and Herbert Cleaves, Court Adams, and Will Bolby.

RUSSEL SAGE SCORED.

Joseph Choate Turns the Vials of Satire Upon the Modern Shylock.

Mr. Choate was not in his usual humor when he began to sum up the case of William G. Laidlaw against Russel Sage for $50,000 damages for injuries sustained by the explosion of dynamite in Sage's office three years ago, when Norcross dropped a bomb upon being refused a satchel full of money by the astute old Wall street sharp.

Mr. Choate said: The counsel for the defense has admitted that Laidlaw honestly believed in his narration of what occurred in connection with the explosion. I won't give Mr. Sage the benefit of any such admission on my part. Mr. Sage has been engaged for years in a calling which hardens the heart and blunts the moral sense. He is a money lender, a note shaver, a stock gambler. He says to this man "go," and he goeth; to this broker "come," and he cometh, and to this banker "shell out," and he shelleth. It is an honest man on one side and a dishonest man on the other—confessedly so.

Sage sat looking at Choate without a wince. Choate went over near him and talked down at him as he shook his hand almost in the face of Sage, and said:

"On the witness stand he was shuffling, evading, prevaricating, skulking, dodging, and sneaking."

There was not a twitch of a feature of Sage at this or when Choate fell back, and still pointing at him said:

"Oh, he knows he owes his life to Laidlaw. He spoke the truth in the drug store. Every one knows it who has heard the testimony in the case. Sage was the only one who was not seriously injured by the explosion. Why, he was shaving himself at the end of the fourth day, and beginning to shave others again at the end of ten days! Look at him! Seventy-eight years old, and keener than the average man on this jury. He wasn't hurt at all. I appeal to these immortal trousers and the debris of the coat tails which were mixed up with the debris of the table on which Sage gently subsided."

Mr. Choate then swung the trousers which Sage had worn that day. He said it was not possible to account for the want of injury to Sage except on the supposition that the missiles which would have gone to him had struck Laidlaw. Mr. Choate turned and said: "This trial is not between Sage and this poor man Laidlaw. It has become a trial between Sage and the Judges and courts of this State. I have been often asked how I can afford to spend my time on this case in behalf of this penniless man when the compensation is so little commensurate with the labor. They are trying to tire him out by appeal. I'll stand by him if it takes twenty trials before this man Sage is brought to the bar of justice."

There was applause, but Justice Patterson said he would punish any person for contempt who applauded.

"Thank God," said Mr. Choate when running over the evidence, "there are some members of the bar that this man of millions has not got under his control. People are afraid of this man of millions. Witnesses are afraid to come into court against him."

Mr. Choate said that the action would die with the death of either Laidlaw or Sage, and that Sage "would spend many thousands of his ill-gotten millions" to win the case. He had retained an astute lawyer, who had loaded the case down with exceptions for another appeal.

TROTTING TRACK FOR A PONY.

The Unusual Conceit of a Wealthy Man in Brooklyn.

A wealthy Brooklyn man recently built a handsome residence in a densely populated part of the city. His action created considerable surprise among his friends, as the structure he erected would have been an ornament to the most fashionable neighborhood in the city.

It adjoined a coal yard, while directly opposite it are a number of ramshackled frame buildings, each one of which provides homes for half a dozen families. The man's next move was to purchase and then tear down one of these houses and erect a fine red brick stable in its place. His last action, however, has stamped him as a really eccentric character.

He purchased the coal yard behind his house, tore down the fences, and then had the place levelled off. Then he had a small trotting track laid out. The remainder of the ground he had sodded with the finest grass obtainable, and then an iron fence was erected, through which the whole of the interior is visible. The trotting track is a most diminutive affair, but amply large for the purpose for which it was laid out, which is the amusement of the man's nine-year-old son.

This lad owns a pretty little Shetland pony, which he rides like an expert, and any fine afternoon he may be seen tearing around the track at a great rate. The other children in the neighborhood gather around the fence and watch him enviously.

Occasionally he invites one of them in and gives him a ride around the track on his pony. He is a manly little fellow, and makes a pretty figure with his brown leather leggins as he urges on his pony. It is a strange sight in what is recognized as one of the poorer sections of the city, and sometimes as many as two hundred people may be seen watching him through the fence.

A Question of Balances.

The French-Canadians are not without a considerable sense of humor, and they highly appreciate the following story, told of a prosperous baker in a town not far from Quebec.

The baker was in the habit of buying his butter in pound balls or rolls, from a farmer with whom he did a great deal of business. Noticing that these butter balls looked rather small, he weighed them, and found that they were all under a pound in weight.

Thereupon he had the farmer brought before the magistrate and accused of dishonest practices.

"These butter balls," said the judge to the farmer, "certainly weigh less than a pound. Have you any scales?"

"I have," answered the farmer.

"And have you weights?"

"No, no weights."

"Then how can you weigh your butter balls?"

"That's very simple," said the farmer; "while I've been selling the baker butter, I've been buying pound loaves of bread from him, and I used them for weights on my scales!"

A Virtue of It.

Pertly—There is one thing I have to say in favor of the wind when it whistles.

Dullhead—What's that?

Pertly—It never whistles popular airs.
—Harper's Bazar.

EDUCATION UP TO DATE.

We teach the children Danish,
Trigonometry and Spanish;
Fill their heads with old-time notions,
And the secrets of the oceans;
And the cuneiform inscriptions,
From the land of the Egyptians;
Learn the date of every battle;
Know the habits of the cattle;
Know the date of every crowning;
Read the poetry of Browning;
Make them show a preference
For each musty branch of science;
Tell the acreage of Sweden,
And the serpent's wiles at Eden;
And the other things we teach 'em
Make a mountain so immense
That we have not a moment left
To teach them Common Sense.
—Truth.

NAPOLEON ON HORSEBACK.

A Professional View of the Great Corsican as a Rider.

It was one of Napoleon's aphorisms that the most suitable palace for a French monarch was his tent; his most proper throne a war horse. And so it has come about that in the Napoleonic legend the famous "white horse" seems as necessary as the three-cornered hat and gray coat of "Marengo" to complete the picturesque little figure of the great emperor.

The white horse is familiar enough to all who have seen Meissonier's pictures, and has evidently been painted by the great artist with as much solicitude of detail and affectionate care as are employed in depicting its imperial master himself. The type of charger, then, that so often reappears is that of a three-quarter bred, light, but muscular animal, white or gray in color, with a considerable dash of Arab blood, as seen in the long neck, high crest and easy, springy gait. The horse, though spirited, is remarkably docile, and has entirely put aside the mere vanities of a showy and restive parade charger. Like its owner, it gives the impression of calm power and reserved force. This placid temperament was not the effect of any superior command in the horsemanship of Napoleon—for he had neither a good seat nor good hands—but simply by the result of the most careful previous preparation of the horses designed for his use. They were drilled to stand immobile by the hour, in the midst of the most fearful tumult, noise and excitement—for it would not have been easy for Napoleon to survey the battleground through his field glasses on the back of a champing, pawing and caracoling animal—and yet the horse must have a lively step in walking and a swift gallop on the moment of need. In the glimpses one obtains of Napoleon during the progress of a battle he seems either to be immobile or statuesque, or galloping recklessly at headlong pace.

With respect to his seat in the saddle it is worth while to consider the matter in detail. Napoleon himself used to take pleasure in describing the astonishment of the Mamelukes, after the battle of the Pyramids, when they beheld that this bold and irresistible conqueror was a little man, who rode like a butcher. Yet, to begin with, some reservation must be made as to the popular notion of Napoleon's exiguity of figure. At the time of the Egyptian campaign, and also, of course, at Lodi, where he gained the title of "Le Petit Caporal," he was slight and extremely thin; but considering that on his deathbed his physician found his measurement to be 5 feet 6 1-2 inches, he could hardly be very deficient in stature. In the prime of life he must have been appreciably taller, and, with his square shoulders, broad chest, and commanding bearing, looked, no doubt, extremely well on horseback. This is the more easy to believe when it is known that the shortness of his figure was due entirely to the lack of proportion of his lower limbs. His torso was that of a fairly tall man.

Vice Versa.

The Chinese do everything backward; they exactly reverse the usual order of civilization.

Note first that the Chinese compass points to the south instead of the north.

The men wear skirts and the women trousers.

The men wear their hair long and the women wear it short.

The men carry on dressmaking and the women carry burdens.

The spoken language of China is not written, and the written language is not spoken.

The Chinese surname comes first instead of last.

The Chinese shake their own hands instead of the hands of those they greet.

The Chinese dress in white at funerals and in mourning at weddings, while old women always serve as bridesmaids.

The Chinese launch their vessels sideways, and mount their horses from the off side.

The Chinese begin dinner with dessert, and end with soup and fish.—Union Signal.

Advice to My Boy.

"What's that you say, my boy?

The teacher says you are as sharp as a needle.

Well, probably she meant to compliment you, my boy—I have no doubt she did—but remember that needles go into things with their eyes closed. You don't want to be like that.

Now, there's the pin. The pin has a head, you will notice, which prevents it going in too far. Be like the pin, my boy.
—Rockland Tribune.

Barbara Frietchie Would Rejoice.

The Colonel Henry Kyd Douglas, who is rumored to be engaged to Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, is the Confederate soldier who took such umbrage at Whittier's "Barbara Frietchie" ballad. Barbara's adjuration to his fellow soldiers, "Spare your country's flag," seems to have stung this gallant but mistaken man with a bit of remorse. It would do Barbara Frietchie's soul good to know that he was going to marry General Grant's daughter.
—Boston Transcript.

He Couldn't, Really.

Sam—Let me have a twenty for a week, can't you, old fellow?

Robert—Why don't you raise it on that diamond ring?

Sam—Well, you see, it was presented to me by my dead wife, and I wouldn't like to give it up.

Robert—Same here; my money was presented to me by my dead father, and I don't like to give it up, either.

Sunshine.

World was never brighter
Than it is to-day;
Hearts were never lighter—
Don't care what they say.

Never mind the weather—
Get up when you fall;
We'll get there together,
Singin' after all!
—Atlanta Constitution.

FORTUNES WON AND LOST.

Speculators Who Have Tried Their Luck in Wall Street.

Wall street is generally set down as a place where money is to be made easily and in large amounts. As a matter of fact, comparatively few men have made money there. Speculative ventures long continued are apt to show a loss. It may be that a profitable "turn" or two will be made in the stock market, but it is the exception rather than the rule that the account, at least of an "outsider," is closed with a gain for him.

To the name of the stock exchange broker attaches not a little glamor, and not without reason. He is supposed to be fairly rolling in wealth, and it is fair to say that the average broker really has his share of this world's goods. It is not, however, from speculation that he derives his income, but from commissions on orders which he executes for others—to a large extent, speaking in a general way, from the people who "pay the fiddler's" in the street.

A "turn in the market" is either a purchase and a subsequent sale, which is a deal on the "long side;" or a sale and a subsequent purchase to "cover," which is a deal on the "short side." If the transaction is in one hundred shares, the commission which the speculator has to pay the broker is $12.50 "each way," or $25 altogether. Whether the adventurer in stocks is successful or not, the broker is, of course, sure of his $25. That much is to be taken from the profit or added to the loss of the speculator.

There are men, undeniable, who have made great fortunes in speculation. Foremost of these at the present day is Addison Cammack, the "bear" leader. The short side on which the bears operate, is supposed to be the most difficult one, and, indeed, it is. Mr. Cammack is a man of remarkable judgment and acumen.

James R. Keene is another example of speculative ability, yet he "went broke" six or eight years ago. His loss figured up the enormous sum of $13,000,000, and left him heavily in debt. He did not despair, but set to work to recoup his fortune. He has paid all his obligations and is once more worth, perhaps, $1,000,000. His forte seems to be in engineering "deals" in special stocks rather than in "playing" the market as a whole. Mr. Cammack, whose fortune is estimated at $10,000,000, "followed the market;" that is, he descries the natural tendency of values and risks his money accordingly. Naturally he makes mistakes at times, but he is quick to discern them and to correct them.

A figure in the street, both prominent and picturesque, is Deacon S. V. White, a pillar of Plymouth church, who has had his ups and downs on an extensive scale. He has failed three or four times, but he is a man of indomitable will, and when he meets with a rebuff he promptly starts in again to replenish his bank account. It was only three or four years ago that he lost $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 in corn. His confreres in the street considered it an error for him to digress from speculations in stocks, and so, apparently, it was. The Deacon quickly redirected his attention to stocks, and in cordage, sugar, whisky, Chicago gas and St. Paul, before many months rolled around, he had made enough to settle in full with every creditor. Nevertheless, misfortune again overtook him, and he was compelled to suspend payment within two years. He has since been slowly recovering his financial position and is again an extensive operator.

There are many men in the street who have not been so fortunate as Mr. Keene and Mr. White, but who cling to the speculative center on the theory that where you lose your money is the best place to look for it.

Samuel Mills, who was formerly one of the biggest brokers of the street, but encountered adversity, has made a manly struggle to get on his feet again, but the fates have been against him. He acted for Jay Gould when the latter was the ruling power in the street. The commissions he received from Mr. Gould were enormous. They amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. A difficulty arose between Mr. Gould and Mr. Mills which resulted in the severance of their relations.

Mr. Mills undertook deals in the market on his own book, and it is said, whether true or not, that Mr. Gould used his tremendous power to defeat them. Be that as it may, Mr. Mills lost all he had, and was compelled to surrender his membership in the stock exchange. He is now a man of middle age, and it may be that it is not too late for him to come once more to the front in the street.

The Cheerful Idiot.

"Do you know," said the Cheerful Idiot "that it is the easiest thing in the world to tell whether a man is going out on a journey or returning by the way he carries his valise!"

"I never thought of that," said the youngest boarder. "What is the difference?"

The Cheerful Idiot settled himself a little firmer in his chair and gloated a moment before answering.

"It is just this way," he went on. "When a man is going away he carries his valise toward the railroad station, and when he is coming back he carries it in the other direction."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Mean Trick.

Patrick was one of those witty sons of the Celtic isle whose amusing sayings had entertained many transatlantic travelers.

One day, when the steamer was about leaving port, Patrick received the order to haul in a long cable that dragged astern. Patrick jumped to the task cheerfully enough, and hauled away contentedly. But the excessive length of the cable taxed his patience.

"I wonder what's become of the end of this ould cable, anyhow?" And finally, growing more impatient, he growled out: "Faith, it's no use hauling away at the baste uv a cable. Some divil's cut the end off uv it."—Harper's Magazine.

SOME OF THESE DAYS.

Some of these days all the skies will be brighter,
Some of these days all the burdens be lighter,
Hearts will be happier, souls will be whiter,
Some of these days.

Some of these days, in the deserts upspringing,
Fountains shall flash while the joybells are ringing,
And the world, with its sweetest of birds, shall go singing,
Some of these days.

Some of these days! Let us bear with our sorrow,
Faith in the future—its light we may borrow,
There will be joy in the golden to-morrow—
Some of these days.
—Frank L. Stanton.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

R I

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homoeopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

P A N S • T A B

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled apothecaries and careful and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

U L

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

E S •

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; best terms; write at once and secure choice of territory.
ALLEN NURSERY CO.,
Rochester, N. Y.

THE LAST NEGRO SLAVE.

In Servitude for Twenty-Eight Years After the Emancipation.

It may seem incredible that a man should live in a state of servitude in this land for more than a quarter of a century after the emancipation of the negroes by the war; but Anderson Whitaker, an old negro, of Scott county, Va., can verify the truth of the statement that at least one negro did not avail himself of the proclamation of freedom, but remained in a state of servitude till the death of his old master in 1893—a period of more than twenty-eight years, after he might have been cultivating his own vine instead of that of another.

Anderson Whitaker was a slave, owned by an old man named Nathan Whitaker, in Scott county, Va. When the close of the war manumitted the negroes, old man Whitaker was an invalid, confined to his bed most of the time by a severe form of inflammatory rheumatism, and Anderson was his body servant and nurse. The old man did not want to give up his old, trusted, and faithful nurse, and he proposed to Anderson that if he would remain with him just as he was during the rest of his life that he (Nathan) would give him a house and some land and other property when he died. Anderson was a simple and trustful young darky, reared in the backwoods, knowing nothing else but to obey "de marster," and knowing nothing of the world and its ways.

He had a comfortable home, plenty to eat and wear, and he concluded to forego the sweets of freedom and remain as he was until the old master's death, which he expected at any time, since the old man was quite feeble and had long been afflicted with rheumatism. So he remained at the old home, working just as he had done all his life, nursing his invalid master, doing the chores about the house, and when he could leave the house working on the farm.

In August, 1893, old man Whitaker died, and Anderson's long period of servitude was ended. He had grown to be an old man, and fully expected to have enough from the old man's estate to keep him in comfort the rest of his days, and it had never occurred to him to doubt that the contract in which he so implicitly relied would be violated. But Anderson learned, just as many another had done, when it was too late to be of any benefit to him, that promise and performance sometimes lie very far apart.

It developed after the old man's death that the contract or agreement under which Anderson had spent the best part of his life in the service of another was not in writing; and either through forgetfulness or design, Nathan Whitaker did not carry out his promise to his former slave. When the will was opened and read, Anderson found that he had been remembered, indeed, but not to the extent that he had expected, for all that the will gave him was an old horse worth perhaps $30. No house, no land, no remuneration for his more than a quarter century's toil and care for his old master and he found that now in his old age he must start in life to earn his daily bread by such work as he could find to do.

MADE THE BEST OF IT.

Snowbound Passengers Formed a Club and Had a Merry Time.

Train No. 4, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, bound from Chicago to New York, and jammed in a snowdrift near Cresson, Pa., in the Alleghany Mountains, contained a crowd of old and practiced travelers who knew how to make the best of a very bad situation.

With them was Governor Daniel H. Hastings, under whose benign auspices the Keystone State is now being operated, and in the smoking car were any number of colonels, majors, doctors, captains and professors, not known in military, naval or scientific lore, but still capital fellows for all that.

A search of the train revealed the presence on a rear car of "general" Coxey, who led an army of fellow tramps to Washington once. He was taken from his retirement and made to participate in a political discussion, the resolution being—"Resolved, that we favor the abolition of soap and water and all work." On a vote the nays, it was declared, had it.

Governor Hastings' speech as reported is as follows:

"Gentlemen—To the commissariat of this train I contributed nine sandwiches and a flask of liquid. Your able steward, in his wisdom, has fixed my pro rata share of the provisions at two sandwiches, and all I want to drink from the water cooler. But let that pass.

"I have had many honors in my time, but none that I ever appreciated less than the present. I feel that I have been instrumental in making this trip as pleasant as I could. I will now introduce my friend and an officer of my staff, Colonel Spangler, whose bag of peanuts went into the general fund. He writes all my speeches for me, and he will say what he thinks I ought to feel upon this frigid occasion."

Colonel Spangler, who was in pink pajamas, the first ever seen in Pennsylvania, said:

"The charge that I write Governor Hastings' speeches will be indignantly resented by my friends who ever read any of them. My office on the governor's staff is more congenial. I am the receiving vault for all the liquid refreshment tendered to him, but I notice that none is tendered on this occasion, and I will now resume my seat. I may say that the seat cost me nothing, as I am riding on a pass."

High Indorsements.

"The proprietors of a certain tonic are advertising the following testimonial as taken from the London Court Journal:

The producer of * * * have a splendid market in Russia for their nerve and brain tonic. The Dowager Empress has, at the suggestion of the Princess of Wales, drunk it since the death of her consort, with the most remarkable and beneficial results. It is well known that the Princess of Wales also derived increased strength from it during her last great trials. A great demand for this tonic has sprung up among the Russian aristocracy."

A tonic that assuages grief caused by the loss of friends, mends broken hearts, and revives drooping spirits, should have a large sale among all aristocracies.

They're Coming.

You bet old Dixie ain't forgotten—
While just makin' for the cotton;
There they're comin' to receive it—
There they'll pick, and here they'll wear it.
Then the land with fat will trickle—
Pound o' cotton for one nickel.
Look away,
Every day—
Look away down South in Dixie!

—Atlanta Constitution.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

DAMROSCH'S SEASON OF OPERA INAUGURATED IN NEW YORK.

Josef Hofman, the Boy Pianist, is Coming to America. New York's Casino Opens Again as a Beer Garden. The Dog Show Outdid Its Predecessors.

For the second time in its history the Casino has started as a music hall. It was provided with a new and well painted curtain, and the colors about the proscenium arch had been freshened with new gilt and paint. But in many respects the theater was the same that it had been for many seasons. "Trial by Jury," which Gilbert and Sullivan wrote nearly twenty years ago, was part of the programme. It was credibly done, but it has not even the novelty which might have come from lack of use, for it is sung often enough to keep fresh in public memory.

Josef Hofman, the pianist, will come to this country next November, under Messrs. Abbey & Grau's management. Hofman, it will be remembered, began a series of concerts here under the same management several years ago, but on account of the interference of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, which forbade the appearance of the then boy artist, the contract had to be canceled.

None of Shakespeare's plays probably has been acted so little as "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," which is running at Daly's. It has only been seen once in New York city, and that was in 1845, when Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean gave it its first American production at the old Park Theater. It was then played only four times. Shortly after it was acted in Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia, and prints are in existence (almost as rare as the play itself) showing John Owens and William Warren in the part of Launce, which Mr. Lewis essays in Mr. Daly's production. Ellen Tree (Mrs. Kean) was the original Julia of the American stage, and it is this part which Miss Ada Rehan now plays.

Mr. Tree, of London, seems to delight in running from one end of the dramatic gamut to the other. On his first appearance here he contrasted the poetic youth in "The Ballad Monger," with the foxy veteran of the Russian police in the "Red Lamp." A short while ago he presented the fat and portly Falstaff, and followed with the lean and hungry Gringorie. It may be thought to be something of a theatrical trick to do this—to play upon your audience by opposing broadly opposite effects, and thus hoping to emphasize, by contrast, the impression of your worth as an actor in either part. It certainly has its popular results, and Mr. Tree's versatility has been proven, no matter how opinions may differ as to his exact position among the actors of the day.

The nineteenth annual bench show of the Westminster Kennel Club, at Madison Square Garden, outdid all its predecessors, both in the number of entries and the general excellence of the 1,636 dogs, which come from the best kennels of this country and Canada, with not a few choice specimens from England to give the affair an international tone. The dog, like the horse, seems to meet with the approval of society, and the annual shows organized by the institutions which have for their object the improvements of the breeds of man's best friends have been clever enough to cater to fashion to such a degree that these annual shows are part of the functions which the social world believes itself under obligations to make a success. Certain it is that as the years pass by, the Westminster Kennel Club and the National Horse Show Association have by their enterprises brought to such perfection the annual exhibitions given under their auspices that they are gigantic successes from a financial as well as spectacular standpoints. Breeders vie with each other for the trophies offered for the various strain of blooded dogs and horses, and while the Dog Show is hardly as impressive and the display of fashion is not so great as during the Horse Show, there is enough of that desire to excel that is the groundwork for all ambitions, and owners and handlers are on their mettle constantly.

Again the king of composers is to reign supreme upon the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House. Richard Wagner's stupendous music dramas have replaced the works of Gounod, Verdi and Bizet, and "the liquid Tuscan and sibilant French" that have been heard in New York's home of opera for several seasons have yielded for a brief period to the sterner Teutonic spoken by the troupe that Mr. Walter Damrosch has gathered around him for the performances of Wagnerian opera. Only four weeks is the season to last; only sixteen performances are arranged for in New York city; yet the preparations have been made with as much care as though the representations were to be continued through a long period. A remarkable company is engaged, and the New York Symphony Orchestra supplies the instrumental part of the music. That the public interest felt in the enterprise is very considerable is proved by the fact that the advance subscription is said to amount to close upon $48,000.

Children usually grieve their parents by turning out badly, but in Paul Lindau's new play, "Ungerathene Kinder," which Manager Conried will produce for the first time in this country at the Irving Place Theater, we have the unusual spectacle of a father mourning because his children turned out well. A wealthy gentleman, Johann Oberstaedt, is blessed with a son, Emil, and a daughter, Agathe, who, he proudly hopes, will prove shining lights of society. In sheer desperation old Oberstaedt secures the good offices of Baron Von Klatzan, an impecunious nobleman, who has made his mark as a high roller. To him he intrusts the task of plunging Emil into the vortex of dissipation and fashionable life. He is delighted when his son comes to him for a considerable sum of money, which he believes to be for the payment of a gambling debt or some other extravagance. His hope, however, is crushed when he finds that the money had been devoted to charity.

LINWARD.

A bashful young man of Crown Point, while attending revival meetings, was approached by an earnest young lady, who said to him: "My dear friend, it would do my heart good to lead you to the altar." The young fellow hesitatingly replied that he appreciated the honor, but as he was already engaged to two girls he could not accommodate her.

METROPOLITAN NOTES.

Interesting Facts and Opinions Chronicled by the Daily Press of New York.

The Nineteenth Century Club had before it for discussion at Sherry's the subject, "The Wealth of New York." President Walter Page was in the chair, and the speakers were William M. Ivins, ex-City Chamberlain; Prof. F. H. Gedding, Department of Sociology of Columbia College, and Mr. Gleed, of Kansas.

"We have spent in New York city during the past ten years for the administration of the Government $900,000,000," said Mr. Ivins. "The corporation of New York city is the largest, wealthiest, and most important business corporation in the world. Its expenditures are not so large as those of Paris and London, but in those cities they have national as well as local expenditures.

"We have no financial system in New York city. They have in London, Paris, Vienna and Berlin. Their financial scheme centers in a 'financial body.' The Government makes the estimates for the next year's expenditures, fixing a maximum and minimum. If the financial body favors the Government party then in power it grants the maximum, if not, it gives the minimum.

"If any railroad, bank, or other private corporation were to be run in the slipshod, haphazard way that our Government corporation is run it would fail utterly. I once asked a Commissioner of Accounts if he could tell me what the sinking fund was. He said he could not, and didn't think any other municipal officer could.

"The annual reports of the Comptroller are so unintelligible, officials are so incompetent, and we are so wealthy, that we do not mind our wasteful methods, especially if people do not get up meetings and speak about it."

Though Paris is responsible for the many gowns, wraps, sets or sets of exquisite lingerie and headgear, provided for Miss Gould's trousseau, to New York jewellers were given orders for wedding gifts from the young woman's family and her fiancee. That Count Jean de Castellane has an appreciation of the merits and beauty of diamonds is shown by a splendid corsage decoration completed under his direction, and the most enviable of all the contents of Miss Gould's jewelry box. The value of this ornament, that contains nearly 250 large, purely white brilliants and two very perfect emeralds, is estimated at $14,000. It consists of a central piece, nearly as large as a woman's hand, in an elaborate diamond crusted foliated pattern, inclosing one of the emeralds. When this is caught in the center of an evening bodice, double chains of diamonds will run up from it to right and left, high on the bust caught at one end by a cluster of three diamond feathers and at the other by a small copy of the middle piece, also holding an emerald.

In addition to this dazzling breastplate is a pendant, the like of which the Empress of Austria, whose emeralds are famous, could hardly show. Here is one as nearly flawless as those capricious stones are ever found. It is the largest for depth and brilliance that has ever appeared in New York. It is to be suspended in solitary magnificence in a hoop of picked white diamonds.

Speaking of poets, one sees John Hay—I should, perhaps, say colonel—about New York a good deal now. In fact, he may be safely called a New Yorker now, for he has for years been doing editorial work on the paper for which he did some of his earliest writing—the Tribune. It was for this paper, while Mr. Greeley was yet living, that Colonel Hay wrote that delightfully human bit of verse, "Little Breeches." He had no idea it would make the hit it did. In a few hours all New York was repeating the lines that went to say that the angels in rescuing "Little Breeches" and giving him back to his own, were doing

"A darned sight better business
Than loafin around the throne."

A trifle profane, perhaps, but human.

And then "The Wreck of the Prairie Belle," when Jim Bludso who had "A wife at Natchez under the hill,

And another one down at Pike."

and who was yet hero enough when "The Prairie Bell" took fire to "Hold her nozzle agin' the bank

Till the last galoot wuz ashore."

Colonel Hays would undoubtedly rather be remembered for the work he did on the history of Abraham Lincoln, written in partnership with Mr. Nicolay, who was Lincoln's private secretary, than for his early verses. But the public has its own opinions in these matters. It was only the other day some men, discussing another bit of verse by Colonel Hay, in which Tillman Joy comes to the rescue of a runaway slave boy in the anti-Tillman period, and tells a ponderous town committee

"You kin resolute 'till the cows come home,
But if one of ye teches that boy,
He rastles his hash in hell to-night,
Or my name ain't Tillman Joy."

"But you don't call that poetry," said one critic.

"No, I don't," more forcibly than grammatically; "I don't call it a sonnet, or a madrigal, or a love song. I call it dad gasted nervy stuff, and I wish there was more like it!"

This criticism is submitted for what it is worth. Colonel Hay, perhaps, will not agree with it.—N. Y. Advertiser.

St. Bartholomew's Mission, in New York, is conducting under the direction of Col. Henry H. Hadley, Superintendent one of the finest equipped kitchens in the city, at which prepared food is furnished to the poor for about half its actual cost, thus removing from the poor who patronize the "soup and coffee bar," as it is called, the feeling that they are subjects of charity. This is the menu:

One pint of rich soup, 2 cents; big corn beef sandwich, 2 cents; one pint of coffee (milk and sugar), 2 cents; one cup of coffee, 1 cent; one plate of beans, 1 cent; one plate of soup, 1 cent; rice pudding, 1 cent; bread pudding, 1 cent.

Mrs. Grant and the South.

A special to the Times-Union from Tampa, Fla., says the Confederates and G. A. R. men of that city gave Mrs. U. S. Grant a reception on the occasion of her sixty-ninth birthday. Speaking of the South, Mrs. Grant said:

"I love the South, for I was raised in a Southern State—Missouri—and I hardly knew which side to go with. But the General went with the North and I went with him."

"I see that Jones has made a big step forward in the widow's affections."

"Yes, and I fancy that one more will make him a step-father."—Smith, Gray & Co's Monthly.

GREET THEIR LEADER.

Plainfield Club Women Salute Their Chief.

BRILLIANT EVENT IN THE CASINO.

Reception to Mrs. Henrotin of Chicago, President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

A brilliant and intellectual assemblage of women attended the reception given in the Casino of the Union County Country Club Friday afternoon to Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin of Chicago, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The event was conducted by the Monday Afternoon Club, the Current Events Club and the Resoris Club of this city who are among the foremost influential members of the Federation.

The Casino presented a beautiful aspect of cheerfulness from the tasteful manner in which it had been arranged for the occasion. The platform was filled with potted plants of various kinds, while all over the walls smilax and other green foliage met the vision; and spread about the floor were many rugs brought from private homes, which gave to it a parlor-like appearance.

The Executive Committee who had made the arrangements was composed of Mrs Huntington, Mrs Wood, Mrs Conklin, Mrs Evans, Mrs Randolph, Mrs Haviland, Mrs Brown, Mrs Tomlinson and Miss Leonard.

The guests were received by Mrs Kimball of the Resoris; Mrs Faber, Jr., of the Current Events; and Mrs Miller of the Monday Afternoon Club.

The Entertainment and Decorative Committee was as follows: Mrs Evans, Mrs Randall and Mrs Gilbert of the Monday Afternoon Club; Mrs Halloway of the Resoris Club; and Mrs McCutchen of the Current Events Club.

After pleasant social intercourse for a few minutes, Mrs. Miller made an address of welcome. Other interesting addresses followed, among them being Mrs. Henrotin's, which was one of great interest and contained many facts concerning the work in which she and her hearers are engaged, that permitted a greater insight into the labor than could otherwise be secured.

Margaret Yardley of Orange, president of the State Federation, also was present, and spoke of the work that had a local interest.

At the conclusion of the literary exercises light refreshments were served, Miss Day and Mrs. Evans pouring the tea. They were assisted in receiving by the Entertainment Committee.

Thanks to The Press.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—At a meeting of the Women's Temperance Aid Society held Feb. 21, a motion was made and seconded that a vote of thanks be given you for so gratuitously affording us such valuable space in your most excellent paper, which has been of great benefit to us. H. N. King, Secretary, pro tem.

Mrs. G. F. Opdyke, President.

Plainfield, March 1, 1895.

45 to Spare.

The Park Club tucked the Fanwoods under their wing March 1 and took them into camp. Duplicate whist was the point at issue, and the Parks won by the following score:

PARK CLUB.		FANWOOD.
H. A. McGee G. F. Dupee	12	Kyte Keib	6
S. Townsend S. St. J. McCutchen	22	Quereau Downer	2
C. A. Reed Geo. T. Rogers	20	McCarthy Quereau	2
	55		10

He Converted Woolley.

Rev. Stephen Merritt of New York, the famous evangelist, will address the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance, Tuesday evening at 7:30. Mr. Merritt is one of New York's greatest philanthropists. Last Winter he fed from 2,000 to 3,000 people, and also maintained a shelter for homeless men called the Travelers' Club. Among others, John G Woolley, who so deeply interested a Plainfield audience at the W. C. T. U. Sunday afternoon meeting in Music Hall, was converted under his teachings. All Plainfield will be glad of a chance to hear this famous man.

West End Made Merry.

On March 1 the home of Misses Anna and Minnie Martin, 349 Manson place, was filled with 40 merry visitors, who had come to enjoy the hospitality of their entertaining hostesses. Dancing commenced at 9 and continued until 12, when refreshments were served, after which dancing dancing and games were participated in until early this morning. Miller furnished the music.

Broke the Backbone.

Henry S. Thomas started for Dunellen yesterday afternoon about 4, on his wheel. In climbing the hill near Grant avenue he encountered considerable mud, and before he reached the level the backbone of his wheel broke in the middle, leaving him standing in the road. A. M. Griffen's wagon happened along, and gave him a lift.

Jersey Central a Dividend Payer.

(From Town Topics.)

The situation looks much better for the coal stocks, and these are in position to advance sharply. Jersey Central will continue to be a dividend payer, and the stock is safe to buy to hold for results that will be forthcoming in less than a month.

GRADUATES GET TOGETHER.

North Plainfield's Ex-Students Give a Midwinter Reunion.

A number of graduates and teachers of the North Plainfield Public School attended the midwinter reunion of the Alumni Association Friday night in the upper class rooms.

The programme, which was greatly enjoyed, was as follows:

Address by President........John McLoughlin
Piano Solo..............Miss May MacDonald
Essay—History and Civil Government,
Robert Clark
Vocal Solo—The Gale...........Herbert Schutt
Essay—Reading...................William Wilcox
Recitation...............Miss Grace E. Overton
Essay—Spelling and Punctuation,
[Miss Clara Steiner
Read by David Bodine.
Vocal Trio—Robert Clark, Edward Clark and Stacy Reynolds.
Essay—Composition............George Taggart

Refreshments were served, and the pleasant evening was closed by the singing of college songs.

Among those present were: Mr and Mrs Overton, Mr and Mrs C E Boss, Mr and Mrs Potter, and the Misses Laura Emmons, Bertha Thorne, Grace E Overton, Alice and Susie Woodland, Nellie Arnold, May MacDonald, May Clawson, Emma Gillem, Alice Carroll, Tina Smith, Miriam Wilcox, Maggie Cory, Clara Steiner, Nellie Van Winkle, Ida and Cathie Lewis, Martha Humble, Cutter, Shafer, Bainbridge, Mamie B Steiner, Jessie Coddington, Maggie and Edith Miles, Wm Schutt, John H McLoughlin, Stacy Reynolds, Walter Reynolds, Geo Taggart, George Bolsterle, Wm Wilcox, Thomas MacDonald, Dykman Winckler, Edward O Clark, Robert Clark, Henry B Drake, David Bodine, Frank Holland, Clarence Murphy.

FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

Plainfield Makes Her Voice Heard in the Halls of Legislation.

The following petition for equal suffrage has been sent from Plainfield to the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, in Legislature assembled:

The undersigned, citizens of the United States (21 years of age), residents of the State of New Jersey, Officers of the New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association, respectfully pray your Honorable body to submit to the electors of the State, a proposition to strike the word "male" from Article II, Section I, of the Constitution, and thus take the first step towards restoring to women the right to vote on equal terms with men. This right was formerly exercised by women, in the State of New Jersey, and was guaranteed to them by the Constitution. As it was abridged by an Act of Legislature in 1807, and finally taken away in 1844, on the adoption of the present Constitution, without the consent of the women of the State, and without consultation with them, it would seem just to your memorialists that the franchise should now be restored to women.

Florence Howe Hall,
President.
Margaret Campfield,
Vice-President.
Emma L. Blackwell,
Recording Secretary.
Mary D. Hussey,
Corresponding Secretary.
M. F. Krom, Treasurer,
Aaron M. Powell, Auditor.

Their Uniforms Complimented.

The Division Encampment of the Sons of Veterans held in Trenton, Feb. 21, was one of the best yet held. There were 200 members of the order present, about half of which were delegates. After a lively contest Senior Vice-Commander James E. Pierson of Hopewell was elected Commander. Inspector Victor D. Renwick of Camden was in opposition.

John Hand Camp, No. 28, of this city, was recognized by securing three officers. W. C. Dobbins was elected a member of the Division Council, H. C. McVoy was appointed Division Chaplain by Commander Pierson, and H. S. Thatcher was elected Representative to the National Encampment to be held in Knoxville, Tenn., next September. Camp 28 received many compliments on the choice of their uniform, it being considered one of the handsomest in the divison.

Those attending from Plainfield were: Capt. W. C. Dobbins; Sergeant of Guard H. S. Thatcher; Quartermaster Sergeant H. C. McVoy; First Sergeant H. J. Martin; Second Lieutenant Charles F. Stephens; Corporal of Guard Edward Smith, and W. C. Smith, Jr.

Officers Re-elected.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school teachers of the First Baptist Church held in the church Friday evening with a good attendance. The East Third Street Mission was not represented. All of the officers were re-elected, and there was but one addition, that of assistant treasurer. The officers are:

Superintendent—Rufus K. Case,
First Assistant—G. H. Batchelor.
Second Assistant—G. F. Brown.
Secretary—C. H. Smith.
Treasurer—Harold Serrell.
Assistant Treasurer—Miss Florence Serrell.

M. C. Dobbins was reappointed Superintendent of Mt. Olive Sunday-school, and Clarence S. Johnson, Secretary.

Reports of both schools represented were read, and showed them to be in excellent spiritual and financial condition.

By a vote of the teachers it was decided to give the usual excursion this Summer.

He's a Master in Chancery Now.

Chancellor Alexander T. McGill has appointed Lawyer Clarence L. Murphy a Master in Chancery, on the recommendation of Counselor J. H. VanWinkle of this city. Although Lawyer Murphy was admitted to the bar only last week, he has already moved into the law offices formerly occupied by Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, and will commence business Monday.

BELIEVE IN DREAMS.

SOME PROMINENT PEOPLE WHO ATTACH IMPORTANCE TO THEM.

Such Airy Nothings Are They Made Of, Few Dreamers Trust to Their Fantasies. Dr. Parkhurst Don't Dream, but Chauncey Depew Does, and Also Mrs. Grannis.

In all climes dreams have been accepted as omens of good or bad fortune, in business, in love or war, and as harbingers of blessings or forewarnings of death and disaster. Nobody has ever satisfactorily explained the cause of dreams. By some they are attributed to overeating just before going to bed; other scientific writers claim that whatever is uppermost in one's mind previous to retiring is invariably the subject of one's dream; and still others emphatically aver that the condition of the blood is the predisposing cause. The writers of the last class declare that their theory is proved by the fact that some people never dream.

Paley describes a dream as "that condition of the human mind when reason loses control and fancy takes the reins." Some very prominent men place credence in dreams, and even the most skeptical will not deny that they have dreamed things that were coincidental with future events.

Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst said that he did not have time to dream; that when he went to bed he endeavored to sleep soundly, and usually was successful.

"In my opinion," said the doctor, "a person with an active brain and possessing good health never dreams. I have never dreamed. I do not attach much importance to them. Although I may be a skeptic on the subject, I will not assert that one ought not to place credence in dreams, for in human life, awake or asleep, there are many strange coincidences."

Sergt. Dunn, the weather prophet, is not an enthusiast regarding dreams, but asserts that at night, while in a state of semi-consciousness, he has solved many problems that baffled him during the day.

"But I do not have those hallucinations that some people claim to have," said he. "I may have had wandering thoughts while asleep, but if they can be called dreams I have always been able to trace the cause to a deranged stomach."

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Grannis, the social reformer, has had many and varied dreams. "When I was a girl about 23 years old," said she, "I dreamed that I, in company with another person, was trying to bring my dead father back to life. We traveled all through Europe in our trials, and really I witnessed scenes of European grandeur that were exact in every particular, although I had never been abroad. When I did go, a few years later, I remembered many places I had seen in my dream. I can say that I am a believer in dreams."

"It is an oft repeated tale," said "Our Chauncey" M. Depew, "that Napoleon, a week before Waterloo, dreamed that he was to meet Wellington, and that in this panorama of sleep the battle was raging at its height, when he suddenly awoke, exclaiming: 'Let us each save ourselves! Grouchy! Grouchy!' A few days later Grouchy's tardiness lost Napoleon the great battle and an empire. That was a remarkable coincidence, and, if true, should be sufficient argument to substantiate all the statements made by dream enthusiasts."—N. Y. Recorder.

FIGHTING INDIANS.

It Takes a Kind of Courage That Men Frequently Lack.

"It takes a special kind of courage to fight Indians," said Major Edward Ragsdale at the "Little Gem," in Topeka. "They're pretty sure to surprise you, and they're slippery as quicksilver and as hard to catch. Their yelling and whooping alone are enough to stampede men not trained to their style of fighting. Sometimes they fight under cover, and you catch a fire from an enemy you can't get a sight of, and again, where there hasn't been one to be seen, they seem all to spring out of the ground at once and charge you as though nothing could stand their onset. Then there's the knowledge that if they catch you alive you'll be skinned alive or burned or your life tortured out of you by slow degrees in a thousand other ways they can think up to make you suffer. There's many a stout hearted desperado, a terror in white settlements, and not afraid to have a pistol or shotgun scrap at any hour of the day or night with a man of his own color, who doesn't count for a row of pins in an Indian fight.

"Take Sam Brown, of Nevada, for a case in point. He was not afraid of any man that wore boots, and he was the terror of the mining camps everywhere he went. The Piute Indians got bad one time and a party was organized in the camps to go out against them. Sam joined the volunteers, and everybody in the party and all that stayed behind were talking about the big deeds Sam Brown would do, and chuckling to think how these redskins would be wiped out when they got up against him.

"Well, when they came upon the Indians things didn't turn out quite as they had expected. It was the whites that got licked out in short order, and those that weren't left on the ground stampeded for safety. Sam Brown was one of the first ones to run, and the pace he set his horse at to get away from those redskins was something that beat quarter racing in the way of reckless riding. As they stampeded down a canon, every man trying to be foremost to get away, Sam hailed Joe McMurtrie, who was riding a better horse than his:

"'Oh, Mac! Pull your horse a little so I can come up. We'll ride safer together.'

"McMurtrie's answer to that friendly invitation was to bend down to his horse's neck, set in the spurs and get out of that canon ahead of Sam and back to Bodie as fast as hoofs could carry him. He knew Sam Brown, and that if that worthy once got alongside him he wouldn't hesitate to shoot him off his horse, so as to get a better mount for himself. After they all got back to the settlement he didn't go round to places where he was likely to meet Sam, lest it might stir him up to unpleasant recollections of their Indian campaign—people were that considerate of others' feelings in those days when the other happened to be Sam Brown."—Chicago Tribune.

Unkletom—I hear you turned people away in Jayport.

Barnes Tormer—We tried to, but they wouldn't go until they got their money back.—Indianapolis Journal.

"You think you know it all now, don't you?"

"Me? Lord, no! I'm married."—Syracuse Post.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.
A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

THIS COUNCIL ENDED.

Borough Solons Conclude a Year of Work.

WHAT WAS DONE ON THE STREETS.

Clerk Arnold Instructed to Record on the Minutes the Council's Esteem of the Retiring Mayor, H. E. Needham.

The North Plainfield Republican primaries which were held last Friday kept the majority of the members of the Borough Council away from their meeting for a time, and it was 9:40 before Mayor Needham called the session to order.

Clerk Arnold and Councilmen Peck, Winckler and Lounebury were present.

The minutes of the previous meetings were read and approved.

Clerk Arnold's report showed that Fred Baker had paid $5 for a peddler's license, that Justice Crosley from fines had paid $13, and that the $50 license fee from the Street Railway Company had been paid.

Street Commissioner Stout's report was read, showing macadamizing done as follows: Myrtle avenue, 1175 lineal feet; Duer street from Emily street to Linden avenue, 975; Linden avenue from Somerset street to Sycamore avenue, 1950; total 4100 lineal feet. Total cost of macadamizing, $2,460. Repairs on Washington avenue $117; repairs on Somerset street, $690. 649 lineal feet of crosswalks were laid at a cost of $259.60. Crushed stone used, 445 tons. $41 was received from the sale of dirt. The total expenditure from April 15, 1894, to March 1, 1895, was $4 654.73.

Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed in a communication stated that legislation would be necessary on the question of dividing the Borough and Township funds, and the necessary steps were then in progress. There is $2,300 to be divided.

The monthly bills were audited, and warrants were ordered drawn.

Councilman Lounsbury said that he thought that some recognition should be made of the seven-years service which Mayor Needham had given so faithfully and conscientiously to the Council and Borough, and he moved that the Council's expression of regard for him be spread on the minutes. This was carried unanimously.

Mr. Needham then in his usual happy manner thanked the members for their good will, and extended his good wishes in parting with the councilmen.

The Council adjourned without day.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss E. F. Baker of New York city is the guest of Mrs. William Palmer Smith of Belvidere avenue.

C. L. Wright of Leland avenue, who has been ill with the grip, has so far recovered that he is able to commute regularly to New York city.

Frank H. Fowles of Helena, Montana, who has been spending a few days with Benj. R. Western of Washington Park, was delighted with Plainfield.

The body of the late Wm. Whitenack of Basking Ridge was laid at rest Thursday, Rev. Drs. Rankin and Randolph officiating. He was uncle of Charles and John Willis of Johnston drive.

It will be gratifying to the many friends of Mrs. Lawrence Myers and family, to hear that they are now domiciled in most delightful quarters on the bay of Naples, in full view of Mt. Vesuvius, and are all well.

Mrs. David P. Hall of this city, daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe of Boston, is to read at the charming home of her mother on Beacon street, Boston, a series of papers on the noted authors of the present century. This opportunity—remarks the Newark Daily Advertiser—to meet with one of the most talented women of New Jersey will be eagerly sought by the club women of Massachusetts.

—The Board of Engineers has done a commendable thing in issuing through Chief Doane a proclamation against loitering in engine-houses, and against promiscuous admission.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

OFFICIALLY BRANDED.

Councilmen Publicly Denounce Their ex-City Clerk.

SIGN THEIR NAMES TO IT, TOO.

Not Only His Original Falsehoods Concerning Them, But Also His Re-iteration of Them, Stamped Emphatically as Untrue and Without Foundation—Men Whom He Accused of Being the Authority for His Abuse, Utterly Refute His Statements.

To THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: In the issue of the "courier" of 23d inst. the following statements appear in its editorial columns.

"After considerable effort and careful investigation we have discovered that Geo. W. Grant was appointed Captain of Police pro tem., because the Mayor was unanimously in favor of the appointment.

"We are surprised to learn that the relations between the Mayor of the City of Plainfield, and the other members of the Police Board are not quite as cordial as they appear to be. At a recent meeting of the Board—and, by the way, it was the first meeting that has been called by the Mayor for many long and weary moons—some things were talked about, some questions were asked, and some incidents occurred which, we have heard, would greatly interest the voting population of the city."

These statements are untrue and without foundation in every particular, and as such we wish to denounce them in a most public manner.

We wish to denounce also as untrue, the statement of the editor in a subsequent issue of the same paper, that a member of the Police Committee was authority for his misstatements.

H. M. STOCKTON,
Ch'n Police and Public Lights Com.
J. B. DUMONT,
W. H. MOORE.
WM. G. E. SEE,
ex-officio member of Committee.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

A meeting of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association was held Wednesday afternoon, and it was decided to invite the other schools of this city to unite and under this united organization hold a field day in the Spring and make it open to the State. The committee appointed to confer with like committees from other schools consisted of Charles B. Morse, Carlos C. Gallup and another to be appointed later.

The Kappa Delta Phi held its regular meeting Friday afternoon. The programme consisted of the reading of an original essay and a hat talk. The speakers and their subjects were as follows: John V. Beekman, Jr.—Value of Books; Carlos C. Gallup—The Advisability of Distributing Some of Our Knowledge; Charles B. Morse—Is the High School Degenerating? Lewis H. Rand—The Lyceum; Henry Eggerding—The Kappa Delta Phi and Its Branches; J. Hazelwood Craig—Should the Present Methods of Electing a President of the United States be Superseded by Others? Chas. Noble—The System of Order in the High School; Henry B. Drake—The Recent Changes in the Teachers and the School; Wilbur F. Cornwell—Will Successful Results be Obtained in Building Air-ships?

Boys Club Entertainment.

The entertainment held at the Boys Club last Saturday evening was one of most successful and enjoyable of this Winter's series. The club is beginning to realize that considerable talent is to be found among its own members, and several of the boys contributed to the pleasure of the occasion. Master Willie Kiss played on his autoharp which Santa Claus left with him not long since. Joe Burke rendered several pieces on the harmonica. John Varden and Clarence Angleman sang about the "Frog who went a courtin'," which gave much pleasure. Tommy Johnson and Howard Lowrie sang "Hand me down a quarter" with much effect. The club sang "Polly Wolly Doodle" very creditably. The Silver Leaf Quartette of young colored men had been engaged to sing, and their funny songs were greatly enjoyed. Their exhibition of fancy dancing, too, was a wonder and delight to the spectators. At the end of the evening the boys rendered a familiar college song in a hearty chorus, and the programme was as usual concluded with "America".

To Administer His Father's Estate.

John Cory was appointed by the Court in Somerville this morning administrator of the estate of his father, the late Daniel Cory. Charles A. Reed represented Mr. Cory before the Court, Craig A. Marsh the widow, and W. R. Codington Mrs. Lee and Dr. D. C. Adams, grandchildren.

The counsel were allowed $300 apiece as fees. The estate will be administered so that decedent's wishes will be fully carried out. The widow by deed gets property valued at $30,000, and even unrecorded deeds will be fulfilled as he wished.

A REAL PHILANTHROPIST.

The Good Deeds of a Well Known Georgian Turfman.

Nobody would have suspected him of having any sentiment in his composition. He was regarded by the score or more of Northerners who were at all familiar with him, as an open hearted, hospitable Georgian who was fond of owning a race horse that could win a few races, and who took great delight in seeing his favorites gallop home in advance of their competitors every year at Monmouth Park. The old man had been in the livery and horse business for many years in a prominent Georgian town, and was tolerably well to do. He had never married, and therefore he had only himself to please.

He appeared to be content to spend a placid eleven months in Georgia and then to give way to a month of pleasure at Long Branch, where he met congenial spirits. He was unutterably happy in the society of his Northern friends, and said upon his departure for home each season that the intervening eleven months would pass away all too slowly for him.

During all the time he spent in the North nobody ever heard him mention a woman's name, but a golden deed in which the little man appears in the light of a philanthropist has just come to light. The war was over and he was sitting in the door of his stable in Augusta one morning when a friend, a doctor, passed by. After exchanging salutations, the physician said: "Poor John —— hasn't come home, and now I'm afraid his wife is going to die and leave them two little girls. She's very low this morning."

The good doctor returned the same evening, bringing the intelligence that the woman was dead and the little girls, aged 5 and 3 years, were orphans.

"'Twould be a great thing for some good man to adopt one of those girls," said the doctor.

"I'll take 'em both," said the horseman, and take them he did. The doctor was bound to secrecy and the children were sent to a boarding school. It was stipulated that all moneys for their support should be paid through the physician, and that the girls should never know the name of their benefactor. As the years passed by the girls grew to womanhood and were sent to Vassar to complete their education. Their guardian had never seen them, but the doctor assured him that they were a credit to him, and oftentimes pleaded with the old man to make himself known to them and pay them a visit.

This he steadfastly refused to do, saying: "What would young women of society care for an old man like me?"

Time passed on and the physician died, but feeling that death would absolve him from his promise he had communicated with the young women and told them whom they had to thank for their education and support. They wrote a most touching letter to their guardian asking permission to visit him, but he was so timid that he put them off until he could give the matter further consideration.

About a year later he was waited upon one day by a smart looking young man of 30 who introduced himself as a lawyer in a well known New York firm. The visitor explained his errand in a few words and asked for the hand of the elder of the sisters. It was a novel situation. Here was a young man he had never seen before asking for the hand of a ward he had never seen, and for the first time in all the years the responsibility of the situation dawned upon him. He made some inquiries concerning the young lawyer, found that he was as he had represented himself to be, and gave his consent to the marriage. He would not come to New York to see the ceremony, but there was no costlier gift on the list of presents than that which bore the card of the plain old Georgia horseman.—N. Y. Sun.

THE END SEAT IN THE PEW.

It Is the Place Occupied by the Protector of the Family.

"It is common enough," said Mr. Gratebar, "to see a man sitting in the aisle end of a pew in a church get up on the arrival of some other member of the family, step out into the aisle to let the late comer in and then resume his seat at the end of the pew. It seems to me that I have read that this custom originated in New England in the early days, when the men all sat by the aisle so that they could seize their guns and get out promptly in case of attack by Indians. We don't have much to fear from Indians nowadays, but the seat by the aisle is still occupied by the head of the family. He stands in the aisle while the others pass in and then calmly takes his place in the end seat, at the head of the line, as a sort of general protector.

"Sometimes in these days (we are so very free from Indians now) the head of the family thinks it is safe for him to stay at home when he has a headache, and then the young son takes his place. I imagine that he talks it over with his mother on the way to church, so that it is all understood. When they get to the pew he stands in the aisle while his sisters and his mother pass in. I fancy that his sisters are rather glad when they are all seated and no longer conspicuous, but upon his mother's face as she brushes past him into the pew there is a smile of affectionate pride; and then he takes his seat in his father's place and sits there with fine boyish dignity."

College Girls Coasting On Palm Leaves.

Wellesley college girls had gay times coasting. Splendid opportunities there are for coasting at Wellesley; there are plenty of hills and plenty of room right there on the grounds. I was greatly amused when they told me about sliding down that hill exactly in front of the college on dustpans! It all came about this way:

One inventive genius did not have a sled and did not know where to borrow one; but the crust was perfection and of short duration, so while she stood, with her task of sweeping just concluded, with dustpan in hand, the thought "Why not use the dustpan?" came like an inspiration, and out she skipped to the top of the hill and down she sped, seated in state in her dustpan. The news spread and the craze grew until every dustpan on the premises was well worn out. After that palm leaf fans were pressed into service, and it was whispered that pillows have now and then proved the most agreeable and satisfactory of conveyances.—Boston Advertiser.

A Rough Retort.

Fenderson—I got my education at Harvard.

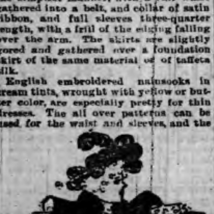
Fegg—And forgot it where?—Boston

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

DAINTY NOVELTIES OF DELICATE SUMMER TINTS.

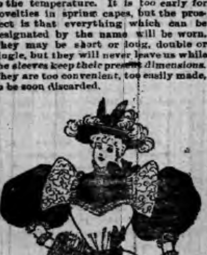
Attractive Combinations of Colors Seen in New Fabrics. Tempting Parasols Now Arrayed for Inspection. Exquisitely Embroidered Batistes and Muslins.

Extremes meet in the departing glory of rich winter fabrics, and the advent of dainty, gauzy summer novelties come like a breath of spring in the midst of howling blizzards, with a promise of summer in their delicate tints. When fur garments and flannels are the only things which suggest comfort, the organdies, muslins, ginghams and challies so reassuringly displayed in the shop windows seem to have lost their bearings. And added to these are the daintiest, thinnest of midsummer parasols, more elaborate and useless than ever, temptingly arrayed for inspection. There are chiffon parasols in all the delicate tints, ruffled and fluffed from the edge to the center, and trimmed with deep vandykes of lace radiating toward the edge between puffs of chiffon; parasols covered with tiny pink rosebuds or a solid mass of violets, so fascinating to look upon, but so vague as to their usefulness.

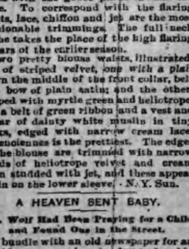


However, in spite of the weather, it is the fashions in prospect which claim our interest, and nothing can be more alluring than the exquisitely embroidered batistes, muslins and linens for summer gowns. These are shown in all over patterns with lovely pointed edges to match, and can easily be made up at home in the simplest manner, with a full waist gathered into a belt, and collar of satin ribbon, and full sleeves three-quarter length, with a frill of the edging falling over the arm. The skirts are slightly gored and gathered over a foundation skirt of the same material or of taffeta silk.

English embroidered nainsooks in cream tints, wrought with yellow or butter color, are especially pretty for thin dresses. The all over patterns can be used for the waist and sleeves, and the skirt made plain, with ruffles of edging.



The warmest winter wraps have not yet become burdensome, but jaunty little capes, reaching just below the elbows and utterly wanting in all the elements of comfort on a cold day, are such a popular variety of outdoor garments that they are quite as much the fashion as they will be later, when they will be better suited to the temperature. It is too early for novelties in spring capes, but the prospect is that everything which can be designated by the name will be worn. They may be short or long, double or single, but they will never leave us while the sleeves keep their present dimensions. They are too convenient, too easily made, to be soon discarded.



Velvet seems to be the popular material for dressy capes, and they are all furnished with the godet plaits around the edge. To correspond with the flaring skirts, lace, chiffon and jet are the most fashionable trimmings. The full neck ruche takes the place of the high flaring collars of the earlier season.

Two pretty blouse waists, illustrated, are of striped velvet, one with a plait down the middle of the front collar, belt and bow of plain satin; and the other, striped with myrtle green and heliotrope, has a belt of green ribbon and a vest and collar of dainty white muslin in tiny tucks, edged with narrow cream lace. Valenciennes is the prettiest. The edges of the blouse are trimmed with narrow bands of heliotrope velvet and cream satin studded with jet, and these appear again on the lower sleeve.—N. Y. Sun.

A HEAVEN SENT BABY.

Mrs. Wolf Had Been Praying for a Child and Found One in the Street.

A bundle with an old newspaper for an outside wrapper lay in front of a big store on Market street, Newark, N. J., one recent afternoon. Hundreds of women passed in and out of the store. Some looked at the bundle curiously, but none attempted to touch it until Mrs. Charles Wolf came along. She picked it up and felt that it was warm.

On opening it she discovered a male in*fant about four weeks old. Its only cov*ering beside the newspaper was an old piece of polka dot calico. Mrs. Wolf has no children of her own, and she was delighted with her find. She escaped from the crowd of women who gathered around her, boarded a car, and went to her home on Napoleon street. When her husband came home to supper she showed him the baby, and said she believed it was a gift sent her from heaven in answer to her prayers for a child.

THE SKIN DEPTH OF BEAUTY.

A Young Woman of Observation Says the Scientists Go Too Deep.

"I wish science would mind her own business," said a young woman of observation, as she laid aside her wraps. "I have just come from a class lecture for women and the lecturer told us that beauty is not skin deep after all. She wanted us to believe—it was a lecturess—that the charm of a pretty face depends upon our muscles and nerves and that when we look particularly charming it is because we have had these nerves and muscles well under control—that they twitch and pull just the way we want them to.

"That's all right. I mean I know perfectly well that I couldn't coyly drop my eyelids if you were to tell me I was the sweetest thing in the world, and modestly blush up to the roots of my hair at the compliment if I didn't work the eyelid muscles, and squeeze the blood up into my head by closing my larynx for a time, but beauty is skin deep for all that, the science or no science. Why, take my skin off and I couldn't blush at all, and a nice looking object I'd be winking skinless eyelids, wouldn't I? Fancy Venus as a physiological chart displaying the uncovered muscles, or Helen of Troy showing the nerves and muscles that brought out her killing smile. I don't believe Paris would have tumbled head over heels in love with that sort of living picture, do you?

"The network of muscles that forms the mechanical system of your cheek may be magnificently developed, but I shouldn't admire the result half as much as I do if you were hideless; and my bright smile would haunt you as a nightmare if you could have a full view of the complex labyrinth of nerves bringing the smile into good working order. It's putting things on too anatomical a standing entirely, you know.

"The scientists can talk as much as they like, but they'll never get me to believe that beauty isn't a purely superficial thing, and so long as massage, open air exercise, baths and cosmetics are procurable or practicable I guess I'll do the best I can for my skin, beauty or no beauty."

SHE DIED OF THE COLD.

Mrs. Hunter, a Recluse, Who Had Hoarded Her Money, Expired in Her Hovel.

Admid filth and squalor, in a cold and cheerless room on the first floor of her home, Newark, was found the body of Mrs. Margaret Hunter, an octogenarian, who for many years had lived the life of a recluse. Mrs. Hunter had not been seen by any of her neighbors since one of them carried her a little soup, and the supposition is that she died from exposure. When found she was lying in bed, with the scant covering tucked up closely under her chin.

She was suspicious of everybody, and although possessed of considerable money and real estate almost starved herself. Even when food was brought to her she was loath to eat it, and would never touch it unless it was first tasted by the person who brought it. She imagined every one was trying to kill her to get her money.

Notwithstanding the filth in which she lived, one bedroom in the house was always kept scrupulously clean, was nicely furnished; and it was the belief of her neighbors that this room was kept for some person, whom the old woman had for years expected to visit her.

Some of the neighbors were inclined to believe that the woman might have had a missing son or a prodigal daughter for whose return she waited in vain, and the possibility of this theory being right is very likely, as it came to light shortly after the discovery of the body, that two sons, John and Thomas, are mentioned in her bank books, in which accounts to their credit are recorded. Where these two sons are or whether living or dead is not known.

With the bank books in which the accounts are credited to "her sons" were found were many other bank books. The aggregate amount which they represented was $11,895.85, with much accrued interest.

DAKOTA'S DIVORCE LAW.

It May Tend to Increase the Temporary Population of the State.

The new divorce law of South Dakota practically restores the old law of three years ago in force, except that it precludes the possibility of fraud by requiring personal service in all cases. The bill reads:

"A divorce must not be granted unless the plaintiff is in good faith a resident of the State of South Dakota for at least six months preceding the granting of such divorce, and in no case shall a divorce be granted without personal service of the summons within the State, or personal service of the summons and complaint in case of non-resident without the State. If such personal service as aforesaid, within or without the State, be not had, then and in that event the plaintiff shall not be entitled to a decree of divorce until the plaintiff shall have been a resident of this State one year preceding the granting of such divorce."

The statutory grounds remain the same as before. In effect the law requires a residence in South Dakota of three months before an action can be commenced and three months more are required before a decree can be granted. The weak point in the old divorce law was that in case the defendant could not be found a decree could be obtained by default, but in such cases the courts always held the defense could come in and reopen the case, which often resulted in embarrassing complications. The present law does away with the default feature.

Looking Forward.

"Fly," he implored.

The maiden pressed his hand to her lips.

"Fly, I beseech——"

And he strove to push her from the room.

"—you. I hear mamma coming in her heavy walking boots."

Even as he spoke a dark form appeared in the door and swore violently, after which there was the sound of conflict, and the beautiful boy was weeping alone.—Town Topics.

Hopeful.

Mr. Erastus Pinkley is a great sufferer from the cold.

"The weather is moderating," remarked one of the people for whom he does chores.

"Yes'm," he replied. "Dat's what everybody says. I recon," he went on, doubtfully, as he chafed his hands, "dat ef she keeps on a moderatin' long 'nuff, she's gwine ter git wahmer arter while."—Washington Star.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 5, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a R variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and I the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now P it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by A saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy N of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of S taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the ● number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use T of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and A perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the B tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical U profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled L and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else E you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous S is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. ● No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; best terms; write at once and secure choice of territory. ALLEN NURSERY CO., Rochester, N. Y.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

PARTICULAR MENTION

Mrs. Startup of Middletown is visiting friends in this city.

Ed Dorsey of Second street is the proud father of a five-pound girl.

Elsie T. Smith is ill with tonsilitis at her home on Westervelt avenue.

Frank Hampton of Dunellen was in town yesterday calling on friends.

George F. Nourse of Ithaca was a guest of Hotel Grenada last night.

Miss Lizzie E. Kitchell of Summit is the guest of Mrs. John Bicknell of South avenue.

J. L. Nash of Vineland and Anthony Schoder of Woodbridge were in town yesterday.

E. C. Varian will join the Danger Signal Company as business manager, Sunday, March 10.

N. W. Pike, the newcomer druggist, is still confined to his rooms in Hotel Grenada with the rheumatism.

Mrs. Altenhain of Jersey City Heights is visiting her daughter, the wife of Rev. Mr. Hauser of Duer street.

Mrs. Katharine Runyon of Newark is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Stover, on East Ninth street.

Jeremiah VanWinkle has leased the house 425 West Fourth street, and will take possession at an early date.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wakefield of Netherwood avenue are rejoicing over the advent of a daughter, Sunday night.

Dr. Daniel H. Thickstun, who has been in the South some time past for his health, is expected home about March 15.

Mrs. John Blimm and daughter of East Third street are improving from recent illness which has kept them closely confined.

Stewart Hoffman of Somerville was in Plainfield yesterday on business. He was a welcome visitor among his many friends.

Alfred Ovenshire of North Plainfield, who has been afflicted with the pneumonia for several weeks, is improving slowly in health.

Rev. Father Smith of Cranford will preach this evening at 8 in St. Mary's Church the first of the Wednesday evening Lenten sermons.

Mrs. Michael Undel, who has been suffering with the grip at her home on South avenue, has so far recovered that she is able to be about.

George H. Wyckoff of North avenue, Netherwood, is building a stone wall in front of his residence, which will greatly add to the beauty of his place.

Joseph L. Moore has rented the house on Front street near Grant avenue, owned by Jeremiah Manning, and will take possession this month.

Viola Rushton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rushton, has so far recovered from scarlet fever that the quarantine has been raised from the house.

Miss Margaret Lynch, who has been spending the past two weeks with friends in Brooklyn, returned to her home on Woodland avenue, Netherwood, yesterday.

Mrs. Wm. VanWinkle of Park place and Mrs. Jacob VanWinkle of Park avenue are today attending the funeral of A. E. Jewell, at Rahway, who was killed by a tramp Sunday.

Mrs. T. H. May of Somerset street returned home yesterday after spending a week at Plainview, N. Y., where she attended the funeral of her father-in-law Francis H. May.

Peter Hodge has received word of the safe arrival of his mother in Carribelle, Florida, where she will reside with her husband, who is connected with the Carribelle Lumber Company

Mrs. Edward Hann, wife of the letter-carrier, is suffering with a painful attack of erysipelas. Miss Hartpence of Rosemont, a cousin of Mrs. Hann, is caring for her during her illness.

Sidney Wrentmore, who has been engaged at the Commercial Palace as manager and buyer, has rented the house 221 Richmond street, of William Thickstun, the North avenue real-estate agent.

J. VanEps is now engaged in adjusting the mechanism of the phonograph which he is building, the principal parts having been constructed. It will be at least two months before the machine is completed.

Dr. Lee of Scotch Plains, ("Haddenhem") who has been confined to his bed for several weeks with inflammatory rheumatism, is still unable to move or be moved. But he says he has in his daughter the very best of nurses, and so has no fear of defeating his enemy in due time.

Mrs. Bermann will give her final extra lecture on "The Development of Opera", at the home of Mrs. W. Palmer Smith, Saturday, March 9, at 4. Wagner will be the subject. Mrs. Bermann will be assisted by H. Rowe Shelley, pianist, and Nicholas Douty, tenor. Mrs. Bermann is giving a course of interesting lectures Tuesday afternoons during Lent in the parlors of Hotel Waldorf.

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Rev. Mr. Merritt Tells About its Activity in Christian Life.

The address of Rev. Stephen Merritt in the Y.M.C.A. Association Hall last night, on the "Ministry of the Holy Spirit", was one of the soundest and most logical arguments for the acceptance of this essential in Christian life that has yet been made to a Plainfield audience. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance, and was well attended.

The speaker had a peculiar manner of delivery and speech that made even the most disinterested person give close attention to what he had to say—something that is not easy to accomplish with such a solemn theme.

Mr. Merritt said to become imbued with the Holy Spirit would change the whole tenor of one's life and wipe away all the burdens which had been hard to carry. It would not only bless us but also bless everybody we came in contact with, and we would seek only to scatter abroad the truths of Christ, for it was the intention of Jesus Christ when He sent the Holy Spirit to us He sent it as His personality. It is not an impression and then an elevation, but every day is better than the past in experience, blessing and success. So few of us know Him—we know of Him.

Mr. Merritt told how the acceptance of the Holy Spirit had transformed his life into a much more happy and successful one than it had been before, even though he was a Christian. He used to go to Methodist camp meeting once as inactive as could be, but always became enthused during its progress to such an extent that his Christianity would slop over, and then when he left all his efforts that had slopped over were lost, for he could not sustain the interest which had been exhibited there. Since he took in the Holy Spirit his life had been of one even tenor, and he was happy all the time and had been blessed with great success. The Holy Spirit came to him while attending an Alliance meeting.

He said that he believed in divine healing, for he himself had been benefited by it. In closing he said it was not what you do, but what the Holy Spirit does through you.

Window Smashers at Work.

The large plate glass in the west window of Horsley Barker's drugstore on West Front street was broken with a stone last night by some unknown miscreant after 11 when the store was closed. The glass was valued at $100 and was not insured.

Evidently it was the work of a gang who are making a business of committing depredations about the city at short intervals. About two months ago Mr. Barker found his windows daubed with black paint, and also quite frequently signs which are left in front of the store over night are found in the brook nearby the next morning. T. J. Carey, the auctioneer, has also suffered in much the same manner by having his awning cut into strips with a knife.

It is thought that the glass was broken by the same gang who are stuffing the keyholes of fire-alarm boxes. If they are caught the law will deal severely with them.

Collected for India.

Rev. Dr. Boggs of India gave an intensely interesting talk Sunday evening in the First Baptist Church under the auspices of the Temple Builders, on his work in India. His work has certainly been wonderful, and the large audience was much enthused in listening to his experience. At the close a collection was taken for the support of the native preacher at the Yerkes Chapel in Tetu, India. The selections by the choir were a feature of the service.

Doll Show to be Repeated.

The annual meeting of the Young Ladies Presbyterian Band was held in the Crescent Avenue Church yesterday afternoon, and the following officers elected for the ensuing year:

President, Emily Tracy; vice-president, Harriett Holloway; secretary, Katharine Thorn; treasurer, Josephine Petrie; managers, Misses Brower, Yerkes, Blish, Bronson and Patten. It was decided to repeat the doll show for the young people Saturday afternoon, March 16. The treasurer reported that $72 was cleared from the doll show on Thursday night of last week

Fame,

When founded on merit, never ceases to grow, both in extent and in solidity.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

is more popular to-day than ever before, because it does what is claimed for it—relieves and cures pains in the side, chest or limbs, lame back, rheumatism, etc.

Insist Upon Having the genuine Allcock's. No other plaster is nearly so good.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills.

One or two at night, for a week or two, tone up the system.

WHY?

QUESTIONS WOMEN ASK

Here Answered with Good Sound Reason.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Why do people say that Lydia E. Pinkham's treatment, especially her Vegetable Compound, effects cures beyond the physician's skill?

Because of the fact that a woman best understands a woman's ills. What man ever suffered a single pang like unto woman? Man works from theory only.

Why do tens of thousands of women write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., telling their most secret thoughts?

Because they know that their letters go straight to the hands of a woman, are opened, read, and answered by a woman, who as a woman has made woman's ills a life study, and because she never fails them, and cures cases which the doctor cannot.

The lady who asks that the following letter be published, gives concisely the uniform expression of gratitude contained in thousands of other letters in Mrs. Pinkham's possession.

"For eight years I suffered with neuralgia of the womb, backache, severe pains all through my body, and kidney trouble. None of the doctors did me any good. I took twelve bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and cannot thank you enough for the relief I found.

"I am now well cured of all those pains. I should advise every woman to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound who has any female trouble. I had a friend who was to go under an operation. I advised her first to try the Compound. She did, and is now so much better and stronger she has given up all thoughts of the operation." —Mrs. M. Wilde, 3137 Park St., Tioga, Pa.

Monroe's Good Work.

The entertainment which was given in Monroe Avenue Chapel last Monday under the auspices of the Epworth League was enjoyed by a large audience.

The programme, preceded by a hymn, and prayer by Pastor Munson, was as follows:

Cornet Solo—
Raymond McGee.
Recitation { a. Judgment Day.
b. Selected.
Miss Grace E. Overton.
Song { a. Selected.
b. Selected.
Mr. Bond.
Drill—
Misses Burt, Robinson, Bodine; Masters Collins, Robinson, VanDoren, VanLiew.
Song { 1. Vy Vould n't You Lofe Me.
2. Whistling Coon.
3. Parrot Song.
George Stevens.
Intermission.
Dialogue—Champion of her Sex,
Misses Beckman, Aldrich, Palmer, Ackerman, Wenzel, Burts, LaRue.

President J. J. Freed had charge of the entertainment, and Misses Aldrich, Beekman and Burt composed the Social Committee.

A large collection was received, to carry on the good work of the league.

Methodist Children Enjoy Themselves.

One of the prettiest and most successful parties of the season was given by Miss French and Miss Trenham to the children of the infant class of the Methodist Sunday-school, yesterday, in Vincent Chapel

Being a pleasant day, most all were present. Miss Trenham showed her natural skill in entertaining the children, who entered into the fun with happy and light hearts.

Miss Grace Overton and Miss Eleanor VanDeventer so artistically performed the Punch and Judy show that they were encored.

After the games and singing by the class, Mrs. E. T. Douglass played a lively march, and the children marched about the room and into the parlor, where there were two tables beautifully decorated and filled with tempting dainties.

Those who aided at the tables were Miss French, Miss Trenham, Mrs. Clark, Misses Maude French, Bertha Thorne, Mrs. French, Misses Edna French, Bessie Vallant, Mrs. E. T. Douglass and Miss Douglass.

Among those who were present were: Misses Marguerite Townsend, Dorthy Douglass, Marion Overton, Gladys Peck, Master Mills, Master Pope, Baby Susan, a little cousin of Miss French, Masters Charlie and Raymond Lyman, with a great many others.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine handled, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. Baldridge, Millersville, Ill. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

W. S. Bullock is out again after a severe illness.

Lewis DeCamp of Plainfield avenue, after a month of the grip, is out again.

Miss Florence Walker of Boehm's dry-goods house is confined to her home with grip and tonsilitis.

Rev. Chas. E. Scudder of North Plainfield has accepted a call to the Montgomery Street Church, Newark.

Charles H Schermerhorn, manager of the Western Union office, is confined to his home with an attack of the grip.

Rev. J. P. Taylor has sold his property on East Sixth street near Franklin place, to Dr. S. W. VanDuyn of Newark, through J. T. Vail.

L. W. Serrell contributes a thoughtful article on "The Kingdom and The Church", to The Religious Herald of Richmond, Va.

Miss Margaret Schuck of North Plainfield returned home yesterday after a pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. J. S. Darby of Alton.

Alfred S. Wilmont of Metuchen, father of O. H. Wilmont of 10 Duer street, died Monday evening. His funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon.

W. B. Dolan of Elizabeth yesterday took charge of the Plainfield branch of the Metropolitan Insurance Company. He takes the place vacated by Charles Williams.

M. J. Meaney, formerly of this city, has resumed his duties as agent of the Jersey Central at Westfield, after a 40 days absence from work on account of injuries received in a wreck.

John W. Kirkner of West Eighth street is able to be out again after almost two months confinement with pneumonia. His many friends will be glad to hear of his complete recovery.

I. Winthrop Travell, principal of the High School, has recovered sufficiently from his attack of pneumonia to be about the house again. He hopes to return to his duties in a week or two.

The work of A. B. Clemens, of the Y. M. C. A. Educational Department, was so prominently recognized during the State Convention that he has been offered the assistant State Secretaryship. He is considering the call.

Cards are out announcing the wedding of Matthew Walker and Miss Clara Woldt of Westfield. The marriage will take place Wednesday evening, March 20, at the home of the bride. Mr. Walker was formerly employed by Grocer G. W Rockfellow, and is now in business for himself in Westfield.

F— 20 Letters.

The Trenton Daily True American of Saturday, March 2, speaking of the late session of the Improved Order of Red Men, says that John H. Carney, the humorist, took back to his Council a charter for the longest named Tribe in existence, Paughcaughnaughsinque, No. 193.

After Snow Comes Mud.

Street Commissioner Meeker had a force of men on Park avenue yesterday afternoon scraping the roadway from the surplus mud.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

Mission Society Meets.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of Grace M. E. Church met last evening at the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. Garey, Craig place. Mrs. A. A. Taft gave a select reading to the amusement of all, after which a dialogue was presented by Mary Hoagland, Addie Carney, Tena Voehl and Agnes Morse. Little Miss Mabel Garey closed the programme by a select recitation which was highly enjoyed and showed her careful training. An amusing feature of the evening's entertainment was the donkey party. The usual collection was taken. These home meetings are a pleasant addition to Grace M. E. Church sociability.

Consumption

is amenable to treatment. Hope, courage, proper exercise, and from the inception of the disease the continual use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites, are absolutely necessary.

Keep up good courage, and with the use of this most nourishing and fattening preparation recovery is certain in the first stages, and may be accomplished even when the lungs are seriously involved. Stop the excessive waste (and nothing will do it like Scott's Emulsion), and you are almost safe.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.
Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

3-26-y

LEGGETT'S TOILET SOAP,

for the toilet, bath and nursery. 15 cents a cake, 6 cakes 75 cents. Warranted absolutely pure.

The compounding of physicians' prescriptions a specialty.

Corner Park avenue and Front street.

CARPETS

Made and Laid With Paper Without Charge

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street

are making and laying Carpets with paper without charge, which is a saving of 15c per yd.

Parties about going to housekeeping will find no larger stock of Parlor Suits and Bedroom Suits to select from at such low prices. All of the latest Spring styles of Bedroom Suits of the Hall & Lyon manufacture and Parlor Suits of all the latest manufactures and of the latest designs and coverings.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

All other goods suitable to furnish a house with in our line are sold at the lowest prices. Terms easy; one dollar per week.

The Portland Range!

The Court of Errors has just unanimously affirmed the opinion of the lower courts that no other dealer can take any range and put the name Portland on it and try to hoodwink the people that they are selling the original Portland Range, when such is not the case. 7,000 of these ranges now in use and not one complaint. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Goods delivered to all parts of the State free of charge.

Storing Furniture

Our new building just erected at 88, 90, 92 Bank street, seems to be the only building in the State to store furniture, the way it is being filled up. Furniture moved with vans at reasonable rates in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

THOSE ARTIFICIAL VIOLETS.

New York and Other Women Make a Fashion that Cuts a Florist's Profits.

Of cautious thrift and cool business judgment the women have never before made so admirable a display as in the contest with and triumph over one of the monopolies that threatened to crush her independence. In this instance the florists with violets for sale are the humbled foes. For several seasons they have been steadily raising the price of these flowers that New York women particularly have come to consider almost as necessary a part of dress as hats and handkerchiefs. Hitherto they cheerfully paid well for the little blossoms until, during the winter, their value was raised by the avaricious florists to a point that aroused remonstrance. Finding argument of no avail the women silently stretched forth the long arm of fashion to mete out vengeance to the obstinate dealers by proclaiming muslin, velvet or silk violets permissible substitutes for the natural flowers. Not only did the artificial ones become permissible, but they have grown to be ubiquitous adjuncts of feminine costume. They have even received Parisian sanction, and the florist now tears his hair with one hand while with the other he figures up the loss this drop in the natural violet market has brought. Through his window he can see that never before have violets been so popular. Not only do women pin them on their muffs and wear them in their hats, but the dressmakers and tailors now send home gowns, coats, capes and dress waists with big bunches of purple velvet blossoms sewed at throat and breast.

In the millinery departments of Broadway dry goods shops basketsful of neat violet bouquets, tied with satin ribbon, tempt the passerby. Some women even carry nosegays of the silk ones in their hands and sniff them approvingly, for down in their depths are secreted wee satchets of lavender silk filled with ground orris root or a bit of a sponge, which, when sprayed with violet extract, gives out as comforting perfume as any one could ask. The charm of the situation is that every one is enabled to wear violets of more or less excellent quality for six weeks. They are one fourth as expensive as the product of cold frames and greenhouses, and everybody is satisfied except the florist.

MUSIC, HOME AND WIFE.

Women Should Remember After Marriage How Their Playing Charmed.

The club would not be so much blamed for keeping men away from home in the evening if the wives did not make the grievous mistake of giving up music after marriage.

The average man is tired when he gets home from business and after dinner he needs some diversion from the day's routine. It was her musical ability that attracted him so his sweetheart perhaps, or even if not an expert in the art, he no doubt counted it a charming accomplishment that she could play Chopin expressively and sing old Scotch ballads with sentiment and feeling. But after marriage too many women seem to become entirely indifferent to the æsthetic influence of music in the home, though they are quick to bewail the fact if their husbands drop any of their efforts to please.

In the days of courtship the sweetheart nearly always finds his fiancee at the piano, her willing fingers bringing forth soft rippling strains that seem to envelop her in an atmosphere of ideal feminine refinement. But when sweetheart has become benedict the grating of his latch key in the lock is all the music that greets him on his homecoming, unless the maid servant is humming "After the Ball" as she sets the dinner table.

THE COLORADO SPIRIT.

The Women Propose to Eliminate the Question of Sex From the Churches.

"Can I be a deacon in this church?" The question was asked by a Colorado woman who wanted to join the church. "No, madam, you cannot," was the minister's answer. "Then I won't join it; so there!" she exclaimed. The other women who had applied for admission stood by her with Colorado determination, and likewise refused to join.

It seems that these Colorado women are bound to win their demands. They must be ahead of all the other women in creation, in the march of progress. They are voters and members of the Legislature, and judges and mayors and political bosses, and school directors, and police officers, and everything else save soldiers. That one of them in Denver who wanted to be a deacon, and raised the uproar in which the other women upheld her, said she would like the job of "passing the plate" in church, and it was after the minister had denied her this privilege of grace that she gave him a scolding never to be forgotten.

Paper Hosiery.

Paper gloves and hosiery are named as among the very latest novelties. Stockings which shall sell at 3 cents a pair are proposed. In fact, the experiment of making paper stockings has been going on for several months and the party engaged therein believes that paper mittens or gloves would possess advantages in their season. The goods are light and airy and very comfortable in summer.

When finished and dyed their appearance is similar to ordinary fabric goods. The knitting is from paper yarns. The paper yarns are made pretty much after the plan of making common paper twines, except that the former are put through certain special processes. The principle is that of making a sort of nap on the yarn. This is done automatically. Ordinary paper twine or yarn is too smooth, but a good gigging up gives the yarn a nap and this imparts softness. After the knitting has been done the goods are placed in a sizing bath made from potato starch and tallow, which imparts solidity and durability to the texture.

With paper passenger car wheels, paper water pails, why not paper socks and stockings?—The Glover.

A Necessary Exception.

The Utica Herald is doing its best to hasten the spelling reform by omitting the letters "ugh" from words ending with them, such as though, through, although, etc. It makes an exception, however, in the case of cough.—Chicago Daily Tribune.

A Woman's Wiles.

"Let me have a two cent stamp, please," said the dapper youth.

"We're all out of stamps," said the pretty post mistress, "but we have some lovely postal cards for a penny each."

And man like he bought a dozen.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PROFESSOR WILDER.

BRAINS, CATS, AND COLLEGE ATHLETHICS HIS HOBBIES.

Girl Students Stand the Horrors of His Operating Room Better Than the Boys.
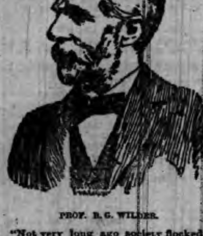
Values Brains in College Above Brawn.
His Cat House a Great Source of Fun.

Professor Burt G. Wilder, of Cornell University, who recently exhibited a brainless frog, and has become known as one of the most skillful experts in brain anatomy in the United States.

He spends all his spare time on the comparative anatomy of brains, and has made many important discoveries, and Cornell University has been a great gainer by his presence in the faculty. He was one of the original faculty, and his collection of brains is one of the sights of the institution.

Those who know him find him a genial, warm hearted, almost overconscientious man, eager to help paintaking students. They also know him as an ardent, excitable, self willed, and absolutely fearless man. To those students who are not in his classes he is known as the one man in the faculty who has made unceasing war for twenty years on college sports. Every year there is a scare among the athletes at Cornell lest Dr. Wilder shall succeed in his nefarious purpose of killing athletics, and every year there is a rally in the faculty to head him off. The Doctor recently said in a printed article:

"I can probably claim a 'bad pre-eminence' among American professors on the following grounds: I never witnessed an intercollegiate contest, contributed a cent for their maintenance, or voted to permit absences of any team or crew. Since 1876 I have objected to the whole system in writings.



PROF. B. G. WILDER.

"Not very long ago society flocked to admire a drooping lily or a nodding sunflower with a slim something in petticoats or trowsers behind it, dribbling forth unintelligible—and therefore inestimable—inanities. To-day, the obvious college representative is the captain of a successful football team. The game is witnessed by thousands at a high price. Great newspapers devote columns to contests, which, in the total of fury, bodily hurt and bloodshed, surpass some pugilistic encounters, and approximate war before the introduction of gunpowder. Brains give place to brawn. 'A whole head is worth less than a half back.' The æsthetic craze has been succeeded by an athletic craze."

Dr. Wilder has another fad besides brain study and hostility to football and other athletic sports. It is cats. He was one of the first teachers of physiology to use cats in experiments before the students. To illustrate the action of the heart and lungs he has put hundreds of cats under the influence of chloroform and cut them up in his lecture room. The young women students have invariably stood it better than the young men the first time. Some male freshman is almost sure to faint when he sees the doctor's experiments in vivisection, but the girls, although they occupy the front seats, look on without a quaver. To get cats Dr. Wilder offered 10 cents each for all the small boys could bring him. There was a procession of small boys immediately across the Cornell campus, each with a bag. The Doctor had to have constructed at once a cat house, and Ithaca became known as the one town in all New York State where the midnight feline serenades and quarrels, with the resultant bootjack and pistol shots, were unknown. Ithaca is still a model town in this respect, thanks to Dr. Wilder, and many of its citizens who get a comfortable night's sleep when the citizens of other towns are leaning out of their windows seeking a chance to kill the members of some cat congress, openly thank Dr. Wilder for their comfort.

Dr. Wilder's cat house used to be a great source of much fun for the students. More than once has it been raided and the cats allowed to escape. It used to be out in a little orchard, now occupied by a handsome building, and there is a record of a case of arson when it was burned one night and the cats were sent scurrying over the campus to disappear in the neighboring gorges. Dr. Wilder and his cats have been caricatured repeatedly in the college annuals, and finally their memory was made secure in a college song. It was once sung to the evident embarrassment of the Doctor. The class of '88 was making its last rounds of the buildings on class day and cheering every familiar thing, animate or inanimate, that had shared in their college life. The members of the class had just passed the orchard when Dr. Wilder and an eminent friend of the New York medical fraternity were seen coming from a building on their way to the cat house. The Doctor was exhibiting his happy family of cats awaiting execution. Taking advantage of the license of the day the graduating class at once stopped, and some one proposed three cheers for Dr. Wilder. The Doctor was plainly pleased. He bowed and smiled his acknowledgments, and then the irreverent young men began this song:

Old Dr. Wilder went a-prowling after cats.

It is sung to the tune of "John Brown's Body."

Contrition.

Mistress (angrily)—Bridget, I find that you wore one of my decollete ball gowns to the hack drivers' ball last evening. It's the worst piece of impudence I ever heard of. You ought to be ashamed of yourself!

Bridget (meekly)—Oi was, mum; Oi was!—and me young man said, as if Oi iver wore sich an indacent dress in public ag'in, he'd break our ingagemint.—

FACTS ABOUT JAPAN.

Interesting Points Touched on in a Talk With the Japanese Minister.

Very clever is his imperial Japanese majesty's envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary, Shinichiro Kurino. Although a recent addition to the diplomatic corps, Mr. Kurino is no stranger to the United States, being well known in Boston and Cambridge, where as a Harvard student he passed seven years of his life. Eager to impart information as well as to acquire it, this agreeable gentleman is a welcome guest at public and private entertainments, and is always ready to answer questions about his interesting country.

"How far can the history of Japan be traced?" I asked the minister at our last meeting.

"Japanese historians authentically trace the history of Japan to the era of Jimmu Tenno, the first emperor of Japan and the founder of the present dynasty, who ascended the throne 2,554 years ago. The history of Jimmu Tenno is based to a certain degree upon tradition, but the Japanese regard the tradition as perfectly authentic and have canonized the first emperor, not alone as the progenitor of the present imperial house, but also as a hero and warrior who subdued the aborigines of southern and central Japan and, in a word, founded the nation."

"What is the origin of the people?"

"Ethnologists do not agree and nothing can be answered with certainty. The aborigines—Aino—are very unlike other Asiatic races and resemble the Esquimaux in some respects."

"What effect had the Perry treaty, in 1853, upon Japan?"

"It was this dawn of daylight from the outer world which showed the intelligent Japanese how thoroughly out of touch their country and, above all, their form of government was with the spirit of the age. It was then that the little band of reformers who were chiefly instrumental in bringing about the great change began their work."

"What is the population and what is the ratio of increase?"

"The present population is about 41,000,000. The increase has been 5,000,000 within ten years."

"What is the condition of the poor and what proportions are they of the whole people?"

"There are no great extremes of wealth and poverty in Japan. Wages are low, but living is cheap. There are very few great fortunes. The largest private fortune in Japan was acquired by steamships, increased by railroad investments and by investment in various commercial and industrial enterprises. The next largest was acquired through the ownership of agricultural lands. Speaking generally it may be said that wealth is acquired in Japan just as in other countries, with this possible difference, that there are no great fortunes acquired by purely speculative enterprises. Manufactures are rapidly coming to the front, especially cotton spinning and weaving."

"What are the orders of nobility?"

"There is a hereditary noble class in Japan, the descendants of the ancient landed nobility—daimios—and of the imperial family and court nobility. The emperor, who is of course the fountain head of all honors, has ennobled other subjects for distinguished public services. The orders of nobility are: princes, marquises, counts, viscounts and barons. Beside the members of the imperial family there are eleven princes, thirty marquises, eighty-four counts, 358 viscounts and 118 barons."

"Is trade respected at court?"

"Yes; and persons engaged in business pursuits are received at court. This is a complete revolution of ancient customs and ideas. When Gen. Grant was in Japan the merchants of Tokio gave him a magnificent ball and the emperor accepted an invitation to be present. This was the first time in the history of Japan that trade had been so honored."

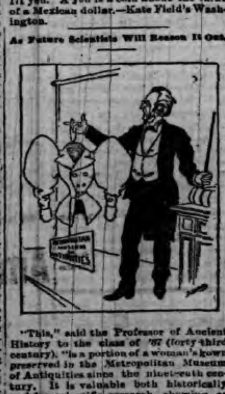
"What are your principal exports?"

"Tea, silk, tobacco, rice, products of fisheries, lacquer, bronze, etc. The United States are Japan's best customer."

"What do you import?"

"Cotton and woollen goods, iron and steel, and manufactures of raw cotton, kerosene oil, clocks, watches, etc. Japan imports most from Great Britain; after that from China, Germany and the United States, in the order named. Exports exceed imports. In 1893 the former were 89,712,864 yen; the latter 88,257,171 yen. A yen is a coin about the value of a Mexican dollar.—Kate Field's Washington.

As Future Scientists Will Reason It Out.



"This," said the Professor of Ancient History to the class of '87 (forty-third century), "is a portion of a woman's gown preserved in the Metropolitan Museum of Antiquities since the nineteenth century. It is valuable both historically and for scientific research, showing, as you will see from these extensive sleeves, that the women of that period had abnormally developed muscles.

"This evidence of physical prowess is found only in a few remaining articles of dress that were worn in that day, but it is corroborated circumstantially by records showing that it was not until that age that woman's rights were seriously discussed. Having secured their rights towards the end of the century, they evidently allowed their muscles to degenerate, and have never, so to speak, been on their muscle again."

Two Views of a Tooth.

"I have been unto the dentist's,"
Said babbling Mrs. Brief,
"And had the horrid tooth removed,
So now I have relief."
"Oh, lucky tooth," the husband said;
"I'd so be forcepped, too,
To be removed from out the reach,

BY THE WAY.

—Hebard & Co. have put in a 'phone, 23B.

—A large tree is being cut down at New and Fourth streets.

—Hilton & Hughes of New York now send a delivery wagon regularly to Plainfield.

—Edward P. Thorn of East Second street has placed a substantial boardwalk in front of his property, about 200 feet.

—Wm. Garen, in advance of Ward & Vokes, was in town yesterday billing the troupe, which is to appear in Music Hall March 13.

—No important business was transacted at the regular weekly meeting of the Street Committee of the Common Council last night.

—Jacob Cose and son yesterday received the contract for slating four new houses of W. A. Weber on West Front street near West End Park.

—A men's service will be held in Grace P. E. Church Friday evening. Rev. E. M. Rodman will make a short address. All men are cordially invited.

—The next bowling game in the Elizabeth Journal series will be between Plainfield and Cranford Tuesday evening of next week at the latter place.

—Henry W. Force of New street is today putting in an entirely new front door and entrance to Dr. J. B. Probasco's house on East Front street.

—There was very little business at the North Plainfield registry places yesterday, and a passer-by would scarcely notice anything out of the ordinary.

—Through the agency of William Tickstun, a most desirable flat in the Voehl Building on East Front street has been rented to Letter-carrier Robert H. Loughlin.

—The baths at the Y.M.C.A., have been finished, and yesterday some necessary painting was done to complete the job. As soon as the paint gets dry they will be opened for use.

—Elegant new signs in the windows of Woolston & Buckle are an exhibit of the excellence of work done by that firm. Their prices on wall-papering and decorating are right.

—The employes of the postoffice are greatly pleased with their new quarters in the Babcock Building. The light and ventilation are much better than in their former quarters.

—The topic for the First M. E. Church prayer meeting this evening is "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God". The Official Board will hold its monthly session after the prayer meeting.

—At the meeting of the Camera Club last night plans for future work were discussed, but nothing definite was decided on. H. W. Happersett was elected a member of the club.

—In the case of McNabb against Rushmore which came up before Justice Mosher yesterday, judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for $107. The case will be appealed.

—A horse belonging to Jacob Cose became frightened at a passing train on Liberty street yesterday afternoon, and did some damage to the wagon but was unable to get away from the driver.

—Four houses at the corner of Grove street and Greenbrook road, owned by Craig A. Marsh, are being thoroughly renovated and put in first-class condition. Wm. Thickstun will have the renting of them.

—Williams & Co. of this city have received the contract for the mason work for A. D. Thompson's new house on Belvidere avenue, where they will begin work as soon as the excavating is completed.

—One of the tank-wagons belonging to Jones & Co. became stranded in the mud on Belvidere avenue yesterday afternoon, but with the aid of four horses and several men they were able presently to proceed on their way.

—Mrs. L. Coles, who took a suite of rooms in the Babcock Building to carry on her dressmaking business, is more than pleased with the amount of custom she has received during the first month, and desires The Press to thank her patrons and friends for the liberal patronage bestowed.

REMEMBER there are hundreds of brands of White Lead (so called) on the market that are not White Lead, composed largely of Barytes and other cheap materials. But the number of brands of genuine is limited. The following brands are standard "Old Dutch" process, and just as good as they were when you or your father were boys:

Strictly Pure
White Lead

"Atlantic," "Jewett,"
"Brooklyn."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free; it will probably save you a good many dollars.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

Ferris'
GOOD SENSE
Corset
Waists.

SENSIBLE WOMEN WEAR THEM

BECAUSE THEY ARE
RIGHT Shape to fit properly and feel comfortable
RIGHT Material to give the best service.
RIGHT Finish because of skilled labor.
RIGHT Buttons and Button Holes won't pull off.
RIGHT Support from the shoulders.
RIGHT Fastenings for Hose Supporters.

Why Buy an Imitation when the GENUINE Costs so Little and Wears so Long?
CHILDREN'S, 25c. to 75c. MISSES 50c. to $1. LADIES, $1 to $2.

K. of P. District Session.

A district meeting of Knights of Pythias from Perseverance, 74, K. of P., Unity, 103, K. of P., and Goodwill, 101, K. of P., of Scotch Plains, will be held in Perseverance lodge rooms on West Second street, Friday night at 8, when Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath of Jersey City, Grand Vice-Chancellor Dr. Hithcock of Newark, and Grand Master-at-Arms Rockafellar of Somerville, will be present. Crescent Division, No. 13, Uniform Rank, K. of P., under command of Capt. Flannery, will act as an escort to the Grand Chancellor and his staff. An interesting and profitable time is assured to all, and at the close the Grand Chancellor and his staff will be given a reception and collation.

Followed Advice and Was Cured.

In speaking of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, Mrs. James E. Beach, of Rosendale, N. Y., says—"About seven years ago I was a sufferer from kidney disease, so sick and helpless I could not walk a step. My physician could do me no good, so I began to use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and from the very first dose I could see improvement, and it entirely cured me. My husband used it for dyspepsia with excellent result." Favorite Remedy dissolves the excess of uric acid in the blood, thus curing disease. Such ailments as rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney, liver and urinary troubles, and the ills peculiar to women, all arise from this cause, and are cured by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

—A regular communication of Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M., was held last night. Nothing but routine business was transacted.

Fifty Dollars Given Away.

To raisers of poultry, the most wonderful and valuable monthly is The Poultry Keeper. The publishers offer fifty dollars free. Send for sample copy free and see how. Any of the following back numbers worth a dollar but sent postpaid for only five cents each: Brooders Incubators, Appliances, Poultry Houses (Illust) Aug. '89 Aug. '91. Worth $10. Poultry Houses, Ap'l '87, Oct. '88 and July '91 (Illus). Preserving eggs, Sep. '87. Turkeys, Mar. '92. Poultry diseases Nov. '87. How to Feed for Eggs, Oct. '91. All About Lice, Oct. '87, Dec '91. Testing Eggs, June '92 and June '93. How to Make the Hot Water Incubator July '87. Sample free. Address, The Poultry Keeper Co., Parkersburg, Pa.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 26 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

4.31 p. m., WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

8.54 p. m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

[illegible] p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

Sundays, [illegible]

For Baltimore only [illegible] week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

Sundays [illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

[illegible] with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays [illegible]

Cape May Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] p. m. week-days.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager. J. R. WOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville, [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, [illegible] Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R. Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

[illegible] A. M. Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. [illegible]

[illegible]

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Military Studies Begun In the School of Brienne.

HIS WAR GENIUS FORESHADOWED.

Defiant In Manner, He Incurred the Animosity of His Fellows—Arrested For Challenging a Schoolmate—Battle of the Snow Fort—Desired to Lead, Not Follow.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

III.—AUTUN AND BRIENNE.

The old town of Autun lies on the left bank of the Arroux, 164 miles southeast of Paris. Here the boys Buonaparte were put to school, in January of 1779. The town is an epitome of European history. It was the capital of the brave Æduans, whom Cæsar overcame in the first year of the Gallic war. The place from being a Roman oppidum became barbarian again. The Vandals had it; then the Burgundians; then the Huns; then the Franks; then the Saracens; then the Normans; and once, the English. Of these vicissitudes the monumental traces remained when Napoleon, in his tenth year, arrived at the gates. He was put under charge of the Abbe Chardon, nephew of the General Marbœuf. The latter devoted himself to the interests of the Buonaparte family, and paid a part of the expenses.

NAPOLEON AT TWENTY-TWO.

The plan of Carlo Buonaparte and his friend the general was to give to both the boys a military education. It was deemed expedient that they should first learn French in the school of the Abbe, at Autun. To this work they were put, on their arrival; and in about three months they were reckoned sufficiently advanced to begin a regular course of instruction in some military establishment.

Meanwhile the father and Marbœuf had gone to Versailles, and were assiduous in their efforts to get the boys established as pensioners. The solicitation was that the young fellows should be educated at the expense of the state. Marbœuf invented a fiction, flecked with fact, about the nobility of his wards; and the petition was granted finally as to Napoleon. But Joseph had now passed the limit of his eleventh year, and was no longer eligible—unless by violation of law. He must therefore be diverted to the priesthood, while the younger brother was assigned, at the public charge, to the military academy at Brienne-la-Chapelle, on the right bank of the Aube, in the department of the same name, a hundred and eighteen miles from Paris. Thither he was transferred in the latter part of April, 1779, and was admitted as a cadet.

At Autun, the chief business had been to teach him French. He applied himself closely to this task, but not very successfully. He learned to speak French, brokenly, with an Italian accent. To the end of his life he never acquired a nice knowledge of the adopted tongue. His grammar was broken, his composition thunderstruck, and his spelling heretical. His practical knowledge of the language which he was destined to use for forty-two years in his intercourse with men was sufficient; but his mind was never tolerant of technicalities. These he slurred over with impetuous impatience, as though they were insignificant details fit for children.

This trait of neglecting the exactitudes was strongly manifested from Napoleon's childhood. He went as far as the practical in whatever subject he touched; but having seized thus much, he cared for nothing else. He desired correctness in others, for that was useful to him; but as for himself, he wanted only aggregate results and a knowledge of their practical advantage. All authors have commented on the inaccuracies and lapses in the Napoleonic correspondence and manuscripts. It became his habit to slur over, in his rapid way, the errors in his writing; and his arrogance seemed to convince him that, while correct spelling was an accomplishment in pedagogues, it was rather a fault in great men.

His teacher, the Abbe, has left a sketch of the lad, as he was at Autun, entirely consistent with what we know of his antecedent and subsequent character. The young Bonaparte is described by his master as being of solemn demeanor; rarely laughing, never happy or mirthful; no disposition for playing; proud and solitary; easily wounded; always resentful; learning with lightning-like rapidity, but stopping short of correctness; vain of his faculties; patriotism almost morbid; disliking the powerful foreign race with which his lot had been cast; looking back regretfully to Corsica, and (most unboylike) thinking more of his country than he did of his home and mother.

Already, before leaving Autun, the pale little Bonaparte fell into frequent quarrels with his French schoolmates about the Corsican revolution! They insulted him with the charge that his countrymen had been cowards—else they would have won their independence. To this he answered angrily that if the French had outnumbered his people only four to one, the invaders would have been defeated. Military calculation already! In his childhood he had made Paoli a god; and it is recorded of him that he said in one of his playground disputes: "Paoli was a great general, and I should much like to emulate him!"

The military academy at Brienne was one of ten of like kind recently established in the kingdom. Besides these, there were two higher schools, one at Paris and the other at La Fleche. This system had superseded another which had failed on account of its unpopularity. The military education and the right thereto was a plum for the nobles: Boys of the Third Estate had therein no part or lot. In the schools were gathered the weakened reproductions of a moribund nobility. The governors of the schools were even as the cadets. The institutions degenerated, until there was a popular reaction against them. There was a reform, headed by the Church. New schools were established, and monks were put in charge of them!

At the time when the boy Napoleon went to Brienne, the remarkable condition was presented of a system of military schools in charge of the monastic fathers. The condition was as if West Point and Annapolis should be put under the administration of a General Conference! The Brienne academy was conducted by the Minim Fathers, good men in their way, but as sources of inspiration to lads with the gleam of military glory in their brains they were mere dullness and obfuscation! The courses of study were in mathematics, geography, history, Latin, modern languages, philosophy, and such poor misnamed science as might be squeezed from the sponge of clerical dogmatism in the eighteenth century.

Such was the disciplinary fare which was offered to the boy Napoleon. He was now far removed from friends and kinsmen. He made the acquaintance of his schoolmates; admired one of them—Bourienne—and seemed to love another—Des Mazis; but his character and manner were rocks of offense to the rest of the hundred and fifty. Nothing more striking has been presented in personal annals than the contrast which the poor Corsican lad, with his solemn face, long, stiff black hair, haughty expression, close-shut Italian mouth, solitary pride of bearing, and unfashionable insular suit, afforded to the throng of noble, mocking effeminates among whom he was washed up as from the sea.

On his entrance into the academy—which was a clean, well-ordered place—Napoleon brought from the Abbe Chardon certificates of moderate proficiency and the usual character-sketch of himself as a pupil. But nothing protected him from the insane animosity of his fellows. They jeered at him in a manner that would have driven a less resolute spirit to despair. Had he been complaisant, he might easily have won peace, if not popularity; but his defiant air seemed to challenge the attacks of the contemptuous crowd.

Deep down in the situation lay the provocation of poverty. The boy perceived the disparagement to which he was subjected on this score; and it maddened him not a little. His most troublesome characteristic was this—that he would not follow in anything. He would lead. He would be first or nothing. Assumption of leadership and the air of it brought on him still greater contumely. The bitterness of the situation sometimes came to the verge of bloodshed. Once he got himself arrested for challenging another to fight him on account of an insulting remark about his father. The sullen boy went muttering to the guard-house. Nor was he restored to condition until Marbœuf had interceded in person with the authorities.

Getting his liberty, Napoleon sought his own company more than ever. For exercise he cultivated a small piece of ground as a garden. There was a hedge round about, and here he could be alone in his keep. All the while he applied himself, with great diligence and concentration of mind, to those studies which he preferred. Such was his willfulness that he virtually made his own curriculum. While becoming proficient in geography, history and mathematics, he neglected the languages, giving indeed to all the politer branches only such modicum of attention as was absolutely demanded.

Out of this epoch come some well-known stories of the student Bonaparte at Brienne. In course of time, his fellow-cadets, understanding him better, became first tolerant, and then friendly. Friendship in the case of the proud and arbitrary cadet meant subjection to his will. While he could not be companionable in sports, he could and would command. The existence of the tradition about his dividing his fellows into two armies, building a fort in winter out of snow (building it, too, according to the principles of good engineering!), making a siege, with snowballs for bombs, and with all the seriousness of Genghis Khan carrying the place by storm, may well attest his disposition and growing ascendency at the academy.

The young Napoleon remained at Brienne from April of 1779 to the year 1784. The inspector Keralio, coming from Paris to the military school, discerned in the slender cadet from Ajaccio the hints of promise. The method was in such cases to send up students from the minor academies to the Military School of Paris. Sometimes promotion was made directly to the navy; and this was considered a great honor. It appears that the inspector would have had Cadet Bonaparte sent to the fleet; but the officer died before his wish could be fulfilled.

Accordingly, at the end of Napoleon's course at Brienne, he was recommended for promotion to the military school in Paris. At this time, namely, in 1784, when Napoleon was in his sixteenth year, he was personally described by the inspector in the following terms: "M. de Bonaparte (Napoleon), born August 15, 1769. Height, 4 pieds, 10 pouces, 10 lignes (—1 metre, 59 centimetres, 3 millimetres—5 feet, 2.7 inches), is in the fourth class; of good constitution, excellent health, mild disposition (mistake there, Inspector!). Is upright, grateful; conduct very regular; has been always distinguished for his application to mathematics; is fairly acquainted with history and geography; is weak in all accomplishments (very true, Monsieur de Keralio!) and Latin. He will make an excellent sailor; deserves promotion to the Military School in Paris."

The character of the young Napoleon at this period of his career reveals in one thing a depth and far-off sight that might well have belonged to the forceful years of his maturity. The thing related to Joseph his brother. From his childhood he had discerned his own natural superiority. Usually the elder subordinates the younger. As early as the coming to Autun, Napoleon excogitated the scheme to lodge his brother on the safe ledge of the priesthood. Thus would he have him out of his way! Given a military career for both, and Joseph must be, by seniority, before him. But nothing shall be before him. Arguments fit for Richelieu are found why Joseph shall enter the Church, rise to distinction, be a Monseigneur, and by that way defend, support and advance the prospects of the family of Buonaparte. As for me, I will accept the hardships of the military life; and maybe something beyond! There are on record several subtle communications written by the young casuist, strongly urging the priestly office as the one thing suitable and advantageous for Joseph. Our future king of Naples or Spain or both, willingly obedient to the imperial scepter, shall testify to our prescience and brotherly wisdom!

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

Willie's Reasoning Power.

"Isn't it bettah," said Willie Wishington to his father, "to let anything alone than to do it badly?"

"It certainly is," was the reply.

"Well, that's why I don't try to make my own living."—Washington Star.

LONG TIME AT IT.

But a Borough Ticket Finally Arranged.

REPUBLICANS SELECT LEADERS.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., the Unanimous Choice for Mayor—Wm. C. Smith, H. B. Lounsbury and Wm. A. Schutt for Councilmen.

Though every nomination but two made at the Republican borough primary Friday night was unanimous, it took the G. O. P. statesmen two long and weary hours to finish the business that would have ordinarily occupied a half hour. This was occasioned by reason of a number of borough improvements coming up for discussion, in which it was sought to pledge the nominees to the work of carrying into execution after their election—that is, if they are elected. But this little "if" didn't seem to cut much of a figure, for the business of the primary was conducted in a manner that indicated that this portion of the political world had adopted the conclusion that the candidates nominated would be elected.

There was something over a hundred present, but only 84 votes were cast, and the only contest made was on the nomination of long-term councilman and freeholder, and not much vim was injected into either of these. The prediction in last night's Press as to the probable nominees for mayor and long-term councilman was fulfilled.

The primary was called to order by H. Newton Spencer, and Charles Place and Horace J. Martin were elected permanent chairman and secretary respectively.

Before the nominations were taken up A. V. D. Honeyman presented a set of resolutions to be considered at the caucus, which were substantially as follows:

That in convention assembled we advocate immediate attention of the Council to the conditions of the cross and sidewalks of the borough, and we ask our nominees, in case of election, to see to it that ordinances are immediately enacted, if they do not now exist, which will improve the walks; if there is no such power then to apply to the Legislature for such authority. Also that we request the incoming Council to appoint a street commissioner who has himself some authority to compel property owners to keep their sidewalks in better condition, and who is authorized to build and maintain crosswalks that are passable. If he fails in his duty to so retain control of his office, then he be discharged forthwith.

Mr. Honeyman spoke in support of the resolutions, and said that the caucus seemed to be the only place before or after election where the citizen could express his views with any weight. If candidates were elected on a platform to remedy certain evils, they would make an effort to do so, and the place to call attention to such matters was in the primary. North Plainfield, he said, was worse off for side and crosswalks than any other township in this section of the State. As long as such a condition existed it was a hindrance to the progress of the borough, for people would not purchase real estate. The Street Commissioner and Borough Council, he said, claimed to have no authority to remedy matters. If this was so, a bill should be drafted which would give such legislative authority. Somerset street is a disgrace to the borough. If this resolution was adopted the incoming officials would know what the people wanted.

In reply to Mr. Honeyman Mayor Needham said that ordinances had been passed such as was proposed, but the difficulty was in the lack of enforcement, for which the borough officials were not to blame. No funds were provided for this work, and, of course, nothing could be done.

The resolutions were adopted.

The nomination of Mayor was next taken up, and B. A. Hegeman, Jr., unanimously named.

For two long-term Councilmen H. B. Lounsbury, Elmer E. Winckler and Wm. A. Schutt were named. The total number of votes cast was 79, of which Lounsbury received 69, Schutt 58, and Winckler 27. Lounsbury and Schutt were declared the nominees.

Then followed these unanimous nominations: For short-term Councilman, Wm. C. Smith; Assessor, Dr. J. A. Cooley; Collector, H. N. Spencer.

For Freeholder, Lewis E. Barkalew received 36, C. P. Sebring 27, and Jacob Long 21, the first-named receiving the nomination.

The remainder of the nominations were made unanimously as follows:

Overseer of the Poor, David B. Weaver; Justices of the Peace, Lewis A. Kline, Fred Brown, and Charles Taynor; Constables, Mark Dowd, Samuel Taynor, and J. W. Van Horn; Surveyor of Highways, Jacob Long, and J. S. Lunger; Pound Keepers, Patrick Egan, and John Stine; Commissioners of Appeal, Lewis M. French, John P. Emmons, and Robert Carson.

The appropriation for borough purposes was made $5,000, $500 to be reserved for laying and repairing sidewalks.

For repairs of roads, $4,000, $1,000 to reserved for Somerset street and $350 for cleaning roads and gutters from snow.

For support of poor, $1,500.

For Board of Health, $500.

The following were made a committee to fill any vacancies that may occur: P. A. Emmons, Jr., S. B. Joseph and Ezra Loomis.

—Tax Collector John Johnson has not been able to be at his office for several days, on account of a heavy cold.

PLAINFIELD MUST WIN THIS.

Official Schedule of the New Bowling Tournament.

The Elizabeth Journal Bowling Association of Union County has been organized with H. O. VanEmburgh secretary, to decide the five-men team championship.

Following is the schedule:

ELIZABETH SECTION.

DATE.	TEAM.	VS.	AT.
Thurs, March 7,	E.J.A.C	"	A.K.A.
Fri, " 8,	Y.M.C.L.A	"	Alcyone
Mon, " 11,	E.A.C	"	Y.M.C.L.A
" " 11,	A.K.A	"	Alcyone
Thurs, " 14,	Alcyone	"	E.A.C.
Fri, " 15,	Y.M.C.L.A	"	A.K.A.
Mon, " 18,	A.K.A	"	E.A.C.
Wed, " 20,	Alcyone	"	Y.M.C.L.A
Mon, " 25,	Y.M.C.L.A	"	E.A.C
" " 25,	Alcyone	"	A.K.A
Fri, " 29,	A.K.A	"	Y.M.C.L.A
" " 29,	E.A.C	"	Alcyone

COUNTY SECTION.

DATE.	TEAM.	VS.	AT.
Tues, March 5,	Roselle	"	Plainfield
" " 5,	Cranford	"	Westfield
Mon, " 11,	Westfield	"	Roselle
" " 11,	Plainfield	"	Cranford
Thurs, " 14,	Cranford	"	Roselle
" " 14,	Westfield	"	Plainfield
Tues, " 19,	Plainfield	"	Roselle
" " 19,	Westfield	"	Cranford
Fri, " 22,	Roselle	"	Westfield
Mon, " 25,	Cranford	"	Plainfield
Thurs, " 28,	Roselle	"	Cranford
" " 28,	Plainfield	"	Westfield

A SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Recommended by a Philadelphia Specialist—A Simple Remedy Averted an Operation.

Philadelphia, Penn., Item.

A healthier, heartier, happier man than John J. Neill, of 2437 North Eighth street, Philadelphia, could not be found in a day's search. Among those who knew him formerly, the fact that he is still alive is a constant wonder.

In the fall of 1889 he began to suffer from stone in the bladder, and his miseries were indescribable. Consulting an eminent physician in Philadelphia, he was told that he would have to submit to a surgical operation. So much did he dread the result, for if unsuccessful it meant death, that he put off the evil day as long as possible. While in this frame of mind, he chanced to see a notice of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Although disheartened with his many futile attempts with medicine, he was induced to make one more trial.

On July 1, 1893, he bought the first bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and within a month had experienced beneficial results, and before he had finished the third bottle, the gravel was completely dissolved and his suffering at an end.

Mr. Neill feels that he owes a lasting debt of gratitude to Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. He never fails to recommend it for disorders of the bladder and urinary organs, and says "it will effect a cure if one be possible!"

The great value of Dr David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy lies in the fact that it dissolves the excess of uric acid in the blood. Many of the ailments people suffer from—for instance, rheumatism, nervousness, dyspepsia, kidney, liver and urinary troubles, and the sickness peculiar to women, all come from this one cause.

Favorite Remedy dissolves this acid and expels it from the system, thus curing the disease. In cases of scrofula, diabetes, Bright's disease and stone in the bladder, it never fails.

Athletics and Baseball.

Already there is talk of outdoor athletics for the members of the Y. M. C. A., and a good baseball team is one of the proposed branches.

Physical Director McPhie hopes to secure the meet for Plainfield of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic League, which comprises members from different parts of the State. In the event of its coming here Plainfield will have an opportunity of witnessing a fine series of manly games.

—A handsome thing to see is a dainty hand encased in a kid glove from Peck's.

—The police are keeping their eyes open for the culprits who have been stuffing the keyholes of fire-alarm boxes full of impediments.

—U. B. Crane of 120 West Front street receive today a large supply of the new spring styles in hats, shirts and neckwear. Mr. Crane will show you some of the finest goods if you call.

—The exhibition of the Delaware Camera Club slides by the local club has been indefinitely postponed.

—William A. Jacques of Bayonne has plans out for a two-story Queen Anne cottage on Netherwood avenue.

—Among the residence changes in the borough the coming Spring is noted the removal of Charles Willard Smith of Duer street to the Mellen house on Willow avenue.

—Richard A. Boyce, of the Somerset House, recently purchased a lot on East Second street from John J. Kenney, and will begin building a house in the early Spring.

—Ex-Councilman Charles P. Sebring intends soon to connect by telephone the Edison electric light station in the borough with the Bound Brook Power and Heating Company's station at Sebring's Mills, Greenbrook.

—Nothing so brightens and improves a room as an appropriate design of wall paper, neatly put up. Edward Love, corner of North and Watchung avenues, has an immense stock from which you can choose; also paints, brushes, shades, glass and fine carpets and rugs, direct from the manufacturers. It will pay you to call before going elsewhere.

—Edsall's Commercial Palace is having a big run on 300 dozen butter plates at 2 cents each, fluted with gold-line assorted decorations, fine quality china; just think of the price—they are going at 2 cents each; regular value, 75 cents a dozen. Several other big bargains in the house-furnishing department have been secured from the assignee of the bankrupt sale of [illegible].

COLLISION AT BAYONNE

Terrible Rear End Crash on the Royal Blue Line.

Engineer and Fireman Killed—Cars Telescoped and Burned and the Engine Demolished—Fire Department Called to the Scene—Wrecking Trains to the Rescue.

New York, March 2.—The 6 o'clock express of the Royal Blue line, Philadelphia & Reading railroad, was wrecked while passing through Bayonne last evening. At least thirty passengers had a miraculous escape. The engineer and fireman were killed.

The dead are: William Thomas, of Philadelphia, engineer. Winfield Holland, of Philadelphia, Assistant fireman.

The injured are: H. Orrell, of Lafayette, N. J., fireman, contusions of the body and scalp wounds, at Bayonne hospital. Frank Applegate, of Tioga, Pa., bruises on leg and side, not serious. George Hopkins, baggage master, injuries not serious.

The train was the Washington express which left this city at 6 o'clock and Jersey City at 6:12. It was made up of Philadelphia & Reading engine No. 680, a baggage car, smoking car, day coach and one sleeping car in the order named. The train was moving at a high rate of speed through Bayonne where there are four tracks in a cut which extends from Communipaw to Bergen Point. It was on track No. 4. Ahead of it on track No. 4, and moving in the same direction, was a long train of empty coal cars drawn by Philadelphia & Reading engine No. 667.

Rails and Ties Torn Up.

When this train was passing 49th street station, it broke in two. The station agent signalled the engineer of the coal train, who failed to understand what was the matter, but put on the brakes, stopping the front half of his train. The second half crashed into it and one of the empty coal cars was thrown from the track and across track No. 3. The station agent rushed out to signal the express, but it was too late. The big engine, with its four cars, dashed into the derailed coal car within a few seconds of the first accident.

Passengers who were on the train say they felt a sudden check, as the brakes were put on, and then came the crash. The momentum of the massive engine was so great that rails and ties were torn up and empty coal cars were smashed to splinters, and finally when its force was spent, 200 yards away, the engine lay upon its side, a tangled mass of scrap iron. The baggage car telescoped and was utterly demolished. A portion of its roof now rests on top of the coal train. The smoking car left the rails and slid over the top of the tender. The day coach and the sleeper left the tracks but remained on the ground.

The Dead and the Dying.

Half a dozen cars of the coal train were wrecked. Two of them were shoved up the bank under the 48th street bridge, knocking away several of the supports of the bridge.

The wreck caught fire from the engine, and the Bayonne fire department were summoned to the scene. They put out the fire and assisted the railroad men in searching the wreck.

William Thomas, the engineer, stuck to his post. He was taken out and laid on the bank where he died. His legs were broken and he was injured internally.

Fireman Orrell was taken out and carried to the 49th street station. An ambulance surgeon attended to his wounds and he was taken to the Bayonne hospital. He is badly bruised, but not fatally injured. Baggage-master George Hopkins does not know how he got out of his car. Nothing remained of the car, but a portion of the roof. Frank Applegate, a passenger in the smoker, was slightly injured. He proceeded on his journey later in the evening.

Climbing Through the Windows.

The body of Winfield Holland was taken from the wreck after the fire had been put out. The passengers had a bad shaking up and a dozen of them sustained slight bruises. Mr. Applegate was the only one seriously injured. Those who were in the smoking car escaped through the car windows, as both ends of the car were demolished. Express trains to the west were sent by way of the Newark loop.

W. H. Peddle, division superintendent, arrived on the scene shortly after the accident, and two wrecking crews were put at work clearing the tracks. The second, third and fourth tracks were completely blocked.

Foolish Parents.

Montgomery, Ala., March 2.—News was received here yesterday of the horrible death of four children aged from 4 to 14 on a plantation near Glenville. Tom and Dora Williams left their children at home while they went to attend a neighborhood dance and when they returned the smoking ruins of their cottage and the charred remains of their four children told their fate.

Combined for Interest of Employes.

Taunton, Mass., March 2.—The Anthony & Cushman Tack company has gone into the tack combination, as has also a small shop in Raynham. These were the only tack factories in this section and their surrender gives the combination a monopoly here. The owners say business was so dull that there seemed no other way to keep their men at work.

We Fail To See It.

Lansing, Mich., March 2.—In the senate yesterday the following resolution was introduced by Senator Barnum and passed without dissenting vote: Resolved, That the people are to be congratulated that the tariff tinkering, business paralyzing, wage reducing, pension repudiating administration is fast coming to a close.

Wilson's Nomination Confirmed.

Washington, March 2.—The nomination of William L. Wilson, of West Virginia, to be postmaster-general, has been confirmed by the senate and the president notified.

Duke's Mixture

BRIAR PIPE
GIVEN AWAY
WITH EVERY ONE POUND
bale
OF DUKES
MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE or ATC
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

Space	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	[illegible]
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	[illegible]
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	[illegible]
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	[illegible]
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	[illegible]
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	32.00	54.00	[illegible]
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	[illegible]

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything,

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J.

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR.
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

L. B. WOOLSTON, J. P. BUCK
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES, [illegible]

A HARROWING HINDOO TRICK.

Sword Blade Run Through a Basket Which Contains a Native Boy.

Prof. Herrmann recently contributed the following explanation of a famous Indian trick, to the N.Y. Herald:

One of the most interesting experiments done by the natives of India is known as the Hindoo box and basket trick. This is done by a tribe of traveling fakirs with no other apparatus than a large basket having but a small mouth or top opening, over which a lid or cover fits tightly.

In going through the Suez Canal shortly before the uprising of Arabi Pasha, our steamer halted at Ishmailia. In company with the other passengers, I went ashore and saw a troupe of Hindoo fakirs do the basket trick. There must have been at least a dozen natives of India in the troupe. One old fellow seemed to be the principal performer. He was dressed in the costume usually worn by the high caste natives of the Bombay Presidency, which consists of many yards of white cotton cloth gracefully draped around the figure in such a manner as to leave nothing but the arms, from the elbows to the hands, and the legs, from the knees down, exposed; his feet were thrust into great red slippers, the toes of which turned up like the point of an old fashioned skate, while on his head was an enormous turban, tied in such a manner that two long, flowing scarflike ends hung below the middle of his back. He wore an enormous snow white beard, which set off his swarthy countenance and gave his small, beady black eyes a truly demoniacal glitter.

At the beginning of the entertainment the principal members of the troupe seated themselves in a circle on the bare ground, when different members of the troupe entertained the audience with vanishing cups and balls, and exhibitions of their proficiency in palming and disappearing articles, all of which they did fairly well.

After this a small boy, nearly naked, came into the center of the circle and addressed a few words to the chief performer, when this dignitary flew into a rage, summoned two attendants, who brought the above described basket and placed it before him. He removed the lid, seized the lad and thrust him into the basket, after which the lid was replaced and tied with leather thongs. The shaking of the basket proved to a close observer that the boy, instead of remaining quiet after being thrust into it, was carefully placing himself in such a position as to insure his safety during what was to follow.

The old magician continued to rave in his native language, and finally drawing a sharp tulwar, or native sword, thrust it through and through the basket at different places, causing the boy to shriek in a fiendish manner and the blade of his sword to fairly drip with blood.

I, intent on observing his manner of doing the trick, rather than the effect it produced on the spectators, noted that the sword was carefully inserted in certain little apertures in the basket, intended to receive it. The cries of the boy grew fainter and fainter, and finally ceased altogether, when the magician, wiping the blade of his sword, returned it to its scabbard and seated himself on the ground.

His attendants all assumed a horror stricken look and sat as motionless as stone statues for a moment, when a boy's voice was heard calling, at a distance, and growing stronger and stronger as apparently the same lad that had been so ruthlessly slaughtered in the basket came running into the center of the group and embraced the magician. At this juncture every one of the performers arose, two of them seized the basket and carried it away to where all their belongings were deposited.

Now, no attempt was made to open the basket after the performance and allow it to be examined, and the explanation of the trick is undoubtedly this:

There were two boys, almost exactly the same in appearance, as no one appreciates the value of doubles so much as does your Indian magician. The first boy lay in the basket in such a manner as to escape the thrusts of the sword, which was made through openings and which he had been instructed to keep clear of. While concealed in the basket, he undoubtedly applied a sponge or cloth dipped in goat's blood or some chemical preparation resembling it to the sword, and he acted his part so well as to almost prove to the spectators that he was really being murdered. Instead of the same boy escaping from the basket and coming in, the double put in his first appearance, and the thing was done.

Now, in order to find out exactly what impression had been made on the unprofessional portion of the audience, I conversed with several of them, and in every case was informed that it was the most wonderful thing they had ever witnessed. Without exception they marveled as to how the boy could have gotten out of the basket and placed at such a distance from the performers without being seen. Not one of them suggested the possibility of a double, and I am satisfied that there was not one person present excepting myself, that did not firmly believe that the boy who entered the circle was the same one that was placed in the basket, and I am certain that none of them suggested having the basket brought back and examined.

Watterson's Tribute to Lincoln.

In Chicago recently Henry Watterson spoke of Lincoln. He said:

"I gather that Lincoln was not a civil service reformer of the modern school, because I find among my papers a note to Stanton in which, with not the faintest anticipation of such apostles of culture as the Hon. Carl Schurz and Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, he bluntly says:

"'I personally wish Jacob Freeze, of New Jersey, to be appointed colonel of a colored regiment, regardless of whether he can tell the exact color of Julius Cæsar's hair.'"

He concluded:

"Where did Shakespeare get his genius? Where did Mozart get his music? Whose hand smote the lyre of the Scottish ploughman and stayed the life of the German priest? God, God and God alone; and as surely as these were raised up by God, inspired by God was Abraham Lincoln; and a thousand years hence no story, no tragedy, no epic poem will be filled with greater wonder, or be followed by mankind with deeper feeling than that which tells of his life and death."

Progress in the Pulpit.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, the successor of Beecher in the pulpit of Plymouth Church, now declares himself an evolutionist, discredits wholly the story of Adam and Eve, can't digest the apple and doubts the snake.—Chicago Times.

THE BALTIMORE TUNNEL.

It May Lead to a Solution of New York's Rapid Transit Problem.

The Baltimore Belt Line Tunnel Railroad is almost a perfect illustration of the feasibility of a like road under Broadway, New York city. The difficulties surmounted in its construction were exactly such as would be met with in the metropolis.

The tunnel is a connecting link between Camden station, the present terminus of the Baltimore & Ohio, close to the heart of the city, and Bay View, seven miles distant. Much of the tunnel is under the business portion of the city, and yet it was completed without interruption to traffic. A large section, for instance, was under Howard street, which might be compared to New York's Twenty-third street. It is devoted in its lower blocks to wholesale trade, with large four, five, six, seven and eight story warehouses, hotels and banks. A little farther up it is a retail business street, and for a block or two comprises part of the shopping district. Still, further up is the Academy of Music, the Howard Auditorium (a theater), and Johns Hopkins University, besides one or two halls for concerts, &c. Above these it becomes a semi-business street, many of the dwellings being boarding houses. The Fifth Regiment armory is also on the street.

Howard street is eighty-two feet in width and Broadway is eighty feet. Like Broadway, Howard street has large stores on either side, with vaults extending beyond the street line. Each has an underground system of pipes and sewers, and on the surface cable and other cars, in addition to the general heavy business traffic. The subsoil in both streets is chiefly sand and gravel, with rock at intervals.

Part of the work was performed from the surface and part by tunneling. There was considerable iron roof construction close up to the pavement, after plans almost identical with some proposed for Broadway.

Broadway is the only street in New York under which a railroad should be built, because of the conformation of Manhattan Island. It is the ridge of the island, and the railroad through its whole extent, excepting for a short distance at Canal street, would be in dry sand and on high ground. There is not a location on either side of Broadway where the railroad would be out of tidewater until a distance of nearly two miles from the Battery is reached. There is a very slight exception to this in the vicinity of Printing House square. Even if it were possible to build or tunnel in such unfavorable conditions, there is no street other than Broadway wide enough to accommodate a four track road.

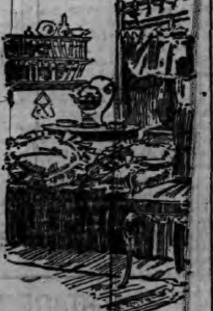
HER ORIENTAL CORNER.

The Inexpensive Bit of Decoration Devised By a Clever Woman.

If there is anything in the line of interior decoration capable of bestowing quite as much pleasure as a well arranged "cozy corner," diligent research has failed to discover it. It is a delight to the eye and a delight to the tired body. It gives an air of homelike coziness to the biggest, most barren apartment, and it is a charming bit of appropriate decoration for a small one.

Of course any woman whose purse is big enough can have a reasonable cozy corner by calling in those obliging gentlemen, the interior decorators and upholsterers. When completed it will probably be a very correct and pretty corner, but it will represent the taste and skill of the aforesaid gentlemen, and not those of madam herself. Besides, it will represent an alarming outlay. It is better to be one's own decorator and upholsterer.

One woman who came to this conclusion some time ago achieved a corner which is the joy and admiration of all who see it. She placed a divan—one of those cheap, comfortable cot-bed divans, costing only $6.50—diagonally across a corner. The divan was covered with a "bargain" Bagdad costing $3.50 more, and on it were piled sofa cushions of appropriately Oriental design.



In the triangular space back of the divan stood a piano lamp with a wrought iron shade and vase. It cost $9. The shade of dark red silk was sufficiently voluminous without being frivolous, and was made by madam's fair hands from a silk dinner dress of antediluvian pattern. Beneath it and a little nearer to the divan stood a small mahogany tea table of antique make. Its proud owner had bargained with a ravenous antique dealer until she had succeeded in purchasing it for $7. One of the doilies made of Turkish embroidery, protected the shining wood from contact with the dainty little tea things, which were always in readiness to serve the stray guests. On the wall at one side was another Oriental portiere, like that on the divan lining, breaking the straight line of the wall and giving a bit of effective color. On the wall near the head of the couch a simple little set of bookshelves were fastened, containing madame's favorite books and a few pieces of bric-a-brac.

"And it will cost less than $40," says its ingenious mistress when she hears other women telling of Oriental corners for which the decorator has charged $150.

Do a great deal of praying before you undertake to tell what a great sinner you

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Horpley Barker Grove and Front sts
G W V Moy 4th and Park avenue
Frank Bowley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville.
J E Gottridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 4th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H	278 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove st
Adams H C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Son	122 North av
Andrews F H	813 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 4th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 3d st
Babcock, Geo H	5th and Union sts
Barnaby F R	Plainfield
Brakeley, F W Dr	Dunellen
Boone C W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 6th st
Beechower, J B	Park av and 3d st
Berg, Joe F, M D	123 E 5th st
Blair A C	149 North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	248 Park av
Board of Education	8th st and Arlington av
Booth, E H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	612 Central av
Central Times	103 E Front st
Clark, E B	121 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	655 North av
Clawson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
Constitutionalist Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	210 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	16 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, E F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
Daily Press	106 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T D—Chief P F D	438 W 5th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 3d st
Engine No 1	3d st near Park av
Engine No 2	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	32 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	420 Park av
Fleming Howard	1012 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do do	237 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	8th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Hegeman, R. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	708 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	161 North av
Howell E O	191 North av
Holmes E H	208 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	20 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	220 Park av
Ivins E C	311 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	219 W Front st
Kaufman W T	523 W 7th st
Keely & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	8th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W H	130 Jackson av
Lowrie H H, Dr	512 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	237 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Wallin & A D	205 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	108 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	108 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James R	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W V	Park av and 4th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	638 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	727 Watchung av
Murray J W	313 W 4th st
Music Hall	4th
Myers, J K	139 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Penton T E jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	314 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 7th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	8 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	104 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	608 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	143 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	27 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	40 Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	406 W 5th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 6th st
Rogers, D W	232 W 3d st
Rooms, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	403 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	416 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	420 Park av near Fifth st
Runkle, H. G	531 8th st
Runyon, Chas W	149 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	95 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	625 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, E J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	27 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
Streuli, H A	1308 Hillside av
Stevens F R	703 South av
Stevens Geo O	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	149 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry F	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	39 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	109 W 3d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jno A	223 Madison av
Tilsworth, Joe M	418 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	323 La Grande av
Tobin Geo J	137 Norman av
Tracy, J Evarts	409 8th st
Tunison W J	502 Watchung av
Tweedy, O. B	135 Crescent av
Ulrich & Moss	130 W Front st
Union Beef Co	308 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	153 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	123 North av
Wadsworth, W S	652 4th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	626 3rd Place
Woltman, E	609 West Seventh st
Winchester, J F	W 5th st., near Grant ave
Wierts Max	344 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c
Astoria, N Y	50c
Babylon, N Y	60c
Bath, N Y	40c
Bayonne N J	45c
Bergen Point N J	35c
Bayside N Y	50c
Bay Shore N Y	75c
Fayville N Y	50c
Belleville N J	40c
Ellisville N Y	45c
Bloomfield N J	35c
Bloomingdale N J	45c
Boonton N J	45c
Brooklyn N Y	35c
Caldwell N J	45c
Carlstadt N J	45c
Centreville N J	45c
Chatham N J	50c
Closter N J	45c
Colt's Neck N J	75c
Coney Island N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c
Dover N J	40c
East Norwich N Y	60c
Eatontown N J	60c
Elizabeth N J	15c
Englewood N J	35c
Fairview N J	45c
Fanwood N J	15c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c
Flatbush N Y	35c
Flushing N Y	40c
Fort Lee N J	45c
Franklin Park N J	35c
Freehold N J	30c
German Settlem't N Y	50c
Glen Cove N Y	50c
Gravesend N Y	45c
Hackensack N J	35c
Hempstead N Y	45c
Hoboken N J	30c
Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Irvington N J	40c
Islip N Y	60c
Jamaica N Y	45c
Jersey City N J	25c
Keyport N J	50c
Kingston N J	35c
Laurel Hill N Y	45c
Leonia N J	45c
Little Neck N Y	50c
Little Silver N J	50c
Long Branch N J	50c
Madison N J	30c
Matawan N J	50c
Millburn N J	30c
Montclair N J	30c
Morristown N J	45c
Newark N J	15c
New Brunswick N J	25c
Newton N Y	45c
New York N Y	25c
Orange N J	25c
Palmrapo N J	45c
Passaic N J	35c
Paterson N J	35c
Perth Amboy N J	35c
Rahway N J	25c
Red Bank N J	50c
Seabright N J	50c
Short Hills N J	25c
South Amboy N J	35c
South River N J	35c
Staten Island N Y	35c
Westfield N J	15c
Woodbridge N J	35c
Yonkers N Y	45c
Trenton N J	50c
Tarrytown N Y	60c

—A district meeting of the Knights of Pythias will be held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge next Friday evening, at which Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath of Jersey City and several other grand lodge officers, will be present.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,

Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,

Dover, N. J.,

Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc. sole agents for Union county.

SANITARY PLUMBING,

Brick and Portable Furnace,

GAS FITTING,

TIN ROOFING,

Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases

D. W. LITTELL,

No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhœa, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

FOR MALARIA.

GENERAL DEBILITY

AND

ALL STOMACH TROUBLES

COLES'

PERUVIAN BARK

AND

WILD CHERRY BITTERS

ARE THE BEST.

A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle

PREPARED ONLY BY THE D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.

RAHWAY, N. J.

Dime Savings Institution

OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

P. P. Van Arsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 226, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 261 E. Front street, corner Elm street. jy19

Jas. M. Dunn,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVI

Vegetables, Fruits, etc.

No. 224 Park Ave

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.

Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S

ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS,

OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.

Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,

FIRE AND LIFE

Insurance Agent,

Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.

MONEY TO LOAN

On Approved Security.

Stoves, Ranges

—AND—

HARDWARE

OF ALL KINDS

J. J. HEIDELOFF,

No. 21 SOMERSET ST.

CANOPIES

For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,

TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE

Mrs. Weigman,

30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

John Chandler,

CARPENTER AND BUILDER,

Plainfield, N. J.

Residence and shop No. 379 East Third street.

Jobbing promptly attended to.

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL BARBER

AND

Artistic Hair Dresser,

No. 204 PARK AVENUE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed.

GARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,

135 West Front St.

TINNERS,

PLUMBERS,

GAS FITTERS.

PARLOR STOVES,

COOK STOVES

HEATERS.

Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.

Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.

Tinware Made to Order.

Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces

SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODDINGTON,

Counsellor-at-Law,

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery Notary Public. Office corner of Park avenue and Second street.

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 122, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIBERS,

Dentist,

43 Somerset street. A new local anesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,

[Successor to T. J. Carey,]

Furniture and Freight Express!

OFFICE—24 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 68. Moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS,

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 23½ W. Front street, to 261 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY

Yeas experience in the business.

SECOND STREET, 3 doors above Peace street

Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,

Liver and Boarding Stables

FOURTH STREET,

Between Peace street and Park avenue.

First-Class Livery.

Horses Boarded by Week or Month

Telephone call No, 114.

Parlor stoves,

Furnaces, Ranges,

Piping. Plumbing.

Heater Work. Tinning,

Hardware.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

East Front Street.

TELEPHONE CALL, 6.

Estey Pianos Organs

FULLY WARRANTED.

Moderate Prices.

Cash or Installments.

See Them Before You Buy.

ESTEY & SAXE,

5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS

CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free.

Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

A CAPTAIN'S DREAM.

The recent death of Captain Isaac S. Jennings, at Harvey Cedars, N. J., one of the best known fishing and hunting resorts on the New Jersey coast, recalls an interesting story.

Captain Jennings was proprietor of the hotel at Harvey Cedars for many years and had been identified with the history of the place. It was he who made it a success. Always kind and hospitable, he made an admirable host, and a hearty grasp of the hand always greeted the coming as well as the parting guest.

In speaking of his seafaring days not long since, Captain "Ike" became reminiscent.

"I've got a yarn to spin," he said, as he removed his slouch hat from his head and laid it on the table, took a whiff or two from his pipe and settled back comfortably in his chair. "It may seem strange to you; you may not believe it; but it is nevertheless as true as gospel, every word of it.

"It happened several years ago, when I was master of a schooner that traded between New York and some of the Southern ports. She was a good vessel, a good sailor, and the wind never blew too hard for her. On the trip in question, our destination was Savannah, Ga., and we were in port several days loading and unloading.

"While we were in port I was aroused one night by a peculiar noise on deck that led me to jump out of my bunk and hasten forward. The noise was repeated, and, on looking around, I saw the oddest looking animal I ever saw in my life. It resembled a dog to a certain extent, but its body was longer than that of any dog I had ever seen. Picking up a bungstarter I advanced toward the animal, when it turned on me in a way that rather startled me, so I halted. After gazing steadily at me for a moment, the animal turned and slowly walked to the bow, climbed over the rail and walked up the wharf, halting every few steps to turn and look at me until it was out of sight.

"I must confess to being strangely impressed, and it was a long time before I could shake off a feeling of depression. For an hour or more I lay awake in my berth, thinking of my singular experience, and then fell asleep. The next morning I asked the men on the piers if they had ever seen such a looking animal as I described around the wharves, but none of them had. One old man said maybe it was a warning, but I only laughed at that.

"We had had favorable winds, and were bowling along at a good rate, so I turned in just before midnight, leaving the first mate at the wheel. I was pretty tired, and soon fell asleep.

"Just how long I slept I do not know, but suddenly I was aroused by some one calling my name. So clear and distinct was it that I felt it must be some one in the cabin where I slept, so I was on my feet in an instant. The cabin was dark and all was quiet save the ripple of the water against the vessel's sides. I listened for a moment, and, hearing nothing, I went on deck. By the starlight I saw the mate at the wheel.

" 'Did you call me?' I asked.

" 'No, sir,' he replied. 'I didn't. I've had no occasion to. Everything is all right.'

"I concluded I had been dreaming, so I went back to the cabin and turned in. A few minutes later I was again asleep, and dreamed I saw a dismantled vessel off to the eastward with decks awash and the crew lashed to the rigging. Then I heard my name called again, louder than before, twice in succession.

" 'Captain Ike! Captain Ike!! Help us. We are sinking!'

"Then I went on deck again.

" 'Didn't you call me?' I asked of the man at the wheel, in a manner that showed I was very much in earnest.

" 'No, Captain,' he replied, 'no one has called you. I have been on the deck all the time, and nothing of the kind has occurred.'

"This convinced me that the call I had heard meant something out of the ordinary, and I gave orders to have the vessel's course changed to the east'ard. The mate remonstrated, as he said it would take us out of our way, but without telling him the reason I insisted on the course being changed. It was then two o'clock in the morning.

"We kept on in the course I had given until just at daybreak, when the lookout sighted a wreck on the starboard bow. My heart gave a bound as I heard it, and the mate turned on me with wonder in his eyes, but said nothing. In a short while we were in hailing distance of the wreck. I went off in the small boat, accompanied by two of the men.

"As we came alongside the sight was a pitiful one. The schooner, for it had been such, was a complete wreck. Both masts were broken off close to the deck, on which was a tangled mass of rigging. The sea was making a breach over the deck, at the after part of which the crew, or what was left of them, were lashed fast to the broken stump of the mast. They were overjoyed to see us, but too weak to help themselves.

"So we untied the lashings, assisted them to our boat and took them back on board ship, where we supplied them with dry clothing and the first bit of food they had tasted in forty-eight hours. Their vessel was lumber laden, and this had kept them afloat. But for the nature of her cargo she would have foundered.

"Now comes the strangest part of the story. After the shipwrecked men had somewhat recovered from the effects of hunger and exposure, one of them told us of the storm they had run into, which had completely wrecked their vessel and left them floating about at the mercy of the wind and waves. Their provisions had all been spoiled and their water casks swept overboard.

"A giant wave had struck the vessel as she lay in the trough of the sea, carrying two of the crew overboard. The rest lashed themselves to the hulk in momentary expectation of seeing it plunge head foremost to the bottom.

" 'And now, Captain,' said he, 'I want to tell you something queer. We had been so long without food and water that we were almost dead. Two of the men wanted to jump overboard and end it, but I restrained them. Last night we were in despair, but we all prayed earnestly to God for aid, and we are not praying men as a rule. All of a sudden I seemed to see your ship heading toward us, and I saw you on deck. "Our prayer is answered," I cried to the men. "We will be rescued by morning." They doubted me at first, but when I insisted that it was true they took fresh courage. It was then about two o'clock in the morning, and sure enough when daylight came you came with it.'

"Now," continued Captain Ike, as he relighted his pipe, "you have heard the story. It is true, every word of it. If you can explain it you will do well. I believe the call that came to me in the cabin that night was of supernatural origin; in fact, it cannot be explained in any other way. It resulted in the saving of four human lives, and it has always been the source of satisfaction to me that I followed my inclination on that eventful night, instead of trying to convince myself that it was a delusion."—New York Herald.

A CHINAMAN COOK.

Men of Yeast and of Resources that Are Superior to Recipes.

I had been expecting my Chinese cook for some time; his roll of bedding and clothes had been dumped at our door by the freighter three days before. Finally, just at dusk, I spied him as he came leisurely jogging along over the Divide, carrying a tin pail carefully in his hand—that was his only luggage. My curiosity was excited. What could that pail hold so precious that it must be personally conducted fifty miles by stage and eight miles on foot? It proved to be yeast!

Since then I have had half a dozen Chinamen in my kitchen at various times, and each one came to me in this same way, equipped with his little pail of yeast. But as their bread is sweet and good whether made one loaf at a time or by the troughful, sixty loaves in a batch, you do not feel like quarreling with them if they prefer their own private brand of yeast to yours. How they make it is an enigma. A Chinaman is never out of yeast, yet I never caught one preparing it. He baffled me every time, just as he would foil my every effort to watch him mix pie crust. There is either some superstition or a secret rite connected with yeast and pie crust that admits of no lookers on.

Before I attempted to teach a Chinaman anything new, I left him to his own devices for a week or so and watched results. Generally I found that in housekeeping the Chinaman always has an eye for appearances. This showed itself in many ways, best perhaps in setting the table. With carving knives like razors, they sliced meats, bread and fruit so that they looked most appetizing; their fritters never were in tatters, their codfish balls did not ooze at the edges, the pies never disgraced themselves by overflowing their banks, each macaroni potato strip, which they were particularly fond of cooking, was an exact geometrical parallelopipedon done to a crisp.

As a rule, Chinamen are good bakers, managing an oven admirably; the bread was neither over nor under done; meats were never dried up; they excel in cooking rabbit, chicken and roast pig.

But the Chinese love of appearance had another side to it. To be sure, the croquettes never lost caste by falling asunder; we wished they had; they held together as compactly as though they had been glued. We longed for a juicy cherry pie that could not help but run over; even a bowlful of jelly never quivered or shook. It couldn't, it was starched too stiff.

Yet these were nothing compared to the Chinaman's cakes and puddings. His loaf cake was never known to fall; it rose defiantly and kept on rising. Nothing, not even a blast of air from an ice factory, could have prevented it. It rounded up in the center and broke open; it did everything that flour and baking powder could make it do; it looked like a poem, but before it was cold it was nearly as dry as hard tack. But the puddings reached the climax of culinary art. Chinamen seem to hold a secret veneration for puddings, especially gelatine and bread puddings.

In this day of specialties it is difficult to secure a Chinaman who is willing to undertake the general care of a house. It is only when isolated from other Chinamen that you find out his versatility. It is when off on the desert, away from provision stores and conveniences to work with, that the Chinaman rises to the occasion. Empty tin cans serve in lieu of saucepans; a stray piece of sheet iron suffices for a fry pan; given a lard pail and a hatchet he will make a steamer; a small brad and a hammer and he will manufacture a grater; a piece of baling wire and he will twist you a broiler. He knows how to butcher and dress a beef; he will shoot and prepare game, even cultivate your garden patch for you, if it be worth while to plant one. He is no less adaptive in cooking. He is wholly independent of recipes; if one ingredient is gone, he will substitute another. This repeated substitution of ingredients sometimes results in a strange similarity of dishes made from wholly different recipes, but one always has the assurance that when meal time comes the Chinaman will have something in readiness, were his provisions restricted to a ham bone.

Like every human species the Chinaman can be watched to advantage, and it required no small amount of agility on my part to keep pace with him. I was measuring out the ingredients for spice cake one morning and a cup of raisins was called for; Charlie Lee could only find half a cup. I insisted there were plenty more in the cellar and I must have a full cup. I left the room for a moment. Quicker than a flash he went to the tea kettle and poured in enough boiling water to make the raisins swell and fill the cup. I returned in time to spoil his little scheme, much to his amusement.

"Oh, you catchee Shollie; you heap sabe me," and then he grinned so like the Cheshire cat I could not appear angry, though I tried my best. But every one knows the Chinaman's faults; he can shirk work in a hundred ways and his cunning is proverbial; but when you have said all against him, you can teach him to do almost anything you wish. He never chatters, and for an emergency he is invaluable. If I were to rough it in a mining camp, or go out on a survey, or summer in a canon, I would choose a Chinaman every time as my aide-de-camp.—Impress.

Where Silence Was Eloquent.

Said the mistress to Bridget,
With a shake of her digit,
"How is it no sound from the kitchen is heard
Whenever your 'steady' –
Is with you already—
There's never a murmur, not even a word?"

"Your pardon I'm beggin',"
Said Bridget McGreggin:
"My beau is a 'daisy' that's quite hard to beat;
But so bashful is Barney
That, havin' no blarney,
He does nothin' at prisint but sit down and eat."

Boy—Mr. Dunn called to see about that bill of his.

Mr. Short—Well, if he comes in again tell him his bill is in a good state of preservation and is likely to reach a good old age.—Boston Transcript.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, Feb. 7, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

Concluded.

On motion of Freeholder Miller received and placed on file.

NEW BUSINESS AND RESOLUTIONS

By Freeholder Roll:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to look after the interests of the county, during the present session of the Legislature.

On motion of Freeholder Swain, the resolution was unanimously adopted.

The Director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Roll, Littell and Woodruff.

On motion of Freeholder Littell the communication of Louis Quien, County Engineer, with reference to the bond of Hillpot & Ayres, was referred to the County Collector with power.

The following bills were read and ordered paid as allowed, viz:

Stationery Account—Harrison Manufacturing Co, $2 75; The Smith Premier Typewriter Co, 7 20; Advocate Pub Co, 4 25; John C Rankin & Co, 31 95; Edward A. Veghte 13 50.

Publications Account—F W Runyon $50; Advocate Pub Co, 25; Robert B & Thos D Taylor, Pubs, 25; D M Smythe, Pub, 25; Daily Leader 25; Elizabeth Daily Journal 25; Lewis S Hyer 25; Summit Record 25.

County Roads Repairs Account—Jas W Fink 50; Wahl 10 87

Coroners Account—Victor Mravlag $50; P Casey & Son 15.

Jail Account—Henry J Schmidt, $8 35; E B Grier 62 50, John Klippel 7 84; Michael Bender 51 56; J W Hildebrandt & Co; 60 03; Jas O Brokaw 14 26; The Vienna Pressed Yeast Co. 5 38; Rock Hook 75; John C Blore 337 50; E S E Newbury 50 84.

Salaries Account—W B Codington $75; E M Wood $75.

Incidental Account—Elizabeth Daily Journal $18 59, 54 75; Wm Howard 118 46; S Rusling Ryno 104; John Keron & Son 292.

Committee Expenses Account—Henry Krouse $35; A E Decker 4; E D Badgley 4 45; Addison S Clark 4.

Members Pay Account—Henry Krouse $53 50; Addison S Clark 64; W H Hulskamper 36; W H Swain 18; E D Badgley 25 25; Frederick Miller 32.

Bridge Account—C W Smith & Co, 10 55; Edward Brandt 2 75; Adam Gerlach 41 15; J W Hope 57 43, 21 24; John M Bachman 12 01; Dory L Billwiller 5 83; Wm R McCloud 2 25; J H Duremus 26 25; D W Day & Son 21 30 32 62; W H Dean 5 21; Geo V Munchmore 18 89; J Z Hatfield 5 25; George Conger 50; Philip Pittman 15 50; Jas J Brennan 118; J W Van Pelt 166 60; Duncan Bros, 177.

Public Buildings Account—Elizabethtown Gas Light Co, $51 05; The Rapid Cleaning Cartridge Works 7 20; C Pardee Works 12 25; The Suburban Electric Co, 16 94 9 45; The Babcock & Wilcox Co, 29 65, 23 10; The N Y & N J Telephone Co, 19 60; 46 60, 24 55 1 40; Brocklacher Bros, 12 24; A & F Clark 11; Kirtland, Andrews & Co, 91; J S Keimig & Co, 28 74; John C Blore 1 80, 25; Thos B Budd 43 52; Wm B Tucker, Attorney, 51 90; E P Edwards 38 68; John R Rankin 3 75; Alexander Kerr 28 35, 132 13.

Courts Account—Advocate Pub Co, $3 25; Elizabeth Daily Journal 49 50; Noah Woodruff 9 50; John L Titus 17 64; John Dixon 2 30; Oliver Conlin 5; Wm Walsh 12 50, 45; Henry J Schroppe 14 80, 35, 12 50; Samuel Morgan 2, 45, 12 50; Henry Smith 45, 12 50; Wm H Burnett 54, 15; John Seeland 45, 12 50; John McNamara 45, 12 50; Robert Walpole 59 50, 17 50; James H White 16 25, 58 50; Wm H Sault 12 50, 45; John H Sheridan 12 50, 45; Jas L Bodwell 15, 60; G H Koester 7 54; John Keron & Son 58 15; Frank H Dunn 101 15; Geo C Tenney 24 70; Herbert W Knight 50, 110 80, 80; Jas Ritchie 75; J Williams Crane 70; Lewis S Hyer 70; T F McCormick 391 67; Frederick C Marsh 67 02, 1,500; William Howard 233 16; Geo Kyte, Sheriff, 1,418 94

Freeholder Clark moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, March 7, 1895, at 2 p m.

S RUSLING RYNO, Clerk.

INCREASING LENGTH OF LIFE.

Modern Heroines, at Least, Are Longer-Lived than Jane Austen's Were.

Is the human race becoming longer-lived despite the fret and fever of modern civilization? It is an interesting question, and it may very probably be answered some day by science in the affirmative. The longevity of professional men is now generally considered to be greater than that of farmers or mechanics. In other words, intellectual activity, although in many respects more exhausting than physical, has in the main a salutary effect upon the human frame. It may be the nerves rather than the muscles upon which we mainly depend, after all. It is a commonplace of observation that the big, hearty men are constantly dropping out of the world, while those of far more fragile organizations, apparently, live on to a ripe old age.

As to the increasing longevity of the race generally, there is no little incidental testimony on this head to be gathered from various sources. Some of the early heroes and heroines of romance are old before they reach what we should call middle life. And at the beginning of our own century Jane Austen, whose testimony is always unimpeachable, speaks of the healthy and contented woman of forty as having a good prospect of twenty years of life yet. Twenty years! What woman of to-day thinks of herself as falling into decrepitude at sixty? Elsewhere in Miss Austen's pages we run across people who are old with the passage of half a century of life. But now we have Gladstones at eighty and over, and think nothing of it.—Providence Journal.

L. B. Mulford of the firm of Hummer & Mulford, who expected to start this afternoon in company with his wife for Asheville, N. C., for his health, has been obliged to defer it on account of the serious illness of his oldest son, Andrew.

INTERVIEWED SULLIVAN.

He Tells an Amateur Reporter That He Can Knock Out Any Man in America.

Secretary Hoke Smith's Atlanta, Ga., Evening Journal was in the hands of the ladies for one day of the exposition. Mrs. Joseph Thompson, president of the women's board, as editor in chief, took charge of the Journal and got out a forty page paper, which was full of excellent features and was in every respect superior. The sweet society belle who acted as sporting editor tackled John L. Sullivan for an interview, and here is the result:

Mr. Sullivan stepped into the portals of the Kimball House parlors with a worried look and demanded in his famous fog baritone, "Where's de young woman what wanted ter see me?"

"Here she is," replied the reporter faintly, but as sweetly as she knew how.

"Well, what yer got ter say?"

The reporter at this juncture paused for reply—because the possibility of reply was absent at this time—by reason of fright. She finally mustered up enough reportorial cheek to venture, in tremulous tones:

"Mr. Sullivan, the women of the exposition"—

"What exposition?"

"The women of the Cotton States and International Exposition."

"Say, no man in the biz," he said, "is willing to do more for de female sex than me, and I am tickled to death—on the ded, now, miss—wid dis interview; but I'm not on to your point yet."

"Well, you know," the reporter began, "the women connected with the exposition have charge of the Atlanta Journal to-day, and they have sent me down here to interview you."

Mr. Sullivan shook the timbers of the parlors with several hearty guffaws, and when he had recovered himself said: "On the ded, now, this is rich. Well, just tell 'em that I've been the victim of misfortune and am still willin' to knock out any man in America inside of twenty rounds."

"Yes, sir," said the reporter, smiling sweetly. "Thank you, Mr. Sullivan, for this talk." And the last words she heard, stepping on the elevator, were:

"Now, ain't she a peach?"

MYSTIFIED AUTHORS.

Father Prout Made It His Business to Hoax Notable Characters.

Authors have often mystified the public, but a man who made a business of mystifying professional writers is a notable character. Such a one, however, was the Rev. Francis Mahoney, better known as "Father Prout."

His favorite trick was to take a well known and popular poem translate it into another language, boldly assert that in its new form it possessed great antiquity, and charge the author with having stolen it. This trick he played on more than one noted author during the early days of the present century, and each were sorely puzzled to explain the identity of the poem which he knew to be his own with that in a foreign language.

Prout translated Moore's "Go Where Glory Waits Thee" into excellent French verse, attributed it to Mme. La Comtesse de Chateaubriand, and charged Moore with having stolen it bodily. The song, "Lesbia Hath a Beaming Eye," he rendered into choice Latin, and claimed as a youthful production of his own, which he had once shown to Moore. Another of Prout's achievements was the translation of Wolfe's "Burial of Sir John Moore" into French, claiming, at the same time, that the lines were written by Colonel de Beaumanois, who was killed at Pondicherry in 1749. Not satisfied with this he proceeded further and translated the same lines into German verse, and stoutly declared that while Wolfe had stolen from the French poet, the latter had in turn pilfered from the German, the latter poem, having, as he stated, been written to commemorate the death and burial of the Swedish General Tolstenson, who was killed at the siege of Dantzig. Poor Wolfe was dumbfounded at seeing his popularity disappear, and was not much comforted when the hoax was discovered.

A PLEASANT MATCH MAKER.

Bargained With a Son-in-Law, Then Gave Him the Wrong Girl.

Speaking of German weddings a writer says:

"As a rule sons and daughters born and bred in slavish obedience do not even murmur. Amusing incidents do occur, and that very often. One of these was comical enough to seem worth repeating. A peasant, with four daughters, all of them decidedly unattractive in looks, disposed of his second and least homely one at the marriage last year. When the young fellow, however, came to the old man's house, the sly old fox led out his first born, five years older than the groom and enough to frighten any one away.

"Thereupon a stormy interview, a lengthy discussion, and at last after a deal of haggling an agreement was reached, simply by increasing the mature old maiden's dowry by a thousand marks ($250). And I saw this couple at the fair—cooing like turtle doves, and happy as can be.

"Odd, isn't it? Yet that is the rule with these marriages concluded in such ultra prosaic fashion. Nearly all of them turn out well, I am credibly informed. You see these peasants from around Teltow are much like those Zola so graphically paints in his novel, "La Terre"—with souls that have no room for anything beside the thirst for more land and more gold. Or, to put it in a more complimentary way, they're not quite so finical as we city bred people are."

A Girl's Composition About Boys.

"Boys are men that have not got as big as their papas, and girls are women that will be ladies by and by. God likes women better than men, that's why there are more women than men. Boys are a trouble. They wear out everything but soap. If I had my way, half of the boys in the world would be girls and the rest would be dolls. My papa is so nice that I think he must have been a little girl when he was a little boy."

The Value of Bananas.

Twenty-five years ago the value of the bananas exported from Jamaica was practically nothing. People grew them for their own use, but never thought of shipping them. In the years 1892-93 the value of the bananas exported from Jamaica reached over $2,000,000. It exceeded that of either sugar, rum, coffee or dyewoods.

Jones—How's Wheeler getting along since he bought a bicycle?

Jenes—On crutches, I believe.—Life.

BAMBERGER'S
THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE
NEWARK, N. J.

Phenomenal Values
IN UPHOLSTERY GOODS.

The careful housewife whose thoughts will soon turn to spring house cleaning and fixings, and who desires to practice economy, cannot possibly make a better investment than in the grand values we offer in Upholstery Goods.

New Nottingham Lace Curtains.

Very choice and well covered designs and excellent quality,

98c Value,	$1.49 Value,	$1.98 Value,	$2.98 Value,	$3.98 Value
59c	98c	$1.25	$1.98	$2.98

FIGURED CHINA SILK

for drapery and also suitable for pillow coverings, new designs and choice colors, value 69c, at 49 cents.

FIGURED SILKALINE

36 inches wide, fine designs and desirable colorings, value 12½c, at

7½ cents.

TAMBOURED SASH MUSLIN

with double border and well covered centres, in the latest designs, very choice quality, value 19c, at 12½ cents.

CHENILLE PORTIERES,

each pair 75 inches wide, wide dado and frieze and heavy tassel fringe, excellent weight quality, all the most desirable shades, value $2.98, at $1.98.

☞ Mail orders promptly fil'ed.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street Newark, N. J.

Long Time Coming.

During H. A. Weber's term as a member of the Common Council three years ago there was an ordinance passed ordering a crosswalk to be built on Liberty street at the corner of West Second street. During all this time people have been obliged to wade through mud at this location during nasty weather, as the walk has never been built.

More Bowlers.

The woodwork of the Y. M. C. A. bowling alley has been finished, and painters are now finishing the job. The alley will be opened some time next week with a contest between clubs chosen from among the members.

Change in the Library Board.

A. C. Baldwin has resigned from the presidency of the Board of Managers of the Public Library, and Mason W. Tyler was elected president and J. Evarts Tracy vice-president.

Dumb, But Bright.

Frank E. Stover has a massive St Bernard dog which has been trained to do a number of difficult tricks, such as boxing, wrestling, standing on his head, etc.

Donation Visit.

Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church was visited last night by about 70, when a committee consisting of Mrs. Jane Scott, Mrs. Carrie Brown, Mrs. Theodore Hooper, Mrs. A. Binn, Miss Logan, Miss Ella Jackson, and Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson of Mt. Olive Baptist Church, gave a handsome donation to Rev. T. A. V. Henry, pastor of Mt. Zion Church. Rev. Mr. Gibson delivered the presentation address, and presented groceries of all kinds. Rev. T. A. V. Henry responded. After serving sandwiches, cake, and coffee, the company dispersed, leaving the table loaded with good things.

DEATHS.

GOELLER—In this city March 5, 1895, Willie, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William Goeller. Funeral from his parents' residence 612 West 3d street, Thursday afternoon, March 7, at 2:30 p. m. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

MOORE—Of congestion of the brain, March 3, 1895, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson Watts, 171 Summit st., Newark, N. J., Emma, wife of Willis K. Moore, in the 27th year of her age. Funeral will take place in Warren Chapel, North Plainfield, Wednesday afternoon, March 6, at 2:30 p. m. Friends and relatives invited.

DAY—At Morris Plains, John Day, died March 1, 1895, aged 77 years, 8 months, 27 days. Funeral from his brother's residence, James Day, West Third street, Sunday afternoon, March 3, 1895, 1:30 at the house and 2 o'clock at St. Mary's Church. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM.

Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES CATARRH COLD IN HEAD HAY-FEVER

COLD IN HEAD

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30.) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.

A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.

r6tf

SHERIFF'S SALE—New Jersey Supreme Court The City National Bank of Plainfield vs. Jas. Y. Wilson, impld., etc. Fi. fa. de bo. et ter. In case.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all the right, title and interest of the above named defendant in and to all the following tract or parcel of land and premises, situate in the city of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey:

WEDNESDAY, THE THIRD DAY OF APRIL, A. D. 1895,

Beginning at a point in Washington avenue and corner of land of formerly Phineas F. Randolph; thence running in a northwesterly course to the abutment wall of the bridge; thence running in a southwesterly course two hundred and twenty-eight feet to a point in line of said Randolph's land, or formerly his; thence running in a southeasterly course one hundred and forty-two feet more or less to a stake and corner; thence running in a northeasterly course two hundred and twenty-eight feet more or less to the place of beginning.

GEORGE KYTE, Sheriff.

J. B. Coward, Att'y.
mh 5 26 EDJ&O Fees [illegible]

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.
Estate of John Jacob Lang, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1895, on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said decedent, under oath or affirmation, and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor should be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG,
Executrix.

2149

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE

Sold outright, no rent, no royalty. Adapted to City, Village or Country. Needed in every home, shop, store and office. Greatest convenience and best seller on earth. Agents make from $5 to $50 per day. One in a residence means a sale to all the neighbors. Fine instruments, no toys, works anywhere, any distance. Complete, ready for use when shipped. Can be put up by any one, never out of order, no repairing, lasts a life time. Warranted. A money maker. Write W. P. Harrison & Co., Clerk 10, Columbus, O.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1895. No 11.

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—Madison.

LEVI HETFIELD'S WILL.

Filed for Probate in Union County.

EVERYTHING STAYS IN THE FAMILY

[illegible] Property Specifically Bequeathed to His Sons and Daughters, and Two of Them Chosen Executors.

The will of Levi Hetfield was filed for probate in Elizabeth Monday.

After providing for the payment of his debts and the erection of a monument over his grave, the testator bequeaths:

To his daughter Anna D. Serrell the land, brick stores and right of way at [illegible] West Front street, valued at [illegible],000 and mortgaged for $3,000.

Also to Anna D. Serrell his gold watch and chain and gold eye glasses.

To the executors, in trust for his son Walter L. Hetfield, and to said Walter's heirs after his death, the land, brick building and right of way at 140-142 Park avenue, valued at $6,000, mortgaged for $3,000.

Also to the executors in trust for Walter L., the four brick dwellings, land and right of way, on West Third street between Madison and Arlington avenues, valued at $6,000.

To Walter L. Hetfield the use of testator's diamond stud, one-half his set of carpenter's tools, tool chest, and gold-headed cane.

To John M. Hetfield the row of eight frame dwellings on Arlington avenue, between Third and Fourth streets, valued at $10,000.

Also to John M. Hetfield his diamond ring, gold-band bracelet, one-half set carpenter's tools.

To his daughter Aretta H. Manning the homestead, Madison avenue and West Fourth street, valued at $8,000. Also $3,000 cash, and $500 special legacy for her kind and careful attention to him and his brother Squire Hetfield.

Also to her, the piano, carpets, rugs, pictures and other household goods.

The balance of the estate is to be divided among the four sons and daughters, Walter L's share being held in trust by the executors. Two notes endorsed for Walter and held by the City National Bank, for $1,000 and $475, are to be paid out of his share.

John M. Hetfield and Aretta H. Manning are made executors.

Wm. C. Boone and J. A. Hubbard are witnesses.

Roswell G. Horr as a Writer.

While the American people have never seen a time during which they did not have a large array of burning public questions to discuss, there certainly never has been an epoch, since the Revolution, excepting that of 1861, which has given rise to more striking issues than the present. The Tribune discusses the silver, tariff and elections questions admirably. That great paper fills a field of its own, and does it well. Readers can subscribe both for The Tribune and for this paper if they desire; and the two make an excellent political outfit. The Tribune market reports are superb. Our metropolitan contemporary deals with national questions with remarkable force, ability and courage. For 50 years it has been a fighter and is no less so now than it ever was. It hits with a good hard stick and seldom misses the mark. It believes that agitation, discussion and thorough exploring of public questions are the only path which leads to a wise and patriotic solution of them; and the ably prepared and exhaustive articles in The Tribune by R. G. Horr of Plainfield, on the tariff, silver, labor, wages, etc., will help any citizen to decide rightly on the issues of the day. It illustrates the news of the day profusely. The Tribune's prospectus in another column tells the story more fully. Republicans in this county will do well to subscribe for The Tribune this year in combination with this paper. An illustrated premium list will be sent by The Tribune, free, to applicants. Sample copies are also free.

To Remodel the Bank.

The First National Bank Directors yesterday decided to adopt the plan of remodeling the building already fully described in these columns.

This means a new front of terra cotta and stone, a ground-floor story of 14 feet height, for the bank itself; and a second story of 9 feet and a third story, for offices.

For seven years or more Mrs. W. D. Lender, of Quincy, Ky., was subject to severe attacks of cramp colic. Mr. S. B. Rowe, a druggist of that place, recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which has effected a permanent cure, saving her much suffering besides the trouble and expense of sending for a doctor, which was often necessary.—For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

MAYOR HEGEMAN.

Borough Republicans Do Just as They Please.

A VERY ONE-SIDED ELECTION.

In the Township, Charles Sebring Is Defeated for Committeeman—Few Votes Cast at Any Poll.

The election in North Plainfield borough Tuesday was simply a perfunctory casting of ballots for one ticket—the only ticket in the field. The vote, which was as follows, requires no comment:

NORTH PLAINFIELD BOROUGH.

	1st. Dist.	2d Dist.
Total votes cast	151	147
Mayor, 2 years—
B. A. Hegeman, Jr.	144	149
Councilmen—
H. B. Lounsbury, 3 years	145	142
W. A. Schutt, 2 years	147	140
W. C. Smith, 1 year	145	139
Assessor—
Dr. J. H. Cooley	147	142
Collector, 3 years—
H. N. Spencer	150	146
Freeholder—
L. E. Barkelow	144	142
Justices of the Peace—
L. A. Kline	146	141
F. N. Brown	139	138
C. W. Taynor	149	141
Constables—
Sam Taynor	149	140
Mark Dowd	146	140
J. W. VanHorn	145	141
Surveyors of Highway—
John H. Worth	149	142
J. S. Lunger	149	142
Commissioners of Appeal—
L. B. Woolston	148	144
J. P. Emmons	147	144
Robert Carson	149	148
Overseer of the Poor—
David B. Weaver	148	148
APPROPRIATIONS.
Borough [illegible] Roads 4000 Support of Poor 1500 Board of Health 100	150	147

There were a few scattering votes as follows: For mayor—Joel Heddon, 1; Wm. E. Mattison, 1. For councilman—E. Winckler, 7. For assessor—John Goodwin, 1. For overseer of the poor—Augustus Suttierlain, 1. For justices—E. O. Morse, 8; Wm. E. Mattison, 25. For pound keepers—E. McGinnis, J. W. Stout, John Goodwin, H. Speigel, Peter B. Matthews, Pat Eagen, E. N. Spencer, and Fritz Von Diebbenker, 1 apiece. For collector—Frank Conahan, 1.

NORTH PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP.

	1st. Dist.	2d Dist.
Town Committee—
Chas. Sebring, Rep.	11	4
Frank Mobus, Cit.	33	24
Justice of the Peace—
Thomas Taylor, Rep.	28	30
Dirk Debaun, Cit.	25	16
Commissioners of Appeal—
Chas. Mooney, Rep. and Cit.	26	30
Phillip Acker, "	26	20
Amos Vail "	28	29
Surveyors of Highway—
John Archibold, Rep.	19	18
David Lowrie, Rep and Cit.	13	28
Pound Keepers—
Samuel Redden, Rep.	19	22
Oscar Leibe, Rep and Cit.	13	29
Thos. McGann, Cit.	28	16

APPROPRIATIONS CARRIED.

Support of Poor	$ 150 00
Repair of Roads	1,000 00
Town Committee Salary	25,00

DOWNER DOWNED.

Fanwood Democrats Gain a Town Committeeman.

A lively fight was concentrated against Abner P. Downer in the Fanwood Township election yesterday, and was successful, Thos. J. Nichol defeating him by 24 ballots. Otherwise the entire Republican ticket was elected. Following is the vote:

Total ballots cast	270
Republican	162
Democrat	107
Rejected	1
Town Committee, 3 years—
Wm. H. Terry, Rep.	162
Ernest C. Kelp, Dem.	118
Town Committee, 1 year—
Abner P. Downer, Rep.	116
Thos. J. Nicholl, Dem.	140
Justices of the Peace, (same on both tickets)
Joseph Clark	263
Benjamin Urner	267
Constable—
Wm. H. Trayno, Rep.	160
Joseph Gurrier, Dem.	106
Surveyors of Highways—
John G. Cook, Rep.	158
Edward M. Johnston, Rep.	162
Thos. Lee, Dem.	107
John Radin, Dem.	108
Commissioners of Appeal—
Wm. H. Lake, Rep.	162
Henry Cook, Rep.	160
Alfred D. Brakle, Rep.	164
Chas. Haberle, Dem.	107
Lewis B. Coles, Dem.	103
Pound Keepers—
Hans Lambertson, Rep.	160
Joseph Thys, Rep.	159
Edward Terry, Rep.	161
John G. Cook, Rep.	160
J. W. K. Clark, Rep.	161
Lewis B. Coles, Dem.	107
Frederick K. Clark, Dem.	108
Clarence Lambert, Dem.	108
APPROPRIATIONS. (Same on both tickets.)
For Roads, Repair and Material	$1,[illegible]
For Support of Poor	[illegible]
For Sidewalks	[illegible]
For Fire Department	[illegible]

A HARMONY IN HEARTS.

Prelude of Wedding Bells to a Perpetual Duet.

PLAINFIELD-WESTFIELD CHORUS.

Miss Kittie Vail Weds Will MacClymont, and Fluttering Feminine Hearts Sigh with the Gentle Intoxication of Carnations, Violets, Roses, and Orange Blossoms.

A scene of beauty last Tuesday was the Presbyterian Church in Westfield, where a large number of friends and relatives had gathered to witness the marriage of Miss Catherine Ann Vail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan H. Vail of Westfield, to William Earl MacClymont of this city. The bride is a reigning society favorite and a highly accomplished musician. The groom is organist of the First Presbyterian Church of Plainfield, and his marriage sets at rest many a fluttering feminine heart.

Seated at the organ was Robert Ellsworth Terry, organist of the Church of Eternal Hope, West 81st street, New York, and the choice selections rendered while the audience was waiting were enjoyed exceedingly.

At 7:35 the familiar notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march were heard, and all eyes eagerly watched the coming of the bridal party.

From the rear of the church, the bride, resting on the arm of her father, slowly proceeded up the centre aisle, while at the front, from side entrances, appeared the groom, best man and ushers, preceded by the bridesmaids, and, walking down the aisle, met the bride and her father. The entire bridal party then went to the front, and met Rev. D. Thomas MacClymont, D. D., uncle of the groom, and Rev. N. W. Cadwell, pastor of the church.

The ceremony, which was a combination of the Episcopal and Presbyterian services, was beautiful, and was performed by Dr. MacClymont, assisted by Rev. Cadwell.

The bride was given away by her father and was married with a ring.

The wedding march from Lohengrin was delightfully rendered while the party was leaving the church, the bride and groom graciously bestowing happy recognitions on their friends.

The bride was handsomely gowned in white satin duchesse, with duchesse lace and pearl passementerie and ostrich-feather trimmings. She wore diamond ornaments, low corsage, veil, and orange blossoms; and carried a bouquet of white bride roses.

Miss Jennie Marior of Roselle, the maid of honor, wore pink silk, with duchesse lace and satin ribbons, and carried pink mermet roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Georgiana Bogert of Westfield, and Miss Ida Elizabeth Schafer of Trenton, were gowned in white silk mull over white taffeta, trimmed with pink ribbons. They carried bouquets of pink carnations.

Richard E. Pease of Plainfield was best man, and the ushers were E. E. Turlington and Irving Pope of New York, David Marior of Roselle, and Harry Williams of Plainfield.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids were presented by the bride with favors of Roman gold scabbard pins with pearls inlaid. The groom's gift to the best man and ushers were of the same design in scarf pins.

Mrs. Vail, mother of the bride, wore a black satin duchesse gown, with jet and duchesse lace and diamond ornaments. Mrs. MacClymont, mother of the groom, was gowned in black velvet with jet and duchesse lace and diamond ornaments. Mrs. U. A. Provost, mother of the bride's father, wore a black silk gown with jet and diamond ornaments. They all wore violets.

Many handsome gifts were received, among which was an inkstand with gold pen and holder, from the choir of the First Presbyterian Church, Plainfield. The groom's gift to the bride was a graceful and substantial tribute to her musical genius, a Sohmer grand piano.

The reception at the bride's home was largely attended by guests from New York, Trenton, Plainfield, Newark, and other places, including a notable delegation of Plainfield belles.

A Sermon for Firemen.

Rev. C. E. Herring of the First Presbyterian Church has extended to the fire department an invitation through Chief Doane to attend a special sermon for firemen which he will deliver March 24. Chief Doane has sent out notices to all fire companies in both city and borough, and the exempt organization as well, and it is expected they will attend in a body.

—Ex-Councilman Tell A. Reynolds of East Front street is having his house brightened by a coat of paint; Marsh, Ayres & Co. are doing the work.

THE CHORAL CONCERT.

A Cultured Audience Hears Splendid Music.

OVATION TO JOSEPH HOLLMAN.

Miss Louise Wilbrandt Makes a Triumphant Plainfield Debut—The Chorus Work Much Enjoyed, Especially in the Sparkling Melodies.

Talented soloists from out of town gave color and zest to the programme presented by the Choral Society in the second of the present Winter's concert on Tuesday night. The honors of the evening were divided somewhat unevenly between Miss Louise Wilbrandt, pianist; Miss Charlotte Maconda, soprano, and Joseph Hollman, violoncellist; the two instrumentalists receiving the most marked evidences of approval from a very critical audience.

Miss Wilbrandt has learned much of the celebrated masters under whom she has studied. New Yorkers recognized her talent at once, and credit is certainly due the Choral Society for its introduction of such a brilliant young woman to Plainfield musical circles. Her touch is surpassingly delicate, and her rendition of the most difficult of selections, "Rhapsodie Hongroise", No XI, captivated everyone, and won for her a rapturous encore.

Mr. Hollman may lay undisputed claim to high honors. His 'cello selections of his own composition were played with a fervor and skill that would have elicited demonstrative approval from any cultured audience. Upon his second appearance, after playing three brief selections, the last a mazourka of his own, he evidently believed the audience satiated with the music from his 'cello, for he responded with an encore only after the house was swept from pit to gallery with applause of five-minutes duration.

Miss Maconda's voice was best enjoyed when adapted to the solo parts in the closing number on the programme, "Gallia", when she was supported by the chorus in the delineation of a lament over the fall of Paris during the Franco-Prussian War. Her first solo, "Bell Song", Delibes, was an intricate and difficult selection, and one which few but prima-donnas may attempt with success to sing. It was in a measure suited to her voice, for her high notes were clear and bell-like; but her less ambitious efforts were best enjoyed.

As accompanists, Miss Jessie Utter and Signor Charles A. DeSerrano lent invaluable aid to the proper rendition of solos and choruses alike.

The chorus is unquestionably in need of a more robust representation of base voices. The foundation of harmony is sadly lacking without these. In but two selections did the chorus appear evenly balanced, these being the first and last numbers on the second half of the programme. The songs were blithe in composition, and were sung with much spirit, considering the fact that there was no orchestral accompaniment. The impressimo passages were well executed in general, and it was seen that Mr. Fitzhugh had his pupils well in hand. The gay, the merry, and the sparkling, they were the parts best sung, together with the "Mother's Lullaby", given by the female chorus.

The society will present Rossini's "Stabat Mater", and Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise", with full orchestral accompaniment, at the third concert of the series, May 14.

That Word.

Edward White received about fifty answers to his offer of $10 in gold to the one sending him a new word to take the place of the word bargain. All the letters will be given to a prominent man in Plainfield, and he will decide who is the fortunate one. The offer is good for this week, and all answers must be in by Friday morning, and the name of the winner and the word will be published in Friday night's Daily Press.

Sorry to Hear It.

The many friends of Lou Coombs, the popular young bartender who has had charge of the Hotel Grenada bar for the past two years, will be surprised to learn that Lou leaves next Tuesday morning for Catasauqua, where he will fill a similar position at the Grand View Hotel, a new and elegant structure just completed at that place.

REV. Daniel F. Warren, D. D.,
Rector Holy Trinity Church,
Jersey City Heights, says:

"Dr. Deane's
Dyspepsia Pills

are unquestionably good. They are, in my opinion, all they claim to be. I have tried them and found in them what I needed. I believe they will cure Dyspepsia, and that is saying much for any medicine. I am glad, therefore, to give my testimony."

At all druggists', 25 cents. Send to us for a free sample.
DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

GRIST OF CITY COURT.

The Man With the Bowery Dialect Goes to Jail.

THE BOULEVARD SCRAPPER FINED.

John McGowan Breaks Up a Family and Then Threatens to Kill the Son Who Tries To Be Good to His Little Sisters—Trials and Tribulations.

"All I wants is fair show, dat's all; give me a fair shake"—was the remark of John McGowan in court Wednesday morning with the genuine Bowery dialect, and a voice that was inflated from too close contact with the law.

McGowan was in court on the charge of using indecent language and threatening to kill George Snyder on South Avenue last December, while Snyder was giving Christmas presents to his two small sisters. The trouble was one of those family quarrels which are so frequently aired in police court.

It was said that Snyder and wife parted some time ago, and McGowan stepped in to take his place, and since then has estranged Mrs. Snyder from the rest of the family, though the son has endeavored to maintain friendly relations with the mother. McGowan, however, has been successful in influencing her against the son, and other members of the family.

On the stand Snyder said that McGowan had frequently threatened to take his life, and swore and cussed at him every time they met.

Amelia Bancroft, a half-sister of Snyder's, also testified as to the circumstances when McGowan said he would kill her brother. She said that McGowan went to board with her father and mother two years ago, and had not been there long when he succeed in parting the couple. Ever since Mrs. Snyder had supported McGowan, who lived with her and never worked. She did n't think it right for McGowan to live there and never work.

McGowan said in extenuation of his act the day before Christmas that Mrs. Snyder told him not to let the children take any presents from her son.

"All dat I done"—said McGowan—"was to take de children in de house; dat's all dat I did, and den day made regular samples of demselves round dere. Besides, Jedge, yer honor, der moder tol' me to never speak to dis feller, but to jest watch him and keep me eye on him."

"Have you got any witnesses?"—asked the Judge.

"Dat's what I hev"—was the reply.

"Where are they?"

"It's de moder—de little gal's gone for her; she'll tell ye whats de kind of man dis feller is"—pointing to Snyder.

"Well, this case has been delayed long enough; why did n't you have her this morning?"—asked the Judge.

"She—why she workin' and could n't lose any time, but say, Jedge, yer honor, she'll be here in a minit."

"You have had time enough, why did n't you have her here at half past eight, when the case was called"—asked Chief Grant.

"Say, judge, all I wants is fair show, dats all; give me a fair shake, will ye"—replied the Bowery man.

Here the Judge waited a moment to see if Mrs. Snyder would put in an appearance, and young Snyder turned to McGowan and said:

"If you was any kind of a man you would n't stay there with my mother, and live off from her, like you have done for two years. It's got so she thinks more of you than she does of us."

"Kin ye blame her after whats the like of ye done to her—turns her out of de house?"

"Yes, and you never pay any board, either."

"What's dat! Ye do n't 'member de time dat you turn out of de house, and den I give ye five plunks and take to de road. Dats de kind of man I am."

"But five dollars don't pay board for two years nor two months"—was the answer, which took McGowan's breath away and caused a lull in the colloquy. This gave Judge Coddington a chance to say that if Mrs. Snyder did n't come quick he would have to close the case.

"Ders someting de matter—ders someting crooked 'bout dis"—replied McGowan, as he realized his argument was useless.

"McGowan"—said the Judge—"the sentence of this court is that you pay a fine of $5 or go to jail for 20 days."

McGowan threw up his hands and said: "Dats all right; I'll go to de jail."

The court adjourned and Sergeant Kiely locked the man with the tough dialect in one of the dirty cells.

Donald Fitzpatrick, Robert Wallis and Patrick Cahill who were arrested for fighting on Plainfield avenue early Sunday morning, were also arraigned for a second time this morning before City Judge Coddington. Patrolmen Flynn and Flanagan and the three fighters were sworn, and the facts brought out were substantially the same as published in Monday's Press. Fitzpatrick and Wallis paid fines of $5 and Cahill $3.

THE PLAINFIELD POOR.

Leading Citizens Discuss Plans and Prospects.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE TRAMPS

Funds Low, But Work Progressing Steadily—Planning to Incorporate the Association, to Perfect and Make Permanent Its Work.

The meeting of the Citizens Organized Aid Association in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church last Monday was well attended, and much interest was evidenced.

It was stated, as announced in last night's Daily Press, that the Plainfield Relief Association had rented the house on West Second street next to their present quarters, and the Aid decided to rent two of their new rooms, where headquarters would be established from April 1.

H. B. Newhall, Dr. W. H. Murray, Miss E. B. Leonard, Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, D. F. Hall and S. E. Huntington were appointed a committee to revise the constitution and see what could be done towards incorporating the society.

A communication was received from Councilman S. A. Ginna stating that a committee from the Council had been appointed to confer with the committee from the society in regard to the proposed poor farm.

Reports of various committees were read, and showed a steady progress, though the funds of the treasury were low. A private donation of $50 was received, and gratefully acknowledged.

The Employment Committee called attention to the fact that they had enrolled a number of deserving women, who were anxious to secure work.

A portion of the evening was occupied in discussing the tramp question, but no conclusions were reached as to what should be done with them.

OVER THE VETO.

A Partisan Legislature Refuses to Listen to Gov. Werts's Arguments.

Trenton, March 11.—The Republican Senators held a long caucus tonight and decided that the Senate would be ready for final adjournment Friday, March 22. They also decided to pass over the Governor's veto the Voorhees bill abolishing lay Judges of the county courts and providing for the the election of the county law Judges by the people.

This was done immediately after the caucus adjourned. The vote to pass the bill over the veto was 14 to 4, the minority votes being cast by Democrats. The bill will go to the Senate on Wednesday, and must lie over a day there before being acted upon. There will be no session of either House tomorrow, which will be given up the State House investigation.

Later the Elective Judiciary bill was taken up and passed by partisan votes. Senator Daly spoke against it and Senator Voorhees for it. The former after reading an editorial from the Jersey City Evening Journal (Rep.) condemning the bill said he did this for the edification of the Republican party, and while he did not suppose he could influence the party to vote against the bill, he said it was not a Democratic funeral.

Mr. Daly also read from the Newark Times (Rep.) a similar article against the bill. He submitted that a majority of the people of the State were opposed to the measure, and that if passed it would be a step backward. But he supposed it must go, and the judicial ermines for the first time must be dragged in the political mire.

Clubbed Her With a Monkey-Wrench.

The Boulevard was the scene of a serious fracas Sunday evening. A man and wife living on West Third street had imbibed considerable newly-[illegible] whiskey, and towards night began abusing one another, first with words, then with fists, and finally, on the husband's part, with a monkey-wrench.

About 7 in the evening the wife was seen running along the street with her baby in arms, and the blood flowing in a stream down over her dress and child from a brutal wound in her forehead, which was bulged out in a large lump. The woman sought out a policeman, and returned with him to the domicile, where the husband was whiskey crazy. The sight of the officer had a quieting effect on the man, and the wife then repented and declined to have him arrested.

As usual every effort was made by the couple to keep the matter quiet, and no complaint was made in the City Court.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. Baldridge, Millersville, Ill. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

KNIGHTS IN SESSION.

Goodwill, Unity and Perseverance Get Together.

A ROYAL DISTRICT MEETING.

Grand Officers Come to Plainfield, Give Good Counsel, and Partake of the Feast of Good Things.

The largest and most enthusiastic district meeting of Knights of Pythias ever held in this city took place March 8 when Perseverance lodgeroom was filled to overflowing with the members of Goodwill, Unity and Perseverance lodges, besides a host of visiting brethren. Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath, Grand Vice Chancellor Dr. Hitchcock, Grand Prelate Rockafeller, Grand Inner Guard Somers Champion and Grand Outer Guard Dickshelmer, arrived on the 6:20 express and were met by Crescent Division, No. 13, Uniform Rank of this city under command of Captain J. E. Flannery. Headed by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps they marched from the North avenue station to Watchung avenue, to Front street, to Madison avenue, to Second street, thence to the lodgeroom where Crescent Division was drawn up in open order and the Grand Chancellor and his staff received with the Grand honors and were welcomed on behalf of the various lodges by District Deputy Grand Chancellor James Patterson of Perseverence Lodge who also presided at the meeting and introduced the different speakers. They all gave eloquent and impressive addresses on the good of the order and the best means to attain a healthy increase of membership.

Besides the Grand Chancellor and his staff who made addresses, the Chancellor Commanders of Goodwill, Unity and Perseverance Lodges each gave in detail what had been accomplished since the first of January and future Pythian prospects were. Brothers VanEmburgh of Unity, Captain Flannery of Crescent Division, and Charles Ulrich of Perseverance Lodge, offered a few well-timed remarks. When the veteran Pythian and war-horse of the order, Past Chancellor Cadwallader Jones, made a feeling address, which was well received.

Grand Chancellor Donath then paid a deserved compliment to the Captain and Sir Knights of the Uniformed Rank for the manner in which they had acted as an escort. The Lodge was closed in regular form when all adjourned to the banquet room where a tempting collation had been provided for the attending officers and members by Perseverance Lodge under the supervision of Past Chancellors Pope, Turton, Clark, Higgins and Drake, and to which all did ample justice. After the cigars had been passed the grand officers left for home on the 11:28 train, satisfied that the results of the meeting would be of lasting benefit to the district.

NOT A JOKER BY NATURE.

McCready Sykes Says that Thomas Hood's Inclination Was Towards the Serious.

The first paper of the series on five great humorists, under the auspices of the Plainfield Branch Alliance, was read in All Souls Church Thursday by McCready Sykes, formerly of The Daily Press staff, his subject being Thomas Hood.

Mr. Sykes said that humorists put a great deal more laughter in the world than they take out of it, and so it was with Hood. He was born an Englishman and at the age of 13 left school and was apprenticed to an engraver, which trade he followed for a number of years, with no idea of entering literature as a profession, though he always had an inclination and evinced from time to time ability in that direction. In 1821 he entered active journalism by taking charge of the London Magazine.

At that time he had little thought of ever making an avocation of writing puns; instead his inclination was towards penning serious poems, but it takes long to establish a reputation in this line of literature that is sufficient to maintain one with the necessities of life. Unfortunately for the future which his promoters indicated his business venture did not succeed, and in the meantime he had married, so that without a reputation which would bring him in money he was obliged to turn his attention in a direction otherwise than the natural bent of his mind seemed to desire.

He had published several fairly meritorious poems but they did not meet with financial success. Mr. Sykes considered that Fair Ines was the turning point in his literary life when he left the serious and entered the humorous field. This piece was the exemplification of his best work along the lines which his real thought indicated, but fate compelled him to manufacture puns from a condition of affairs which he was bound to adapt himself to. He was a man who was in touch with the masses, as all his writings and actions in life indicated.

Mr. Sykes's paper was largely made up of extracts from his writings which gave the hearers a better insight into the life and character of Hood. A brief informal discussion followed the reading of the paper.

Mrs. Florence Ianson of Berkley avenue has purchased from her father the large house on Leland avenue known as the Woodside, which she is thoroughly renovating and furnishing. Mrs. Ianson intends to open a Summer boarding house.

THE SOMERSET-ST. CORDIAL MARKET

Thrilling Adventure of the Reckless Absinthean Who Sought Wormwood in the Borough.

A man who had evidently seen better days and who carried a cotton umbrella with an unnatural wood handle, entered a Somerset street cafe liquor the other night and seated himself at one of the little tables. The individual by courtesy known as "Walter" and whose duties comprise every phase of saloon life from mixing drinks to cleaning cuspidors, sprinkling sawdust and ejecting late or too extensive customers, regarded the stranger with undisguised interest. He winked his other eye to the bartender and that personage paused in the preparation of a Manhattan cocktail a la Plainfield to inspect the newcomer.

"What is it?"—queried the waiter with the air of one discovering a new land but uncertain what to call it.

"You've got me dere"—returned the bartender. "Go an' ask it—mebbe it wants a drink."

The waiter approached the stranger with much caution.

"What'llyerhave?"—he inquired.

The man with the cotton umbrella turned upon him a pair of soft, reflective eyes, eyes that seemed to gaze beyond earthly things, over the hills and far away.

"You may bring me a little absinthe—just a murmur of it"—he said in a low, tender voice.

"A what?"—gasped the waiter.

"A little absinthe, I said—just a whisper."

"Whiskey?"

"No, absinthe."

"Come again—one of me hearers is a little misty tonight."

"A-b-s-i-n-t-h-e, absinthe; don't you know what absinthe is?"

The waiter reflected a moment, and then hoisted signals of distress which brought the bartender to the rescue.

"Dis gent has me dead razzled"—he explained.—Come in an' look aroun'"

"What's de gag?"—politely inquired the commingler of wet goods.

"I asked for absinthe"—observed the stranger with emphasis.

"Did you?"—returned the barman.

"I did."

"What was it you asked for?"

The waiter grinned.

"A drink of absinthe, by the gods!"—cried the guest, rising.—"And if I have to ask for it again, I'll smash every glass on that buffet, set fire to the whole bungalow, and hang you two miserable wretches on the trolley wire; do you hear me?"

"Oh, a drink of absint'—oh, yes!'—apologized the bartender.—"Say, Chimmy, de gent wants an absint', did n' I tell yer?" He disappeared behind the bar to bob up in a moment with a cavernous red and yellow pitcher.

"Here, Chimmy, take dis growler up ter H——'s an' ask him kin he len' me a quart o' absint'—ourn is clean out."

As Chimmy vanished through the back door, the stranger arose with a sigh and went the other way. Pausing a moment on the step he was overheard muttering:

"It's no use—I'll have to go back to the metropolis; why, it's as bad as Brooklyn here!"

Then he was lost in the night.

POLYGAMY PRACTICED.

Appearances Say Not, But It Is a Fact, Says Miss Perley.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society was largely attended in the Crescent Avenue Church Friday afternoon. The reports from the various officers and committees showed the organization to be in a prosperous condition. During the year $800 was raised, $500 of which was used to pay the salary of Miss Margaret Buchanan, a teacher in a mission school in Mount Pleasant, Utah, among the Mormons, and $300 was expended for miscellaneous purposes.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Israel Pierson; vice-president, Mrs. Stephen Struthers; secretary, Miss Mary Ketcham; treasurer, Mrs. William Myers.

At the conclusion of the routine business Miss Fannie Perley, a teacher in a mission boarding school at Spanish Forks, Utah, spoke of her life and work among the Mormons. Miss Perley said she was very glad the society had decided to continue raising the salary with which to pay Miss Buchanan for her labor, for she was personally acquainted with her and her work, and knew her to be an earnest and faithful worker. Among the Mormons, she said, there was an urgent need for spreading the Christian influence as against the teachings of the so-called Reform Church of the Latter-Day Saints. People who had not come in contact with Mormonism had no idea of the persuasiveness of the Mormon missionary. Few realize what an immoral and profane atmosphere young people are compelled to live in among these communities. The abolition of polygamy would tear down the whole structure of Mormonism, and while they profess not to practice polygamy, it is not a fact, for it is practised quietly.

Justly proud is Joseph Sattels of his rare old Steiner violin. He knows it to be at least 170 years old, and it is an instrument of wonderful sweetness, tone and melody. He unearthed the treasure in South Jersey, where it had been sacrificed by a German musician in hard luck. Mr. Sattels has been offered $300 for the violin, and would not part with it for three times that sum.

FOR THE TROLLEY.

Fanwood Legislators Pushing the Enterprise.

FIRST READING OF THE DOCUMENT.

Application of the Company Sworn to and Filed—Consents Secured, and the Work Proceeding Steadily.

The Fanwood Town Committee met at their rooms in the town hall last Friday to take up the first reading of the application of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company for a franchise to operate an electric road through the township by way of Midway avenue with a spur on Forest avenue to the village.

Chairman Terry called the meeting to order. On motion of Committeeman Miller Town Counsel Codington read the application as presented, after which discussion was held on the subject. Mr. Nichol, chairman of the committee appointed to secure signers, reported that the committee had secured 65 per cent. of the property owners on Forest avenue from Mountain avenue to North avenue near the station.

By request of Mr. Gaddis, the Committee's report was put in writing, sworn to, and filed with the Town Committee. Mr. Nichol being a notary public, John Robison made the affidavit, and the same was filed.

The application was then taken up, and acted on in sections separately. Several amendments were added, and corrections made, after which the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, and the treasurer's report was read and accepted. On motion the Commit adjourned, subject to the call of the Chair, when the second reading of the application will be held.

Thanks to the Public and The Press.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held last evening. Eleven members were present. The following reports were received:

Religious Work—Chairman, A. C. LaBoyteaux.

Educational Work—Chairman, Stephen Caboone.

Physical Work—D. A. MacPhie.

Rooms Committee—Chairman, Nelson Bunyon.

Junior Work—Chairman, George H. Batchelor.

Entertainment—Chairman, H. M. Maxson.

Membership—Chairman, A. B. Beers.

Convention—Chairman, E. L. Bonny.

Music—Chairman, T. B. Hazell.

Reports were also received from the treasurer and general secretary.

At the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. the following expression of thanks contained in the report of E. L. Bonny, chairman of the Convention Committee, was adopted and ordered printed:

The thanks of the Association are due to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Andrews, and Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman for their kind hospitality to the delegates who were entertained at the parlor conferences at their homes, and to the citizens who so generously entertained our visitors, and to the churches which so willingly opened their doors for the meetings of the convention; to the daily papers of the city for the extended space in their columns given to the reports of the various meetings of the convention.

DEATH OF JERE BILYEU.

He Was an Old Soldier, and a Comrade of Post 109.

Jeremiah Bilyeu, an old and respected citizen of North Plainfield, died Friday morning at 5, at his home on Chatham street.

He was a great sufferer from rheumatism, and he was often unable to work at his trade as mason on account of it.

Some time ago he was taken with the grip, which left him in a weakened condition. Only during the past few days has his condition been thought serious. For several hours yesterday he was unconscious.

He was a veteran of the Civil War, and a member of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., of this city, which will have charge of the funeral services.

Thanks for Welcome Favors.

To THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—The members of the Plainfield Section of the Socialist Labor Party desire to acknowledge your kindness in supplying their reading room with your valuable newspaper free of cost, and heartily thank you for this and many other past favors conferred.

JOHN BROOKS,
Secretary.

To THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—At a meeting of the Plainfield Auxiliary, the secretary was instructed to convey the sincere thanks of the Auxiliary to The Daily Press for the many kindnesses received during the past year.

SAIDEE HILLIARD HUNTER,
Secretary.

Elkwood Building Sold.

The Elkwood Building on East Second street was bought at the public sale at 2:30 this afternoon by C. T. Barney of New York.

The price paid was $27,000, which is $1,800 less than the amount of the two mortgages, the first being $20,000 and the second $8,000, with interest and fees of $900. The bidding was started at $17,000. The building originally cost $43,000.

He's an Octogenarian.

Mrs. John H. Goodwin and her son Frederick of Manning avenue attended the eightieth birthday anniversary of Mrs. Goodwin's father, Frederick VanLiew VanDoren, in New Brunswick, Wednesday. He is a descendant of the original Jersey Dutch, and holds the historical Dutch parchment brought over from England.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

The Incipient Hero Completes His Military Studies.

A LIEUTENANT OF ARTILLERY.

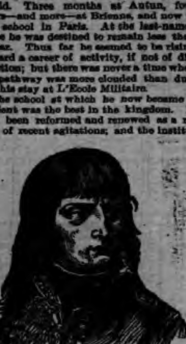
Poverty Compels Him to Journey to His Regiment on Foot—Social Gayeties at the Barracks—Death of His Father. First Command of Soldiers In the Field.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

IV.—L'ECOLE MILITAIRE AND VALENCE.

When Cadet Bonaparte, in the autumn of 1784, was promoted to the Military School in Paris, he was in his sixteenth year. He had now made his way by stages, beginning with his tenth year, from his native place to the capital of France; and if of France, then of the world. Three months at Autun, four years—and more—at Brienne, and now to the school in Paris. At the last-named place he was destined to remain less than a year. Thus far he seemed to be rising toward a career of activity, if not of distinction; but there was never a time when his pathway was more clouded than during his stay at L'Ecole Militaire.

The school at which he now became a student was the best in the kingdom. It had been reformed and renewed as a result of recent agitations; and the institution was at this time well fitted to be the finishing ground for a young military aspirant. L'Ecole Militaire de Paris held the relation to that of Brienne and the others of college to academy. The curriculum was more ample and the methods more rational in the first than those pursued in the provincial institutions. Here the academic training of Napoleon Bonaparte—as that of his younger brother Lucien afterwards—was completed. From this school he was to be delivered, as if by a second birth, to the world.



NAPOLEON AT THIRTY.

The social character of Napoleon now began to show itself more distinctly. Back at Brienne he had been introduced by General Marbœuf to some private families of distinction. Them he impressed as a peculiar, forceful and solitary genius, more capable of heroic dreams and boyish monologue than of polite conversation or social amenities. Going to Paris, his acquaintance was somewhat enlarged. Marbœuf's nephew, the Bishop of Autun, now lived at Versailles; and that worthy was glad, after the lapse of five years, to receive his former pupil, greatly grown in intellect and person, but virtually the same in demeanor. Elise, the sister of Bonaparte, had meanwhile been brought out from Corsica, and was now a member of the Royal School for Girls at Saint-Cyr. So that the young man had now a few friends and some social advantages.

For the rest, he pursued in Paris the same self-centered life as at Brienne. He was a hard student—in his way. He still disprized the polite branches of education in favor of the exact sciences and geography. In humane inquiry, his sole endeavor was to master History. His study, however, in this field did not reach historical generalization or a broad philosophy. He stopped with the individual. He dwelt with interest and enthusiasm upon the lives of great men. Plutarch he knew almost by heart. The well-known stories which in that age passed for history he conned with the passion of a zealot.

In after life, the peculiar effect of this discipline was manifested in all of Napoleon's work and policy. Out of his history proper he branched in only one direction—politics. He became rather expert in the political platitudes and persiflage of the times. To the end of his life he was never capable of high and abstract views; but he knew all special things as if by intuition. His mind flashed out, lightning-like, in this direction and in that; the blaze of it illumined many a dark and blood-splashed place; but from that prodigious intellect there was never diffused a broad and universal light. Much of this must be attributed to his inborn character, and something to the manner of his education.

We must here allow also for the reactionary influence of Paris itself on a great genius in boyhood. Napoleon saw and felt Paris for ten months, in his sixteenth year. It was a revelation; but he seems not to have been greatly affected by it. So much was he concentrated on himself—so strongly was the concept of a destiny struggling to form itself within him—that even the glare, the magnificence, the charm, the seductive vices, of the metropolis were hardly noticed by the Corsican in his onward course.

The year 1785 was in all respects critical to Bonaparte. His course at the Military School ended with August of that year. He was admitted to his final examination almost precisely at his sixteenth birthday. Nearly six months before this time his father, who had found a temporary residence at Montpellier, came to the final scene. The visionary and unsuccessful Buonaparte had discovered a refuge for himself at the chateau of Madame Permon, mother of the Duchess d'Abrantes of great fame. There, on the 24th of February, he expired, of a chronic malady, perhaps cancer of the stomach—most fatal premonition of what should happen to his famous son thirty-six years afterwards. At his deathbed were his eldest son Joseph and that other Joseph who should become the Cardinal Fesch. The latter, now a priest, would fain administer some consolation of religion to the dying man; but Charles Bonaparte would not accept the solace,—preferring to die, as he had lived, in absolute unbelief.

Hard was this stroke of death on the members of Buonaparte's family. From the time of his union with Letitia Ramolino—a period of twenty years—thirteen children had been born. Eight of these were living; three were in France, and five with the mother in Ajaccio. All were at the door of penury. It is a law of nature and of man that every mother who bears thirteen children is a heroine; but Madame de Buonaparte had now to go into the fields and plant mulberry trees for a living! Marbœuf finally prevailed with the authorities to make Joseph Buonaparte also (we will now drop the Italian form Buonaparte) a military [illegible]. But the father's death and Napoleon's protest countervailed the project, and Joseph was doomed to remain a cadet of the Church. For Lucien, who developed a passion for polite studies and wished to be a priest, a scholarship was obtained for the school at Brienne. Such is the perversity of fate. As to Napoleon, it was agreed that instead of going into the navy, as Keralio had recommended and as Marbœuf had wished, he should become instead a lieutenant in the artillery. After his graduation, he should be assigned to the Regiment La Fere, stationed at Valence, on the left bank of the [illegible]one, three hundred miles away as the bird flies—far to the south.

The final examination at L'Ecole Militaire was passed. Like many other incipient military heroes—our own included—Napoleon did not obtain a high rank in his classes. His papers gave him only the forty-second place from the head. Louis Antoine Bourienne, his future private secretary, had been far above him at Brienne. Des Mazis, his favorite classmate, was now graduated far below him at L'Ecole Militaire. But the grade was sufficient; and he was enabled with his commission as lieutenant to choose the artillery as his arm of the service.

For two months (August to October, 1785) the restraints of red tape held back Lieutenant Bonaparte from going to his place. His means gave utterly out. At last, late in the fall of 1785, he set out by conveyance from Paris as far as Lyons, but was then obliged, from sheer inability to pay his fare, to walk the remainder of the journey to Valence. There he arrived, and took his place in the Regiment La Fere—doubtless so called because it had no iron in it!

Great was Napoleon's surprise at the character of the discipline. By the officers and men almost everything was practiced except those exercises which tended to make them soldiers. They were gay, dissipated, frivolous. The pay was insufficient to support them in their career of pleasure and vice; but they were nearly all scions of the nobility, and knew not what it was to be limited in the means of gratification. Napoleon's poverty and ambition alike held him back for a moment from this manner of life; but, strange to say, he presently threw himself into the swim, and during the winter of 1785-86 he dissipated like the rest. There seemed to be nothing to do about the barracks of Valence except to join the rout, or else to become again a solitary student; and for that there was not the slightest encouragement.

Valence was a small but important city. The young military officers were welcomed by ambitious families into their drawing rooms. For the nonce, Bonaparte concluded that he must become accomplished!—that he must be a social lion and quaff the bowl of pleasure with his fellows. He had social passports from Marbœuf's nephew, who was now the young Bishop of Autun. The Lieutenant got the entree to the home of important personages such as the Abbe Saint-Ruff. He knew what wine was—and fashionable women. For him the doors of the ball-room swung open; and his slight form in military regalia might be seen waltzing with luxurious womanhood much taller than himself! Cæsar, as late as his twenty-eighth year, just before he was elected military tribune, took such a plunge into the rivers of indulgence.

But to a nature such as Napoleon's pleasure, however torrid, could not long suffice. The Lieutenant presently turned upon himself in anger; and a sudden reform was the immediate result. The thoughtful brow and sullen manner returned. He went back gloomily to his books; recovered his vantage, and henceforth to the end of his life—though many a time he heard the Sirens singing on near-by shores—he never postponed his ambitions for the delirious dreams and fleeting hallucinations of a dissipated life.

During his career as a student, Napoleon's general reading had been in the nature of excursions along the coasts of political philosophy. The French manner caught his imagination. He talked of liberty, of the virtues of the elder Romans, of humanity in a state of nature—as revealed by Jean Jacques. Now, in the spring of 1786—recovering himself from the winter's revel—he turned from the "Contrat Sociale," which he had begun to distrust as a ground of political life, to the "Histoire Philosophique" of the Abbe Raynal. Here he lost himself in the mysteries (and mists) of that science which is said to teach by example.

The writings of the Abbe Raynal, from being a conglomerate in which several strong hands—notably that of Diderot—had a great part, were now in the ascendant. The French mind caught them, embraced them, and adored. They were thought for the time to be the be-all and the end-all of political philosophy. Behold Napoleon, whose mind had already been well stocked with the fascinating but unprofitable stories of Herodotus, Diodorus, Strabo, Plutarch, Xenophon, et id omne genus,—behold him at his candle-lighted, deal-board table in the barracks of Valence, rising in thought somewhat from the particulars of human story to the general laws of conduct. Be it remembered, however, that at that epoch the human mind had not yet gained the first glimpse of that universal coherence and consistency of all things which constitutes the bottom principle of the New History. As for the unfledged Jacobinism in him, that was sufficiently inflamed with the knowledge that five years previously this same "Histoire Philosophique" had been burned at the stake—so to speak—in Paris, and its author driven into exile.

Meanwhile, in August of 1787, while the members of our Constitutional Convention were hard at work in Philadelphia building their ship of state, an insurrection against the French government broke out in Lyons, fifty-three miles up the river from Valence; and the Regiment La Fere was ordered to put down the revolt. On the march thither Napoleon Bonaparte, lieutenant of artillery, had his first command of soldiers in the field.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

Dolly Madison at the White House.

James Madison and his wife were famous for their generous hospitality, and it was extended to the president's bitterest political opponents. Dinner parties were given every week, and the beauty and fashion of the country met in the presidential drawing rooms. Mr. Madison possessed the old school elegance of manners to a remarkable degree, and among his intimate friends was humorous and entertaining. His wife, "Dolly," has likewise been portrayed by history as one of the most charming of the hostesses who have graced the White House.

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY

WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF

DUKES MIXTURE

for 35 cents

Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or ATCo

2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

SPACE	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	[illegible]
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	[illegible]
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	[illegible]
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	[illegible]
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	30.00	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR.
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.
7aply

L. B. WOOLSTON, J. F. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES. 141-145 NORTH AV
[illegible]

THE RED-CART CZAR.

Reuben Ray, U. S. Autocrat, Arrested.

SERGT. KIELY VS. UNCLE SAM'S MAN

At First a Seeded Tussle Between City and National Government Was Threatened, But Reuben Ended All by Pleading Guilty.

Reuben Ray got into trouble with the city courts on Saturday because he works for Uncle Sam. Reuben is a familiar figure about the streets as he pushes his three-wheeled cart along the walks between the postoffice and the North Avenue station, loaded down with mail pouches. But hereafter Reuben will take to the roadway, for several complaints have been made to the Mayor by citizens about his cart soiling women's dresses and about his officious manner in which he ordered pedestrians to clear the way for him and his red cart, which resulted in his being hauled up before Judge Coddington this morning as a violator of a city ordinance.

After several complaints had been made the Mayor instructed Corporation Counsel Marsh to draw up a complaint against Reuben and his vehicle, which was sworn to by Sergeant Kiely. The formidable document reads as follows:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, }
COUNTY OF UNION, } SS
CITY OF PLAINFIELD, }

Patrick Kiely of the city of Plainfield, County and State aforesaid, of full age, being duly sworn, according to law on his oath says: That Reuben Ray of said city of Plainfield, County and State aforesaid, on the 8th day of March, 1895, at the city of Plainfield, in the County of Union and State of New Jersey, did violate section 11 of the ordinance of the said city of Plainfield entitled, "An ordinance relating to the morals, peace and good order of the city of Plainfield", approved April 20, 1874, amended by ordinances, approved Jan. 4, 1875, Dec. 7, 1881, Sept. 15, 1883, Oct. 7, 1884, Nov. 3, 1890 and Dec. 8, 1891, in manner following, that is to say:

Said Reuben Ray did then and there unnecessarily obstruct Park avenue, North avenue and West Second street, of said city, with a certain three wheeled vehicle, which he then and there propelled along and upon the sidewalk of North avenue, Park avenue, and West Second street, and deponent prays that the said Reuben Ray may be apprehended and held to answer said complaint and dealt with as law and justice may require.

PATRICK KIELY.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 9th day of March, A. D., 1895.

WILLIAM A. CODDINGTON.

With this in hand Chief Grant started out to find Reuben, and the first place he looked for him was in Babbit's pool room, swapping stories with his dusky hued friends.

"I want you,"—said the Chief.

"All right, sah," replied Reuben.

And so they marched to the tribunal of justice.

After hearing what he was charged with and wondering what he had done to violate "An ordinance relating to the morals, peace and good order of the city of Plainfield," Reuben pleaded guilty. The Judge suspended sentence on the promise of Reuben not to run his cart on the sidewalk any more.

Reuben told a Press reporter afterward that he never sassed Chief Grant, as was told the Judge, when he suggested to him on various occasions that the roadway was the proper place for his cart; he only just smiled at him.

So ended a case which at first blush threatened to be a warfare between Plainfield and Uncle Sam, as it was threatened that the postal authorities would defend Reuben on the claim that every public thoroughfare is a mail route and that he often had to take the sidewalk because he could n't push the cart through the deep mud or snow.

Reuben evidently believes that where there is a will there is a way, for this afternoon he carried the mail on the sidewalk the same as ever. However, he disregarded the three wheel cart, and instead hired another man, with whom he divided the pouches and between them they walked on the sidewalk and observed the laws besides. Reuben gently hums this afternoon the song, "You Can't Fool Me, Charley."

PLAINFIELD CHAMPION.

Amid Much Excitement She Captures the Watchung League Victory.

The Plainfield Bowling Club met the Bound Brooks at Somerville last evening and rolled off the tie in the Watchung League. The first half they lost, but in the second they caught up in great style, and finished 3 points ahead. When the boys returned at 11:30 they made the town merry with their cheers. The score:

FIRST HALF.

P. B. C.		BOUND BROOK.
VanEmburgh	162	Hastings	168
Maltby	166	Watt	173
Wilbur	122	Sebring	169
VanAlstyne	134	Algaire	175
Vail	130	Smith	152
	752		797

BY FRAMES:

Plainfield......65 112 208 284 361 413 480 586 669 752
Bound Brook..78 160 226 310 386 483 575 655 712 797

SECOND HALF.

P. B. C.		BOUND BROOK.
VanEmburgh	156	Hastings	130
Maltby	146	Watt	137
Wilbur	129	Sebring	138
VanAlstyne	158	Algaire	139
Petrie	160	Smith	162
	749		706

BY FRAMES:

Plainfield......[illegible]
Bound Brook..[illegible]

Totals—Plainfield, 1501; Bound Brook, 1503.

Leroy J. Ellis of Fanwood has patented a fastener for stretchers.

PRESIDENT M'LAUGHLIN.

First Baptist Endeavorers Organize for Another Year.

The annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist Church was held last evening in the lecture room of the church.

President G. F. Brown presided and after the devotional exercises the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read, also those of the chairmen of the different committees. They all showed steady progress along the different lines of work, and the society is in a far better condition spiritually than ever before.

Officers for the coming year were then elected as follows:

President—John G. McLaughlin.
Vice-president—G. H. Batchelor.
Secretary—J. Henry Crane.
Recording - secretary — Miss Emily Coriell.
Treasurer—Miss Laura J. Runyon.

The following were also elected chairmen of the several committees:

Lookout—G. F. Brown.
Devotional—Miss Alice G. Woodland.
Social—Miss Grace Yerkes.
Music—Miss Florence Marsh.
Missionary—William P. Spangenberg.
Welcome and Press—R. W. Barnes.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes, the pastor, made a few excellent remarks, giving the young people valuable suggestions and advice. Remarks were also made by the retiring and incoming presidents which were very interesting.

A year of active work has been planned by the society and they hope to accomplish much in the Master's service.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. D. L. Smalley of North Plainfield is a sufferer with the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Firman Long's daughter, Mildred, is a sufferer from illness.

Edgar L. Serrell of Plainfield avenue is suffering from an attack of the grip.

Mrs. M. Pangborn of Newark is the guest of Mrs. Albert Hedden of Park avenue.

Mrs. John French of West Seventh street is improving from her recent illness.

Isaac L. Miller of Watchung avenue is able to be out again, after a severe attack of the grip.

Miss Clara Long of Park avenue is entertaining her cousin, Miss Lizzie Long of Somerville.

Dr. Maloney of Amesbury, Mass., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McArdell of West Front street.

Veteran Baggage-Master Tom Jones goes on duty again Monday after an illness of several days.

Miss Bessie K. Leigh of Clinton, who has many warm friends in Plainfield, was married March 7 to Robert B. Ellenberg.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashley Grace Tuesday. Mrs. Grace was Miss Virginia Randolph of this city.

F. B. Stevens of South avenue has leased a flat in the Hart building over Moy's drug store, where he will move April 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus French returned yesterday from a two-months pleasure trip through Mississippi and Florida.

I. Winthrop Travell, principal of the High School, was out for the first time yesterday, after a prolonged attack of pneumonia.

J. W. Van Sickle, the North Avenue butcher, who has been very ill at his home on East Third street, is steadily improving.

A. S. Patterson, who went 12 days ago to Hot Springs, N. C., on crutches with rheumatism, has improved so that now he can walk without even a cane.

Dr. H. G. Stephenson has recovered from the grip so as to be able to be about the house. Dr. Stephenson is nearly 90 years of age, and this is the third time he has been afflicted with the grip.

Rutgers College on Tuesday conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity on Rev. Edward Griffin Read, pastor of the Second Reformed Church of Somerville. Mr. Read has been a successful pastor there for the past thirteen years.

Mrs. E. Green and her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Oundy of Johnston avenue, expect to sail Saturday, March 23, by the Cunard line for Liverpool, where Mrs. Green has her home. Mrs. Oundy will be absent three months. Her two children will accompany her.

Rev. W. E. Honeyman of Somerset street has leased the house formerly occupied by William H. Shotwell on Emily street, where he will move about March 15. The house which Mr. Honeyman now occupies, after some alterations will be converted into an undertaking establishment by Henry DeMott.

Craig Place Euchre Party.

A full-dress euchre party was given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Church of Craig place to a large number of their friends. It was a delightful affair.

Mrs. S. W. Clark won the feminine prize, a cut-glass bonbonniere; and Miss French the second, a silver belt buckle.

For the men J. Fred MacDonald captured first prize, a card case made of lizard skin; and L. M. French second, also a card case.

Among those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred MacDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Miss Bird, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French, Miss French, Mr. Douglass, the Misses Blinch, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Edward VanWinkle, Dr. and Mrs. Thiers, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ulrich, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Demarest, Miss Fulgraven.

Refreshments were daintily served during the evening.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 10,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Horsley Barber Grove and Front sts
G W Y Moy 6th and Park avenue
Frank Bowley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville
J B Guttridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 4th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackerman, Mrs. J. E.	712 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	48 Grove st
Adams E C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Son	120 North av
Andrews F E	428 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 4th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, P W Dr	Dunellen
Boone C W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 9th st
Beerbower, J B	Park av and 3d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	123 E 5th st
Blair A C	149 North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	346 Park av
Board of Education	6th st and Arlington av
Booth, B H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	612 Central av
Central Times	102 E Front st
Clark, B B	121 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	655 North av
Gleeson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
CONSTITUTIONALIST Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	320 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	18 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, E A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, B F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
DAILY PRESS	106 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, E M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	428 W 9th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	2d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	87 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	82 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	428 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1012 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do do	327 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	6th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	139 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 6th st
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	708 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	161 North av
Howell B O	191 North av
Holmes E H	208 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	30 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	220 Park av
Ivins D C	311 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	212 W Front st
Kaufman W T	540 W 7th st
Keely & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W N	110 Jackson av
Lowrie H H, Dr	512 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L M	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	127 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Mallinson A D	305 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	188 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	108 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James E	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W Y	Park av and 6th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	619 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	737 Watchung av
Murray J W	313 W 4th st
Music Hall	499
Myers, J K	120 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Penton T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	154 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	S 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	104 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	626 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	143 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	37 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	69 Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	402 W 5th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, D W	329 W 3d st
Rooms, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	402 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	416 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	429 Park av near Fifth st
Runkle, H. G	221 5th st
Runyon, Chas W	169 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	95 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	635 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, R J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	27 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
Streuli, H A	1306 Hillside av
Stevens F R	703 South av
Stevens Geo O	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	145 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	10 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	309 W 2d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Tichenor, Jas A	223 Madison av
Titsworth, Jos M	418 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr F E	223 La Grande av
[illegible]	[illegible]
Tracy, J Evarts	480 6th st
Tunison W J	547 Watchung av
Tweedy, O. B.	125 Crescent av
Ulrich & [illegible]	206 W Front st
Union Beef Co	348 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	139 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	122 North av
Wadsworth, W S	438 6th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	212 3rd Place
Wolfman, E	609 West Seventh st
Wienberg, J F	W 6th st., near Grant ave
Wierts Max	344 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	30c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	35c
Bay Shore N Y	70c	Keyport N J	50c
Bayville N Y	60c	Kingston N J	35c
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
Blissville N Y	45c	Leonia N J	45c
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	50c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	60c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	60c
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	40c
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	50c
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	35c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	35c
Chatham N J	35c	Morristown N J	40c
Closter N J	45c	Newark N J	25c
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	25c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	35c
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	35c
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	45c
Eatontown N J	60c	Passaic N J	35c
Elizabeth N J	25c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	35c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	25c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	50c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	60c
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	35c
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	35c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	35c
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	35c
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	15c
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	35c
Glen Cove N Y	60c	Yonkers N Y	60c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	50c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

—A district meeting of the Knights of Pythias will be held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge next Friday evening, at which Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath of Jersey City and several other grand lodge officers, will be present.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP

THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,

Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware, blacksmiths' supplies, etc. sole agents for Union county.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 113 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

FOR MALARIA.
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1895, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 146, or left at Williams' shoe store, No. 147 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. jly29tf

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.

OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Offic cor. Front St. and Park Av.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security. Mar30tf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST. 3-18-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
40 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N J.
mch20tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 206 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. ap4y

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. f17yl

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.

TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.

Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and your work always gives satisfaction.

Kegs of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODDINGTON.
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—jeel

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 153, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIERS,
Dentist,
[illegible] Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—je4tf

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
(Successor to T. J. Carey,)
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—[illegible] W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box [illegible]. Piano moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 30½ W. Front street, to 241 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Yeas experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 2 doors above Peace street

MR. JOHN K. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No, 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 8. 11 11-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. [illegible]

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

PARTICULAR MENTION.

C. S. VanWinkle is in town, much improved in health.

A. S. Patterson and family are expected home Saturday.

J. H. McVey leaves town this week for Albany to be gone three days.

Mrs. Mary Disborough of East Front street has returned from a visit in New York.

Miss Mary Wood of Summit is visiting Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Hazell of Westervelt avenue.

Mrs. W. H. Mountford of Somerset street, who was seriously ill with bronchitis, is now improving.

Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw of 82 Duer street enjoyed a visit Sunday from her son Robert and wife, of Newark.

Borough Councilman Joseph Howell who has been very ill with equinancy, will be able to be out in a few days.

Miss Jessie Utter will preside at the organ at the First Presbyterian Church in the absence of W. E. MacClymont.

Mrs. D. M. Demarest of Crescent avenue has been summoned to Millstone by the dangerous illness of her sister, Mrs. M. D. Brower.

Chief Marshal Pangborn of the Borough is suffering with a severe attack of neuralgia. Marshal Van Horn is on duty in his place.

C. W. Bolby of Netherwood avenue will move his family to Clinton, where he will embark in the piano business under the firm name of Bolby & Co.

Horace J. Martin has traded his property on Jackson avenue for a very desirable place on Fairview avenue, just east of Watchung avenue, and will move there.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Hallett of New Market have the sympathy of friends and neighbors in the loss of their little daughter, who died Saturday morning of diabetes.

Mrs. H. O. Campbell, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia at her home on Netherwood avenue, is slowly improving under the careful treatment of Dr. O. L. Jenkins.

Miss Bankhead, who has been spending the past week with Mrs. Charles Leffies of La Grande avenue, Netherwood, returned to her home in New York city Monday.

Eugene O'Reilly has returned from the Post-Graduate College, New York, where a second operation was performed on his left arm. He is feeling very much better and gaining rapidly.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck will move into his new house about April 1. Officer Evans of the Central Division of the Salvation Army will occupy the house vacated by Mr. Schenck.

Wm. H. Bohl of Somerset street has sold the house which he is building on Johnston avenue to Z. Pierson of Watchung avenue. Mr. Bohl expects to have the house completed by April 1.

M. K. Van Ness of East Front street who has been very ill for the past three weeks with pneumonia, has so far recovered as to be able to sit up in bed. He is very weak as yet but is now on the road to recovery.

Charles Kelderling, an active member of Plainfield Council Order of Chosen Friends, has already proved his right to one of the beautiful gold emblems of the order by securing five members before the charter closes.

The death occurred in Manasquan, March 5, of Mrs. Martha Cox, widow of Capt. Charles Cox, in the seventy-ninth year of her age. She leaves a daughter, who was Mrs. Harriet Stewart of East Sixth street, for years soprano singer in Trinity Reformed Church, and who is now wife of Editor Frank W. Baldwin of the Orange Chronicle.

When a Plainfield newspaper man begins to write Asbury Park personals he feels that the backbone of Winter is broken and Spring is at hand. Here, therefore, is a harbinger: Geo. W. DeMeza, the rising young lawyer, is planning for a vacation at Plainfield's popular shore resort. He has earned a rest, by close application to hard work; and early in the season he and his fast trotter are likely to be a feature of seaside life at the lively Park.

—The excellent music at the reception of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. MacClymont was furnished by A. G. Carpenter of this city.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

HIRAM HORNISH DEAD.

The Veteran Nurse Found Lifeless in His Rooms on North Avenue.

Hiram Hornish, the veteran nurse, was found dead in his rooms on North avenue at 7:35 p. m. yesterday. T. S. Armstrong called in to see him and found him lifeless on a couch. The body was still warm. M. C. Dobbins had taken him his dinner at noon, which he ate heartily. Death resulted from Bright's disease. Decedent was born in Pennsylvania 72 years ago.

BY THE WAY.

—Pussy willows are purring.

—The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company have removed from 149 Park avenue to 132 North avenue.

—Fred Smith of Berkley avenue, Netherwood, is improving his house by the addition of a large veranda.

—A. A. Dyett's house on Belvidere avenue is being handsomely decorated and papered by Woolston & Buckle.

—The proprietor of the Arlington Hotel on Somerset street is making extensive alterations, preparatory to the Spring influx of boarders.

—Henry Willimeyer, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, has placed a faucet in front of his place, where drivers may water their horses.

—VanEmburgh & Son, the enterprising West Front street dry-goods merchants, are having a handsome gilt sign lettered on their plate-glass front by Artist Theo. Vroom.

—The beautiful pen and ink drawing by Miss Alice E. Loomis, which has been on exhibition in Garret Q. Packer's window, has been purchased by a New York person who admires fine penwork.

—The Grocers Association are already making arrangements for their annual excursion which will no doubt be to Boynton Beach. Twenty-five additional cars have been secured to accommodate those who will go.

—The youths who make a practice of spinning their tops on the concrete walk in front of the Babcock Building, may some day come to grief by smashing one of the large plate glass windows that adorn the building.

—The foundry men, pattern-makers and laborers employed in the Scott Press Works have accepted a small reduction in wages paid them. The reduction was graduated according to the amount received, no uniform reduction being made.

—Woodland avenue from South avenue to Ravine road, is in such a dangerous condition caused by the depressions in the road, that the residents of that avenue have placed stakes with a red flag attached, to warn people who have occasion to drive through that thoroughfare where the dangerous spots are.

Makes Tunes With Bullets.

Here is a story from New Orleans that must be taken as it stands. We do not vouch for the truth of it.

"Musical shots," says the tale, "are the latest among the sensations of New Orleans. A sharpshooter of the name of Pardon fires at the metal bars of a set of bells. The bullet, in striking the bar, sound a musical note, and the shots follow each other in such rapid succession and with such accuracy that the marksman is able to shoot any tune that may be desired."

The only thing lacking in this story is some account of Pardon's ability, which we presume he must possess, to shoot chords with ordinary birdshot.—Harper's Young People.

Routed the Fleas.

A storekeeper had a pet dog which was vainly trying to dislodge a flea, when an accommodating clerk took a curry comb from a box on the shelf and combed the dog with it to his great satisfaction. Then the clerk laid the comb back in the box and went to another part of the store. But the dog had taken careful note of where the comb was put, and, after some effort managed to climb up where it was. Taking hold of it with his teeth he dragged it out of the box and let it drop on the floor. Getting down himself he carried it to his place by the stove. Then placing it carefully in the right position he rolled over and over on it to his heart's content, wriggling and twisting all manner of ways the while so as to insure himself a good scratching.

Passing fashions have the same function in the reading of the general public as pickles and Russian sideboard dishes in the dining room. They stimulate an artificial appetite where none exists naturally. But after all it is better to eat because you have had caviare than not to eat at all.

An evenly balanced horse trade is reported from Maine. Two farmers met and after a long talk one exchanged a horse for a cow owned by the other. Each took his new property home, and on the following morning both animals were dead.

"Perhaps you would not think so but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. New York is one of the healthiest places on the Atlantic coast and yet there are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but we will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will relieve the lungs aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

"HELP!"

A WOMAN'S DESPAIRING CRY.

It is Heard. A Prominent Actress Escapes Great Danger.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

How startling is a woman's cry for help!

"What can I do? Where shall I go?" She knows not. This cry goes out today from every city, town, and hamlet in this country.

It comes from women who are suffering tortures of body and mind from some form of female complaint. Many, through natural modesty, do not consult physicians, for many dread their examinations. They know not where to seek for help.

This alarming condition of things is simply wrong. The peculiar ailments of women are curable, and in most cases very speedily. Lydia E. Pinkham's genius and liberality have given to every woman a sure and consistent means of relief.

No woman should suffer when she can obtain free advice. She can state her case fully to Mrs. Pinkham, woman to woman, without reserve, and the answer will come from one of her own sex. Be one of the vast army of women who write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and preserve your health. "Only a woman can understand a woman's ills."

A prominent actress, in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham, says:—

" . . . You cannot imagine the fearful condition I was in when I first wrote to you. I was simply of no use to myself or any one else. I had worked hard, and my nervous system was shattered from womb trouble and travelling constantly. I ran the gauntlet of doctors' theories, till my health and money were rapidly vanishing. . . . I'm all right now, and am gaining flesh daily. I follow your advice faithfully in everything. Thank you ten thousand times for what your knowledge and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me."

NEVER STUDIED LAW.

But He Was Cute Enough to Get the Best of Lawyer Runyon.

Frederick Endress, the Liberty street meat market man, is nothing if not ingenious. Some time ago a jury in Justice Newcorn's Court decided that he would have to pay Jacob Geigher $200 for two fingers which were lost while operating a sausage machine in his market. The $200 judgment was secured mainly through the efforts of Lawyer Harry C Runyon, who represented Geigher, and was to receive recompense when the judgment was paid.

But Endress settled for about $50 and Lawyer Runyon can only whistle for his pay, for Geigher is on his way to the Fatherland where he will reside in the future. Mr Runyon will have to settle the court costs. It came about in this way.

As soon as the justice jury returned a verdict for $200, Lawyer DeMeza, who defended Endress's case, appealed to the county court. Along about this time Geigher began to feel homesick and longed to get back to the land of his birth. Endress heard of this and approached Geigher with the offer to pay his fare to Germany if he would leave and not press the judgment for $200. This offer found much favor in the mind of the eight fingered man, and he accepted it. A few days after Geigher was on the briny deep so blue, Endress was laughing in his sleeve at having settled a $200 obligation for about $50, and Lawyer Runyon was confronted with the condition of settling court costs and donating gratis his services to the eight fingered Dutchman.

Soda at 30 Degrees.

Henry J. Fleischhauer, the East Front street druggist, has a soda fountain in his store which is a beauty. It was made according to his own special plans and he claims that he can maintain an average temperature of 30 degrees on every glass of soda drawn.

Those living in the vicinity will appreciate the efforts of Mr. Fleischhauer to please them, and his well-lighted store, with a complete stock of everything in the drug business makes it a very attractive place for East siders, as well as the general public.

Means More Trains for Plainfield.

It is reported that Dunellen will soon be made a terminal for all trains now laying over at Roselle.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

From The Press of March 13.

Borough election will take place in April.

Mrs. Bowlby's two children are ill with whooping cough.

Miss Anna Melford of New Market was in town yesterday.

Mrs. John Hunt, who has been very ill, is slowly improving.

J. Barber of Fanwood was the guest of John Smalley Sunday.

Miss Maud Benton spent yesterday in Plainfield with friends.

Mrs. Henry Cora of New York is visiting friends in West Dunellen.

John Wynuski of Plainfield spent last evening with friends in Dunellen.

Mrs. Charles Jennings spent yesterday with Mrs. Charles Barry of Plainfield.

Much sickness among children is prevalent in the borough at the present time.

Misses Lillian and Celia Staats spent Sunday with the Misses Uhdal at Netherwood.

Our merchants should look out for newcomers, as on April 1 a number will move to town.

Miss Charlotte Williams returned last night, after spending several days with relatives at Middlesex, N. Y.

Miss Charlotte Baily of Williamsport, Pa., is being pleasantly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carpenter.

The members of the Dunellen Gun Club will hold their monthly practice shoot at targets March 13 at 1 p. m. sharp.

Jesse Dalrymple returned yesterday from Jersey City, where he has been visiting his daughter Mrs. J. B. Sproul.

Miss Lizzie Abel of Jersey City returned to her home yesterday, after spending several days with Mrs. Wm. Shiveley.

Miss Lizzie Staats of Farmingdale Ill., is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Conover of West Dunellen.

A "Calico Hop" is to be given some time this month at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Goldson Smalley at Greenbrook.

Mrs. W. A. Rogers, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Titsworth, returned yesterday to her home in Waterville, Me.

The Central Railroad Company have started to fill in on the Todd lot recently purchased by them. The site will eventually be used for a station.

Chris McDonnell operator for the Tide Water Pipe Line, has been removed from Dunellen to Bedminster. C. A. Harrison of Williamsport has taken McDonnell's place.

Funeral services were held yesterday over the remains of Grace Ward Hallett, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. James Hallett of New Market. The deceased was two years and nine months of age. Interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

Yesterday was a great day at New Market. Spring election caused considerable work on both sides. The principal bone of contention was the office of Town Committeeman. Party vote was not taken into consideration. Joseph Field, Democrat, was elected by about 40 majority. The Republican candidate was John Sebring.

OBITUARY.

Gustavus William Faber.

Gustavus William Faber, who died suddenly at his home, 420 West Twentieth street, Saturday, was one of New York's oldest merchants. He was born in Hamburg, Germany, in 1823. Coming to the United States at the age of fifteen, his first business connection was with Faber & Bierwirth, foreign commission merchants. In 1848, upon the death of his father, he, with his brother, A. E. Faber of Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, continued the business, which is at 26 Beaver street. Up to the last few years he was much sought after as an administrator of estates. He was father of A. E. Faber, Jr., of Mercer avenue.

He was for many years president of the German Widows and Orphans Society, and senior warden of St. Clement's Church. It was while attending a vestry meeting that he was stricken with apoplexy, which caused his death. In 1853 he married Miss Angelina Barraclough, daughter of the late Alonzo Cushman. His widow, three sons and three daughters survive him.

—Notice is hereby given to the legal voters of the township of Westfield, in the county of Union, that the annual school meeting for the election of members of the Board of Education will be held at the Lincoln School building, on Tuesday evening, March 19, 1895, at 8 o'clock. S. W. Reeves, District Clerk.

Dated this 5th day of March, 1896.

A GREAT MEDICINE.

Cod-liver Oil is useful beyond any praise it has ever won, and yet few are willing or can take it in its natural state. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil is not offensive; it is almost palatable.

Children like it. It is Cod-liver Oil made more effectual, and combined with the Hypophosphites its strengthening and flesh-forming powers are largely increased.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!
Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
United Hospital and Dispensary,
Boston, Mass.
Allen C. Smith, Pres.

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

CARPETS

Made and Laid With Paper Without Charge

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.

are making and laying Carpets with paper without charge, which is a saving of 15c per yd.

Parties about going to housekeeping will find no larger stock of Parlor Suits and Bedroom Suits to select from at such low prices. All of the latest Spring styles of Bedroom Suits of the Hall & Lyon manufacture, and Parlor Suits of all the latest manufactures and of the latest designs and coverings.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

All other goods suitable to furnish a house with in our line are sold at the lowest prices. Terms easy; one dollar per week.

The Portland Range!

The Court of Errors has just unanimously affirmed the opinion of the lower courts that no other dealer can take any range and put the name Portland on it and try to hoodwink the people that they are selling the original Portland Range, when such is not the case. 7,000 of these ranges now in use and not one complaint. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Goods delivered to all parts of the State free of charge.

Storing Furniture

Our new building just erected at 88, 90, 92 Bank street, seems to be the only building in the State to store furniture; the way it is being filled up. Furniture moved with vans at reasonable rates in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J

UNUSUAL.

Great reductions, "half price sales," and "goods at cost," usually mean undesirable things that must fairly be kicked out, if they are to go out.

This week we offer two brilliant exceptions—

1st—$12 and $15 Ulsters at $7.90.

2d—$15 and $20 Overcoats at $10.90.

We make prices this week that will move them like feathers before a March wind.

WERNER'S, 206 West Front St.

MARRYING TITLES.

AN UNLUCKY GAME, FASCINATING TO AMERICANS.

The Gould Wedding Furnishes a Text for the Rev. Madison C. Peters. He Indulges in Some Very Plain and Emphatic Statements.

The Rev. Madison C. Peters, who began his New York career in September, has kept things in a stew ever since. He came from Philadelphia, where he kept things in a stew after a milder, more Quakerish fashion.

He began by refusing to swear and kiss the book in the registration booth. He upheld the theaters in a convention of clergymen. He attacked Dean Hoffman, accusing him of maintaining a lot of tumbledown shanties. He assaulted the parochial system of the Catholic church as a fostering of ignorance. He accused the brewers of importing cocculus indicus for use in adulterating beer.

He came originally from the Lehigh Valley and his first pastorate was in Illinois, about twelve years ago. He is now a few months past 35 years old.

The undoing of Samson, the strong man, as the result of his marriage with Delilah, the daughter of the Philistines, was the subject of the Rev. Peters' sermon recently.

It was an international marriage, the preacher said, and so was bound to turn out badly. He read the fourteenth chapter of Judges, and then made some slashing comments on the Castellane-Gould nuptials. Mr. Peters said:

"The wealth of this nation is in the hands of a few and these few are marrying off their daughters to titled imbeciles.

"This is the most successful way of making a nation poor. A marriage for money or title is a humiliation to the dust, a hollow mockery that blushes to heaven. American men as a rule marry for love—royal scoundrels always for money. With them Cupid has changed his name to Cupidity.

"There is no record of an international marriage where hard cash was the consideration for empty titles that did not end unhappily. Yet ambitious fathers and managing mothers and heartless daughters are constantly playing the same unlucky game.

"Two million dollars for a title! The outward legal form in such a matter may seal the lips of criticism. But a marriage it is not. As the $2,000,000 to be settled on the little count are contingent on his good behavior, there is very little likelihood of the money ever getting out of the Gould family.

"So common is the mercantile estimate of marriage becoming that I should not be surprised to see the hymeneal market lists chronicled in the newspapers with the prices current of the Stock Exchange. Marriage, instead of being God's holiest institution, a union on equal terms, a free and glad surrender of the heart, is becoming so profaned and reproached that it makes one shudder to think of it.

"We despise the man who takes a bribe. We put stripes on him. What shall we say of these titled adventurers who offer themselves in marriage to the highest American bidder? What shall we say of the young women who turn what is noble and pure and American away and sell themselves willing victims to be offered on the altars of European profligacy.

"Our boast is that we are democratic. The fact is we are the most snobbish and the most slavish worshipers of rank of any nation in the world. It is seldom that a titled fortune hunter fails in his suit for an American woman's hand. There is such a bewitching charm in the empty titles we affect to despise that women will feign to love an effete nobleman who would if untitled be positively repulsive.

"Such a marriage is far from respectable. It may take place in high society, but it is high society turned low. The pagan pomp and vulgar show with which it may be celebrated only furnish the mask that covers the mockery—the mockery which invariably taunts the misery in the end."

A MAMMOTH AUGER.

Used to Clear the Track Through Western Snowdrifts.

A rotary snowplow can be simply described as an elongated box car carrying a windmill on the front end. This wheel is about ten feet in diameter and fitted on its face with knives or fans set at an angle like the fans of a windmill. The backs of these knives are turned over in the form of a trough, slightly curved, and as the snow slides in through the cutter it is carried up and thrown from an opening just back and above the upper rim of the wheel. Any one who has seen a blower pumping air can understand the working of the rotary. They both operate on the same principle. In the latter snow instead of air is drawn backward between the jaws and projected through the funnel. When feeling well and turned against work to its liking, a steam rotary picks up the offending snow and hurls it into the next township.

The rotary carries its own operating plant, but is propelled by a locomotive coupled on behind. By means of a whistle the man who handles the fan signals the engineer when to back or fill or break away. The combination of noises which greet the visitor boxed up inside the rotary are something appalling. An earthquake on wheels would be a mild comparison. There is a hiss of steam, shrieking of whistles and the rumble and rattle of heavy machinery which causes the entire fabric to tremble and dance on the rails. Then as the whirling knives carve their way foot by foot into the frozen drifts there comes a horrible crunching, crumbling sound, as if some strong jawed man somewhere in the bin was eating dry toast with his mouth open. Small rocks click once as they strike the metal and then go whizzing through the funnel and strike the upper bank before the snow in a graceful arch of dissolving views can cover half the distance

Ill Luck.

Friend (encouragingly)—Don't be so downhearted over such a simple little ailment; why you'll be well in no time.

Cholly (mournfully)—Yaas, I know that, but isn't it just my beastly luck, don't you know, to be laid up with such a vulgar disease as the mumps. Fancy the mumps when appendicitis is the proper thing!

Her Devotions.

"Do you go to church to hear the sermon or the music, Maude?"

"I go for the hims," said Maude.

TRIP OF PAUL JONES.

HE STARTED AROUND THE WORLD WITHOUT A CENT.

Returns With $5,000. Various Expedients He Resorted to in His Endeavors [illegible] for a Spy.

Paul Jones, genius and globe trotter, landed in New York the other day, having completed a circuit of the world from Boston.

It will be remembered that this Paul Jones, as he calls himself, made a sensation last February by the odd means he took to get money enough to start on his journey. He was in New York for several days shortly after his release from several Massachusetts jails. He was not a particular success in New York, but outside he did very well, and made money rapidly. In his journey around the world he has succeeded in adding to his pile rather than lowering it, and as he turns up in Boston with $5,000 in hand, he will have another $5,000, the aggregate of the wagers made on the success of his exploit.

Now that he has practically won the identity of Jones is disclosed. His name is E. C. Pfeiffer and he is a well known Harvard man. He was at one time captain of the Harvard crew and was a member of the class of '89. He rowed in the freshman crew against the Columbia freshmen and the next year pulled No. 6 in the 'Varsity against Yale. He was captain in his senior year. He is an athlete, stands six feet high and describes himself as "a sure winner."

Here is his own story of his trip around the world and of the way he came to make it, as he told it to me the other day.

"When I left Harvard I joined the Boston Athletic club. I was sitting in the club one evening with a group of men when the expense connected with a trip around the world became the topic. Two Americans had just made the trip and their expenses had amounted to $8,000 apiece. I expressed the opinion that a man ought to be able to start on such a trip with nothing and make money.

"One of the party asked me if I could do as much. I said I thought I could. Then several wagers were made that I couldn't do it. In all $5,000 was staked, and the agreement was that I was to be put into a room, my clothes taken from me, and in one year I was to travel around the world and make, including my expenses, $5,000. One day in February, 1890, I was put into a room. There was nothing in the room. My clothes were taken from me.

"Several newspaper men heard of this and came to the room. They knocked for admittance. I said they could come in, but I must charge them a cent apiece. They paid their cents. A committee was in the room to see that the start was fair and according to agreement.

"I paid one of my visitors a cent to buy me a paper.

"With the paper I made as much of a suit of clothes as possible. At any rate it enabled me to talk more freely. Other persons kept coming and the men who had paid a cent to come in paid me ten cents to get their original cents back. They thought there might be luck in them. In this way I got a dollar or so, and sent out and bought some manilla paper. With this I made a suit of clothes. I stuck it together with gum, for which I paid a cent.

"Then I went to a clothier, told him about my plans, and asked him if he had a proposition to make. He offered to let me have a suit of clothes if I would exhibit myself in his shop for a day. I accepted. The newspapers wrote me up and I soon found that I could make money by exhibiting myself.

"I was hired by proprietors of various kinds of business to work for them. Some paid me $25 a day for three days. I have got as much as $200 a week. I traveled over a great part of the United States. I exhibited my paper suit everywhere. I rode on bicycles and was paid for it by the manufacturers. I sailed for Liverpool on the Umbria and sold some of my photographs on board.

"I was introduced to the representative of an English banking syndicate, who took a liking to me and hired me as interpreter for a trip through Germany. We went to Hamburg, spending one week, thence to Berlin for three days, thence to Leipsic, and finally to Inspruck, where we remained one day. Here we parted and I dropped into Switzerland."

Only a short time was spent in Switzerland and the round the world tramp was soon in Naples. Here he went on shipboard and plunged into the Mediterranean. One Thanksgiving day he was puffing down the Suez canal, and ate his dinner in full view of a crowd of fleet footed Arabs that ran along by the side of the boat.

In Japan he had an experience that for a time ruined his prospects. He reached that country during the New Year's festivities, which last a week, and as a traveler has to use a passport was hampered by the failure to get the signature of the necessary officials. He supplied by American nerve the Japanese signature, but at Kioto was held under suspicion as a spy against the government. As good fortune would have it, he encountered at the right instant a Japanese, now an official, who had been educated in Boston, and he straightway released him from his predicament.

Of his trip, as almost completed, Jones says:

"On my trip I have found men of all nationalities who have seen printed in their native tongue some account of my undertaking. I have found that my attempt to become an outcast, a wanderer on the face of the earth, in an endeavor to escape from the blandishments of modern civilization has been a failure, for everywhere, in varied languages and with an infinitude of accent, I heard the children sing 'Ta-ra-ra, boom-de-aye,' and the old folks in all hours of the day and night exercising their voices with the strains of 'After the Ball.'"

A Close Similarity.

Hojack (reading)—The Emperor of China has ordered the Peking bankers to advance him the money he needs or lose their heads.

Tomdik—That sounds like an American invitation to officeholders to make voluntary campaign contributions.—Puck.

An Eye to Business.

Milligan—If I be afther leaving security equal ter what I take away, will yez thrust me till nixt wake?

Sands (the grocer)—Certainly!

Milligan—Well, thin, sell me two av thim hams, an' kape wan av thim till I see yez agin.—Puck.

NEBRASKA'S PLIGHT.

FAILURE OF CROPS RENDER THE PEOPLE DESTITUTE.

The Feeble Condition of Horses and Men Caused By Lack of Food Makes Work Impossible. A Pitiable Plea For Help.

Nebraska, as a whole, is a good agricultural State. The eastern half of the State contains very rich, fertile soil and a prosperous class of people. The western part is as yet a poor section. Twenty years ago it was covered with a great growth of buffalo grass, which absorbed all the rain that fell and permitted the earth to receive no moisture. By various ways this buffalo grass has been removed and the land has been opened for farmers. Previous to this use it was a section devoted wholly to grazing, and great herds of cattle and horses roamed over it. The railway companies and the land speculators began booming the country, and thousands were attracted to it in search of a home which could be secured cheaply. In this way it was settled, and mushroom "cities" sprang up all over the former solitudes.

The experiment has not yet proved a failure, and there is hope that this section, under reasonable climatic influences may yet become rich and prosperous. But the census of 1890 showed that three-fourths of Nebraska's population live in the eastern half of the State.

The people in western Nebraska were prostrated by drought in 1890. Good crops followed in 1891, and fairly good crops in 1892. By the beginning of 1893 the farmers were in good spirits, and had begun to pay off mortgages and to plan for the future. But 1893 saw a partial failure of the crops, do to drought. The farmers did not lose heart, but used all their funds to put in their crop last Spring. Prospects were never better until the July drought set in. July 24 and 25 hot winds blew over this State and Iowa and over many other portions of the West. These hot wind, preceded and followed by drought, ruined Nebraska's crops. The ruin in the western part of the State was almost total. The eastern parts experienced the same conditions of weather, but little suffering has occurred on account of the many prosperous years before this.

The difference between these two sections—the eastern and the western—lies in the presence of a reserve in the east and a total lack of it in the west. The western farmers were left without any resources, and destitution and want were inevitable.

To show exactly how great is the need, the New York Times' correspondent had an interview a few days ago with J. H. Edmiston, State Oil Inspector, just appointed by Gov. Holcomb. Mr. Edmiston was the Chairman of the Populist State Central Committee in the last campaign, and was chiefly busied in keeping down the calamity howlers in his party and making a campaign on State issues alone. He lives at Eddyville, in Dawson County, in the western part of the State where there is some destitution.

He owns there a farm of over 1,000 acres, and is an intelligent, prosperous man. He said that last year his farm raised not a bushel of anything, although in a good year he could count on an income of $3,000 from it without any care on his part. He emphasized the great need of seed all over the western part of the State. To illustrate how great this need is he said that he had seven renters on his farm. As it is impossible for them to secure seed, he recently bought 1,000 bushels of seed wheat for the use of his renters. He was at once implored by dozens of farmers to secure a rental for them. Every owner was willing to abandon their own farms in order to lease one of his to secure the seed. Without the seed they could do nothing on their farms.

Mr. Edmiston said that he was sure there would be yet much distress and that many of the farms would not be tilled during the coming year because of the lack of seed and the feeble condition of the horses and their owners, who, exhausted by the long winter and little food, will be unfit for duty.

Pitiful letters of entreaty or thanks continue to come in. Here is one from a worthy family in Dundy County, the extreme southwestern part of the State. This family received some supplies from the Omaha Woman's Christian Temperance Union in December. This poor woman wrote:

"Dear ladies: The groceries you sent us are gone except the glass of jelly, which I am keeping for mother's birthday. How often we have said, 'God bless those ladies!' What comfort we took in what you sent us! We have no money to get anything. Will you help us? If you cannot send things to us free of transportation charges send us some money to get food with, and if all goes well and our crops are good, we will try and send the money back to you, so you can have it to help others. You have no idea how hard it is on us in this lonely country. Should we lose another crop we cannot stay, yet all we have is here and I want to pull through. I shall have two cows in the spring, which will help. My chickens are dying for the want of feed. You can travel for days and not find over six chickens on a farm. I could tell you much of the suffering in this country, but it would not do you any good, for you know how it is."

DEFIES THE BOYCOTT.

Hostilities Engendered by the Recent Brooklyn Trolley Strikes.

Mayor Schieren's administration of the duties of mayor of Brooklyn during the recent strike upon the street car lines has resulted in a boycott being placed upon his private business interests.

The Executive Association of engineers denounced Mr. Schieren for his attitude in the recent labor troubles and voted to boycott the leather belting manufactured by his concern. Resolutions to that effect were adopted.

The firm of Charles A. Schieren & Co. is one of the largest manufacturers of leather belting in this country.

Mr. Schieren expresses utter indifference to the boycott. His business, he said, would not be affected by it.

Proof Positive.

Stage Manager—The audience is calling for the author.

Manager—All right. Go out and announce that he is in the audience somewhere, but you don't know where.

Stage Manager—But, perhaps he isn't in the audience.

Manager—Don't be a fool! Who else would have started the call?

Somewhere in the West a woman has preached her husband's funeral sermon. Another case of the last word.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists
[illegible]
Over A MILLION Mothers, Misses, and Children, wear them.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, March 7, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

The following members were present, viz:

Director Hubbard and Freeholders Badgeley, Clark, Ehrlich, Halliday, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krause, Littell, Miller, Ogden, Roll, Swain, Tier, Westcott and Woodruff—16

Absent—Freeholder Morrell—1.

The minutes of the previous meeting (reading of bills excepted) were on motion approved as read.

No communications, memorials, petitions or reports of committees were presented to the Board.

NEW BUSINESS.

Freeholder Farrell presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to examine and report as to the advisability and probable cost of widening bridge over Grand street, in the city of Rahway.

Freeholder Farrell, in a few remarks, explained the need and object of his resolution, after which, on motion of Freeholder Roll, the resolution was unanimously adopted.

The Director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Farrell, Ehrlich, Ogden, Roll and Halliday.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read, and on motion ordered paid:

Bridges—Louis Quien $16 50, 21; Chas Parse 35; E Mudsell & Son 2 75; Wm T Kirk 20 29, Philip Feltman 14; Frederick Heyd 7 50; David Busch 20 83; Jas J Brennan 146.

Salaries—E M Wood $125; S Rusling Ryno 50.

Schools—B Holmes $200.

County Road Construction—Louis Quien $8, 13.

County Road Repairs—Jas L Badgley $1 90; Benj King 16 75; Jas W Fink $50 45 89.

Members' Pay—W H Swain $16; W B Hulskamper 28.

Committee Expenses—Thomas H Smith $10.

Jail—Henry J Schmidt $5 70; J W Hildebrandt & Co, 46 35; Michael Bender 66 86; Jas O Brokaw 14 77; E S E Newberry 45 60.

Public Buildings—Williams & Bassett $6; Hahne & Co, 2 49; Thos B Budd 13 48; Wm Henry 2 75; John C Blore 25; The Suburban Electric Co, 9 10, 5 86; Wm B Tucker, attorney, 144 55.

Publication—The Standard Publishing Concern 25.

Incidental—Phil E Tufts, P M, $5; Wm Howard 45 80; P Casey & Son 15

Court—Geo Kyte, Sheriff, $2 959 30; Edward A Vegnte 20 85; Louis Quien 18; Jas Ritchie 75; Wm Howard 2; Herbert W Knight 100; John Williams Crane 70; Lewis S Hyer 80; T F McCormick 391 67; F C Marsh 250; Henry J Schoppe 45; Isaac A Bunn 15, 84; Oliver Conlin 12 50, 70; Wm J Walsh 30; Wm H Burnett 30; John McNamara 25; Jas L Bodwell 30; Henry Smith 25; Wm H Sault 25; John H Sheridan 15; Samuel Morgan 25; Jas H White 35 75; Robert Walpole 38 50 John Seeland 25; F M Furman 4 56; Geo M MacDonald 3; Emil Wersinger 8 25; John Kennedy 80 cts, 7; Max Rappe 9 20.

Freeholder Miller moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, April 4, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

S RUSLING RYNO, Clerk.

—Adjt. George Wood will be present at the Salvation Army to conduct special meetings March 16, 17 and 18. All are invited to come and bring their friends. Several recruits will be made into soldiers during his visit. Monday night the 18th the meeting will be for the members only.

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, carrying good news of relief from pain.

Allcock's Porous Plaster stands at the head of all remedies for congestion in the chest, the first result of taking cold, and for all lameness and stiffness of joints or muscles.

"Just as Good as Allcock's." Not at all. No imitation approaches the genuine.

Allcock's Corn Shields, Allcock's Bunion Shields, Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills are free from injurious substances. They give universal satisfaction.

Fifty Dollars Given Away.

To talents of poultry, the most wonderful and valuable monthly is The Poultry Keeper. The publishers offer fifty dollars free. Send for sample copy free and see how. Any of the following back numbers worth a dollar but sent postpaid for only five cents each: Brooders Incubators, Appliances, Poultry Houses (illus) Aug. '89 Aug. '91. [illegible] Poultry Houses, April '87, Oct. '94 and July '91 (60 illus). Preserving eggs, Sep. '87. Turkeys, Mar. '92. Poultry diseases Nov. '87. How to Feed for Eggs, Oct. '92. All About Lice, Oct. '87, Dec. '91. [illegible] Sample free. Address [illegible] Parkesburg, Pa.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular weekly singing lesson of of the High School was led this morning by Mr. Alles.

The meeting of the P.H.S.A.A. will not be held this afternoon as previously announced as the committee is not quite ready with its report.

Captain Edwards's talk has aroused interest in military drill and there is much talk of a regular uniformed company in the High School. The idea seems to find great favor among the boys and it is to be hoped that it will succeed.

Mr. Travell has almost recovered from his attack of pneumonia and is expected back again next Monday.

The subjects for the Senior essays for March are as follows:

A Comparison of Taine's or Johnson's Sketch of Milton's Character with the sketch by Macaulay; The Story of Roland Graeme from Scott's Abbott; Modern Political Methods; Woman's Work and Woman's Wages; The Character of Confucius. They are due Monday, March 25

Ask Your Druggist for It.

Such strong proofs of the cures made by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice through newspaper investigations that it is now the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingraham, of Amsterdam, N. Y., states where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks of Athens, N. Y., who was suffering from kidney disease and ulceration of the stomach; after the second day, steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures, after all other treatments have failed.

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 5:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.

A. E. WHITE, Manager, Finderne, N. J.

1 9 tf

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 25 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania

6.57 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

8.34 p.m—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 45 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

[illegible]

For Rahway—[illegible]

[illegible]

Cocking Main.

A red hot ten-round cock fight took place last night at South Plainfield between birds owned by parties in this city and ones owned by Middlesex County sports. The birds were young and showed a good strain of gamey breeding. They finished royally and much money passed. The sports from this city got most of the money at the windup.

All Shocked.

The party given by Charles Scribner at his home on Pearl street last night was attended by 9 couples who made the affair a merry one with dancing. An electric battery from which all received a shock added a bit of novelty to the affair. During the progress of dancing refreshments were served. Naylor furnished the music.

Another New Order.

The second meeting of the Order of Chosen Friends since their organization was held last night, and five new members initiated, which now makes a total membership of 2[illegible] L Hopkins, Past Counsellor, J. J. Reed, Provisional Grand Secretary, and Mrs. J. J. Reed, Past Secretary, all of Jersey City, were present.

Prof. A. Wehner,

TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.

ALSO VOICE CULTURE.

Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.

References given and required.

Address letters to the office of this paper.

1 21 tf-o

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

[illegible]

EIGHT MINUTES OF THREE.

A DETECTIVE STORY

BY WEX CHINKLE.

[Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson and Bacheller.]

CHAPTER I.

On the 17th of March, 1878, Mr. Gustave Prineveau was shot and killed in his private conveyance while returning from a drive with his wife. It was about five o'clock in the afternoon, and the carriage at the time was between Sixty-sixth and Sixty-seventh streets on Fourth avenue, in New York.

Mr. Prineveau was seated on the left of his wife in the carriage, which was a two-seated phaeton, and was driven by their man, John Teedson, who sat on the seat in front of them. Mr. Prineveau, who was sixty-three, died almost instantly, and the post mortem, held the next morning at ten o'clock, showed that he had been killed by a pistol bullet that had entered his heart at the fifth intercostal space, glanced upward and severed the aorta. A small hole was found in his vest on the left side corresponding to the bullet.

The post-mortem examination was a long one. As it was impossible for either of the other occupants of the carriage to have got round to the left side of Mr. Prineveau, so as to have inflicted the wound without accomplishing an unprecedented feat, that would have been seen, and as there was no assignable motive for such an act, the whole purpose of the examination was directed to finding out what incentive some other person might have had to commit the deed.

The following facts were then elicited.

Mr. Prineveau had been married a little less than five years to a woman who, previous to that marriage, had been known as the widow of a South American merchant who had died while on a visit to Buenos Ayres. At the time of Mr. Prineveau's marriage he was reported to be very wealthy, having amassed a fortune in coal speculations in Pennsylvania and New York.

He, too, had been previously married, by which marriage there had been two sons, one of whom had died three years before the father, in California, and the other of whom was still living somewhere in Ohio. The only other relation that could be traced was a nephew, Jared Clarkson, about twenty-eight years old, who was a scapegrace, and had lived for several years upon the bounty of Mr. Prineveau, but whose [illegible] give very little information about the habits or antecedents of Clarkson, except that she had learned incidentally from her husband that he was a drunkard with a wife and two children, and, owing to his dissolute habits, had never been able to take care of himself or his family.

It was also learned that on the afternoon of the 14th of March Clarkson had been seen by the coachman hanging about the house, and the hall boy, who had been sent on an errand, encountered him on the corner and was there held in conversation by him, Clarkson asking him, among other things, if Mr. Prineveau did not take a drive usually in the afternoons.

These bits of testimony led to the police efforts to find Clarkson. Mr. Prineveau was buried in the Trinity cemetery on the 19th. His funeral was attended by many old New Yorkers, and public attention was turned to the efforts made by Mrs. Prineveau to discover the perpetrator of the crime.

CLARKSON WAS SEEN HANGING AROUND THE HOUSE.

On the 21st Clarkson's wife and children were found in a miserable lodging place in Varick street. But Clarkson had disappeared. His wife promptly acknowledged that he had come home late on the afternoon of the 17th, had hurriedly changed his clothes and gone out. She had not seen him or heard of him since. But she strenuously denied that he had committed a crime, and refused to be influenced by any of the damaging circumstances.

Here the affair threatened to end, as so many others of its kind have ended, in idle curiosity, police inefficiency and ultimate forgetfulness. But on the 23d Clarkson was discovered in hiding in Troy. He was brought here and lodged in the city prison, and then it became known to the public that the police had found in the rooms of Mrs. Clarkson in Varick street a small French revolver with five chambers, one of which was empty, and the bullets of this pistol corresponded in size with the one taken from the body of Mr. Prineveau.

CHAPTER II.

[illegible] concealed her face looked at me so searchingly and imploringly with her sad gray eyes that I started a little.

"O, sir!" she said, "bad as my husband may be, he is innocent of this, and he has two little children that he loves. You have come to save him. I feel it."

I patted her hand and tried to say something that was encouragingly noncommittal. "We shall see, we shall see. Things are often not as bad as they look. I am going to have a chat with him. In the meantime, save your strength. You are not friendless."

She paid no heed at all to what I said. She was looking at me with those gray eyes very much as if she saw something behind me, and hanging to my hand like a drowning person.

"Yes, yes!" she said, with a sob; "you will save him," and then she began to cry convulsively.

I had not the heart to tell her how hopeless it all looked. I wished that I had been spared this so that my judgment could come to the interview with the accused man unperturbed.

She made me go up and see her husband first. She would wait.

I found Clarkson to be the very antithesis of his wife. He was a large, muscular and slightly bloated fellow with a purplish face, the result of debauchery, but withal a rather handsome man or what would have been a handsome man in normal conditions. He sat on the edge of the iron bed when I entered the cell, his head between his hands, and he did not look up until I had spoken to him, and then it was with such a flabby despair that I felt repelled.

THE WARDEN TOLD ME WHO SHE WAS.

Here was one of those large vital natures that appear to have no internal resources. I could see in an instant why his life had been a failure. He was made up of unregulated appetites and sensibilities without volition enough to control them. Just the sort of man to do a desperate deed in the [illegible] without a motive be-

"Of course she does. She knows me, poor old sweetheart. She knows that, weak and worthless as I am, I never killed even an insect."

"POOR GIRL, POOR GIRL," HE SOBBED.

"She believes that I was sent to—to give you valuable assistance."

"Yes. She believes in a good God. You wouldn't think it, with such a husband as I am, would you? So did I, till He wound this mesh around me!"

"Tut, tut, man! Pull yourself together and let your reason work. Sit down there and answer my questions."

He wiped his eyes with his coat sleeve and sat down again, helplessly, on the edge of the bed.

"Now, you don't know where you were at four o'clock on the afternoon of March 17?"

"No. The last thing I remember was going down Vesey street toward the river."

"Where had you been?"

"I had been drinking on Sixth avenue at several places."

"And when you recovered your consciousness where were you?"

"In Troy."

"Humph! Had you ever been to Troy before?"

"No."

"Did you know anybody there?"

"No."

"Did you have the pistol with you that was found in your house?"

"No. I never carried a pistol in my life."

"Did not your wife then know that the pistol was in the house at the time this murder was committed up-town?"

"No. She did not know anything about it."

"Where did you get it?"

"I took it in pledge from a little Frenchman who boarded in the house and who wanted to raise money to go home. I threw it in a chest of drawers, saying I could get five dollars on it any time at a pawn shop, for it was handsomely silver mounted."

"How long was this before the murder of Mr. Prineveau?"

The man turned round and looked at me with a blank face and said, slowly: "It was about five days before, and the day after I had had the words [illegible] myself as if I had not done right.

One morning, with an entirely inexplicable impulse, I went down to the place in Varick street. I found Mrs. Clarkson living in one room on the third floor of a dismally dirty barracks, with two extraordinarily beautiful children, scantily but tidily dressed, playing about the floor, and occasionally asking when papa would come back. She had taken in some kind of needle work—button work, which she showed me. She had to cover the iron frames of the buttons with silk, and arrange them on a card, for which she got twenty-five cents a dozen, and by the utmost industry could never quite make two cards a day of a dozen buttons each. Her finger ends were black with needle marks. She looked weary and sick, but she did not complain. Nothing that ever I had encountered in my experience as a lawyer or as a man so moved my sympathy as this woman. Instinctively I knew that she had been gently bred; that she had loved a worthless man and this was her penalty for continuing to love him. I knew that she would cling to him through all misfortune and be the last to leave him when his doom came. I felt myself treating her with a fine courtliness that was inspired by respect, the respect we always feel for something that is a little above our human range.

It was difficult to pull myself out of this mood and come down to the practical business of a lawyer, but it was necessary.

"Mrs. Clarkson," I said, "it is necessary that we look at this matter in the most cold-blooded way. We have got to make the effort to save your husband beset on almost every side by almost insuperable difficulties, and shut into one or two miserably narrow courses. I have got to prove an alibi or establish his insanity."

"Do you mean by insanity that you will admit that he committed the deed in a mad fit?"

"Perhaps that would be the most judicious course, and then throw ourselves on the sympathy of the jury and the mercy of the court."

She shook her head with a sad dignity. "He did not commit the deed," she said.

"Perhaps not. That may be a moral certainty with you. But a lawyer must come back a little sooner than I expected. Have you got anything to say to me?"

"Not much."

He said this with his aggravating vacuity, and stopped. One hand was thrust into his pocket, the other supported his head in an easy, indolent, sprawling position.

"I THINK I KNOW WHO COMMITTED THAT MURDER."

"I suppose you have made up your mind; it is a waste of time trying to save that man. Well, I about made up my mind to that myself, some time ago."

"Do you mind telling me how you got into this case?" he asked.

"As that is a private matter and you are not disposed to take any share in the case, I don't see why I should make you a confidant."

"Did Mrs. Prineveau ask you to defend Clarkson?"

"Ah! Mr. Greve told you?"

"No he didn't."

"Then, Mrs. Prineveau?"

"Mrs. Prineveau would not talk to me. I scared her."

"Scared her? you must have lost your tact."

"No, I haven't."

"Look here, Daryl," I said, a little nettled. "You are one of the cleverest men in a particular line I ever met. This whole thing is in a nutshell. Either that man Clarkson shot Mr. Prineveau or he didn't. If he didn't shoot him he must have been somewhere at the time. He says he was drunk and if so some one must have seen him at some resort far away from the scene of the crime. It's a plain piece of work to find out the man's resorts and get hold of the persons who saw him there on that day. That's all there is to it, and I don't mind telling you that I haven't a bit of faith in the task, but there's a chance."

Daryl did not say anything for a moment. He worked his big fist in his pocket mechanically, and looked down at his heavy boots as if he were at a complete loss. Presently he said, drawlingly: "Yes, that would be a waste of time."

"Then you have made up your mind that Clarkson is guilty."

"No—o. I've made up my mind he is

Mrs. D. M. Demarest of Crescent avenue [illegible] by the [illegible] of her sister, Mrs. H. D. Brewer.

Chief Marshal Fangborn of the Borough is suffering with a severe attack of neuralgia. Marshal Van Horn is on duty in this place.

G. W. Bolby of Netherwood avenue will move his family to Clinton, where he will embark in the piano business under the firm name of Bolby & Co.

Horace J. Martin has traded his property on Jackson avenue for a very desirable place on Fairview avenue, just east of Watchung avenue, and will move there.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Hallett of New Market [illegible] in the loss of their little daughter, who died Saturday morning of diabetes.

Mrs. H. O. Campbell, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia at her home on Netherwood avenue, is slowly improving under the careful treatment of Dr. O. E. Jenkins.

Miss Bankhead, who has been spending the past week with Mrs. Charles Kellee of La Grande avenue, Netherwood, returned to her home in New York city Monday.

Eugene O'Reilly has returned from the Post-Graduate College, New York, where a second operation was performed on his left arm. He is feeling very much better and gaining rapidly.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck will move into his new house about April 1. Officer Evans of the Central Division of the Salvation Army will occupy the house vacated by Mr. Schenck.

Wm. H. Bohl of Somerset street has sold the house which he is building on Johnston avenue to Z. Pierson of Watchung avenue. Mr. Bohl expects to have the house completed by April 1.

W. K. Van Ness of East Front street who has been very ill for the past three weeks with pneumonia, has so far recovered as to be able to sit up in bed. He is very weak as yet but is now on the road to recovery.

Charles Kelderling, an active member of Plainfield Council Order of Chosen Friends, has already proved his right to one of the beautiful gold emblems of the order by securing five members before the charter closes.

The death occurred in Manasquan, March 5, of Mrs. Martha Cox, widow of Rev. Charles Cox, in the seventy-ninth year of her age. She leaves a daughter, who was Mrs. Harriet Stewart of East Sixth street, for years soprano singer in Trinity Reformed Church, and who is now wife of Editor Frank W. Baldwin of the Orange Chronicle.

When a Plainfield newspaper man begins to write Asbury Park personals he knows that the backbone of Winter is broken and Spring is at hand. Here, therefore, is a harbinger: Geo. W. Debbins, the rising young lawyer, is planning for a vacation at Plainfield's popular shore resort. He has earned a rest, by close application to hard work; and early in the season he and his fast trotter are likely to be a feature of seaside life at the lively Park.

—The excellent music at the reception of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. MacClymont was furnished by A. G. Carpenter of this city.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

[illegible] exhibition in Garret O. Becker's window, has been purchased by a New York person who admires fine penwork.

—The Grocers Association are already making arrangements for their annual excursion which will no doubt be to Boynton Beach. Twenty-five additional cars have been engaged to accommodate those who will go.

—The youths who make a practice of spinning their tops on the concrete walk in front of the Babcock Building, may some day come to grief by smashing one of the large plate glass windows that adorn the building.

—The foundry men, pattern-makers and laborers employed in the Scott Press Works have [illegible] a small reduction in wages paid them. The reduction was graduated according to the amount received, no uniform reduction being made.

—Woodland avenue from South avenue to Ravine road, is in such a dangerous condition caused by the depressions in the road, that the residents of that avenue have placed stakes with a red flag attached, to warn people who have occasion to drive through that thoroughfare where the dangerous spots are.

Makes Tunes With Bullets.

Here is a story from New Orleans that must be taken as it stands. We do not vouch for the truth of it.

"Musical shots," says the tale, "are the latest among the sensations of New Orleans. A sharpshooter of the name of Pardon fires at the metal bars of a set of bells. The bullet, in striking the bar, sound a musical note, and the shots follow each other in such rapid succession and with such accuracy that the marksman is able to shoot any tune that may be desired."

The only thing lacking in this story is some account of Pardon's ability, which we presume he must possess, to shoot chords with ordinary birdshot.—Harper's Young People.

Routed the Flea.

A storekeeper had a pet dog which was vainly trying to dislodge a flea, when an accommodating clerk took a curry comb from a box on the shelf and combed the dog with it to his great satisfaction. Then the clerk laid the comb back in the box and went to another part of the store. But the dog had taken careful note of where the comb was put, and, after some effort managed to climb up where it was. Taking hold of it with his teeth he dragged it out of the box and let it drop on the floor. Getting down himself he carried it to his place by the stove. Then placing it carefully in the right position he rolled over and over on it to his heart's content, wriggling and twisting all manner of ways the while so as to insure himself a good scratching.

Passing fashions have the same function in the reading of the general public as pickles and Russian sideboard dishes in the dining room. They stimulate an artificial appetite where none exists naturally. But after all it is better to eat because you have bad caviare than not to eat at all.

An evenly balanced horse trade is reported from Maine. Two farmers met and after a long talk one exchanged a horse for a cow owned by the other. Each took his new property home, and on the following morning both animals were dead.

"Perhaps you would not think so but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. New York is one of the healthiest places on the Atlantic coast and yet there are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precautions of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but we will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will relieve the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

[illegible] a prominent actress, [illegible] to Mrs. Pinkham, says:—

". . . You cannot imagine the fearful condition I was in when I first wrote to you. I was simply of no use to myself or any one else. I had worked hard, and my nervous system was shattered from womb trouble and travelling constantly. I ran the gauntlet of doctors' theories, till my health and money were rapidly vanishing. . . . I'm all right now, and am [illegible] faithfully in everything. Thank you ten thousand times for what your knowledge and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me."

NEVER STUDIED LAW.

But He Was Cute Enough to Get the Best of Lawyer Runyon.

Frederick Endress, the Liberty street meat market man, is nothing if not ingenious. Some time ago a jury in Justice Newcorn's Court decided that he would have to pay Jacob Geigher $200 for two fingers which were lost while operating a sausage machine in his market. The $200 judgment was secured mainly through the efforts of Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, who represented Geigher, and was to receive recompense when the judgment was paid.

But Endress settled for about $50 and Lawyer Runyon can only whistle for his pay, for Geigher is on his way to the Fatherland where he will reside in the future. Mr. Runyon will have to settle the court costs. It came about in this way.

As soon as the justice jury returned a verdict for $200, Lawyer DeMeza, who defended Endress's case, appealed to the county court. Along about this time Geigher began to feel homesick and longed to get back to the land of his birth. Endress heard of this and approached Geigher with the offer to pay his fare to Germany if he would leave and not press the judgment for $200. This offer found much favor in the mind of the eight-fingered man, and he accepted it. A few days after Geigher was on the briny deep so blue, Endress was laughing in his sleeve at having settled a $200 obligation for about $50, and Lawyer Runyon was confronted with the condition of settling court costs and donating gratis his services to the eight fingered Dutchman.

Soda at 30 Degrees.

Henry J. Fleischhauer, the East Front street druggist, has a soda fountain in his store which is a beauty. It was made according to his own special plans and he claims that he can maintain an average temperature of 30 degrees on every glass of soda drawn.

Those living in the vicinity will appreciate the efforts of Mr. Fleischhauer to please them, and his well-lighted store, with a complete stock of everything in the drug business makes it a very attractive place for East siders, as well as the general public.

House More Trains for Plainfield.

It is reported that Dunellen will soon be made a terminal for all trains now laying over at Roselle.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Leper, a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

[illegible] of Farmingdale [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. George Conover of West Dunellen.

A "Calico Hop" is to be given some time this month at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Smalley at Greenbrook.

Mrs. W. A. Rogers, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Titsworth, returned yesterday to her home in Waterville, Me.

The Central Railroad Company have started to fill in on the Todd lot recently purchased by them. The site will eventually be used for a station.

Carle McDonnell, operator for the Tide Water Pipe Line, has been removed from Dunellen to Bedminster. C. A. Harrison of Williamsport has taken McDonnell's place.

Funeral services were held yesterday over the remains of Grace Ward Hallett, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. James Hallett of New Market. The deceased was two years and nine months of age. Interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

Yesterday was a great day at New Market. Spring election caused considerable work on both sides. The principal bone of contention was the office of Town Committeeman. Party vote was not taken into consideration. Joseph Field, Democrat, was elected by about 40 majority. The Republican candidate was John Sebring.

OBITUARY.

Gustavus William Faber.

Gustavus William Faber, who died suddenly at his home, 430 West Twentieth street, Saturday, was one of New York's oldest merchants. He was born in Hamburg, Germany, in 1823. Coming to the United States at the age of fifteen, his first business connection was with Faber & Bierwirk, foreign commission merchants. In 18[illegible], upon the death of his father, he, with his brother, A. E. Faber of Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, continued the business, which is at 38 Beaver street. Up to the last few years he was much sought after as an administrator of estates. He was father of A. E. Faber, Jr., of Mercer avenue.

He was for many years president of the German Widows and Orphans Society, and senior warden of St. Clement's Church. It was while attending a vestry meeting that he was stricken with apoplexy, which caused his death. In 1853 he married Miss Angelina Barcclough, daughter of the late Alonzo Cushman. His widow, three sons and three daughters survive him.

—Notice is hereby given to the legal voters of the township of Westfield, in the county of Union, that the annual school meeting for the election of members of the Board of Education will be held at the Lincoln School building, on Tuesday evening, March 19, 1895, at 8 o'clock. [illegible], District Clerk.

Dated this 4th day of March, 1895.

A GREAT MEDICINE.

Cod-liver Oil is useful beyond any praise it has ever won, and yet few are willing or can take it in its natural state. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil is not offensive; it is almost palatable.

Children like it. It is Cod-liver Oil made more effectual, and combined with the Hypophosphites its strengthening and flesh-forming powers are largely increased.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute! Scott & Bowne, N.Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

[illegible] Dr. J. F. Kinchelos, Conway, Ark.

[illegible] Boston, Mass.

Allen C. Smith, Pres.,

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

3-26-y

CARPETS

Made and Laid With Paper Without Charge

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.

are making and laying Carpets with paper without charge, which is a saving of 15c per yd.

Parties about going to housekeeping will find no larger stock of Parlor Suits and Bedroom Suits to select from at such low prices. All of the latest Spring styles of Bedroom Suits of the Hall & Lyon manufacture, and Parlor Suits of all the latest manufactures and of the latest designs and coverings.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

All other goods suitable to furnish a house with in our line are sold at the lowest prices. Terms easy; one dollar per week.

The Portland Range!

The Court of Errors has just unanimously affirmed the opinion of the lower courts that no other dealer can take any range and put the name Portland on it and try to hoodwink the people that they are selling the original Portland Range, when such is not the case. 7,000 of these ranges now in use and not one complaint. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Goods delivered to all parts of the State free of charge.

Storing Furniture

Our new building just erected at 88, 90, 92 Bank street, seems to be the only building in the State to store furniture, the way it is being filled up. Furniture moved with reasonable rates in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

We make prices this week that will move them like feathers before a March wind.

UNUSUAL.

Great reductions, "half price sales," and "goods at cost," usually mean undesirable things that must fairly be kicked out, if they are to go out.

This week we offer two brilliant exceptions—

1st—$12 and $15 Ulsters at $7.90.

2d—$15 and $20 Overcoats at $10.90.

WERNER'S, 206 West Front St.

MARRYING TITLES.

UNLUCKY GAME, FASCINATING TO AMERICANS.

Gould Wedding Furnishes a Text for the Rev. Madison C. Peters. He Indulges in Some Very Plain and Blunt Statements.

The Rev. Madison C. Peters, who began his New York career in September, has kept things in a stew ever since. He came from Philadelphia, where he kept things in a stew after a milder, more Quakerish fashion.

He began by refusing to swear and kiss the book in the registration booth. He upheld the theaters in a convention of clergymen. He attacked Dean Hoffman, accusing him of maintaining a lot of tumbledown shanties. He assaulted the parochial system of the Catholic church as a fostering of ignorance. He accused the brewers of importing cocculus indicus for use in adulterating beer.

He came originally from the Lehigh Valley and his first pastorate was in Ithaca, about twelve years ago. He is now a few months past 35 years old.

The undoing of Samson, the strong man, as the result of his marriage with Delilah, the daughter of the Philistines, was the subject of the Rev. Peters' sermon recently.

It was an international marriage, the preacher said, and so was bound to turn out badly. He read the fourteenth chapter of Judges, and then made some slashing comments on the Castellane-Gould nuptials. Mr. Peters said:

"The wealth of this nation is in the hands of a few and these few are marrying off their daughters to titled imbeciles.

"This is the most successful way of making a nation poor. A marriage for money or title is a humiliation to the dust, a hollow mockery that blushes to heaven. American men as a rule marry for love—royal scoundrels always for money. With them Cupid has changed his name to Cupidity.

"There is no record of an international marriage where hard cash was the consideration for empty titles that did not end unhappily. Yet ambitious fathers and managing mothers and heartless daughters are constantly playing the same unlucky game.

"Two million dollars for a title! The outward legal form in such a matter may seal the lips of criticism. But a marriage it is not. As the $2,000,000 to be settled on the little count are contingent on his good behavior, there is very little likelihood of the money ever getting out of the Gould family.

"So common is the mercantile estimate of marriage becoming that I should not be surprised to see the hymeneal market lists chronicled in the newspapers with the prices current of the Stock Exchange. Marriage, instead of being God's holiest institution, a union on equal terms, a free and glad surrender of the heart, is becoming so profaned and reproached that it makes one shudder to think of it.

"We despise the man who takes a bribe. We put stripes on him. What shall we say of these titled adventurers who offer themselves in marriage to the highest American bidder? What shall we say of the young women who turn what is noble and pure and American away and sell themselves willing victims to be offered on the altars of European prodigacy.

"Our boast is that we are democratic. The fact is we are the most snobbish and the most slavish worshipers of rank of any nation in the world. It is seldom that a titled fortune hunter fails in his suit for an American woman's hand. There is such a bewitching charm in the empty titles we affect to despise that women will feign to love an effete nobleman who would if untitled be positively repulsive.

"Such a marriage is far from respectable. It may take place in high society, but it is high society turned low. The pagan pomp and vulgar show with which it may be celebrated only furnish the mask that covers the mockery—the mockery which invariably taunts the misery in the end."

A MAMMOTH AUGER.

Used to Clear the Track Through Western Snowdrifts.

A rotary snowplow can be simply described as an elongated box car carrying a windmill on the front end. This wheel is about ten feet in diameter and fitted on its face with knives or fans set at an angle like the fans of a windmill. The backs of these knives are turned over in the form of a trough, slightly curved, and as the snow slides in through the cutter it is carried up and thrown from an opening just back and above the upper rim of the wheel. Any one who has seen a blower pumping air can understand the working of the rotary. They both operate on the same principle. In the latter snow instead of air is drawn backward between the jaws and projected through the funnel. When feeling well and turned against work to its liking, a steam rotary picks up the offending snow and hurls it into the next township.

The rotary carries its own operating plant, but is propelled by a locomotive coupled on behind. By means of a whistle the man who handles the fan signals the engineer when to back or fill or break away. The combination of noises which greet the visitor boxed up inside the rotary are something appalling. An earthquake on wheels would be a mild comparison. There is a hiss of steam, shrieking of whistles and the rumble and rattle of heavy machinery which cause the entire fabric to tremble and dance on the rails. Then as the whirling knives carve their way foot by foot into the frozen drifts there comes a horrible crunching, crumbling sound, as if some strong jawed man somewhere in the bowels was eating dry toast with his mouth open. Small rocks click once as they strike the metal and then go whizzing through the funnel and strike the opposite bank before the snow in a graceful arch of dissolving views can cover half the distance.

Ill Luck.

Friend (encouragingly)—Don't be so downhearted over such a simple little ailment; why you'll be well in no time.

Cholly (mournfully)—Ya-as, I know that, but isn't it just my beastly luck, don't you know, to be laid up with such a vulgar disease as the mumps. Fancy the mumps when appendicitis is the [illegible] thing!

Her Devotions.

"Do you go to church to hear the sermon or the music, Maude?"

"I go for the hims," said Maude.

TRIP OF PAUL JONES.

HE STARTED AROUND THE WORLD WITHOUT A CENT.

Returns With $5,000. Various Expedients He Resorted to in His Endeavor to Win a Big Stake a Year Ago. Taken for a Spy.

Paul Jones, genius and globe trotter, landed in New York the other day, having completed a circuit of the world from Boston.

It will be remembered that this Paul Jones, as he calls himself, made a sensation last February by the odd means he took to get money enough to start on his journey. He was in New York for several days shortly after his release from several Massachusetts jails. He was not a particular success in New York, but outside he did very well, and made money rapidly. In his journey around the world he has succeeded in adding to his pile rather than lowering it, and as he turns up in Boston with $5,000 in hand, he will have another $5,000, the aggregate of the wagers made on the success of his exploit.

Now that he has practically won the identity of Jones is disclosed. His name is E. C. Pfeiffer and he is a well known Harvard man. He was at one time captain of the Harvard crew and was a member of the class of '88. He rowed in the freshman crew against the Columbia freshmen and the next year pulled No. 6 in the 'Varsity against Yale. He was captain in his senior year. He is an athlete, stands six feet high and describes himself as "a sure winner."

Here is his own story of his trip around the world and of the way he came to make it, as he told it to me the other day.

"When I left Harvard I joined the Boston Athletic club. I was sitting in the club one evening with a group of men when the expense connected with a trip around the world became the topic. Two Americans had just made the trip and their expenses had amounted to $8,000 apiece. I expressed the opinion that a man ought to be able to start on such a trip with nothing and make money.

"One of the party asked me if I could do as much. I said I thought I could. Then several wagers were made that I couldn't do it. In all $5,000 was staked, and the agreement was that I was to be put into a room, my clothes taken from me, and in one year I was to travel around the world and make, including my expenses, $5,000. One day in February, 1890, I was put into a room. There was nothing in the room. My clothes were taken from me.

"Several newspaper men heard of this and came to the room. They knocked for admittance. I said they could come in, but I must charge them a cent apiece. They paid their cents. A committee was in the room to see that the start was fair and according to agreement.

"I paid one of my visitors a cent to buy me a paper.

"With the paper I made as much of a suit of clothes as possible. At any rate it enabled me to talk more freely. Other persons kept coming and the men who had paid a cent to come in paid me ten cents to get their original cents back. They thought there might be luck in them. In this way I got a dollar or so, and sent out and bought some manilla paper. With this I made a suit of clothes. I stuck it together with gum, for which I paid a cent.

"Then I went to a clothier, told him about my plans, and asked him if he had a proposition to make. He offered to let me have a suit of clothes if I would exhibit myself in his shop for a day. I accepted. The newspapers wrote me up and I soon found that I could make money by exhibiting myself.

"I was hired by proprietors of various kinds of business to work for them. Some paid me $25 a day for three days. I have got as much as $200 a week. I traveled over a great part of the United States. I exhibited my paper suit everywhere. I rode on bicycles and was paid for it by the manufacturers. I sailed for Liverpool on the Umbria and sold some of my photographs on board.

"I was introduced to the representative of an English banking syndicate, who took a liking to me and hired me as interpreter for a trip through Germany. We went to Hamburg, spending one week, thence to Berlin for three days, thence to Leipsic, and finally to Innspruck, where we remained one day. Here we parted and I dropped into Switzerland."

Only a short time was spent in Switzerland and the round the world tramp was soon in Naples. Here he went on shipboard and plunged into the Mediterranean. One Thanksgiving day he was puffing down the Suez canal, and ate his dinner in full view of a crowd of fleet footed Arabs that ran along by the side of the boat.

In Japan he had an experience that for a time ruined his prospects. He reached that country during the New Year's festivities, which last a week, and as a traveler has to use a passport was hampered by the failure to get the signature of the necessary officials. He supplied by American nerve the Japanese signature, but at Kioto was held under suspicion as a spy against the government. As good fortune would have it, he encountered at the right instant a Japanese, now an official, who had been educated in Boston, and he straightway released him from his predicament.

Of his trip, as almost completed, Jones says:

"On my trip I have found men of all nationalities who have seen printed in their native tongue some account of my undertaking. I have found that my attempt to become an outcast, a wanderer on the face of the earth, in an endeavor to escape from the blandishments of modern civilization has been a failure, for everywhere, in varied languages and with an infinitude of accents, I heard the children sing 'Ta-ra-ra, boom-de-aye,' and the old folks in all hours of the day and night exercising their voices with the strains of 'After the Ball.'"

A Close Similarity.

Hojack (reading)—The Emperor of China has ordered the Peking bankers to advance him the money he needs or lose their heads.

Tomdik—That sounds like an American invitation to officeholders to make voluntary campaign contributions.—Puck.

An Eye to Business.

Milligan—If I be afther leaving security equal ter what I take away, will yez thrust me till nixt wake?

Sands (the grocer)—Certainly!

Milligan—Well, thin, sell me two av thim hams, an' I'll lave wan av thim till I [illegible].—Puck.

NEBRASKA'S PLIGHT.

FAILURE OF CROPS RENDER THE PEOPLE DESTITUTE.

The Pitiable Condition of Women and Men Caused By Lack of Food [illegible] West [illegible]. A Pitiful Plea For Help.

Nebraska, as a whole, is a good agricultural State. The eastern half of the State contains very rich, fertile soil and a prosperous class of people. The western part is as yet a poor section. Twenty years ago it was covered with a great growth of buffalo grass, which absorbed all the rain that fell and permitted the earth to receive no moisture. By various ways this buffalo grass has been removed and the land has been opened for farmers. Previous to this use it was a section devoted wholly to grazing, and great herds of cattle and horses roamed over it. The railway companies and the land speculators began booming the country, and thousands were attracted to it in search of a home which could be secured cheaply. In this way it was settled, and mushroom "cities" sprang up all over the former solitudes.

The experiment has not yet proved a failure, and there is hope that this section, under reasonable climatic influences may yet become rich and prosperous. But the census of 1890 showed that three-fourths of Nebraska's population live in the eastern half of the State.

The people in western Nebraska were prostrated by drought in 1890. Good crops followed in 1891, and fairly good crops in 1892. By the beginning of 1893 the farmers were in good spirits, and had begun to pay off mortgages and to plan for the future. But 1893 saw a partial failure of the crops, do to drought. The farmers did not lose heart, but used all their funds to put in their crop last Spring. Prospects were never better until the July drought set in. July 24 and 25 hot winds blew over this State and Iowa and over many other portions of the West. These hot wind, preceded and followed by drought, ruined Nebraska's crops. The ruin in the western part of the State was almost total. The eastern parts experienced the same conditions of weather, but little suffering has occurred on account of the many prosperous years before this.

The difference between these two sections—the eastern and the western—lies in the presence of a reserve in the east and a total lack of it in the west. The western farmers were left without any resources, and destitution and want were inevitable.

To show exactly how great is the need, the New York Times' correspondent had an interview a few days ago with J. H. Edmiston, State Oil Inspector, just appointed by Gov. Holcomb. Mr. Edmiston was the Chairman of the Populist State Central Committee in the last campaign, and was chiefly busied in keeping down the calamity howlers in his party and making a campaign on State issues alone. He lives at Eddyville, in Dawson County, in the western part of the State where there is some destitution.

He owns there a farm of over 1,000 acres, and is an intelligent, prosperous man. He said that last year his farm raised not a bushel of anything, although in a good year he could count on an income of $3,000 from it without any care on his part. He emphasized the great need of seed all over the western part of the State. To illustrate how great this need is he said that he had seven renters on his farm. As it is impossible for them to secure seed, he recently bought 1,000 bushels of seed wheat for the use of his renters. He was at once implored by dozens of farmers to secure a rental for them. Every owner was willing to abandon their own farms in order to lease one of his to secure the seed. Without the seed they could do nothing on their farms.

Mr. Edmiston said that he was sure there would be yet much distress and that many of the farms would not be tilled during the coming year because of the lack of seed and the feeble condition of the horses and their owners, who, exhausted by the long winter and little food, will be unfit for duty.

Pitiful letters of entreaty or thanks continue to come in. Here is one from a worthy family in Dundy County, the extreme southwestern part of the State. This family received some supplies from the Omaha Woman's Christian Temperance Union in December. This poor woman wrote:

"Dear ladies: The groceries you sent us are gone except the glass of jelly, which I am keeping for mother's birthday. How often we have said, 'God bless those ladies!' What comfort we took in what you sent us! We have no money to get anything. Will you help us? If you cannot send things to us free of transportation charges send us some money to get food with, and if all goes well and our crops are good, we will try and send the money back to you, so you can have it to help others. You have no idea how hard it is on us in this lonely country. Should we lose another crop we cannot stay, yet all we have is here and I want to pull through. I shall have two cows in the spring, which will help. My chickens are dying for the want of feed. You can travel for days and not find over six chickens on a farm. I could tell you much of the suffering in this country, but it would not do you any good, for you know how it is."

DEFIES THE BOYCOTT.

Hostilities Engendered by the Recent Brooklyn Trolley Strikes.

Mayor Schieren's administration of the duties of mayor of Brooklyn during the recent strike upon the street car lines has resulted in a boycott being placed upon his private business interests.

The Executive Association of engineers denounced Mr. Schieren for his attitude in the recent labor troubles and voted to boycott the leather belting manufactured by his concern. Resolutions to that effect were adopted.

The firm of Charles A. Schieren & Co. is one of the largest manufacturers of leather belting in this country.

Mr. Schieren expresses utter indifference to the boycott. His business, he said, would not be affected by it.

Proof Positive.

Stage Manager—The audience is calling for the author.

Manager—All right. Go out and announce that he is in the audience somewhere, but you don't know where.

Stage Manager—But, perhaps he isn't in the audience.

Manager—Don't be a fool! Who else would have started the call?

Somewhere in the West a woman has preached her husband's funeral sermon. Another [illegible].

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists

Quality, Workmanship, and Shapes, unequaled.
Over A MILLION Mothers, Misses, and Children, wear them.

Modern ideas of healthful dress are embodied in this Corset Waist. For sale by all leading retailers. Children's, 25c. to 50c. Misses', 50c. to $1.00. Ladies', $1.00 to $2.00.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, March 7, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

The following members were present, viz:

Director Hubbard and Freeholders Badgeley, Clark, Ehrlich, Halliday, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krause, Littell, Miller, Ogden, Boll, Swain, Tier, Westcott and Woodruff—16

Absent—Freeholder Morrell—1.

The minutes of the previous meeting (reading of bills excepted) were on motion approved as read.

No communications, memorials, petitions or reports of committees were presented to the Board.

NEW BUSINESS.

Freeholder Farrell presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to examine and report as to the advisability and probable cost of widening bridge over Grand street, in the city of Rahway.

Freeholder Farrell, in a few remarks, explained the need and object of his resolution, after which, on motion of Freeholder Boll, the resolution was unanimously adopted.

The Director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Farrell, Enrlich, Ogden, Boll and Halliday.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read, and on motion ordered paid:

Bridges—Louis Quien $18 50, 21; Chas Parse 35; E Mudoell & Son 2 75; Wm T Kirk 20 29, Philip Fairman 14; Frederick Heyd 7 50; David Busch 20 83; Jas J Brennan 146.

Salaries—E M Wood $125; S Rusling Ryno 50.

Schools—B Holmes $200.

County Road Construction—Louis Quien $8, 13.

County Road Repairs—Jas L Badgley $1 90; Benj King 16 75; Jas W Fink $50 45 89.

Members' Pay—W H Swain $16; W H Hulskamper 28.

Committee Expenses—Thomas H Smith $10.

Jail—Henry J Schmidt $5 70; J W Hildebrandt & Co, 46 35; Michael Bender 66 86; Jas O Brokaw 14 77; E S E Newberry 45 60.

Public Buildings—Williams & Bassett $6; Hahne & Co, 2 49; Thos B Budd 13 48; Wm Henry 2 75; John C Blore 25; The Suburban Electric Co. 9 10, 5 86; Wm B Tucker, attorney, 144 55.

Publication—The Standard Publishing Concern 25.

Incidental—Phil E Tufts, P M, $5; Wm Howard 45 80; P Casey & Son 15

Court—Geo Kyte, Sheriff, $2 959 30; Edward A Vognte 20 85; Louis Quien 18; Jas Ritchie 75; Wm Howard 2; Herbert W Knight 100; John Williams Crane 70; Lewis S Hyer 80; T F McCormick 391 67; F C Marsh 250; Henry J Schoppe 45; Isaac A Bunn 15, 84; Oliver Conlin 12 50, 70; Wm J Walsh 30; Wm H Burnett 30; John McNamara 25; Jas L Bodwell 30; Henry Smith 25; Wm H Sault 25; John H Sheridan 15; Samuel Morgan 25; Jas H White 35 75; Robert Walpole 38 50 John Seeland 25; F M Furman 4 56; Geo M MacDonald 3; Emil Wersinger 8 25; John Kennedy 80 cts, 7; Max Rapps 9 20.

Freeholder Miller moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, April 4, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

S Rusling Ryno, Clerk.

—Adjt. George Wood will be present at the Salvation Army to conduct special meetings March 16, 17 and 18. All are invited to come and bring their friends. Several recruits will be made into soldiers during his visit. Monday night the 18th the meeting will be for the members only.

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister
Plenipotentiary,
carrying good news of relief from pain.

Allcock's
Porous Plaster
stands at the head of all remedies for congestion in the chest, the first result of taking cold, and for all lameness and stiffness of joints or muscles.

"Just as Good as Allcock's." Not at all. No imitation approaches the genuine.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills
are free from injurious substances.
They give universal satisfaction.

Fifty Dollars Given Away.

To raisers of poultry, the most wonderful and valuable monthly is The Poultry Keeper. The publishers offer fifty dollars free. Send for sample copy free and see how. Any of the following back numbers worth a dollar but sent postpaid for only five cents each: Brooders Incubators, Appliances, Poultry Houses (Illus) Aug. '89 Aug. '94. [illegible] Poultry Houses, April '87, Oct. '90 and July '91 [illegible]. Preserving eggs, Sept '87. Turkeys, Mar. '92. Poultry Diseases Nov. '91. How to Feed for Eggs, Oct. '93. All About Lice, Oct. '87, Dec. '91. Testing Eggs, June '91 and June '87. How to Make the Hen Pay [illegible] sample free. Address, [illegible]

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular weekly singing lesson of of the High School was led this morning by Mr. Allen.

The meeting of the P.H.S.A.A. will not be held this afternoon as previously announced as the committee is not quite ready with its report.

Captain Edwards's talk has aroused interest in military drill and there is much talk of a regular uniformed company in the High School. The idea seems to find great favor among the boys and it is to be hoped that it will succeed.

Mr. Travell has almost recovered from his attack of pneumonia and is expected back again next Monday.

The subjects for the Senior essays for March are as follows:

A Comparison of Taine's or Johnson's Sketch of Milton's Character with the sketch by Macaulay; The Story of Roland Graeme from Scott's Abbott; Modern Political Methods; Woman's Work and Woman's Wages; The Character of Confucius. They are due Monday, March 25

Ask Your Druggist for It.

Such strong proofs of the cures made by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice through newspaper investigations that it is now the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingraham, of Amsterdam, N. Y., states where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks of Athens, N. Y., who was suffering from kidney disease and ulceration of the stomach; after the second day, steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures, after all other treatments have failed.

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.

A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.
1 9 tf

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 25 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

6.31 p. m. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

8.34 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

For Baltimore only [illegible] p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, [illegible] a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

[illegible]

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible] week-days.

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible] week days.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible]

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]

For Boston—[illegible] daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats for Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

[illegible], General Manager.
[illegible], Gen'l Pass'r Agent.

Cocking Main.

A red hot ten-round cock fight took place last night at South Plainfield between birds owned by parties in this city and ones owned by Middlesex County sports. The birds were young and showed a good strain of gamey breeding. They finished royally and much money passed. The sports from this city got most of the money at the windup.

All Shocked.

The party given by Charles Scribner at his home on Pearl street last night was attended by 8 couples who made the affair a merry one with dancing. An electric battery from which all received a shock added a bit of novelty to the affair. During the progress of dancing refreshments were served. Naylor furnished the music.

Another New Order.

The second meeting of the Order of Chosen Friends since their organization was held last night, and five new members initiated, which now makes a total membership of 2[illegible] L. Hopkins, Past Counsellor, J. J. Reed, Provisional Grand Secretary, and Mrs. J. J. Reed, Past Secretary, all of Jersey City, were present.

Prof. A. Wehner,

TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.

ALSO VOICE CULTURE.

Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.

References given and required.

Address letters to the office of this paper.

1 21 tf-6

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

(LEAVE PLAINFIELD.)

[illegible]

For Atlantic City, [illegible]

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, etc. Leave Plainfield [illegible]

For Perth Amboy, [illegible]

For Matawan, [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]

For Trenton [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington [illegible]

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at [illegible]

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week days at [illegible]

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA,

[illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

[illegible], General Supt.
[illegible], Gen. Pass. Agt.

EIGHT MINUTES OF THREE.

A DETECTIVE STORY

BY WM CHESTER.

[Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson and Bacheller.]

CHAPTER I.

On the 17th of March, 1878, Mr. Gustave Prineveau was shot and killed in his private conveyance while returning from a drive with his wife. It was about five o'clock in the afternoon, and the carriage at the time was between Sixty-sixth and Sixty-seventh streets on Fourth avenue, in New York.

Mr. Prineveau was seated on the left of his wife in the carriage, which was a two-seated phaeton, and was driven by their man, John Teedson, who sat on the seat in front of them. Mr. Prineveau, who was sixty-three, died almost instantly, and the post mortem, held the next morning at ten o'clock, showed that he had been killed by a pistol bullet that had entered his heart at the fifth intercostal space, glanced upward and severed the aorta. A small hole was found in his vest on the left side corresponding to the bullet.

The post-mortem examination was a long one. As it was impossible for either of the other occupants of the carriage to have got round to the left side of Mr. Prineveau, so as to have inflicted the wound without accomplishing an unprecedented feat, that would have been seen, and as there was no assignable motive for such an act, the whole purpose of the examination was directed to finding out what incentive some other person might have had to commit the deed.

The following facts were then elicited.

Mr. Prineveau had been married a little less than five years to a woman who, previous to that marriage, had been known as the widow of a South American merchant who had died while on a visit to Buenos Ayres. At the time of Mr. Prineveau's marriage he was reported to be very wealthy, having amassed a fortune in coal speculations in Pennsylvania and New York.

He, too, had been previously married, by which marriage there had been two sons, one of whom had died three years before the father, in California, and the other of whom was still living somewhere in Ohio. The only other relation that could be traced was a nephew, Jared Clarkson, about twenty-eight years old, who was a scapegrace, and had lived for several years upon the bounty of Mr. Prineveau, but whose whereabouts at the time of Mr. Prineveau's death could not be ascertained.

It was shown that the deceased had been a man of singularly weak character in the management of his estate; that he gave away vast sums of money, was easily frightened or cajoled, and that from all accounts his wife's advice and influence alone saved him from many foolish speculations and misfortunes in his old age. Among his papers were found receipts for over one hundred thousand dollars signed by unknown persons and covering the four years immediately preceding his death. His relations with his wife had always been of the most amiable and trustful kind. None of the servants knew of his ever having quarreled with her. Mrs. Prineveau looked after all his personal comforts, was continually solicitous about his health, accompanied him everywhere, and bore the reputation of being a discreet domestic woman with an obvious affection for a man who was twenty years her senior.

There was in his house on Fifth avenue a servant who had been with them for five years—her name was Rose Kenny, and she testified that about a week before the murder Mr. Prineveau had been visited at night by the nephew Clarkson, whom she had let in, and who was seen by Mr. Prineveau in the library, a small room in the wing at the rear of the house. From appearance she thought the man had been drinking. He wore a rough and soiled overcoat and an imitation astrakan cap pulled over his face. He stayed over half an hour in the library, and she heard him from the front parlor speaking in loud and angry tones. She admitted that she had listened, and swore that she heard him say: "Then look out for yourself, for you will not live to accomplish it." To which the old man in a soft voice made some kind of appealing reply.

HE WORE A ROUGH AND SOILED OVERCOAT.

This was about ten o'clock at night, and Mrs. Prineveau, who had gone to a concert at Steinway hall with a party of friends, had not returned. She came back at ten minutes of eleven, and, upon making inquiries of the maid, Rosy, learned these facts and showed a good deal of indignation because Mr. Prineveau had been subjected to the annoyance of a worthless and reckless scapegrace.

Mrs. Prineveau herself corroborated this statement explicitly, but would give very little information about the habits or antecedents of Clarkson, except that she had learned incidentally from her husband that he was a drunkard with a wife and two children, and, owing to his dissolute habits, had never been able to take care of himself or his family.

It was also learned that on the afternoon of the 16th of March Clarkson had been seen by the coachman hanging about the house, and the hall boy, who had been sent on an errand, encountered him on the corner and was there held in conversation by him, Clarkson asking him, among other things, if Mr. Prineveau did not take a drive usually in the afternoons.

These bits of testimony led to the police efforts to find Clarkson. Mr. Prineveau was buried in the Trinity cemetery on the 19th. His funeral was attended by many old New Yorkers, and public attention was turned to the efforts made by Mrs. Prineveau to discover the perpetrator of the crime.

CLARKSON WAS SEEN HANGING AROUND THE HOUSE.

On the 21st Clarkson's wife and children were found in a miserable lodging place in Varick street. But Clarkson had disappeared. His wife promptly acknowledged that he had come home late on the afternoon of the 17th, had hurriedly changed his clothes and gone out. She had not seen him or heard of him since. But she strenuously denied that he had committed a crime, and refused to be influenced by any of the damaging circumstances.

Here the affair threatened to end, as so many others of its kind have ended, in idle curiosity, police inefficiency and ultimate forgetfulness. But on the 23d Clarkson was discovered in hiding in Troy. He was brought here and lodged in the city prison, and then it became known to the public that the police had found in the rooms of Mrs. Clarkson in Varick street a small French revolver with five chambers, one of which was empty, and the bullets of this pistol corresponded in size with the one taken from the body of Mr. Prineveau.

CHAPTER II.

At this stage of the affair I was called into it, oddly enough. I received a note from that eminent lawyer, John Greve, with whom I had studied, asking me to call and see Mrs. Prineveau at her Fifth avenue home. He had taken the liberty, he said, of recommending me in a matter that would perhaps be of great service to me. Perplexed as I was at this, knowing that John Greve was Mrs. Prineveau's lawyer and did not need associate counsel, I nevertheless called promptly upon the lady.

I found her to be a very handsome woman with great dignity of person, a charming self-possession and all the evidences of a refined and estimable character.

"This unfortunate affair," she said, "has perplexed me in more ways than one. That wretched man, Clarkson, as you doubtless know, is in custody and is now here. The circumstances appear to leave little doubt of his guilt. But he has a wife and two children. Their abject misery is made all the more acute by the wife's belief in her husband's innocence. It is a very dreadful state of affairs, but I shrink from the responsibility which justice imposes on me, of hanging that helpless wretch without giving him a show for his life. He is not able to employ counsel, and I am at the best only a woman. I propose to pay you to try and do the best you can for him, and, of course, I do not wish anything said about it. I took the advice of Mr. Greve, and he said that in any case the man was entitled to good counsel and advised me to employ you. It seems in such a foregone conclusion a small concession to give him the benefit of the law. At all events it will relieve me from the reproach of having been influenced entirely by a vindictive feeling."

I do not now remember all that was said at this interview, but I recall that I was consciously affected by the woman's sympathy for a man that she saw had little or no chance for his life, and who wanted to soften her own share in the prosecution by not permitting him to say he had no chance to prove his innocence.

I promised her to go and see the accused man and to send her my decision as soon thereafter as was possible.

This interview was on the 25th. On the 26th I went to see Clarkson in his cell at the city prison. I found a woman in the warden's office who had also come to see him. It proved to be his wife. She was such a picture of abject misery that she arrested my attention. She must have been a very beautiful girl, although now she was at least twenty-five and suffering had drawn its lines across her white face. I could see that she was made of the finest material, was in fact one of those delicate, sensitive, emotional natures that shrink from the world, but are capable of the greatest sacrifices and measureless heroism when a crisis comes. She was wretchedly clad from the biting spring weather, and she stood with her face turned toward the wall, but through all her shabby integuments there was a proclamation of natural symmetry and evenness of character. When the warden told me who she was, I went to her and made myself and my mission known. She grasped my hand with her long cold fingers almost convulsively and swinging away the veil that had partly concealed her face looked at me so searchingly and imploringly with her sad gray eyes that I started a little.

"O, sir!" she said, "bad as my husband may be, he is innocent of this, and he has two little children that he loves. You have come to save him. I feel it."

I patted her hand and tried to say something that was encouragingly noncommittal. "We shall see, we shall see. Things are often not as bad as they look. I am going to have a chat with him. In the meantime, save your strength. You are not friendless."

She paid no heed at all to what I said. She was looking at me with those gray eyes very much as if she saw something behind me, and hanging to my hand like a drowning person.

"Yes, yes!" she said, with a sob; "you will save him," and then she began to cry convulsively.

I had not the heart to tell her how hopeless it all looked. I wished that I had been spared this so that my judgment could come to the interview with the accused man unperturbed.

She made me go up and see her husband first. She would wait.

I found Clarkson to be the very antithesis of his wife. He was a large, muscular and slightly bloated fellow with a purplish face, the result of debauchery, but withal a rather handsome man or what would have been a handsome man in normal conditions. He sat on the edge of the iron bed when I entered the cell, his head between his hands, and he did not look up until I had spoken to him, and then it was with such a flabby despair that I felt repelled.

THE WARDEN TOLD ME WHO SHE WAS.

Here was one of those large vital natures that appear to have no internal resources. I could see in an instant why his life had been a failure. He was made up of unregulated appetites and sensibilities without volition enough to control them. Just the sort of man to do a desperate deed in the frenzy of drink, without a motive before it or a recollection after it, but as devoid of methodical vindictiveness as a mastiff.

I told him I had come to talk with him in view of conducting his defense.

"Bah," he said, "there is no defense. Can you defend me against God?"

"Let me ask of you," I began, "not to talk in that reckless manner. Try and be cool. Blasphemy may relieve your feelings, but it will not help your case."

"My case is helpless," he said, with every fleshy indication that it was.

"But if it is worth while to make a plea at all, it is not necessary to announce your guilt in advance."

He sprang up from the bed—he was six feet at least in height—and with a clenched fist uplifted shouted:

"I am not guilty, but I might as well be, for God has decreed that everybody shall think so."

A little gleam of hope suddenly had shot out of the darkness of this reply. The man might be in some degree insane, and irresponsible.

"If you are not guilty there are possibilities of defense. I don't think Heaven will object to our availing ourselves of them."

"Much you know of Heaven," he replied. "No man could have made such a set of circumstances to fit into my doom. It requires the subtlety and cruelty of a god. I might as well have killed that man and given myself up. The result will be the same. But I'm too d—d weak to kill anybody. So I am to be killed. This is in accordance with eternal practice."

He looked at me with a glaring eye. His words were hot with a burning arraignment. There could be no mistake about the earnestness and sincerity of his emotion.

"Either this man is innocent or mad," I said to myself, and then hastened to disavow the thought to myself.

"I tell you beforehand," he went on, "that you cannot do anything with the circumstances. Did I go to Mr. Prineveau and use threatening words—yes. Did I happen to have a pistol in my possession whose bullets exactly correspond to the one found in the man's body—yes. Did I disappear after the deed—yes. Is my life and character just such as would fit me for such a deed—yes. And yet I tell you that I was not there, did not kill him, and never had such an act in my mind."

"Easy," I said. "If you were not there, you were somewhere else. We ought to be able to get at that."

"Yes, we ought to. If we were not fighting against destiny. But just at the time that I ought to have known where I was I was unconscious."

"Then you might have been there unconsciously and irresponsibly."

"Yes. Some demon may have robbed me of myself and worked this thing through me. That's the safest theory. You'd better stick to that. You'll get some credit for it after I'm hanged."

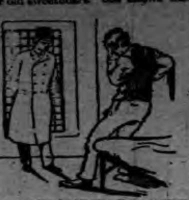
"Clarkson," said I, "I met your wife downstairs; she made me come up and see you first."

He staggered against the wall in the corner of the cell and broke down.

"Poor girl! Poor girl!" he said, with great sobs. "I've been the curse of her life."

"She believes in your innocence."

"Of course she does. She knows me, poor old sweetheart. She knows that,



"POOR GIRL, POOR GIRL," HE SOBBED.

weak and worthless as I am, I never killed even an insect."

"She believes that I was sent to—to give you valuable assistance."

"Yes. She believes in a good God. You wouldn't think it, with such a husband as I am, would you? So did I, till He wound this mesh around me!"

"Tut, tut, man! Pull yourself together and let your reason work. Sit down there and answer my questions."

He wiped his eyes with his coat sleeve and sat down again, helplessly, on the edge of the bed.

"Now, you don't know where you were at four o'clock on the afternoon of March 17?"

"No. The last thing I remember was going down Vesey street toward the river."

"Where had you been?"

"I had been drinking on Sixth avenue at several places."

"And when you recovered your consciousness where were you?"

"In Troy."

"Humph! Had you ever been to Troy before?"

"No."

"Did you know anybody there?"

"No."

"Did you have the pistol with you that was found in your house?"

"No. I never carried a pistol in my life."

"Did not your wife then know that the pistol was in the house at the time this murder was committed up-town?"

"No. She did not know anything about it."

"Where did you get it?"

"I took it in pledge from a little Frenchman who boarded in the house and who wanted to raise money to go home. I threw it in a chest of drawers, saying I could get five dollars on it any time at a pawn shop, for it was handsomely silver mounted."

"How long was this before the murder of Mr. Prineveau?"

The man turned round and looked at me with a blank face and said, slowly: "It was about five days before and the day after I had had the words with Mr. Prineveau in the library."

I confess that both his looks and his words had a knell-like effect. In spite of myself I felt staggered.

"Do you know of anybody whose interest would be advanced by the death of Mr. Prineveau?"

He hesitated a moment. Then he said: "No. Mr. Prineveau's death was a deprivation to me. He was the best, and in fact, the only friend I had."

"Why did you go to him that night a week before his death?"

"To get money."

"Did you get it?"

"Yes. I always got it."

"By threats?"

"No. It was absolute charity. He gave me a twenty-dollar bill. He always felt sorry for me. I was flush with that money and bought the pistol, not because I wanted it, but because the Frenchman was hard up."

"Now tell me what the conversation was with your uncle that night."

"I cannot tell it clearly because I had been drinking, and I am effusive and foolish when I have liquor in me."

"Was there not a quarrel?"

"No. He may have upbraided me; he always did, and I may have talked fast and loud. I always do, but there was no other quarrel."

This man puzzled me completely. There was nothing in his information that at all removed the fatal circumstances. I had to confess to myself that any gushing sentimental lout, however guilty, might present this view of the case. But there was something in the fellow's face and tones that went past my reason and awakened some instinct that he was innocent.

When I left him I was in a curious quandary. I could not put my finger on a piece of evidence to be used in rebuttal of the circumstances, and yet I found some inarticulate voice in me saying: "That man is innocent."

I thought the matter over that night without coming to a conclusion, and went to bed saying I would sleep over it, which, of course, is very much like saying in the face of a dilemma that you will toss a penny up. In both cases there is an acknowledgment that something outside of your own will may determine for you.

CHAPTER III.

In my case I suppose that something did, for I got up and wrote a leter to Mrs. Prineveau in which I told her that I accepted the case and would do the best I could for the accused, and that it looked like a hopeless affair. In response to this I received a note of brief thanks, inclosing a crisp five hundred dollar bill as a retaining fee. That the pale face of the man's wife had determined me is not unlikely, for it came back to me in the night with the strangest persistency and the same unwarranted look of trust in the gray eyes.

The trial was set down to come on about the first of May, and there was about a month's time to get ready for it. I wasted about a week in the conviction that all I could do was to dispute the evidence inch by inch, and in the last resort show that Clarkson was given to emotional aberrations and was at times irresponsible. But whenever my mind reverted to the matter that miserable woman's face rose up with an awful reproach in it, and then I fell to [illegible] myself to myself as if I had not done right.

One morning, with an entirely inexplicable impulse, I went down to the place in Varick street. I found Mrs. Clarkson living in one room on the third floor of a dismally dirty barracks, with two extraordinarily beautiful children, scantily but tidily dressed, playing about the floor, and occasionally asking when papa would come back. She had taken in some kind of needle work—button work, which she showed me. She had to cover the iron frames of the buttons with silk, and arrange them on a card, for which she got twenty-five cents a dozen, and by the utmost industry could never quite make two cards a day of a dozen buttons each. Her finger ends were black with needle marks. She looked weary and sick, but she did not complain. Nothing that ever I had encountered in my experience as a lawyer or as a man so moved my sympathy as this woman. Instinctively I knew that she had been gently bred; that she had loved a worthless man and this was her penalty for continuing to love him. I knew that she would cling to him through all misfortune and be the last to leave him when his doom came. I felt myself treating her with a fine courtliness that was inspired by respect, the respect we always feel for something that is a little above our human range.

It was difficult to pull myself out of this mood and come down to the practical business of a lawyer, but it was necessary.

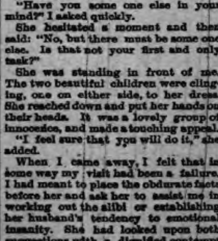
"Mrs. Clarkson," I said, "it is necessary that we look at this matter in the most cold-blooded way. We have got to make the effort to save your husband beset on almost every side by almost insuperable difficulties, and shut into one or two miserably narrow courses. I have got to prove an alibi or establish his insanity."

"Do you mean by insanity that you will admit that he committed the deed in a mad fit?"

"Perhaps that would be the most judicious course, and then throw ourselves on the sympathy of the jury and the mercy of the court."

She shook her head with a sad dignity. "He did not commit the deed," she said.

"Perhaps not. That may be a moral certainty with you. But a lawyer must



"BY PROVING THAT SOME ONE ELSE DID IT!"

have facts. How are we to prove that he did not?"

Her answer startled me a little. It was said calmly, and as if she saw no difficulty about it.

"By proving that some one else did it," she said.

"Have you some one else in your mind?" I asked quickly.

She hesitated a moment and then said: "No, but there must be some one else. Is that not your first and only task?"

She was standing in front of me. The two beautiful children were clinging, one on either side, to her dress. She reached down and put her hands on their heads. It was a lovely group of innocence, and made a touching appeal.

"I feel sure that you will do it," she added.

When I came away, I felt that in some way my visit had been a failure. I had meant to place the obdurate facts before her and ask her to assist me in working out the alibi or establishing her husband's tendency to emotional insanity. She had looked upon both suggestions with a dignified contempt and asked me to find the person who really committed the deed.

I made up my mind that I was to get no practical assistance from the wife, and in my extremity I sent for Amos Daryl, who was then employed in the secret service in Washington.

I had not seen him in several years, but he owed his position to me and he was the only detective I knew for whose abilities I had a profound respect. Luckily he was able to get away, and he came to New York promptly to see me.

Daryl was a great, brawny, rawboned fellow with a child's simple mindedness; one of those men who deceive you completely in appearance and manner. He might easily have been mistaken for an Adirondack guide on a visit to the city. But he was well-known to the police authorities and most of the criminal lawyers.

He listened to me as I went over all the details of the affair, and I don't think he spoke once till I told him what Mrs. Clarkson had said; then he smiled, put his long hands in his pockets, and stretching out his interminable legs remarked: "A good idea."

"I have told you all that there is to it. What is your opinion?"

"My opinion is that Mrs. Clarkson suspects some one else and hasn't told you. Give me a card to Mrs. Prineveau, and three or four days' time."

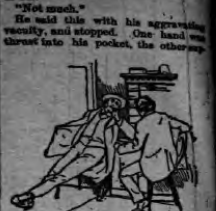
Just before he left, he said: "You'd better give me a card to Mr. Greve while you are about it. I want to see that bullet, and I shall have to get an order from him."

After two days' time he came back. It was about ten o'clock in the morning and he sauntered into my study in his careless manner, unlimbered himself in a big chair, and then as usual waited for me to open the conversation.

"Well, Amos," I said, throwing down my pen and wheeling round, "you've come back a little sooner than I expected. Have you got anything to say to me?"

"Not much."

He said this with his aggravating vacuity, and stopped. One hand was thrust into his pocket, the other supported his head in an easy, indolent, sprawling position.



"I THINK I KNOW WHO COMMITTED THAT MURDER."

"I suppose you have made up your mind; it is a waste of time trying to save that man. Well, I about made up my mind to that myself, some time ago."

"Do you mind telling me how you got into this case?" he asked.

"As that is a private matter and you are not disposed to take any share in the case, I don't see why I should make you a confidant."

"Did Mrs. Prineveau ask you to defend Clarkson?"

"Ah! Mr. Greve told you?"

"No he didn't."

"Then, Mrs. Prineveau?"

"Mrs. Prineveau would not talk to me. I scared her."

"Scared her? you must have lost your tact."

"No, I haven't."

"Look here, Daryl," I said, a little nettled. "You are one of the cleverest men in a particular line I ever met. This whole thing is in a nutshell. Either that man Clarkson shot Mr. Prineveau or he didn't. If he didn't shoot him he must have been somewhere at the time. He says he was drunk and if so some one must have seen him at some resort far away from the scene of the crime. It's a plain piece of work to find out the man's resorts and get hold of the persons who saw him there on that day. That's all there is to it, and I don't mind telling you that I haven't a bit of faith in the task, but there's a chance."

Daryl did not say anything for a moment. He worked his big fist in his pocket mechanically, and looked down at his heavy boots as if he were at a complete loss. Presently he said, drawlingly: "Yes, that would be a waste of time."

"Then you have made up your mind that Clarkson is guilty."

"No—o. I've made up my mind he is innocent."

"Have you seen him?"

"Ye—s. Saw his wife, too."

"And he convinced you that he was innocent?"

"N—o. His wife convinced me."

I laughed. "You're more susceptible than I supposed," I said. "She would have convinced me, too, if I hadn't kept my wits about me."

Daryl threw his head back and pulled at his iron-gray whiskers a moment. Then he said in a schoolboy way: "I think I know who committed that murder, old fellow."

"Do you? Who?"

"Mrs. Prineveau!"

If he had told me that he thought I had committed it, I don't think I could have been more astonished. I gave an incredulous start. "I wish you'd give me the facts upon which you have built that quick and—pardon me for saying it—that preposterous conclusion."

"I haven't got a single fact yet," he replied. "I'll look for the facts if you like, later on."

"What in heaven's name then have you got to warrant such a conclusion?"

"Kinder got the truth. It's different from facts. Can't foot it up, but you feel it all the same. I allers prefer it to facts—to begin with, for the facts kinder fit into it, easy like."

I got up and took a turn or two. My mind did not easily adjust itself to this possibility. Daryl reached out his long arm and played with the paper weight on my table contentedly.

"Amos," I said, "I don't know what to make of this, and I think that you ought to tell me exactly how this notion got into your mind."

He toyed with the paper weight, and did not look at me. I could see that he was somewhat at a loss how to explain himself.

"Well," he finally said, "I ain't good at tracking my own notions, as you call 'em, but I don't mind saying in a gineral way that the truth slips into some people's systems without their knowin' how. As a rule it's a woman's system, and ten to one it's a woman like Mrs. Clarkson. Why, if her husband had murder on his clothes she'd smell it over night. She knows every turn of his big lubberly heart. She knows he hasn't killed anybody, and I'd take her word for it. A woman knows a lot of things that a man don't."

"Yes," I said, "she knows how to play on a man's susceptibilities."

"Mrs. Prineveau don't want to play on my susceptibilities, does she? You saw her, and talked with her, didn't you?"

"Yes, I did."

"And she struck you as a conscientious, self-respecting, kindly old party, didn't she?"

"She certainly impressed me as a woman who had nothing to conceal and was anxious that justice should be tempered with mercy."

"Very cool, and collected, and dignified."

"Most assuredly."

"Well, when she met me, she gave a start. 'Who brought you into the case?' she said. 'Not you, madam, of course,' says I, and she gave a little twitch. 'I wanted,' says I, 'to take a look at the bullet.' She switched at the back of the chair, and laid in a big breath.

...had better go to my lawyer. I think he will let you see it.' 'I'm not sure that he has it, madam,' I said, 'I have seen it, and it was never made for a pistol barrel.'

"My old fellow, that's a great woman, and she'll beat us in the end if we don't learn a woman's tactics. She just braced herself and began to act, but it was too late. 'Ah,' says she, 'you have some new ideas in the case or some new light. I only wish you would go to my lawyer with it, and if you wish any material assistance why you can come to me afterwards.'

"I call that simply prodigious; she says to herself: 'Here's a dangerous man. I'll get Mr. Greve to handle him and I'll handle Mr. Greve, and I'll throw out a hint of money at the same time.'"

Then Amos Daryl struck the paper-weight that he held in his hand emphatically on the table, and, turning round, said: "My friend, that woman had no sooner clapt her eyes on me than she understood the truth; and the truth was this: that somebody had arrived that she couldn't hoodwink. I tell you, a woman's thinking apparatus is lightning sometimes."

I sat down in front of Daryl. "You amaze me," I said. "Suppose you turn to the facts now. The bullet was not made for a pistol barrel."

"No. The pistol is a little French plaything. There are not twenty-five of them in the country, for we make these things better here. But it was made at a French factory where the cartridges are all moulder. The bullet from Mr. Prineveau's body was not moulder. It was cut from a piece of lead and shaped with an instrument. You can see the marks of a fine file on it if you use a glass."

"But," I observed, "the bullet entered Mr. Prineveau's side through his clothing, the hole was found in his vest. It must have been fired from that side, and Mrs. Prineveau was on the other side."

"See here," said Daryl, getting up suddenly. "I don't mind being a little rash just for once, and I'll bet you a trip ticket to Florida, where you can see my little orange grove, after this case is decided, that Mr. Prineveau didn't wear the vest with the hole in it when he was killed in the carriage. Have you been up to Sixty-sixth street and Fourth avenue to look the ground over?"

"No."

"Well, I have. It was five o'clock when Mr. Prineveau was killed, and there was a steady stiff wind blowing from the northeast with plenty of snow, but it was light enough to see westward across the open lots to the Fifth avenue. If there had been anybody within a thousand feet the coachman or Mrs. Prineveau could have seen him. To suppose that a little French pistol could have carried further than that straight to Mr. Prineveau's heart is one of those yarns that would make a marine sick. My dear fellow, I've talked more to-day than I have in six months. But Mrs. Clarkson was dead right when she said the thing to do is to prove that some one else committed the crime."

"Can we do it?"

"We can find that person, but to prove it—well, to tell you the truth, I don't believe we will, for that person is as clever as four lawyers and eight ordinary detectives, and has had the start of us for a year or more."

"Where are you going now?"

"I'm going over to take some things to that woman in Varick street. I don't believe she is comfortable, and I'm dead sure she hasn't any friends. I'll see you in the morning with some facts, if I run across 'em."

CHAPTER IV.

This interview, when I came to think it over, took the conceit out of me, and the retaining fee of five hundred dollars had an ugly look. Daryl, it was true, might be mistaken, but there was something in me that respected his opinions. Why did Mrs. Prineveau have such confidence in me and such distrust of Daryl? Why was I sent to her to be sized up, as it were. Evidently she was the kind of woman Daryl had insisted she was. She had counted on just the stupidity that I had shown. This reflection made my professional vanity a little vindictive. "So, so," I said to myself, "I am retained to defend Clarkson. Very well. He shall be defended to the best of my ability."

THE RETAINING FEE OF $500 HAD AN UGLY LOOK.

When Daryl came to see me the next evening I told him frankly that Mrs. Prineveau had given me a five-hundred-dollar retaining fee. He said he felt sure of it, and advised me to send it to Mrs. Clarkson if it hurt me.

"And who is to pay you?" I asked.

"I don't think either you or I will get any pay out of this," he replied. "But we are into it and we might as well carry it through."

"I am afraid," I said, "that we have undertaken a hopeless task. Let's divide it up."

"You find out Mrs. Prineveau's antecedents and I will find out if Mr. Prineveau wore that vest with the hole in it when he was killed. If he didn't who made that hole in it and for what purpose?"

"Rather narrow ground," I said, somewhat hopelessly.

"O, I've been on narrower and more slippery, and pulled out."

"But tell me what kind of a theory can you invent that will enable Mrs. Prineveau to kill her husband with a bullet on his left side, while she is sitting on his right?"

Daryl fell into his ...... stretched out his legs, thrust his hands into his pockets, and choked off a yawn.

"Did you read all the testimony at the coroner's examination?" he asked.

"Yes, all of it."

"Did you notice anything peculiar in the elements of time that entered into it?"

"No, I didn't."

He pulled out of his pocket a portion of the verbatim report. "Let me read you a little of it. This is the girl Rose Kenny's testimony:

"Q. What time was it when your master and mistress left the house to ride?

"A. Eight minutes of three.

"Q. What makes you so particular as to the time?

"A. I heard Mrs. Prineveau call to Mr. Prineveau and say that was the time just as they went out.

"Q. Wasn't there a clock in the room?

"A. No, sir. The clock is in the dining-room.

"There the question of time stops. Now listen to Mrs. Prineveau's testimony.

"Q. What time was it when the shot was fired?

"A. Five minutes past five—suddenly correcting herself—or about that.

"Does it occur to you that this particularity of time is unusual?"

"Yes; somewhat. But what is its significance?"

"This—that something may have been arranged to occur at a particular time, and Mrs. Prineveau had charged her mind with it. Here is the coachman's testimony:

"Q. Can you fix the exact time of the death of Mr. Prineveau?

"A. It was five o'clock.

"Q. Do you carry a watch?

"A. No.

"Q. Did Mrs. Prineveau have a watch with her?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. How then did you fix the time?

"A. Mrs. Prineveau looked at Mr. Prineveau's watch when we were turning into Fourth avenue and said it is five o'clock and that I must hurry.

"Now here the matter is dropped by the examination just as it is getting warm. Let's recapitulate," and Amos Daryl picked up my paper weight for illustration: "First, Mr. Prineveau carries a watch," and Amos Daryl put the paper weight down; "second, Mrs. Prineveau knew to a minute when they left the house." Mr. Daryl picked up the mucilage jar and placed it by the side of the paper weight; "third," and he picked up a match receiver, "she was anxious to know the exact time just before they reached the fatal spot." He put the match box down alongside the paper weight and reached for an ash receiver; "fourth, she ascertained the time by looking at Mr. Prineveau's watch." Down went the ash receiver; "fifth," and he picked up the ink bottle, "if she ascertained the exact time by looking at Mr. Prineveau's watch, and that watch was carried in the usual place on his left breast, then her fingers were at his heart just before the murder occurred," and down went the ink bottle. The usually scattered utensils of my desk were now in a little group covered by the massive paw of my friend Daryl.

"It is an interesting and a startling theory," I said, "and I see now to what it leads."

"I doubt that," replied Daryl. "Let me tell you to what it leads—insuperable difficulties, for the woman has all the clews in her own hand, and will baffle us at every step of the search, and have public sympathy in doing it."

"Then if we cannot get hold of the facts to substantiate your theory we are on a wild-goose chase."

"Not altogether."

"Why, we haven't a leg to go on without the facts."

"O, yes; one leg."

"What is it?"

"The truth."

I shrugged my shoulders.

"The truth will develop its own facts, and that is where Mrs. Prineveau, like all merely cunning people, is a little superficial. Suppose we set out to ascertain if Mr. Prineveau did not have two waistcoats of the same material, one of which it was alleged was punctured by a bullet and the other was not, and we wish to learn if Mrs. Prineveau did not have the opportunity when the body arrived home, to change the waistcoats, we shall be baffled by her, for she has arranged for just such a contingency."

"And away go our facts."

"Yes, but in comes our truth. Why does Mrs. Prineveau object to our searching for that waistcoat?"

Daryl gave his legs a stretch, rammed his big fists into his pocket, and then continued: "Look here, old fellow, I am right; that calm, self-possessed woman is living with a slow burning hell inside, for fear somebody will bring an intuition into this case and look past the facts that she has arranged to the truth that she can't alter.

"I've got a working hypothesis that fits every circumstance. What we've got to do is to keep this woman from suspecting it till she gets on the witness stand, and then pump it at her and watch the results. The moment she suspects that we have got the whole secret—she will go to pieces."

Three weeks of the month of April passed by and very little was done. Daryl went to Washington and to all appearances had made up his mind to let things rest on his far-fetched hypothesis. Gradually I fell into the belief that it was a hopeless case of defense. I had learned nothing to strengthen Daryl's theory. The prosecution openly avowed that they had a clear case. My friend John Greve patronizingly told me to do the best I could, and reminded me that there was no chagrin in making a good fight in a forlorn hope. I called upon Mrs. Prineveau once and she received me with the utmost candor, without a sign of perturbation and offered to give me any assistance in her power. I felt when I came away that Daryl had made a great mistake. As the day of the trial approached the newspapers referred to Clarkson as the murderer whose guilt was unmistakable, and Clarkson himself in one or two interviews had talked wildly and desperately and hurt his own case immediately.

I think it was on the 28th of April when I got an absurd and very brief letter from Daryl in Washington. This was all it said: "If you get discouraged go and see Mrs. Clarkson. Will be on with a fact or two on Monday."

The letter did not stimulate me, but the visit to Mrs. Clarkson did. I found her in improved but modest quarters up town and much more hopeful than I expected. She seized me by the hands and said: "I pray for you night and morning—that Heaven will preserve you till this is over. I tremble to think something might happen to you. O, sir, we never can pay you; but when you see that poor dear with his children in his arms once more I am sure you will feel that you have not been wholly unpaid."

I tried to let down the pegs of this strain as softly as I could and tell her that it would not do to be oversanguine of the result, but she said, with calm assurance, that she had no fear of the result now, and shortly afterwards her two winsome children announced to me with pitiable importance that papa was coming home again.

So when Daryl arrived on Monday I told him that I felt as if I were the only guilty party in the case. We had allowed an estimable woman to build up the most unwarranted hopes only to cruelly destroy them in the end.

Daryl paid no attention whatever to this. "I have got an important fact," he said. "The Prineveaus were abroad in 1877, and staid two weeks at Geneva. I never should have known this but for Mrs. Clarkson, who hunted up a letter from Mr. Prineveau to Mr. Clarkson that had contained a remittance, and this sentence: 'We have been detained here a week over our time by Mrs. P., who has been making purchases.'"

"What do you see in that?"

I FELT THAT DARYL HAD MADE A GREAT MISTAKE.

"Geneva is celebrated for its watchmakers. I sent a cablegram from the Washington bureau to the department of justice there asking them to find out if Mrs. Prineveau purchased a watch while there. Here is the answer, translated. Don't read the official verbiage—look at that sentence. What is it? 'Yes, Mme. Prineveau purchased a large silver watch of Bringdat Frere, who was closing out business. Number and description of watch unattainable.'"

After reading this we both laid back and looked at each other in silence a moment.

"It is your sane opinion, Daryl, that Prineveau was killed by a watch."

"Just as sure of it as Clarkson's wife is that you will free her husband from this charge."

"But we haven't got a scintilla of proof."

"No, we'll make Mrs. Prineveau furnish it on the witness stand."

Do you know what I said to Daryl? It's a rather humiliating confession, but I was considerably younger then than I am now.

"Daryl," said I, "you are the senior counsel for the defense. I might as well put myself in your hands and go it blindly."

He pulled out his brawny and hairy hands as if to let me see that they were big and strong enough to take care of me. But he only said:

"Good. I shouldn't wonder if I pulled you out of it with a good deal of honor. I'm counting on one little thing that you don't think of."

"What is it?"

"That Mrs. Prineveau retained you for the defense."

"Is that sarcasm?"

"No. Inspiration. Don't you know why she retained you?"

"Because she thought I'd make the worst possible defense."

"That was a secondary motive. The primary one was compunction. She's a woman and she couldn't help feeling sorry for Clarkson, who was such a helpless victim of her conspiracy. So she eased up her conscience by providing him with a lawyer. She felt safe in doing it. She tried to steer you into the insanity plea. Now all that shows that there is a weak spot in her. We'll go to court and lie in wait for her and jump on it suddenly, and then you'll see something dramatic."

[TO BE CONCLUDED.]

Love Transforms the Home.

"There's no place like home,"—sighed the housewife, as she viewed the kitchen smirched with smoke and saw the dining room paper flyspotted and torn, while the paint played hide-and-seek under the dirt.

But as she was a wise woman she did not despair, but went to Edward Love's, corner of North and Watchung avenues; and now she sings "There's no place like home" with a far different and the true meaning.

—W. A. Woodruff and VanBuren & Timpson, the agents who had the insurance on the recent slight fire in Werner's, have generously contributed to the Plainfield Relief Association the two slightly damaged overcoats which became their property on payment of the insurance.

CLUBS BREAK EVEN.

Honors Are Easy in the All-Round Tournament.

TWO VICTORIES FOR EACH CLUB.

Parks Win at Bowling and Pool, and Country Club Captures Whist and Billiards.

The Park clubhouse presented a scene of enthusiasm last Friday, when the all-round contest between the Union County Country Club and the Park Club took place. The honors were evenly divided, each winning two out of the four different games contested—the Parks bowling and pool, and the Country Club whist and billiards.

The score on the bowling game was:

PARKS.		COUNTRY CLUB.
Leonard	210	Browne	108
Erickson, R.	168	VanBoskerck	148
Waring	182	Herring	110
Erickson, J.	189	Fleming	138
VanBuren	125	Beebe	153
Hegeman	154	Bogert	139
Evans	135	Chapman	177
Worth, W.	183	Wharton	98
Worth, G.	125	Steile	162
Matthews	163	Burnet	171
	1520		1420

BY FRAMES.

Park	143	285	403	617	775	968	1095	1197	1366	1520
C. Club	120	281	406	561	749	880	1007	1155	1284	1420

In billiards and pool 100 points constituted the game. Two members from each club contested these games, and each one played with the other, so that four games were necessary. The Parks won at pool and the Country Club at billiards. The scores:

BILLIARDS.

Murray—Union County	100
VanDeventer—Park	85
Underwood—Park	100
Scott—Union County	65
VanDeventer—Park	100
Scott—Union County	86
Murray—Union County	100
Underwood—Park	45

TOTALS.

Union County	351
Park Club	312

POOL.

Stockton—Union County	84
Lyman—Park	100
Stockton—Union County	88
Hinrichs—Park	100
Baker—Union County	67
Hinrichs—Park	100
Baker—Union County	88
Lyman—Park	100

TOTALS.

Park Club	400
Union County	379

At duplicate whist the score was:

PARKS.		UNION COUNTY.
McCutcheon Townsend	6	Dumont Beebe	9
Peck Horne	1	Kirchoff Erickson	7
Dupee McGee	5	Mason Perkins	7
Reed Rogers	8	Ladd Kaufman	2

TOTALS.

Union County	25
Park Club	20

THE NATION'S CAPITAL.

Personally-Conducted Tours to Washington, D. C., via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The series of three-day tours to Washington, D. C., arranged by the Pennsylvania Railroad, offers an opportunity to visit that place under the most favorable conditions; the rate being low and the service first-class in every particular. A tourist agent and an experienced woman as chaperon will accompany each tour, and the services of special guides in the Capitol Building are placed at the disposal of the parties.

The tours leave New York and Philadelphia March 21, and at intervals of three weeks until May 23, 1895, inclusive. The rates, including accommodations at Washington's best hotels, are $13 50 from New York and $11.50 from Philadelphia; proportionate rates from other points.

Detailed itinerary will be sent on application to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Plumbers' Committees.

At the meeting of the Master Plumbers Association last night President John Carney announced the following standing committees:

Executive Committee—All officers, with vice-president as chairman.

Conference—Wm Addis, C M Raybert, C W Krausse, D W Littell, A H Esander.

License—D T Kenney, I L McVoy, W H Addis, Jr.

Auditing—D W Littell, C W Krausse, A M Griffin.

Trade School—C M Raybert, D W Littell, C W Krausse, Wm Addis, A H Esander.

Trade Protection—Geo J Tobin, C W. Krausse, D T Kenney, A H Esander, C M Raybert.

Geo. J. Tobin was elected marshal and Chas. M. Raybert sergeant-at-arms.

Five trustees were also elected with D. W. Littell as chairman.

—Mr. Ross of Elizabeth has challenged George Squires of North Plainfield to shoot a match for $50 a side, 50 birds, to take place at "Al" Heritage's, Marion, Saturday, March 16. Friends of Squires took the bet, and a good shoot is promised.

—Lewis A. Bernum of Woodland avenue is having the interior of his house handsomely papered and decorated by Woolston & Buckle.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Librarian's Report for the Month of February, 1895.

Volumes on accession-book, Jan. 31, 1895	12,674
" added by purchase	102
Volumes added by gift	21
Volumes now in the library	12,986
Number of card-holders	2,322
Cash rec'd from fines	$ 16.32
" " " non-resident subscriptions	$ 2.00
Home Circulation.
Fiction	1397
Juvenile	575
Biography	105
Travel	200
Philosophy	16
Religion	35
Sociology	46
Philology	3
Natural science	77
Useful arts	27
Fine arts	54
Literature	213
History	210
General works	18
Total	3181
Total for February, '94	2814
Increase	367
Visitors to building	3,548
Average circulation per day	135

Gifts during the month—

Feb. 1—From N. Y. State Library, 76th annual report.

Feb. 1—From Smithsonian Inst., 8th-10th annual reports.

Feb. 13—N. J. Journal of 50th Senate; also minutes of 118th Gen. Assembly, 2 v.

Feb. 20—Miss M. S. Miller, 10 odd volumes.

Feb. 20—Plainfield Club of Princeton, Princeton Bric-a-brac, class of '96.

Feb. 25—J. W. Murray, Rebellion records, v. 46, pt. 1 and atlas.

Feb. 28—Miss Boorman, Fortnightly Review, (unbound) 2 v.

Literary World, 2 v.

EMMA L. ADAMS,
Librarian.

Street Railway Annual Meeting.

The officers of the Plainfield Street Railway met in annual session Thursday afternoon at the company's office. Proposed extensions were talked about, and thoroughly discussed, and it was expressed as their desire to push them forward as rapidly as possible.

They were anxious to lay the rails from West Fourth street into Arlington avenue. The consents of property owners on the east side and in the Netherwood district had been obtained; and just as soon as the company felt assurred they could proceed without any hindrance they would go ahead with it.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were:

President—Thomas Nevins.
Vice-president—Dr. J. T. Fritts.
Treasurer—Chandler Riker.
Secretary—Adrain Riker.
Directors—J. B. Brown and Thomas Nevins, Jr.

Mr. Adleman was appointed superintendent for another year.

Real Estate Changes Hands.

During February the following transfers of North Plainfield real estate were recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office:

George E. Cummings to John L. Brewster, $2,000.

Margaret E. McLaughlin to Charles W. Hummer, $800.

Charles W. Hummer to Margaret E. McLaughlin, $2,300.

Jacob Voehl and wife to Israel W. Stout, $2,900.

Jane E. Brokaw to Gustav Rupert, $1,200.

Thos. Jennings to Sarah F. Jennings, $1.

George A. Dilts, Sheriff, to Mary C. Davis, $1,200.

Aaron D. Thompson and wife to Fidelity T. & D. Co., $1.

Caroline A. Hudson, trustee, to Wm. J. Hudson, $1.

Ella Mundy and husband to Irenaeus Allen, $1.

Irenaeus P. Allen and wife to Jane Wyckoff, $1.

Jane Wyckoff and husband to Annie A. Allen, $1.

Sarah E. Squier and husband to Serafino Trojano, $85.

Accepted the Call.

A. B. Clemens who has been connected with the Plainfield Manual Training School, and acted as instructor of the Plainfield branch of the National School of Electricity, but who has given most of his time to the assistant secretaryship of the local Young Men's Christian Association, has accepted a call to the assistant State secretaryship of the Young Men's Christian Association of New Jersey. This necessitates his removal to Newark May 15.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them, in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. Now as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled apothecaries and careful and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; good wages; write at once and secure choice of territory. [illegible] NURSERY CO., [illegible]

EIGHT MINUTES OF THREE.
A DETECTIVE STORY

EIGHT MINUTES OF THREE.

A DETECTIVE STORY

BY NYM CRINKLE

[Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

CHAPTER V.

The day of the trial arrived in May. Daryl and I had arranged our plan carefully. We were to let the prosecution sail along with only a perfunctory show of objections and the most careless of cross-examinations and wait for Mrs. Prineveau to get on the stand. Daryl kept out of court, and the state had everything its own way. The killing was shown, the post-mortem gone over and the bullet and pistol shown and identified, and the ownership established. I let each witness go by without an attempt to confuse or invalidate his testimony, and only cross-examined the girl, Rosy, in accordance with Daryl's suggestion.

"One moment, Miss Kenny," I said, as she was leaving the stand. "You have testified that Mrs. Prineveau alone assisted Mr. Prineveau to dress for the ride?"

Rosy—"Yes, sir; she always helped him to dress."

"When you came into the room was he completely dressed?"

"No, sir; he had his waistcoat on, but not his coat, and he was going into his own room to get it."

"And Mrs. Prineveau called after him to hurry, as it was eight minutes of three?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, Miss Kenny, try and recall if Mrs. Prineveau did not say anything else before they left the house?"

"O, yes, sir. She called back to me on the stairs and told me to keep her door locked, as there were strange men working on the roof."

"What were they doing there?"

"Fixin' the tin."

"How many of them?"

"Two or three, I guess."

"That will do, Miss Kenny."

So transparently puerile and nude of any mark was all this to John Greve that he came to me at recess and in his large patronizing way said, as he laid his hand on my shoulder:

"Harry, my dear fellow, you'll have to get up some steam and make a show of earning your retainer. By Jove, I recommended you!"

Daryl on the other hand was in the best of humor when we met in my study.

"Capital, capital," said he. "Couldn't be better. The two or three men on the roof is a surprise. The evening papers are playing into our hands beautifully.

"One of them says: 'The counsel for the defense had to be waked up at intervals and asked to say a few words and then went to sleep again.' That's a godsend. If Mrs. Prineveau is not lulled into a profound sense of security by this time then I'm an Injin. Keep your eye on her when I come into court and sit down by your side."

The next day, after a good deal of medical testimony about the aorta and bullet wounds, all of which I let go without a word, Mrs. Prineveau was called. It was rather late in the afternoon. She came forward richly but plainly dressed, looked every inch a dignified but sorrowful widow and won everybody's sympathy at once. When she had seated herself in the witness box with calm and prepossessing candor, John Daryl came in through the crowd and sat down at my side. I was watching her closely, and saw plainly enough the muscles of her mouth twitch and her glance turn involuntarily toward John Greve for reassurance. But neither John Greve nor anybody else but myself saw anything.

Her testimony, given in a clear, direct manner and with the low, soft convincing tones of a lady, was merely corroborative of what we already knew. She was carried over the facts and restated them.

When the examination, without a single exception on my part, had been concluded, I began the cross-examination.

"Madame," I said, "it is in evidence that there was no clock in your dressing room, and that when you had put Mr. Prineveau's vest upon him and he had gone into his room, you called after him and asked him to hurry as it was eight minutes of three. Will you kindly tell the jury how you knew at that moment the exact time?"

The full import of this question, very rapidly put, came upon her all at once. According to Daryl's theory she had looked at the silver watch before putting it into Mr. Prineveau's vest pocket, and this was the first intimation she had received that we were in full cry after the watch.

There was a dead silence in the courtroom, caused by the curiosity of the listeners to find out what this question had to do with the murder.

I saw her hand tighten on the rail in front of her and her eyes dart from Daryl to me with a quick gleam of alarm. It was a critical moment for her, and she and the two men in front of her alone knew it.

Then, to my astonishment and chagrin, she seemed to recover herself, and with the same placid and candid voice as before she said:

"The clock on the church tower of St. Mary's is visible from my window, and I saw the time on that. It was eight minutes of three."

"Adjourn the cross-examination," whispered Daryl, hoarsely, to me.

"Your honor," I said, "it is now fifteen minutes of the hour of adjournment, and the witness is fatigued. I ask you to let the further cross-examination of the witness go over till morning."

I heard the suppressed laugh that went round the counsel table and was echoed by the listeners in the courtroom. But the adjournment was taken, and the moment I got Daryl alone, I said: "Well, you see your theory didn't work. What are we going to do now?"

To my surprise Daryl betrayed something like excitement. "I told you," he said, "that she was a smart woman. But I'll beat her now or hang myself. Go to your rooms and leave orders so that I can see you any time before daybreak to-morrow. I'll be back there, sure."

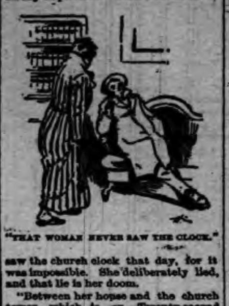
"What are you going to do?"

"Find those men that were working on the roof."

And with that he darted off, and I had a sickly kind of feeling that if he kept his word he would hang himself.

About three o'clock the next morning he woke me up with an outrageous ringing of the door gong. I slipped on my dressing gown, rubbed a wet towel over my head and face and went down. His long legs were stretched out in the study.

"Now, look here," he began, at once. "Let me give you this as straight and briefly as possible. That woman never saw the church clock that day, for it was impossible. She deliberately lied, and that lie is her doom.



"THAT WOMAN NEVER SAW THE CLOCK."

"Between her house and the church tower, which is on Twenty-second street, there is on the other side of Twenty-second street, nearest to her house, a building called Hibernia hall. There are two poles on either end of its cornice, and on the 17th of March, which is St. Patrick's day, there was a big banner stretched between them, and nobody in Mrs. Prineveau's house could see the church clock. The men on the roof couldn't tell when the dinner hour came, on account of it. I've got the two men, and they will swear positively, and so will the man who keeps the hall. Go back to bed; get your rest, and tackle her to-morrow just where you left off."

When the court opened John Greve, with the privileged sarcasm of an old lawyer, said: "The witness is yours, counselor. You can now investigate that church clock."

This was an unlucky speech.

"Madame," I said to Mrs. Prineveau, "at my learned brother's suggestion we will go back to the church clock. Now why did you say you saw the time on that church clock when it was impossible to see it from your house on that day?"

She was taken unawares and repeated after me: "Impossible?"

"Yes," I said, "impossible. There was a large stationary banner stretched on St. Patrick's day between your house and the church tower."

She showed some signs of distress and half turned towards her counsel. He was on his feet in a moment.

"Your honor," he said, "while I am perfectly willing to allow every latitude to my learned young friend in this interesting diversion, I submit that the time of this court cannot be taken up altogether with matters that are obviously irrelevant. The witness may have seen the time by a watch or computed it by the sun."

This was my chance. The witness did see the time on a watch. I said: "But she will not acknowledge it. I now ask you, madame: Did you not see that it was eight minutes of three by a watch?"

Daryl had come in now and his big cavernous eyes were fixed on her. She hesitated a moment and then said:

"I may have done so; I do not remember."

"Do you mean to say that you fixed the time to a minute and do not remember how you did it?"

"I do not remember."

"Then why did you swear yesterday that you fixed it by the church clock?"

"I have been in the habit of so doing when in my room."

"But now you say you may have done it by a watch."

"I may have."

"What watch?"

"I—I cannot say."

I heard Daryl whisper at this moment, hard and fast now: "Don't let her think."

"Was it a silver watch made by Bringdat Frere, Geneva?"

A look of weariness shot across her face. Her lids came down a little tremulously. She made a movement, very slight, of distress. John Greve jumped to his feet to protest, and some one gave her a glass of water.

"The counsel is simply wearing out the witness," said Greve, "with incomprehensible questions. On behalf of the lady, who is distressed and ill, I protest."

"And on behalf of justice," I replied, "I ask the jury to observe that the questions about a watch distress both witness and counsel.

"Madame, was it not your husband's silver watch by which you saw the time when you put it in his waistcoat pocket, to be worn over that spot where the bullet hole was made?"

Here the prosecuting attorneys were all on their feet, of course, shouting exceptions. But I kept my eye on the witness. I knew that there was a profound sensation in the courtroom. I could feel it against my back like a magnetic wave. But I never took my eyes off the woman.

"Your honor," I said, without turning my head toward the bench, "this is a question of life or death to an innocent man. His fate lies in the answers of this witness. She has deliberately lied in saying that she saw the time from a church clock, and she did it to conceal something. It will save the state and my learned friends a great deal of futile labor to permit the cross-examination to go on now."

"If the counsel will frame his questions to fall within the evidence there can be no objection," said the judge.

"Madame, your husband carried a watch?"

She bowed her head.

"Did he buy that watch or did you?"

"I may have done so. I have made many purchases for him."

"Can you produce that watch?"

"I suppose so."

"Could you identify it if I produced it?"

She did not immediately answer this question. I could see that a weird change was coming over her. She was making up her mind that Daryl and I knew the whole dire history of her crime, and were merely playing with her. The weary look became more pronounced. Daryl saw this, too, and whispered to me not to forget the waistcoat.

"I ask you, could you identify the watch if we produced it?"

"Yes, I suppose so."

"Could you identify the bullet that fitted into the back of it?"

I stood still while the indignant voices of the prosecution rang out. For I saw what was coming. During the wrangle of objections, she toppled over in a dead faint and struck her head on the bar of the box heavily.

The one thing that I distinctly heard in the confusion that followed was Daryl's husky whisper: "Look out now that she don't kill herself before she makes a confession. The jig's up. I'm going over to tell Miss Clarkson."

But he didn't go to Miss Clarkson's till the next day. He got shunted off quite unexpectedly. As soon as he learned that Mrs. Prineveau had been taken from the courtroom to a neighboring hospital, he went straight to her house and, getting in by some means, ransacked the whole establishment with one of the central office men, until he found the watch.

It was the most ingenious piece of mechanism I ever saw. If you set it at eight minutes of three it fired off a fulminating cap and drove the silver-plated bullet in the back with sufficient force to bed itself for half an inch in a soft piece of wood, for we saw it tried in Superintendent Byrnes' office.

[THE END.]

A London Singer With a Fetching Wink.

Cissy Fitzgerald's wink has broadened so with her advance from burlesque to the legitimate that Hoyt's Theater will not be able to hold it if it continues to grow. It has become a comprehensive dropping of the eyelid, which threatens to inclose half the orchestra every time it falls. Persons in the front rows of seats, when Cissy takes the center of the stage, puts her hands on her hips, leans over the footlights, and fills her eye with an expression of rebellious invitation, clamber back from the stage for fear of being engulfed in the wink that they know is coming. But the lid falls slowly over that black eye bulging with expressives, rests for a second in significant eclipse, and as it rests the audience tears itself reluctantly out of Cissy's confidence. The result of the wink in such a small theater as Hoyt's is still a matter of uncertainty. There never has been anything of the kind in the past, and what the consequence will be nobody can tell as yet. The wink is out of all proportion to the size of the house, and its effectiveness is increased to an extent that may lead to any consequences. Susceptible young men sitting near the stage have been carefully observed by the management since the opening night in order that any serious symptoms may be noticed and the wink abated if its pressure prove too strong to the square inch. Nothing really alarming has been noticed yet, but the management has made a very excellent provision whenever a crisis may arise.—New York Sun.

Marvellous.

Mrs. Sniffwell—Why, Bridget, you have been eating onions!

Bridget—Shure, mum, you're a moind reader.

Its Origin.

"I suppose," observed Adam after the fall, "that we must go."

"I haven't a blessed thing to wear," protested Eve. The thought was born.—Puck.

To the Pyramids by trolley sounds rather incongruous, but it may soon be a possible trip. The Egyptian Government has just granted a concession for an electric railroad in Cairo, and the Pyramids are only eight miles away.

H. G. Bower and family of Jersey City will be residents of Plainfield from April 1. They will occupy one of Voehl's flats on East Front street.

THE best investment in real estate is to keep buildings well painted. Paint protects the house and saves repairs. You sometimes want to sell—many a good house has remained unsold for want of paint. The rule should be, though, "the best paint or none." That means

Strictly Pure White Lead

You cannot afford to use cheap paints. To be sure of getting Strictly Pure White Lead, look at the brand; any of these are safe:

"Atlantic," "Jewett," "Brooklyn."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and color-card. Send us a postal card and get both free.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

McALLISTER'S BALL.

The Bitter Controversy Over the Washington Centennial.

The death of Ward McAllister recalls the famous and amusing controversy in which he became involved with Stuyvesant Fish, Elbridge T. Gerry and others in 1889, over the management of the ceremonial ball of the Washington Centennial.

It was a most spirited controversy, diversified with much personality of a more or less acrimonious nature. For the time it helped to make miserable the lives of Mr. Fish and his fellow members of the Centennial Entertainment Committee, and furnish entertainment for the whole country, while it also served more than any other event in his career to establish Mr. McAllister's national reputation as the leader of the fashionable host and the greatest amateur chef and manager in the country.

The trouble was that McAllister assumed from the start a greater responsibility than Mr. Fish and his committee thought him entitled to. He went ahead with the arrangements, exactly as if he was the supreme head, and he made the machinery of his Patriarchs' balls the nucleus of the mechanism of the big ceremonial ball.

He consulted with the caterers of the city and made contracts for the supper, the wines and the decorations. He settled all the details of the ceremonial events of the ball, and made up and gave out for publication the list of the sixteen women whom he had chosen to dance the quadrille d'honneur.

It was this last act that brought on the storm. Stuyvesant Fish had made a list of women himself, but Mr. McAllister had rejected it, holding that some of Mr. Fish's personal friends thereon were not suited, by reason of birth and dignity, to so great an honor.

The result was a very bitter feeling between the two, and Mr. Fish's committee took the matter up, after a vast amount of discordant passages at arms, and clipped the manager's wings.

This was, indeed, a sad blow to Mr. McAllister. In a moment all his plans were swept aside, and he was left merely the floor manager, to carry out the plans of "that man Fish," as he contemptuously designated the chairman of the Entertainment Committee in a newspaper interview.

He resigned the place of secretary, but still clung to the post of manager, in the hope that affairs might still permit him to see the fruition of the dream of his life.

At a meeting of the committee angry words passed, and Mr. Fish demanded his resignation as manager, which he refused to give—to him—adding that if Mayor Grant, the head of the General Committee wanted it he would resign to him and to him only.

A very bitter war of words followed. First McAllister talked to reporters and then Fish talked. The controversy dragged on for weeks in this way and made the spiciest of reading.

"Neither Fish nor Gerry has the slightest idea of how to get up a ball," said McAllister. "It requires a special talent and much observation and study. Gerry says that it makes no difference if you have nothing better than pork and beans, so long as you have a big crowd. That's his idea of a great ceremonial ball.

"I have seen this Centennial ball in my mind, pictured even its smallest particulars. I saw its surging masses, never quiet, for I meant to put champagne on one side and refreshments on the other to keep the great kalliidoscope ever moving.

"I saw in my imagination the greatest ceremonial that the country had ever seen in the entrance of the President of the United States. I saw the opening quadrille in its every movement—a magnificent thing, as magnificent to the eye as to the fancy—and last of all the great cotillion.

"I have attended the great balls of the Duke of Tuscany, of the Emperor of Austria, of dozens of other royal potentates, and I had planned to reproduce in this ball the best features of all."

As McAllister didn't resign, the committee literally "fired" him in the middle of April in a letter from Secretary Gouveneur Morris, in which he said that as the committee had robbed the office of manager of its importance, it was the committee's wish, that he, McAllister, should continue no longer to fill the office.

"The whole thing in a nutshell," said Mr. Fish for publication, "is that McAllister is getting pretty well advanced in years, and the committee, consisting of William Jay, W. W. Astor, W. K. Vanderbilt, Robert Goelet and myself, is not one that can be bossed by any demagogue, big or little, young or old."

CHRISTIAN CYCLERS.

Cross-Rider Coming at the Head of the Y. M. C. A. Bicycle Club.

Quite an enthusiastic meeting was held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening by members of the gymnasium. The object of the meeting was to consider matters relative to the organization of a bicycle club. After the meeting was convened Physical Director MacPhie was called to the chair, and J. A. Robinson appointed secretary, pro tem.

The following officers were appointed to hold office for one year from date:

President, Thomas Coming; Vice-President, J. A. Robinson; Secretary and Treasurer, C. W. Nichols. The above-named officers with Physical Director MacPhie, ex-officio, were appointed to form an executive committee.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

I suffered terribly from roaring in my head during an attack of catarrh, and became very deaf, used Ely's Cream Balm and in three weeks could hear as well as ever.—A. E. Newman, Garling, Mich.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from the nose. Physicians prescribed without benefit. After using Ely's Cream Balm a short time the disease was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE

Sold outright, no rent, no royalty. Adapted to City, Village or Country. Needed in every home, shop, store and office. Greatest convenience and best seller on earth. Agents make from $5 to $50 per day. One in a residence means a sale to all the neighbors. Fine instruments, no toys, works anywhere, any distance. Complete, ready for use when shipped. Can be put up by any one, never out of order, no repairing, lasts a life time. Warranted. A money maker. Write W. P. Harrison & Co., Clerk 10, Columbus, O.

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

NEWARK, N. J.

Phenomenal Values IN UPHOLSTERY GOODS.

The careful housewife whose thoughts will soon turn to spring house cleaning and fixings, and who desires to practice economy, cannot possibly make a better investment than in the grand values we offer in Upholstery Goods.

New Nottingham Lace Curtains,

Very choice and well covered designs and excellent quality.

98c Value,	$1.49 Value,	$1.98 Value,	$2.98 Value,	$3.98 Value
59c	98c	$1.25	$1.98	$2.98

FIGURED CHINA SILK for drapery and also suitable for pillow covering, new designs and choice colors, value 69c. at 49 cents.

FIGURED SILKALINE 36 inches wide, fine designs and desirable colorings, value 12½c, at 7½ cents.

TAMBOURED SASH MUSLIN with double border and well covered centres, in the latest designs, very choice quality, value 19c, at 12½ cents.

CHENILLE PORTIERES, each pair 75 inches wide, wide dado and frieze and heavy tassel fringe, excellent weighty quality, all the most desirable shades, value $2.98, at $1 98.

☞ Mail orders promptly filled.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street. Newark, N. J.

DEATHS.

H•LLETT—In New Market March 8, 1895 Grace Ward Hallett, youngest child of James and Alice Hallett.
Relatives and friends are very respectfully invited to the funeral service on Tuesday, March 12, at 11 a. m.

COX—At Manasquan, N. J., March 8, 1895, Mrs. Martha H. Cox, widow of Rev. Charles Cox, in the 79th year of her age.

ANDERSON—In this city March 10, 1895, Henrietta B., wife of Dr. A. W. Anderson, aged 21 years, 3 months and 10 days.
Funeral services from the residence of her father, Mr. Robert Anderson, 436 East 2[illegible] street, Tuesday, March 12, at 2 p. m.

BILYEU—In North Plainfield, March 8, 1895 Jeremiah L. Bilyeu, aged 65 years.
Funeral services Sunday, March 10, at 1 p. m. from Warren Mission Chapel. Relatives and friends and members of Major Anderson Post, No. [illegible], G. A. R., are respectfully invited to attend. Interment at Mount Horeb.

JOHNSON—In this city March 6, 1895, Mrs. Johnson, of Prescott place, in her 75th year.
Funeral from her late residence 214 Prescott place, Friday afternoon March 8 1895 2 o'clock at the house and 2:30 at St. Mary's Church. Interment at St. Mary's cemetery.
Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
CATARRH
CURES COLD
HEAD
HAY FEVER
ELY BROS.

ELY'S Cream Balm CATARRH

Is quickly absorbed. Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation. Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Additional Cold. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell.

COLD IN HEAD

IT WILL CURE. A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren st., New York.

SHERIFF'S SALE—New Jersey Supreme Court. The City National Bank of Plainfield vs. Jas. T. Wilson, impld., etc. Fi. fa. de bo. et ter. In case.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on

WEDNESDAY, THE THIRD DAY OF APRIL, A. D. 1895,

at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all the right, title and interest of the above named defendant in and to all the following tract or parcel of land and premises, situate in the city of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey:

Beginning at a point in Washington avenue and corner of land of formerly Phineas F. Randolph; thence running in a northwesterly course to the abutment wall of the bridge; thence running in a southwesterly course two hundred and twenty-eight feet to a point in line of said Randolph's land, or formerly his; thence running in a southeasterly course one hundred and forty-two feet more or less to a stake and corner; thence running in a northeasterly course two hundred and twenty-eight feet more or less to the place of beginning.

GEORGE KYTE, Sheriff.

J. B. Coward, Att'y.
mh 4 td EDJ&C Fees $[illegible].40

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.

Estate of John Jacob Lang, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1895 on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said deceased, under oath or affirmation, and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor should be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG,
Executrix.

2148

The New York Tribune, 1895.

Foremost of American Weeklies.

Circulation 168,000 Copies a Week

First to rally from the overwhelming defeat of 1892, The New York Tribune patiently labored for two years to awaken the sleeping judgment of the Nation. Possessing an enormous circulation, equipped with a staff of competent and honest students of public questions, and itself having no object to serve except the welfare of the masses upon the farms and in the shops, scorning lies and sensational appeals, and satisfied merely to place the truth before its readers, The Tribune has sent to half a million earnest and reflecting people, weekly, a budget of honest facts, sensible arguments and friendly suggestions, which have at last born fruit in the elections of 1894. The work of the people is, however, only half done. It is necessary in 1896 to place in the Chair which Grover Cleveland has not adorned, a constructive statesman of the Republican faith. To this task The Tribune now addresses itself, and invites the support of every American citizen who desires a return of the "good old times."

Roswell G. Horr, ex-Congressman from Michigan, but now of New York City, will continue to discuss Tariff, Currency, Coinage and Labor questions in The Tribune. By all odds the most witty, earnest and well-informed speaker upon the stump, he is every year sent by The Tribune to aid the local campaigns in every part of the country. He keeps in constant touch with the people, knows their wants, and addresses himself in The Tribune directly to the thoughts which are in their minds, and makes himself understood. He will gladly answer questions, asked in good faith by readers.

All the regular features of The Tribune will be continued. For Western readers, a special array of Western news is supplied. For Eastern readers an Eastern edition is printed.

It is the intention to make the paper especially helpful to farmers and mechanics. Each class has its separate department in The Tribune; and the new inventions of mechanics, who lack the means to exploit the product of their brains, are advertised free of charge in the hope of aiding them to find a purchaser or a partner.

The market reports of The Tribune, long acknowledged to be the best in the country, will maintain their old standard; and the usual variety of foreign news letters, essays upon home topics, book reviews, articles on chess and checkers, and miscellany will be presented every week. The editorial pages of the paper sum up the most important news of the day, with comments.

The Tribune also prints, for the ladies, the very latest fashions from Paris and London, and there is a department of "Answers to Questions," conducted by a capable writer, in which all the questions of the people on miscellaneous topics are carefully answered.

The semi-weekly Tribune is an incomparable paper for residents who live beyond the range of The Daily Tribune, but find it necessary to keep in touch with the best thoughts and higher interests of the world at large.

A few premiums are offered to readers and club agents.

Any friend of The Tribune is cordially invited to send for sample copies and terms and make up a club of subscribers. We would be especially pleased to see a large circle of readers in every workshop.

The Weekly, $1; The semi-weekly, $2; The daily Tribune, $10 a year. The Tribune Almanac for 1895 ready in January, 25 cents a copy.

THE TRIBUNE, New York.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MARCH 21, 1895. No 12

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—Madison.

A PROGRESSIVE MAYOR.

This is to Be a Business Administration.

GREAT IMPROVEMENTS ADVOCATED.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Takes the Oath of Office, and Gives Important Advice to the Newly-Organized Council.

The North Plainfield Borough Council met last Monday to organize for the coming year. H. E. Needham, retiring Mayor, gave the oath of office to Mayor-elect B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and then the new Mayor administered the oath to Messrs. Lounsbury, Schutt and Smith, the newly-elected Councilmen.

Mayor Hegeman presented the following message, which was received and filed:

To the Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN: A well established custom prescribes that I shall bring to your attention, at the first meeting of our Council, several matters of importance which in my opinion are essential to the well being and progress of the Borough, and would urge you to give them your prompt and thoughtful consideration.

The first of these is the immediate necessity of providing the community with a system of sewerage which will in every respect meet the wants of our citizens. This will abolish the undesirable use of cesspools, which prevails at present. A proposal of this kind has been brought before you by my two immediate predecessors, and during the past year a considerable amount of work has been accomplished, but to the present has been confined to surveying and the preparation of maps. A step of this importance should be taken only in response to a general demand by the taxpayers and after a full hearing before our Council.

With reference to our streets and sidewalks, I cannot too strongly impress upon you the necessity of keeping them in such a state of repair that our citizens may use them with safety and comfort. At the present time much remains to be done to bring about this desired result. Many of our board walks are broken and dangerous, and many stone and brick walks have become depressed and shapeless; all this must be corrected. I would appeal to our citizens to co-operate with the Council in this project and facilitate our labors by giving their personal attention to the repair of the walks before their own homes, or by reporting to the Council any defective walks that may come under their observation.

Though our principal streets are macadamized, in many instances they are out of repair and covered with mud. This condition of affairs should have your early attention.

In view of the fact that before very long a sewerage system will undoubtedly be introduced, it would not be prudent to make any but necessary repairs, in our road work, except in certain cases dictated by the demands of our people's comfort and wise policy.

Notably among these are Harrison street, which is almost if not quite impassable during the Fall and Spring months. Prospect place which connects two of our prominent thoroughfares both of which are well paved, is in a very bad state of repair, no labor having been expended upon it for several years. The upper end of Grove street is in an uncompleted state, though there was spent on it a large amount of money contributed by public spirited citizens both of the City and Borough, to provide work for the deserving poor during the Winter of 1893 and '94. This work should be continued where it was of necessity dropped. It will require only the expenditure of a small amount of money and a good road will then be provided leading from the Mountain to the City and lessening the heavy carting on Somerset street.

Our Fire Department is in good condition. It is provided with modern equipment, an admirable hydrant system and efficient Fire Alarm. The company is well officered and is composed of faithful and efficient men.

There is one section of our Borough practically without protection against fire. I allude to the district which lies between Grove street and Maple avenue, Greenbrook road and the mountain. This district is thickly built up with small frame houses. Stony brook is the nearest water available in case of fire, and the engine located at Somerset street is so far away that it is impossible for it to be of any service when needed. I would suggest therefore that the Water Company be requested to run a line of pipe through Harrison street with two or three hydrants located at convenient intervals, that the old hose carriage be equipped with a supply of hose and a small frame house be built for the accommodation of a volunteer hose company to be formed by the young men of that neighborhood. You will thus furnish ample protection to a much neglected district and satisfy its just demands.

For several years the question of opening Watchung avenue from the Borough to the City has been prominently before the public. An effort was made through the Township Committee, in this direction, but the effort was fruitless. This was due to the decision of the courts; since that time the matter has rested until it was brought up again in a joint conference between the Street Committee of the Plainfield Council and similar representatives of this body. At that meeting it was unanimously agreed that this work should be started without further delay. With this decision I most heartily concur and would urge upon this Council the vital importance of this improvement.

I request therefore that you will not delay in taking the initial steps to secure the opening of this street, and I most sincerely trust that before another year rolls around our citizens may see a broad avenue, well paved and lighted, running from the Watchung Mountains to the Short Hills, connecting our beautiful Borough with our sister City across the brook.

In all matters, however, which relate to civic progress, you must not permit the tax rate to be raised, especially in these times of general depression. It is your duty to advance along all lines of material improvement, but to do so with due regard to wise economy.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Mr. Lounsbury was the unanimous choice for President of the Council, and the following committees were appointed:

Streets and Public Health—Messrs. Smith, Lounsbury, Schutt.

Fire, Water and Lamps—Messrs. Peck, Smith and Valiant.

License and Marshal—Messrs. Lounsbury, Valiant and Peck.

Auditing and Finance—Messrs. Schutt, Lounsbury and Howell.

Laws, Ordinances and Election—Messrs. Valiant, Peck and Howell.

Stationery and Printing — Messrs. Howell, Smith and Schutt.

Charles A. Reed was chosen Borough Counsel at the salary of $500 a year.

J. W. VanHorn was made Chief Marshal at a salary of $60 a month.

William Emmons was elected Street Commissioner at $50 a year, and $2 per day when working on the streets.

T. B. Crosley was again made Borough Magistrate at the salary of $100 a year.

Clerk Arnold's salary was made $400 a year.

A petition from J. Hoerster for the privilege of building an addition to his building, was granted, and one from John French to lay a sidewalk 104-106 Somerset street was referred.

The rules of last year were adopted by the Council, after which they adjourned.

OBITUARY.

William R. Clarkson.

William Randolph Clarkson, a wealthy retired flour merchant, whose home was for many years in Plainfield, died Saturday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Ayres, 140 West Forty-third street, New York. Mr. Clarkson's home was in the Metropolitan Opera House Building, but during his lingering illness he was removed to the more quiet neighborhood of his sister's home. He was born in 1820, and when only twelve years old went to New York and obtained a position in a grocery store at the salary of $1 52 a week. Even at that early age he showed his appreciation of the value of money, and out of his meagre salary he saved a large proportion of it. These habits of economy he practised until economy was no longer necessary. When a young man Mr. Clarkson entered the employ of Brooks Brothers, the clothiers, who were then in Catharine street. In time he rose to be the head cashier, and in 1853, when he left them, he had laid by a sum that enabled him to enter business for himself. He then became a flour merchant and jobber on a small scale, and gradually built up a large business, amassing a fortune. His place of business for a number of years was in South street.

Eight years ago Mr. Clarkson retired. He was a member of the Produce Exchange. In 1853 he married Miss Anna E. Payne, who survives him. Their only child, daughter Jennie, died a few years ago, and after her death Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson removed to New York. They still retained ownership of considerable East Front street property, including the building just vacated by the postoffice.

—The Swain building on North avenue has been connected with city water and the North avenue sewer.

—The Japan Weekly Mail, published in Yokohama, has just been added to the periodical list of the Free Public Library. It will be given regularly by Mrs. Charles L. Case of Central avenue.

FIRE IN THE OUTSKIRTS.

Edward Campbell Burned Out of House and Home.

Fire Wednesday totally destroyed the home of Edward Campbell on the South Plainfield road two miles out of the city. At 4 Mrs. Campbell was awakened by the peculiar actions and whining of a pug dog, when she thought she smelled smoke and burning wood. She called her husband, who arose and went to the kitchen to investigate. When he opened the door a great volume of smoke poured out and he saw a small flame burning in the rear of the kitchen where he had left a lighted lamp when he retired at 11.

Returning and grabbing his little girl, and his wife taking the boy, they ran across the road to the farmhouse of his father, Ellis A. Campbell, giving the alarm of fire. The alarm aroused several neighbors who went to the house and endeavored to extinguish the flames, but their efforts were unavailing and in a half-hour the house was in ashes. A portion of the household goods was burned, only a few of those downstairs being removed.

The house was insured with Van-Buren & Timpson for $2 000, and the furniture for $250 or $300, which will not cover the loss. Elizabeth Hapenny gets the insurance as mortgagee.

THREE DAYS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Birdseye View of its Growth of Work Among Plainfield Youth.

Sunday—Men's meeting in the large Assembly Hall. Attendance, 191. A large meeting for boys was held in the upper Association hall at the same time.

Monday—Lecture on one of Paul's epistles by W. D. Murray. Class in arithmetic. Class in bookkeeping. Boys department open in the afternoon. Three classes in the gymnasium, students, business men, and general class.

Tuesday—Boys class in the gymnasium; attendance, 63. Mechanical drawing class occupied two rooms. Stenography. Boys singing class. Boys department, two rooms occupied in the evening. Executive Committee local union Christian Endeavor. The following privileges were also enjoyed by young men: Bowling alleys, plunge and other baths, reading room, parlor, gymnasium, and visitors gallery of the same.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The members of Zephyr Hook & Ladder Company No. 1 have unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst, by death, Max Hanson, a wise and consistent member of our company, it is therefore

Resolved, That by his death we, the members, have lost a most valuable member, a kind and conscientious counselor, and whose conservative actions and manners have won the esteem and admiration of all who knew him; therefore, be it further

Resolved, That the sympathy of this body be and is hereby conveyed to the family of the deceased, in this, their hour of bereavement, and believing that he, who has gone, has been taken to the kindly consolations of Him who doeth all things well. Be it further,

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, suitably engrossed and signed by the Foreman and Secretary of this Company, be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the journal of this Company.

L. C. BEEKMAN,
CHAS. CONOVER,
GEO. STUDER,
Committee.

Plainfield, N. J., March 18, 1895.

Stole Coal and Was Fined.

A few days ago Freight-Agent Haynes complained to Chief Grant that a great amount of coal was being stolen from loaded cars sidetracked near Grant avenue for local coal dealers. At 4 this morning Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely went to the tracks where the thefts were reported, and caught Patrick Cashman stealing a pail of coal on one of the cars and taking it to the house of Mr. Brown nearby. He was arrested, and this morning fined $5 or 20 days in jail. The fine was paid by a friend.

The railroad company claim to have lost a great many tons of coal from these petty depredations, and the police will make a determined effort to suppress the thefts.

Monument to VanFleet.

Flemington, March 19—The firm of Thomas & Miller of Quincy, Mass., have received an order for the erection of a fine monument to the memory of the late Vice-Chancellor Abram V. VanFleet, in Prospect Hill Cemetery. It will weigh nearly 22 000 pounds, and is to be of the finest granite and workmanship.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. Baldridge, Millersville, Ill. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

PUBLIC EDUCATORS.

Annual School Election in the Borough.

REPORTS OF A BUSY YEAR.

S. St. John McCutchen, H. B. Wells, and E. J. Waring, Elected Trustees—Appropriations Fixed—Details of the Twelvemonth's Work—Women Suggested for School Board Members.

From The Press of March 20.

The annual meeting for the election of school trustees and fixing the appropriations for school purposes was held in the North Plainfield Public School last evening at 8. James McGee was chosen chairman and George Worth secretary. Messrs. Horn, James B. Joy, George H. Beek, and Wm. Day, were appointed tellers.

The call of the meeting was read by the secretary. There were three trustees to be elected, and the result was as follows:

S. St. John McCutchen	65
H. B. Wells	66
E. J. Waring	66

John Goodwin received one vote.

The appropriations thought necessary were: For school expenses, $6 600; for text books, $750; total, $7,350. Sixty-two voted in favor of the above, and 19 against.

The reports of President S. St. John McCutchen and District Clerk S. B. Joseph were read, received and filed and the meeting adjourned. The reports are as follows:

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF NORTH PLAINFIELD, RENDERED TO THE SCHOOL DISTRICT AT ITS ANNUAL MEETING HELD MARCH 19, 1895.

Pursuant to the new school law of the State enacted last Winter, there were elected in July last nine trustees of the District as follows: S B Joseph, Samuel Townsend, Geo F Brown, Ezra Loomis, H B Wells, J H VanWinkle, E A Overton, W A Schutt, S St J McCutchen.

Thereafter the trustees organized by the election of S St J McCutchen as their president and S B Joseph as district clerk. Pursuant to law, the trustees divided themselves by lot into classes of three each, to serve respectively, one, two and three years. The result of such division was the allotment of the trustees to serve as follows: To serve one year or to next school meeting, Messrs. Wells, Townsend, McCutchen. To serve two years, Messrs. Joseph, Overton, Schutt. To serve three years, Messrs. VanWinkle, Loomis, Brown.

The terms of office of Messrs. Wells, Townsend and McCutchen expire at this time, and you will at this meeting elect trustees to fill their places, to serve for the term of three years. During the past year the attendance upon the school has increased very largely, and thereby has been justified your wise action in causing an enlargement of the school building.

The following comparative statement of the total enrollment and also of the average attendance during the Fall terms of the last two years show well the gain. These terms cover, in each instance, the period between the opening of the school year in September and the first day of January succeeding:

Total enrollment to Jan. 1, 1893, 632; 1894, 677; 1895, 733. Average attendance to Jan. 1, 1893, 528; 1894, 552; 1895, 621.

These figures show a gain this year in total enrollment of 56, over one year ago, and of 101 over two years ago. The gain in average attendance is equally encouraging, being shown to be 69 over last year.

As the Board of Trustees, who reported to you last year, then predicted, the increase in attendance has been largest in the primary classes, that most important department of the school.

In April, 1894, we took out of the primary class, and organized into a new class, with a new teacher, 51 pupils; but after doing this we found we had left 101, and that still Miss Ginn was compelled to resort to a divided class with half-day sessions. Believing it to be a duty to these children, to give them the benefit of a full day of schooling, we again subdivided this large primary class into two, by taking out of it 42 pupils and placing them in charge of another new teacher, so that the growth and condition of the school have necessitated, during the past year, the creation of two new classes. The records of the school show that never before has this been done and it illustrates well our prosperous growth. While the increase is more marked in the primary classes, yet substantial increase occurs in the more advanced grades.

In the school there are ten grades, the ninth and tenth representing regular High School work; there are sixteen classes; this means that some of the grades are so large that they cannot all be taught in one class, but are placed in two or more classes under different teachers, and do substantially the same work; the primary or lower floor department includes four grades covering four years of study, but is divided into ten classes. Of these sixteen classes, eight number 50 or over; five number between 40 and 50; one between 30 and 40, and the remaining two, (the High School grades), number each less than 25. The Trustees have been concerned to see whether this period of ten years study could in any proper way be lessened, so that bright or willing students could cover our school course in a shorter time than has been heretofore required. It has seemed to us possible that time may be saved in the four grades of the primary department by a system of half-yearly examination and promotion, which will permit the brighter pupils to push ahead more rapidly than the average of their class can do. Such a system we have adopted as an experiment, and the first examination under it was had early in February. The fact that the four grades in the department were each divided into two or more classes permitted this to be done conveniently, because, after such an examination, those pupils who had satisfactorily passed the examination were placed together in one class of such grade, prepared for advanced work, and the remaining pupils were grouped in the other class or division of such grade. If this system proves successful it is hoped that, eventually, a year or more of time may be saved, and that the present course of four years in that department may be covered in three years. It is too early to judge what the result of this experiment will be; the coming year will determine it. Our fear is that too few pupils will have the ambition and industry to do the work necessary to take advantage of the system. Here, however, parents may do an effective work in spurring their children on to industrious effort.

The school building is giving satisfaction. There are respects, of course, in which it has required attention; windows have needed weather strips, and other slight repairs have been called for, but generally the school is satisfactorily housed. During a few of the extremely cold days the rooms exposed to the wind have been cold; and one day the whole school was dismissed.

There has been much illness in the school during the Winter, particularly during January; at one time in that month five teachers were absent because of illness, and many of the children were detained at home for a like cause; happily things are much improved in that respect, all our teachers are in their places, and the classes are satisfactorily filled.

The district last Spring voted a special school tax of $1,000 to carry out the provisions of the then new law which ordered that text books and school supplies be furnished free to the pupils. Of this appropriation $932 16 has been used, and the school is now supplied with text books owned by it with the single exception of advanced geographies which are not yet obtainable, and in temporary place of which we are using loaned books.

Many of the parents of pupils have given to the school the text books used by their children prior to the change; and for this public spirited donation they are entitled to the thanks of the district.

We are informed that a law was passed at the present session of the Legislature permitting borough districts, like our own, by vote, to reduce the number of their boards of education from 9 to 5 or 3 as they may elect.

This is a subject that may well claim the attention of the district. If it be concluded, however, that it is best to retain the present number, 9, then the trustees suggest the query whether it will not be wise to elect women to, say two or three places in the board.

Busy men find it hard to give personal attention to visiting the school; women would find it easier; and the personal attention and attendance of intelligent and discreet women, could result only in good to the school. The trustees make no recommendation on this subject, but suggest for your thoughtful consideration.

The district clerk reports to you the amounts deemed necessary to be raised by special district tax for the proper conduct of the school. These amounts are the result of careful and earnest study of the probable needs of the school economically administered. The amount is large, but it is made necessary by the extraordinary growth of the school.

It is believed that the school was never more efficiently conducted than now. The corps of teachers is unusually strong, they are competent, faithful and zealous, there is an entire absence of dissension; and complete harmony of action and feeling in their school work prevails.

S. ST. J. MCCUTCHEN,
President of Board of Education.

REPORT OF DISTRICT CLERK OF THE BOROUGH OF NORTH PLAINFIELD.

1895.
March 19—
Teachers salaries	$[illegible]
Janitor's salary	[illegible]
Clerk's "	[illegible]
Bonds Nos. 16, 17, 18	[illegible]
Interest	[illegible]
Fuel	[illegible]
Census	[illegible]
School Supplies	[illegible]
Building and repairs	[illegible]
Incidentals	[illegible]
Balance	[illegible]
	$[illegible]
1894.
March 16—
By balance in Collector's hands	$3,[illegible]
1895.
March 19—
Cash from taxes 1888, '89, '90, '91, '92 and '93	[illegible]
Taxes 1894	[illegible]
State School tax	[illegible]
State appropriation	[illegible]
Surplus revenue	[illegible]
Revenue fund	[illegible]
Tuition	[illegible]
B. R. Cain	[illegible]
Building extension account	[illegible]
C. R. R. of N. J. and expressage	[illegible]
	$[illegible]

RECAPITULATION.

To balance text books and supplies account	$ 74 [illegible]
Total balance in hands of Collector	[illegible]
By balance general school fund	$[illegible]

SCHOOL EXTENSION ACCOUNT.

1894.
March 16—
Balance in collector's hands		$[illegible]
Disbursements—
Brokaw & Cain	$2,[illegible]
C. Wm. Krausse	[illegible]
A. D. Phillips	[illegible]
C. H. Smith	[illegible]
M. Powers	[illegible]
Israel Stout	75 00
Woolston & Buckle	[illegible]
S. R. Cain	[illegible]
Wm. R. Pitt	11 [illegible]
A. J. Winckler	[illegible]
K. Ebener	[illegible]
		[illegible]
Balance		$ [illegible]
To general school fund account		$ [illegible]

TEXT BOOK AND SUPPLY ACCOUNT.

1895.
March 19—
By cash from taxes 1894		$ [illegible]
Expenditures—
Text books	$ [illegible]
Pads, writing blanks, etc.	[illegible]
Book cases	[illegible]
Expressage	[illegible]
Record book	[illegible]
Rubber stamps and dies	1 [illegible]
By balance		74 [illegible]
	$ [illegible]	$ [illegible]
To balance	$ 74 [illegible]

Direct From the Bijou.

"The Twentieth Century Girl", a three-act burletta with a score of comedians and singers and a cast of 73 people, which is to be presented in Music Hall Friday night, is the work of Sydney Rosenfeld and Ludwig Englander, author and composer of "The Passing Show". This was produced by Messrs. Canary & Lederer at their theatre, the Bijou, in New York, and the "up-to-date" girl sang and danced herself into fame in one night.

The famous John T. Kelly is the Irish comedian in the piece, and Al. Wilson, the German professor. Bettina Gerard personates the "girl bachelor", and Dan Daly represents the "boy spinster. Mr. Englander's music is in a large part entrusted to Miss Catherine Linyard, the well-known prima-donna soprano, and Edith Howe, for several years prima donna of the Carl Rosa Opera Company in England. The company also includes Lillian Thorgate, a clever dancer from the London Alhambra; Jennie Weatherby, Grissie Carlyle, Archie Crawford, Harry Kelly and Samuel Fisher. The novelty of the subject allows the prettiest and brightest costumes imaginable, and the entire production, intact, will be brought here from the Bijou Theatre, New York.

The marching and drilling of the cadets, and the dancing of the pretty seminary girls, are features of the performance. Some of the musical gems are "The Play is the Thing", "Words That Never Were Spoken", "The Antidote", "The Ambitious Magpie", and "and "On Broadway", which is today the most popular of any of the lighter tunes now being whistled and hummed.

An Ideal Light.

Gavett is daily placing the celebrated Welsbach gas burner in the homes and offices of Plainfield people. He will put one in on trial, and if it is not satisfactory will remove it. But from a personal knowledge of its superiority over all other lights, The Press, predicts that if once tried it will always be used. It is indeed a luxury to have one to read by after the toils of the day.

For seven years or more Mrs. W. D. Londer, of Quincy, Ky., was subject to severe attacks of cramp colic. Mr. S. R. Morse, a druggist of that place, recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which has effected a permanent cure, saving her much suffering besides the trouble and expense of sending for a doctor, which was often necessary. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, manager.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

A PREPONDERANCE OF FOREIGN ACTORS IN NEW YORK.

Frau Sucher Scores a Success in German Opera and Gabrielle Rejane Acts So Naturally that Her Art is Lost Sight of. "Rory of the Hill."

It is in the works of Wagner that Frau Sucher has achieved her greatest successes. Not only is she said to possess a remarkable voice, but she is also looked upon as one of the most impressive actresses upon the operatic stage. Particularly noble is her Isolde said to be and it certainly formed one of the features of last year's festival performances at Beyreuth. She is a woman of generous proportions, with strong features, keen eyes and black hair, and it is easy to imagine that she must be an ideal Irish maid in the great love tragedy of the Beyreuth master. Frau Sucher has sung the principal dramatic soprano roles in Wagner and Gluck's works, besides Desdemona in Verdi's "Otello," for which she professed a strong admiration.

FRAU ROSA SUCHER.

A French actress has taken the town by storm. During twenty years Gabrielle Rejane has been an actress in comedies at the Paris Vaudeville Varieties and Odeon. It was not until she enacted the role of Catherine Hubscher in "Madame Sans Gene" a year and a half ago, however, that her fame extended beyond France. It is said that Sardou and Moreau in writing that role had her in mind as its performer. It is certain that her abilities are exactly the right kind for a correct and amusing portrayal of the character. That was demonstrated at Abbey's theater when she made her American debut. Those who see and read of theatricals in the great cities know all about the play through its performance in English, and so there is no need to make a repetition of its characteristics here. It remains only to tell that Mme. Rejane played the washerwoman countess as well as fancy could imagine it done. She worked in the laundry like a workingwoman, handling the clothes and implements in a matter of fact manner and not as though afraid the audience might think she had washed and ironed for a living before she became an actress. In the later scenes devoted to her experiences in court circles, as a novice in fashionable deportment and an unaccustomed wearer of modish gowns, she was simply honest and sincere in her treatment of the character. No self consciousness was discernable. She was not a lady of delicate fiber, merely pretending to be coarse grained and all the while afraid of being really deceptive. She was bad mannered because she neither knew how or cared to be polite. The scenes of rehearsal with the dancing master, of trying on slippers with the shoemaker and of putting on and taking off a riding habit with the dressmaker were very felicitous. Her awkwardness was good humored, too, and she was amused with herself, but never showed a sign of make believe or apology in all her lack of gentility in speech and bearing. When she came to the fiery quarrel with the princesses, the independent encounter with Bonaparte and the serious undertaking to clear the empress of calumny, she was not faulty through any monotony of method. She made a success that was unequivocal, both as an artiste and as an entertainer. None of this result was due to youth or beauty, for she possesses neither. Her face is brightly intelligent and piquantly expressive, but it is extremely ugly. It was her acting altogether that won the triumph.

Though strong in a pictorial sense when it began its stay at the Academy of Music, "Rory of the Hill" has been made to carry a good storm effect, beside its original outfit. The storm begins in the eviction scene. In this, the left side of the stage, as viewed from the audience, is set with a row of thatched huts. On the other side is Rory's dwelling, backed up by a small stable in which a donkey and goat seem to be very much at home. Toward the back of the stage a bit of scenery appears that represents a knoll, topped by a fine dwelling, with huts and woods scattered over its side. Beyond this in dim perspective is a much higher hill, its summit being seemingly several miles away. It is in this space between the lesser and greater hills that the mimic electric storm gets in its work, the noise of it growing louder and soon being followed by flashes of lightning that illuminate the rear stage space, without being themselves revealed. Another step in the storm's progress brings the zig-zag flashes into view, and finally they assume the white brilliancy of the real article. Each flash runs across the canvas with a dozen sharp-cornered kinks in it, and the light emitted illuminates the hill-top momentarily in a way that is very realistic. When the cruel landlord asks Rory if he has brought all the villagers together to incite them to riot, Rory replies that he has not; that he cautioned every man in hearing not to throw a stone that he couldn't lift. That is the cue for the biggest thunder reports. The whole storm effect is a big advance over the rattle of sheet iron and flash of light that has so long served to mark the villain's deeds in melodrama.

LINWARD.

An Ode to Pie.

You can talk about your lemon pie, your custard pie and all,
And preach about your mincemeat from the spring until the fall
But the sweetest pie in Georgia and the one that takes my eye
Is the Georgia raised and Georgia baked old fashioned possum pie.

—[illegible]

ECONOMY AT TABLE.

COOKING MUCH NEGLECTED IN AMERICAN FAMILIES.

A Frenchman Whose Salary is Many Thousand Dollars a Year Talks Sensibly Upon Short Comings and Gives Advice as to Cheap Living.

The economy of the French people in the matter of cooking has become proverbial. It has been said, and without much fear of contradiction, that a French family will live upon what an American family wastes or throws away. The thrift of the French people is due in the largest possible measure to their economy in the management in the culinary department of their households.

The food, even in the humblest families, although coarse, is invariably well cooked. Out of the simplest materials the French housewife will prepare a dinner that will not only please the palate, but delight the eyes as well. She delights in novel dishes, which she constructs out of the remnants of yesterday's dinner. She makes delicious salads from the very weed that grows out in her garden.

Xenophon Kuzmier, chef of New York's swellest hotel, who has devoted considerable thought to the subject of cooking for workingmen's families, recently said in discussing the matter:

"The trouble in this country is that the workingman's family has too much money to spend. If they had less the probabilities are that there would be less extravagance than there is among this class of people.

"The women who are the wives of these sons of toil have, in most cases, never received any instruction in the preparation of food for the table. All they know they have picked up in the most careless manner from the experiences of their friends. Many of them have never been taught by their mothers how to cook a single dish previous to their marriage.

"New housewives too often start in with the idea of beefsteak and fried potatoes, corned beef and cabbage and pig's head and greens are about all the dishes they are to live upon.

"The vegetables found in the markets are abundant in quantity and excellent in quality. You will find, however, that poor people always think they must buy the expensive kinds. Now, as a matter of fact, the common kinds, such as carrots, cabbage, turnips and beets, which are the leading vegetables in the market, can be bought at low prices the year round. In the season, cauliflower, tomatoes, asparagus, green peas and beans, squash and oyster plant can be bought for very little money. They can be prepared in a long variety of ways. There is no necessity of repeating the same vegetable, potatoes excepted, in the bill of fare for an entire week.

"Fruits, too, are abundant and cheap. I would advise workingmen to buy more apples, oranges, and other fruits for their table and less cabbage. Baked apples and stewed prunes cost but little and are very nourishing and healthful. Plain puddings and pies make an excellent dessert, provided they are not too rich, but fruit is better. Stale bread, rice, tapioca, farina and sago puddings cost but little and go a great ways in a large family. To make a good bread pudding you break up the bread and place it in a dish. Then pour over it some milk into which have been stirred three or four eggs, according to the size of the family. Slice a few apples and add a few raisins, some sugar to taste, a dash of cinnamon and a little butter. Then place in an oven and bake 20 minutes to half an hour.

"I am a great believer in soups as a nourishing food. They are easily prepared and are infinite in variety. A soup bone with plenty of meat attached can be bought at seven or eight cents a pound. A three pound piece will furnish a meal for six persons.

"To make a plain vegetable soup place the meat, with bone attached, in an iron pot with three or four quarts of water. Season to taste. Add some vegetables in the shape of carrots, onions, leeks and celery, cut in small pieces; a little piece of cabbage and some parsley. The total cost of this soup for a family of six would not exceed 35 cents. Other soups can be made in the same way, taking the stock as the basis.

"Stews are another cheap form of food which can be made in great variety. Beef mutton or veal stew is made by cutting up the meat in small pieces and stirring with vegetables, such as potatoes, onions, carrots and tomatoes, on the fire, with a little water, for an hour and a half.

"In roasts, the dearest pieces are the cheapest. If you buy a sirloin roast you can eat all but the bone. In chuck roast there is too much bone and trimmings, which, of course, cannot be eaten. Roast pork with apple sauce, is a cheap dish, and yet it is one of the most delicious that can be prepared. The point in cooking pork or veal is that it shall be baked until it is thoroughly done. A safe rule to remember in cooking meats of any kind is that dark meats should be cooked rare and light meats well done.

"Salads are a splendid form of food. They give a relish to a dinner that nothing else can. Beside the green salads, such as lettuce, celery, field salad, escarole, which at present are rather expensive, there are a number which may be made at a small cost. These include potato salad, which is made by slicing cold or warm boiled potatoes and mixing with them some vinegar and oil and seasoning with pepper and salt. In case you have no oil, bacon fat may be used instead. Bean salad is made in the same way, boiled white beans being substituted for the potatoes."

What the President Can't Do.

The President cannot take any of the White House furniture or table ware with him into private life as a souvenir of his stay in the mansion. When the Harrison family wanted a White House souvenir Mrs. McKee brought to Washington the cradle in which Benjamin Harrison was rocked and kept it in the nursery all through her father's administration, so that she might think of it afterward as the White House cradle.—Washington Star.

A Poorhouse By Another Name.

Not long ago the poorhouse at Fort Howard was burned down. The Green Bay Gazette quotes a tender hearted citizen of Fort Howard as expressing the hope that when it is rebuilt it will be called by some less repellent name, such, for instance, as Old Folks' Home, or the Home for the Friendless. He says: "Many people who ought to be inmates of such a place are kept from going there simply because it is called the poorhouse. If it was called what it really is, a home [illegible]

COOKING BY WIRE.

ELECTRICITY USED AS A FUEL IN THE KITCHEN.

Successfully Operated in Many Places. Its Cost But Little More Than Coal. Its Universal Use in the Near Future Confidently Predicted.

People iron clothes with electricity now and bless the invention which keeps an iron always hot and bright and clean. The workman makes his pot of glue or paste with its aid, the housewife concocts dainty dishes with it, its presence is felt in the hospital, the dining car, the dressing room and the ship's cabin. In hundreds of ways is this unobtrusive, but effective fuel slowly but surely gaining the public patronage, infringing on the rights of coal, kerosene and alcohol, and even threatening the reign of the convenient and much prized gas stoves and appliances.

Down in the business portion of New York in a certain imposing building there is an apartment fitted up for the purpose of demonstrating the use of electricity as a domestic agent. In most kitchens the stove or range is the most conspicuous feature, the important function about which all activities center. In this electrical cooking room no fuel is seen. All the various departments are conducted separately; the baker, for instance, has a distinct individuality of its own apart from the broiler, the frying pan, the teapot, the stewpan. Each article has a separate heating apparatus peculiar to itself, and the magic current is transmitted by means of an innocent looking red or green cord ending in a stopper which has a strong resemblance to a big spool cut in two and painted black.

Under the average power rates charged at present the cost is greater than the cost of fuel directly burned; but those who are experimenting daily with the possibilities of electricity in the kitchen assert that the day is not far distant when its labor saving devices will be placed within the reach of the poorest as well as the wealthiest citizen of the metropolis.

"In cooking with electricity fully 95 per cent. of the heat obtained is actually utilized," said an enthusiast. "In cooking with coal fully 75 per cent. of the heat is wasted, so electricity is bound to become the fuel of the future, when active competition has brought the price within the reach of people of moderate means. The kerosene stove is dangerous," he went on, "though familiarity with it prevents people from thinking so; it has an unpleasant odor and is troublesome to keep clean. Where gas is used, in spite of all assertions to the contrary, there is bound to be an objectionable taint in the air of the room, and perhaps a suspicion of smoke about the viands prepared with it. In the use of coal or wood there is more or less drudgery involved, and there is also an unavoidable waste of time and fuel, whether it is intended merely to heat a pot of coffee or prepare an entire meal. In the use of electricity the heat is secured promptly, just as much or as little may be used as required, and the most fastidious will fail to detect the slightest odor.

"See this broiler," he added, placing one of convenient size on the table for inspection, "It is divided into sections, and has a switch which can be operated so as to throw the heat on or off two or more of these sections at a time. Economy in the use of heat is what we are aiming at. If only two or three small chops are to be broiled it is useless to waste the current in heating the whole broiler. A third or a half of the whole may be heated, according to the size of the meat to be cooked. There is no more particular work than to broil or toast in a first class manner. The ordinary fire often fails. It is the exception when it is in a suitable condition. Not a little waiting has to be done for the coal stove, and the gas flame often ignites the hot fat and burns the food. The electric grills and broilers are ready in a few minutes after the current is applied, and the work is done without the food being singed, smoked, gas flavored or burned. The escaping juices are collected unspoiled in a pan beneath; the cook can baste the broiled meat with its own juices, and thus all the virtue of the food is saved. Now, here is a coffee pot. It has its own little circle of coiled wire underneath, and by adjusting the plug at the end of the wire the heat is turned on and the coffee is made in a jiffy. As soon as the coffee is made, unless you desire to keep it hot, withdraw the plug, much as you would pull the stopper out of a bottle, and the expense for heat stops at once."

A YANKEE, OR OUGHT TO BE.

He Swaps Razors and Barbers' Supplies and Always Gets a Cash Bonus.

A man has been going about among the barber shops of the country for several years who makes a good living in a novel manner. He carries in a large valise a stock of second hand razors, strops, hones, hair cutting shears, clippers, curling tongs, brushes and other implements and appliances of the barber's trade. Under no circumstances will he sell any article in his stock outright. He insists upon trading something that he has and the barber wants for something that the barber has and does not need, the difference in the value of the article which he disposes of and that which he receives being made up in cash, no matter how small the amount.

"I started in this business at Pittsburg five years ago," said the razor trader to a reporter. "On a Monday morning I had in hand half a dozen worn razors. By Saturday night I had a stock of barbers' tools that I could have sold for $32 and $13 in cash in my pocket. I am known now all over the country as 'the razor trader.' A week does not pass that I do not clear my $25 cash, and I always have a stock of good tradeable articles. I never let it grow or diminish. I would not sell my stock offhand if a man would offer me three times its value, because then I would be liable to spend the money, and when it was gone I would have neither money nor business."

At the Botanical Gardens.

Professor—Here, young ladies, you observe a tobacco plant.

One of the young ladies—Ah! how very interesting, professor. Pray how long will it be before the cigars are ripe?—Giornalle delle Donne.

Hopeful.

"Any parlor matches, lady?" he asked, as he offered a bundle of his wares.

"Not yet," answered the mother of four daughters, "but we hope to have some before spring," and she closed the door on the [illegible]

A FAMILY OF MISERY.

John Mullen, Drunk, Leaves His Family in Pitiful Circumstances—Willie and Tommy, Babes of the World, Are the Bread-Winners.

A pitiful condition of affairs is that which exists in the family of John Mullen, who live in abject poverty in rooms over the United States Express office on North avenue. Besides the father and mother there are four children under nine years of age, whose existence is one of complete misery.

The father can hardly be called a member of the family, for he pays no attention whatever to their needs, spending all that he earns for liquor. He is a first-class plumber, but owing to his unsteady habits and shiftless disposition secures but little work, and the wages from what little he does earn immediately goes over the bar. Last week he was sentenced to the Somerset County jail for drunkenness in North Plainfield, and is now confined there.

Mrs. Mullen earns what little she can at washing and other menial labor, but with four little children to look after—two of whom are mere babes—she has but little chance to work. The principal support of the family—such as it is—is gained from the profits of Willie and Tommie, who sell papers each evening. The former is a bright little lad, 9 years old, who has never yet been to school, and the latter another juvenile growing up in a manner that might be tolerated on the East side of New York, but hardly seems possible in Plainfield. Between them they possibly earn 40 or 50 cents a day, and this is practically all the money that goes into the family.

Through the Winter their food was supplied by charitably inclined neighbors and in some way they managed to pay the room rent. But for the last five or six weeks the rent has not been paid, and now a notice has been served on them to vacate the room by next Tuesday.

When Constable Amos Moffett went to serve the papers a day or two ago, he was confronted with a sight that was nothing but misery. In the dingy rooms only a few pieces of furniture could be seen, and no carpets. On the floor were two baby girls with scarcely enough clothes on them to cover their nudity, and the mother not much better off in that respect. When he informed her of his mission she commenced crying in a hysterical manner, exclaiming between her sobs that she did not know what would become of her and the children, for she possessed no money and had no way of getting any beyond what was needed to buy enough food to keep them alive. Whether or not they will be turned out of doors on Tuesday remains to be seen.

Certainly it seems that some action should be taken towards relieving the present condition of the family, by either the city authorities or some of the charity organizations, and in addition an effort should be made to educate and bring up the children in some respectable manner.

A Good Suggestion.

To THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: Having learned from The Press that the city and borough firemen have received an invitation from Rev. Mr. Herring to attend service at his church Sunday evening, March 24 it occurred to me that in order to make it a benefiting service it would be well for Mr. Herring at the close to ask a liberal collection for the benefit of the Exempt Firemen's Association, which they deserve and need to assist them in caring for their sick and needy brethren; and they have never yet asked from any church in Plainfield.

VETERAN.

A Burlesque on Trilby.

The burlesque on Trilby is one of the funniest things in "The Twentieth Century Girl", which appears in Music Hall March 23. The subject is recognized at once, and is heartily appreciated. The "Boy Spinster" chorus, led by Dan Daly, and the "MacNamara Guards", led by John T. Kelly, also have become popular features of this pretty production. Some of the gems among the musical numbers are: "The Twentieth Century Girl", "The Magpie", "The Girl Bachelor", "The Play is the Thing", and the song which is now being hammed and whistled all over the country, entitled "On Broadway".

A Better Light for the Same Money.

Leggett's drug store, the City National Bank, and Packer's furniture store are among the places trying the Welsbach incandescent gas burner, of which Gavett is sole agent for Plainfield. Mr. Gavett intends having one tested at the gas works to prove that they are no more expensive consumers of gas than the ordinary store gas burners.

Great Selling.

It's always buying and always selling, at that big house of White's. For the coming week they say such selling of dry-goods, and house-furnishings, at prices that are a third off what is usually asked for good reliable goods. There is no money saved by buying trash, or odds and ends, and no reason to buy them when you can buy the best at the smallest prices at White's.

Not Liable to Mulct the City.

It is said that Mollie Stevens and mother have approached several lawyers with the proposal to sue the city for damages for false imprisonment over Sunday in the police station, the particulars of which were published in The Press at the time. However, no fee was forthcoming and the lawyers refused to [illegible]

GIFTS TO THE PASTOR.

Happy Surprise for Rev. C. E. Herring.

BOUND TO KEEP HIM MOVING.

Trip Tickets to New York, and a Bicycle, Are Bestowed on Him at the Congregational Reception.

The reception given by Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, to his congregation Thursday from 4 to 9, was truly delightful in every particular. Never was formality less manifested than on this occasion. The pastor's beautiful home, 403 East Second street, presented a scene never to be forgotten. A select arrangement of choice flowers and pink decorations added much to the enjoyment of those present.

Steadily from 4 to 9 the people called, and the genuine hospitality extended was a marked feature, for everyone was given the most cordial greeting.

Mr. Herring was assisted in receiving by his sister, Miss Fanny Herring, who made a charming hostess, and Mrs. Howard Pope, Mrs. Bettman, Mrs. Ladd, Miss Petrie, and Mrs. Robert Radford.

In the dining room Miss Bond presided and poured chocolate. Those who assisted in serving were Miss Bilsh, Miss Blair, Miss Mabel Force and Miss Remsen.

Those calling were made thoroughly acquainted with one another, which was a decided feature of this charming event. The pastor's desire was to know his people better, and that was the result attained last evening.

Much to the happy surprise of Mr. Herring, he was presented at the close of the reception with a Spalding wheel and riding outfit complete, from Rogers's, presented by the men of the congregation; and with two 50-trip tickets to New York, presented by the women. He had been planning to buy a wheel for himself, but Rogers, knowing of the surprise in store, kept putting him off. His trip tickets will enable him to pursue his studies at his favorite metropolitan library.

HIRAM HORNISH.

His Death Ends a Long and Useful Career.

The death of Hiram Hornish, March 12 removes a man who has been a resident of Plainfield since 1867, and whose life here gained the respect of all with whom he came in contact.

The 73 years of Mr. Hornish's life were uneventful and distinguished only by his steady industry and sturdy character. He was born of Moravian parents near Bethlehem, Pa., and early in his teens left home to go to work on a farm. Here he labored for a number of years foregoing the usual pastimes and pleasures. From the farm he went to Easton, Pa., where he labored in a wire factory until failing health compelled him to seek lighter employment. During this time he had saved enough money to purchase a small house and lot at Snufftown on the Lehigh river, a short distance from Easton, and there established a small grocery with the aid of his mother as a helper.

It was here that Gideon Allen, who now resides at 35 Grandview avenue, in the borough, made the acquaintance of young Hornish, which developed into a close friendship that lasted up to Mr. Hornish's death. Mr. Allen at that time conducted a bakery in Easton, and furnished bread and cakes for Hornish's grocery store. His health did not improve, and Mr. Allen made him an offer to work for him on the delivery wagon. The position was accepted, and his health was greatly improved thereby.

A year after that Mr. Allen removed to Clinton, near Annandale, Hunterdon county, where he afterwards secured a position for Mr. Hornish, who came on and worked for a Mr. Bowman, until he finally came on to Plainfield and established a confectionery and bakery business in a store on Park avenue in the rear of Berry's hardware store. By attending strictly to business, and with the aid of Mr. Allen's help Mr. Hornish in six years amassed savings to the amount of about $6,000. The fever to emigrate to the west then struck him and he sold his business to Peter Hoagland. Going West with a tailor by the name of Hearne he invested his money in land which he ultimately lost, and returned to Plainfield. After his return he established the sulphur baths on West Second street, and from there changed to the rooms on North avenue where his death occurred.

Seeing the Horses Run.

Chief Engineer T. O. Doane obligingly escorted a party of Plainfielders and others through the houses of the Fire Department Thursday night, exhibiting the apparatus, and displaying the marvelous sagacity and agility of the horses. In each of the houses an alarm was sounded, bringing the horses from their stalls. Immediately they were in their harness, attached to the apparatus, ready to gallop away, and the men were at their posts.

The system was perfect, and everything was found in splendid condition. The inspection was unexpected, and it was gratifying to find everything in such thorough good order.

And in Plainfield.

(From The Bound Brook Chronicle)

[illegible]

BRIAR PIPE
GIVEN AWAY
WITH EVERY ONE POUND
bale
OF DUKES
MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE OF ATC
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

Space	Weeks 1	Weeks 2	Weeks 3	Months 1	Months 2	Months 3	Months 6	Months 12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	32.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Readings.
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J.

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

J. S. WOOLSTON. J. T. BUCKLE.
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

The Young Soldier Ambitious to Shine as an Author.

WRITES A HISTORY OF CORSICA.

Sought a Publisher In Vain—Revisits His Native Land—Despotic Treatment of His Kinsfolk—At This Period Displays Willfulness and Gloom.

[Copyright, 1896, by John Clark Ridpath.]

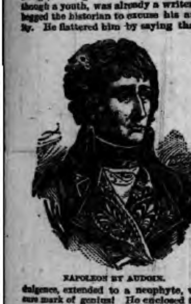
V.—FLASHES OF OBSCURITY.

The insurrection in Lyons quelled itself before the arrival of Lieutenant Bonaparte's contingent. The municipality proved itself sufficiently strong to put down the insurgents without the assistance of the military arm. Fighting there was none. Napoleon's company, arriving in due time, was stationed in the city for a month. It was a small beginning of war for him who was destined, with less than a decade, to lead a victorious army over the Alps into Italy.

The disturbance at Lyons put a date to Bonaparte's career at Valence. He had remained in that place from the fall of 1785 to August of 1787. This period of twenty-three months, though obscure in its manifestations, was one of the most important in his life. It was the transition from youth to early manhood. At this stage in the lives of men, the mind passes rapidly from one condition to another. Particularly is this true if study have been the mood and genius the attribute of the person concerned.

Napoleon here went forward from the early part of his seventeenth to the completion of his eighteenth year. If he had continued in the reckless course which he took at the beginning, his life at Valence would little concern the reader a century afterwards. But with the coming of the spring of 1786 an iron resolution entered into him, and he became a truer student than ever before. Probably no greater degree of mental concentration and compression was ever exhibited by a young man in the world than by Napoleon Bonaparte brooding over his books in his humble apartment at Valence.

The ambition of the young officer now shot out in several directions. Deeply impressed with the fame and power of the great authors whose writings just then were setting the world aflame, he, too, would be an author! Such was the quality of this singular personage that he never distrusted himself in anything. Before the end of his eighteenth year he conceived himself able and qualified to write a history! Corsica should be his theme. He would write the annals of his native land in so philosophical a manner as to place him alongside of the Abbe Raynal! He went so far as to address a letter to that august personage, telling him that he himself, though a youth, was already a writer. He begged the historian to excuse his audacity. He flattered him by saying that indulgence, extended to a neophyte, was a sure mark of genius! He enclosed to the Abbe the first two chapters of his alleged "History of Corsica," the cacography only being surpassed by the heresy of the rhetoric and the massage of grammar!



NAPOLEON BY AUDOIN.

We half suspect that the bottom motive in this business was not the hope of being a historian, but rather the distinction of having correspondence with a great man. However this may be, the Abbe indulged Napoleon, wrote to him, advised him to study further, and then to rewrite his work. Not only did the historical ambition have the Lieutenant, but the romantic also. He took somewhat to novels, and for the first time falling in love, determined to write a novel. At the house of Madame du Colombier, he made the acquaintance of her beautiful daughter, and fell in love with her—after the manner of all young lieutenants. The flame of this passion presently went out, but traces of it are seen in his correspondence until what time—ceasing to love Mademoiselle Colombier—he turned pessimist, denounced love as a mockery, and in particular as the drawback to human ambition!

In the midst of the fitful gleams of this erratic life may be seen burning the coals of that furnace-heat which the years have not yet extinguished. The student Bonaparte became a pale, living reality. He supplied himself with the works of the leading authors of the age, and devoured them with the rapacity of one starving. He made himself familiar with the writings of Voltaire and Necker. The one he followed through the mazes of the new French learning, and the other through the intricacies of practical finance. For months together, in his lodgings and about the barracks, he might be seen, with book in hand, muttering as he read, pencilling the margins, approving and condemning the doctrine, according to his judgment or whim. There never was a time in his life when he swept within his grasp a greater amount of intellectual products than during the after-part of 1786 and the first half of the following year.

Coincident with the date of the Lyons episode, came a military order sending the Regiment La Fere from Valence to Douai, in French Flanders, three hundred and ninety miles distant. Here Napoleon found himself exposed to northern blasts and unfamiliar hardships. In his correspondence he complains bitterly of his situation. He got a fever of both mind and body, and the effects of it lasted for several years. His unhappiness became extreme, and he sought by every means in his power to escape from the situation. He would get away or kill himself! Nor were very powerful reasons wanting why he should go elsewhere. The Bonaparte family in Corsica had fallen by this time into desperate straits. Joseph had undertaken to build up a wine-trade with Italy, but had failed—as he did with most things else. Lucien, a student at Brienne, was doing his best to get a transfer to Aix, where he might substitute a priestly for a military education. Madame de Bonaparte, now thirty-seven years of age, was hoping against hope that the government would pay her the petty stipend due for the care of her mulberry orchards, but no payment was made.

There came want into the household. Lieutenant Bonaparte, making the condition of his family a plausible excuse, sought, and in February of 1788, obtained, leave of absence to visit Corsica. Thither he went, in poor health and general morbidity of mind. By this time his arbitrary character had begun to show itself in full force. Once at home, he played the despot. He doctored all his kinsfolk, with the exception of the mother, and she could hardly withstand his impetuosity, willfulness and gloom. His old and gouty great-uncle Lucien, from being the main stay of the family, was now about to die. Napoleon sought to alleviate the distresses of the household; but his resources were limited, and his ambitions were constantly contending with the purposes born of natural affection.

Home again after an absence of nearly nine years, the young officer busied himself more with things great than things little. He was more concerned with the political condition of the world than with the daily needs of his mother's house. He dwelt more on the state of Corsica than on the emptiness of Madame Bonaparte's cuisine—more on the woes of Ajaccio than on those of his brothers' and sisters' stomachs. He conceived himself to be the patriot par excellence of his age, and spent more time in delivering socialistic monologues than in contriving the means to rescue the family from impending ruin.

It was at this juncture that Napoleon began to concern himself especially about the institutions and history of England. Along with his Necker he studied Smith's "Wealth of Nations," then only twelve years from the press. The Elizabethan age—not indeed for the intellectual glory that was in it, but for its political intrigues—impressed him greatly; and he undertook to do into fiction the features of that era in a novel entitled the "Count of Essex." Then he flew back to his "History of Corsica," revised the parts which he had sent to the Abbe Raynal, and pressed on with the rest. Alongside of Voltaire, he would set up a rival production of his own, called the "Masked Prophet"—a marvelous and impossible invention out of Persia! Literature was thus mixed with affairs; fiction flourished at the meager meals which Madame Bonaparte was able to set for her family; anathemas of Joseph's unprofitable wine-shop were illuminated with paragraphs about the glories of rebellion; and the mulberry orchard back of Ajaccio was cursed in the middle of an apostrophic peroration about the regeneration of mankind!

Bonaparte's leave of absence—so eagerly sought—soon became as intolerable to him as to the rest. His paper gave him privilege to be away from his command for six months; but before the end of the fourth month—inventing casuistical reasons—he impatiently left Corsica to rejoin his company. During his stay in the island, he had accomplished something—something that would have been much in any other. He had induced the French intendant to agree to allow his mother's claim. He had pushed forward the inert Joseph to try the law as a profession, and had seen him installed at Bastia. He had urged upon his gouty uncle the necessity of patriotism! He had drawn up and submitted a system of coast defenses for the principal ports of the island. He had prepared a scheme for the creation of an insular army. He had studied and written incessantly at a furious speed, completing his Oriental novel and his "History of Corsica." The latter was cast in the epistolary form, and was dedicated to Monseigneur Marbœuf, now promoted to the see of Sens.

Meanwhile the Regiment La Fere had been ordered from Douai, to Auxonne, in Cote d'Or, 182 miles from Paris. Thither Napoleon repaired, to rejoin his command, in the last week of May, 1788. He took with him the manuscript of his "History of Corsica," seeking a publisher, but finding none, either at Valence or Lyons or Auxonne or Paris or anywhere else in this mundane sphere forever. In that same week, Alexander Hamilton wrote his last paper for The Federalist. One month previously, from the presses of Strahan and Cadell, in the Strand, was issued, by the author, on his fifty-first birthday, the greatest history ever composed by man.

It would be impossible to define the mental condition of Napoleon at this stage of his development. Politically—for though a soldier he was always a politician—he went halting between two forces. The one tendency drew him powerfully towards the local independence of his native island. This involved hatred of the conquest and annexation of Corsica to France. It also involved hatred of France itself; of the French race; and of the French monarchy in particular. But the other tendency drew Franceward with equal stress. It was from the powerful fact of France that all benefits had thus far flowed to the family of Bonaparte. By France he had himself been educated. Besides, Corsica, even as an independent state, was a limited field of action. France is great. France offers world-wide distinction. Our commission as Lieutenant of artillery is a French commission, and our very sword is a French blade.

But our "History of Corsica" is a patriotic and insurrectionary document. It is inconsistent with our allegiance, and hurtful to what France may promise hereafter. Therefore we would better shuffle, and rewrite our book. We will put it into the mouth of a Corsican patriot of the old Genoese faction, to which the family of our mother Ramolino once belonged. In its present form we make a copy of it, and send it to the great Paoli in London; but he returns it to us, putting us off with the counsel that we are as yet immature, "too young for writing history," and adding words to the effect that our book is not sufficiently original. In truth, our mind is a vortex, a maelstrom of conflicting tides. Here at Auxonne, during our stay of eighteen months, we will sit down again, insatiable, in solitary gloom, and devour the greatest things thought and written by men whom we shall one day surpass and eclipse!

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

A Phase of Fatalism.

"Not many people will agree with me perhaps," said a man the other day, "but in addition to persons inheriting diseases I think they often inherit the same fate. For instance, I have seen large families of sisters, nearly all of whom became widows, and looking back a generation or so it will be found that widowhood early in life became the fate of their aunts, mothers and grandmothers. I heard a friend remark, too, that deaths did not happen very often in her family, as all lived to be quite old, and although the family was numerous they rarely needed the services of an undertaker. Another thing in this same line of thought is the fact that one individual will have the fatality of having the same kind of an accident befall him right along."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

OPERATING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J E Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Horsley Barker Grove and Front sts
G W V Moy 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville,
J B Guthridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 8th street

Subscriber's Name	Address
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	216 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove st
Adams H C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Son	122 North av
Andrews F H	528 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 8th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, P W Dr	Dunellen
Boone C W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave, and 9th st
Beerbower, J B	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Joe F, M D	127 E 5th st
Blair A C	149 North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	245 Park av
Board of Education	5th st and Arlington av
Booth, E H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	412 Central av
Central Times	103 E Front st
Clark, E B	131 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	651 North av
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
Constitutionalist Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	210 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	14 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, B F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
Daily Press	105 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	428 W 5th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	2d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A T	62 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	4 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR, Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	423 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1012 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do	237 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	6th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	416 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 5th st
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	702 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	161 North av
Howell R O	191 North av
Holmes E H	209 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	29 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	220 Park av
Irving D C	321 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	213 W Front st
Kaufman W T	527 W 7th st
Keely & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W N	210 Jackson av
Lowrie H H, Dr	512 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L M	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	227 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Wallinson A D	205 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	186 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	103 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James E	721 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W V	Park av and 8th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	673 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	737 Watchung av
Murray J W	312 W 6th st
Music Hall	498
Myers, J K	130 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	344 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Peaton T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	264 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	3d st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	2d st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	206 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	800 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	142 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	37 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	59 Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	406 W 8th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockafellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, D W	233 W 3d st
Reeve, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	305 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	416 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	429 Park av near Fifth st
Runkle, H. G	531 9th st
Runyon, Chas W	129 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	95 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	225 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, R J	Front st., opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	27 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W F	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
Streuli, H A	1308 Hillside av
Stevens F R	733 South av
Stevens Geo O	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	142 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	29 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	230 W 3d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jno E	220 Madison av
Tilsworth, Joe M	413 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	219 La Grande av
Tobin Geo J	137 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	640 8th st
Tunison W J	242 Watchung av
Tweedy, C. B	129 Crescent av
Ulrich & Blair	113 W Front st
Union Beef Co	233 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	180 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	122 North av
Wadsworth, W E	622 8th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	816 3rd Place
Woltman, E	653 West Seventh st
Wiechers, J F	W 8th st., near Grand ave
Wierus Max	144 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	65c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	35c
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	60c
Fayville N Y	50c	Kingston N J	35c
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
Blissville N Y	45c	Leonia N J	45c
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	50c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	60c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	60c
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	40c
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	50c
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	30c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	30c
Chatham N J	30c	Morristown N J	45c
Closter N J	45c	Newark N J	25c
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	35c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	45c
Cranbury N J	45c	New York N Y	35c
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	30c
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	45c
Eatontown N J	60c	Passaic N J	35c
Elizabeth N J	20c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	25c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	25c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	60c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	60c
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	30c
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	35c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	35c
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	35c
Freehold N J	60c	Westfield N J	15c
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	30c
Glen Cove N Y	50c	Yonkers N Y	60c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	40c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

—A district meeting of the Knights of Pythias will be held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge next Friday evening, at which Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath of Jersey City and several other grand lodge officers, will be present.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE

THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,

Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc. sole agents for Union county.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc. Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and [illegible].

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 118 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY,
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1896, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, [illegible]
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer.

P. P. Van Arsdale,
PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. Box 180, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 147 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence No. E. Front street, corner 5th street. 5ly1tf

---

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.

OFFICE—Vanderbeck's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.

Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Av.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST. 8-18-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE: CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J. mch30tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER.
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 238 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. aply

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. 12y1

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES.
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.

Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stove can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.

Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODDINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—ja6tf

---

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 132, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIERS,
Dentist,
66 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—ja6tf

---

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey,]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—24 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 [illegible]. Piano moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 23½ W. Front street, to 232 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 3 doors above Peace street

Mr. JOHN E. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Livery and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month.
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Piping. Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning.
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6. 11 11-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? [illegible]
MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

TALK ON THE TRUTH.

The Christian Alliance Hears of the Four-Fold Gospel.

The Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance met Tuesday night at 317 East Front street, and was addressed by Rev. F. W. Farr, of New York, on "The Four-Fold Gospel." He divided the talk into three parts, as follows: What is present truth? What truth is present? How are we to establish it?

He considered truth to be indefinable. We explain the mind in operation, but we can not define it. The Bible is authoritive on redemptive and spiritual things, and when the redemptive truth is spoken of it is the truth as characterized in the life of Jesus. Present truth, he described, is that which is peculiarly applicable to a certain time. He said that this is a godless and giddy age, and it was the duty of the Christian to counteract the activity of Satan by the powerful teaching of the present truth. The first great truth of the present is salvation, and this is an individual affair.

Rev. Mr. Farr stated that there was an increasing number who are trusting their bodies to Christ for healing powers. Physicians say that nature completes all cures; nature is only God's custom of acting, but God is no respecter of persons, and therefore sinners as well as saints may enjoy the beneficial results of His healing through nature. But the Christian life bears a fruition which can only be gained by confessing at the altar.

In closing he said that he believed that the coming of the Lord would be within the next 20 or 30 years.

LOST THEIR GRIP.

Plainfields Go to Pieces on Strange Alleys and Drop from the Top.

In the county section of the Elizabeth Journal Association the tug-of-war took place last night, when the Plainfields and Roselles rolled their return games on the Roselle alleys. When they opened the section's series March 4, on the Plainfield alleys, the teams broke even, and kept pace with each other ever since. But last night the Plainfields were hoodooed, and lost both games, thereby leaving the Roselles in the lead and likely to get the championship. The scores:

FIRST GAME.

PLAINFIELD.		ROSELLE.
VanEmburgh	145	Miller, J.	164
VanAlstyne	138	Miller, G.	149
Wilbur	141	Hebbard, M.	154
Maltby	178	MacQuoid	179
Vail	159	Warner	103
	761		749

SECOND GAME.

PLAINFIELD.		ROSELLE.
VanEmburgh	140	Miller, J.	174
VanAlstyne	161	Miller, G. S.	157
Wilbur	156	Hebbard, M.	140
Maltby	142	McQuoid	186
Vail	159	Warner	161
	824		838

Roselle, 1662; Plainfield, 1510.

Y. M. C. A. Tennis.

All lovers of good sport, and especially the members of the Y. M. C. A., will be glad to know that the grounds back of the building are to be put in first-class condition for tennis playing. There will be three or four courts, and the place will be fenced in, making it very select for those who wish to play.

A portion of the grounds will be set aside for light gymnastics. The baths being easy of access will make the outdoor exercise very popular.

—Thus far only two men have quit work at the Scott Printing Machine Works on account of the reduction in wages. Both were pattern-makers.

MORE GOOD NEWS

For All Women Who Are Sick.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

"I am happy to say your Vegetable Compound has cured me of painful menstruations and backache.

"My suffering every month was dreadful. The doctor gave me morphine to ease the pain, but nothing to cure me; and I was obliged to spend two or three days in bed. Now I have no pain at all.

"I can work harder, and be on my feet longer, than I have for years. I cannot praise your medicine enough. I am glad to tell every one that I was cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. NEWTON COHN, Manchester, Ohio. All druggists sell it.

THE REASONS WHY

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites is so useful in all wasting diseases, such as Consumption, Anæmia, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Bronchitis, and Marasmus and Rickets in children, is because it furnishes to the depleted blood the fattening and enriching properties of the oil, and to the bones and nervous system the phosphorescent and vitalizing properties of the Hypophosphites, which together nourish the body arrest the progress of the disease, and commence a process of repair that finally means restored health and vigor.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1

Warrenville.

The Warrenville school-house was filled Tuesday afternoon, for the election of three trustees to be elected for three years, and the raising of the regular appropriations for incidentals for the year. The board asked for $450, but the voters allowed them only $200, as they spent over $1,000 last year and there was dissatisfaction over the manner of the purchase of books, some scholars having as many as 11 books, and one boy 7 years of age having eight books.

K. E. Sage was chairman and H. Toms secretary; and John Bornman, W. H. Kipsey and E. E. Cooper were elected for the term of three years.

North Plainfield Township.

The annual school meeting of township of North Plainfield was held at the Washingtonville schoolhouse yesterday afternoon.

The meeting was largely attended, and much interest was shown by the tax payers in the affairs of the schools.

The efficient manner in which the schools, (Washingtonville and Greenbrook), were conducted by the five trustees in their untiring efforts to bring them up to a high standard of proficiency, was rewarded by electing all of them to remain on the board, except Andrew Wilson, who contemplates moving out of the township into the borough.

The following were the officers elected at the meeting, as well as the trustees:

John Morris, chairman; Andrew Wilson, secretary; George Bettman and Theodore Leurseer, tellers.

Trustees—3 years, M. Duffey, John Morris, Philip Acker. 2 years, H. Coddington, Theodore Leursser, John Doty. 1 year, George Stewart, Pool Voorhees, Robert Clark, Jr.

$200 was voted for special money to be expended for incidentals.

The trustees will meet to transact business of importance Friday night. The number of trustees was raised to nine at the suggestion of the old board.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

BY THE WAY.

—Compton's block on West Front street is receiving exterior painting improvements.

—Special prayer meetings for boys will be held in Warren Chapel every Friday and Sunday evening commencing at 7.

—The authorship of the false report that a baby was born to Mrs. Fries has been traced to Mr. Spriggs of Howard street.

—Hendrickson's last Washington tour of the season leaves Plainfield March 28, as advertised. The entire expense is covered by $14 50.

—A gymnastic exhibition will be given by the boys at the Y. M. C. A., Tuesday afternoon, April 2, from 4 to 5. All parents are invited to be present.

—The report has gone out that E. M. Laing, the hatter, intends removing his store. The report is untrue; he remaining at his old stand, 105 Park avenue.

—Those desiro s of becoming charter members of Plainfield Council, Order of Chosen Friends, will do well to consult Friend Councilor Lantz before March 24 The charter closes March 26

—A select subscription sociable will be given Thursday night, April 18, in the Olympia, 415 Sycamore street, under the committeeship of G. T. Dunham, W. C. Walker and J. D. Anderson. The grand march will begin at 9.

—Thos. J. McGann, who has charge of the sandpit on Grant avenue near South Second street, wishes The Press to inform the public that if pedestrains keep to the sidewalk there is no danger whatever from the pit, as said pit is on private property.

—The regular meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational Church will be held Thursday afternoon, March 21, at 2:45, instead of 3, in the church parlors. Mrs. C. L. Goodrich will give a paper on "Medical Work Among Missions". The usual current missionary news from the various stations also will be expected.

DEAD AT THE AGE OF 113 YEARS.

Abby Smith, Who For 100 Years "Worked Around," Passes Away.

Abby Smith, who without doubt was the oldest person in the Nutmeg State, died at the home of Justice Charles A. Johnson, of Bozrah, eight miles northwest of Norwich, aged 113 years. Her death was due to debility. It is not known that she had ever been ill until three years ago, and then her indisposition was caused rather by a natural decline than any actual disease. For more than 100 years she had worked in country homesteads, a faithful house hand, who toiled as hard as ever woman could. It was not until she was 110 years old that she ceased to be able to support herself and do all her household duties and chores. She was a sprightly, clean built, cheery faced, helpful old lady, who by turns trotted into one house and then another among the neighbors "jest ter help 'em on with the work," and her coming there was as good as a sunbeam twinkling in at the windows after dull and cheerless weather. She never dropped in upon a county homestead that she was not welcome there, and the only trouble with her visitations, said the neighbors, was that they were too brief and far between.

In her extreme old age she was a bowed, withered, and dried up little person, her visage checkered with a thousand tiny wrinkles, but her eyes were as bright, shrewd, and kindly, and her sunny smile was the reflection of a temper that was never ruffled. In sickness or health her hand was always helpful, and she could mind the crossest babe with a mollifying effect that seemed magical. After Abby had become disabled from doing active work she went to live with Peace Justice Johnson's family, who treated her with the utmost kindness, so that her closing years were those of pleasantness and peace.

"Well, the old lady is gone!" said more than one rugged ruralist regretfully, after her death; "and a better woman never lived," they all added. Said Justice Johnson:

"A more honorable example of vigorous and sturdy womanhood was seldom seen. Her freshness of mind and vitality remained with her to an astonishing degree. Perhaps her most remarkable feature was her green and retensive memory, and she was a cyclopædia of all the every day news of Bozrah for an age."

Futhermore, she was one of the last survivors of a race of household hands, peculiar to New England, who "jest worked 'round for a livin'," like the Yankee "hired man," and toiled early and late, with unexampled fidelity and loyalty, for a very small pecuniary compensation. Yet they were as independent and proud as you please, and it wouldn't do at all to proffer to them the chilly and humiliating hand of charity. In a certain degree, perhaps, a corresponding class of home helpers was met with before the war in faithful old plantation hands in Virginia and Kentucky. In respect of old Abby Smith's exact age, there was always somewhat of doubt on the part of her neighbors, and the general opinion was that she was a trifle older—perhaps a year or so—than she believed herself to be.

—Barnum is coming in May.

—Wm. Hand & Son has moved Charles Brownell from 125 Watchung avenue to 426 West Second street.

—The regular Thursday afternoon meeting of the W.C.T.U. will be held in their rooms at 3:30. Subject: "Interrogation Points". General officers please meet at 2:30. CARA L. PECK, President.

—Wm. Hand & Son have moved G. T Rhodes from West Sixth street to 610 Central avenue; P. L. Conde from East Front street to 117 West Sixth street; and Josiah Unangst from East Third street to Elm place.

—The annual business meeting of the Home Mission Circle of the Park Avenue Baptist Church was held at the home of Mrs. J. K. Fisk, First place, yesterday The report of the various officers showed the organization to be in a prosperous condition with 33 members. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. K. Fisk; Vice-President, Mrs James Middleditch; Secretary, Mrs. E. V. Fisk; Treasurer, Mrs. Walter Freeman.

—A new bill which has recently become a law in this State is causing considerable discussion. It relates to township officers holding over from their last election, and those who claim to know about it say that the collector, assessor, freeholder, town committeemen and justices of the peace are legislated out of office. There is a little uneasiness in North Plainfield township in regard to the matter. It appears that the bill was drawn to affect Bridgewater township.

J. T. Case of 11 Vine street is confined to his home by severe illness.

Miss Lillian Pope of Duer street is confined to her home with illness.

Grandma Stead of Washington Valley is much improved from her illness.

A New World

opens to the man who finds quick relief from wearing pain. That is the testimony of multitudes who have used

Allcock's

Porous Plaster

for all sorts of aches and pains, lameness, stiffness of the muscles and joints of the back, limbs or side.

Make Sure and get the genuine. Never put up with imitations "Just as good as ALLCOCK'S."

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,

Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

relieve rheumatism and any disease arising from impurity of the blood.

KEAN IS AFTER IT.

Doesn't Withdraw from the Gubernatorial Race Just 'Cause Voorhees Has Entered.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Trenton, March 19—Hon. John Kean, Congressman Fowler, Frank Bergen, E. M. Wood, George T. Parrot, B. V. Lindabury and Sheriff Kyte were among the Union County representatives who were present at the State Capitol last night While the legislative bodies were in session these gentlemen talked politics.

Senator Voorhees experienced one of the liveliest evenings of his political existence. About 7 a number of copies of the Elizabeth Journal reached the State House, and every other kind of business was for the time being forgotten in the authorized announcement of Mr. Voorhees's candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination. The representatives of the New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania papers left their desks, left their stories of the Senate Investigation, and completely surrounded Mr. Voorhees. The latter acknowledged smilingly the interest manifested by the reporters, all of whom are his friends and the recipients of many favors for years past, and stated that his position was correctly set forth by the Journal.

When Mr. Kean appeared at the State House he also was besieged, and was plied with questions from all sides. He expressed his surprise at Mr. Voorhees's announcement, but freely acknowledged the latter's right to enter the canvass.

"What have you to say with reference to this matter?"—asked our reporter.

"I am still a candidate"—replied Mr. Kean.

LEGISLATIVE ADJOURNMENT.

This Week to End the Formal Session of the Legislature—Adjournment Till March 27, and Then Till June.

Trenton, March 19—The Steering Committee of the Legislature in conference today decided that the Legislature shall adjourn next Friday until Wednesday, March 27, when veto messages only shall be considered. When the vetoes are disposed of the Legislature will take a recess until June. The exact date for reassembling will be fixed.

In the intervening period, the Senate Investigating Committee will finish its labors.

FIRST WOMAN APPOINTED.

Miss Mary Steele of Somerville Made a Commissioner of Deeds.

Trenton, March 19—The first woman appointed as a commissioner of deeds under the new law was named by the joint meeting this morning. It is Miss Mary V. Steele of Somerville, daughter of late Congressman Steele of the old fourth district. She is employed in Alvah Clark's office.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager

Tennis Club Nominees.

The Nominating Committee of the Hillside Tennis Club have posted the following list of names, which they recommend for election at the annual meeting of the Club to be held April 3:

President, Dexter O. Tiffany; Vice-president, Robert L. Burnett; Secretary, Arthur Lovell; Treasurer, Josiah Browne; Governing Committee, James T. Murray, Fred W. Weis.

To Settle It.

The bowling game between Plainfield and Roselle at the latter place next Tuesday evening will probably decide the championship of the Jersey Central section of the Elizabeth Journal league, and therefore will be of great interest. The Plainfield team will be composed of Messrs Maltby, Vail, Wilbur, Van Alstyne, Patrie and Van Emburgh.

PHYSICIANS AND SCIENTISTS

Fail to Help Mrs N. Whitney.

HILLSBORO BRIDGE, N. H.—There is no more highly respected resident of this village than Mrs. N. E. Whitney. Her long and serious illness and her remarkable recovery through the aid of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, has made that medicine a necessity in many New Hampshire households.

Mrs. Whitney in speaking about her sickness said: "I had been gradually failing in health for a number of years, and was told by my physicians that I was in the last stages of Bright's disease I had been under the treatment at various times of six physicians, two clairvoyants and a Christian scientist, but received no benefit from any of them. It seemed to me that every means of ever being cured had been tried except to use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which had been recommended. I purchased a bottle, and by the time I had used the second bottle I was greatly improved, and from that on I gained daily, and it was not long before I was doing my regular household work. No tongue can tell how I suffered for the three years before I used Favorite Remedy. My age is 56 and I now weigh 35 pounds more than I ever did. Favorite Remedy restored me to health and strength."

As a prominent physician recently said: "Anyone suffering from kidney or urinary troubles, rheumatism or dyspepsia, should use Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; it will cure them if their disease is within the reach of medicine."

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

5-25-3

CARPETS

Made and Laid With Paper Without Charge

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.

are making and laying Carpets with paper without charge, which is a saving of 15c per yd.

☞Parties about going to housekeeping will find no larger stock of Parlor Suits and Bedroom Suits to select from at such low prices. All of the latest Spring styles of Bedroom Suits of the Hall & Lyon manufacture, and Parlor Suits of all the latest manufactures and of the latest designs and coverings.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

All other goods suitable to furnish a house with in our line are sold at the lowest prices. Terms easy; one dollar per week.

The Portland Range!

The Court of Errors has just unanimously affirmed the opinion of the lower courts that no other dealer can take any range and put the name Portland on it and try to hoodwink the people that they are selling the original Portland Range, when such is not the case. 7,000 of these ranges now in use and not one complaint. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Goods delivered to all parts of the State free of charge.

Storing Furniture

Our new building just erected at 88, 90, 92 Bank street, seems to be the only building in the State to store furniture, the way it is being filled up. Furniture moved with vans at reasonable rates in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J

Fifty Dollars Given Away.

To raisers of poultry, the most wonderful and valuable monthly is The Poultry Keeper. The publishers offer fifty dollars free. Send for sample copy free and see how. Any of the following back numbers worth a dollar but sent postpaid for only five cents each: Brooders Incubators, Appliances, Poultry Houses (Illus) Aug. '90 Aug. '91. Worth $10. Poultry Houses, April '91, Oct. '91 and July '91 [illegible]. Preserving eggs, Sep. '91. Turkeys, Mar. '92. Poultry diseases Nov. '87. How to Feed for Eggs, Oct. '91. All About Lice, Jan. '91, Dec. '91. Testing Eggs, June '91 and June '92. [illegible] July '92. Sample free. Address, The Poultry Keeper Co., [illegible]

Prof. A. Wehner,

TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.

ALSO VOICE CULTURE.

Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.

References given and required.

Address letters to, the office of this paper.

[illegible]

THE SECOND PROMISE
By
Howard Fielding

[Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

CHAPTER I.

THE BIRD THAT WAS SET FREE.

Perfumes appeal to the memory in an extraordinary degree. This is sound scientific doctrine, and it is true, besides. Take that old glove out of its casket, my venerable and lonely friend. You may look upon it with a steady eye, perhaps; but if there linger in it the fragrance of the hand it held so long ago, you dare not raise it to your lips and say you have forgotten.

The sights of spring delight us for their promise, but the scented breeze blows out of the past, and we turn our face toward it. To Arthur Lynde, stretched upon his couch by the open window, the breath of early June came laden with more than a single season's sweetness—with the fragrance of blossoms that had grown to fruit, and ripened, and fallen to the ground. Whether the memories it brought were joyous, or trivial, or sad, he turned to the past willingly, for there was no future. His life lay all behind him. He could look upon it without shame or any sharp regret for opportunities neglected. It had been a happy life and a short one. Thirty years measured it.

Among the scenes that came back to him in the spring morning was one of trifling importance; but it came with singular vividness, and great persistance. He was a little boy then, and he had been quite ill, so that he lay in bed while the spirit of the springtime beckoned to him from outside the window, and he could not go. It was hard to wait for returning health, and sometimes he became desperately impatient, taxing the ingenuity of his mother to amuse him, but not her love to bear with him.

There was a canary in a cage in his room. His mother had given him the bird, and he felt most tenderly toward it. He had never before thought its lot hard, but, being then in captivity himself, he was moved to pity the little prisoner; so he besought his mother to open the door of the cage and give the bird at least the freedom of the room. She yielded to his entreaties, but, unhappily, neglected to close all the windows. Thus it chanced that the canary gained its freedom altogether and returned no more. Arthur grieved exceedingly, and quite unselfishly, for he thought less of his own loss than of the fate of the little bird which, bred in a cage, was unfit for liberty and would almost certainly perish. To console him, his mother said that the canary would realize its danger and would return, being provided with an infallible instinct as a guide. Believing implicitly what his mother said, and observing that the bird did not come back, Arthur accepted the logical conclusion that it preferred freedom even at the price.

This small tragedy of his childhood was all in the June breeze, as he lay by the open window and inhaled the scent of blossoms.

Suddenly there was a sound in the room not dissimilar to the whir of a bird's wings, and then a voice cried:

"Good morning, Arthur, dear; I've come to keep you company."

He turned his pale face toward her, and she fluttered down beside the couch and kissed him. She was a picture in the soft tints of the blossoms, with blue and gold added.

"Don't you feel a great deal stronger this morning?" she asked. "Surely you must on such a day as this."

"I wish I could say so truly, for your sake," he replied. "But I am no better to-day; and, what is much more to be regretted, I am no worse."

"Don't speak like that," she cried. "I had hoped so much that Dr. Marston would help you."

"I think the time has come," he said, "to lay such hopes aside. Dr. Marston is older in practice and a more competent physician than I am. I would have said a year ago that his opinion in such a case was worth more than that of any other man in this part of the world—certainly far more than mine. But it isn't. They are both equally valueless. I do not know what is the matter with me, and neither does he; and that's all about it. His view of the probabilities of the case is exactly what mine is; that I shall lie here for months, perhaps for years, and pass from death-in-life to rest, at my appointed hour, which nobody can predict."

She drew away from him, and sank into a great chair, sobbing like a child.

"You always make me cry," she said. "If you would only be more cheerful."

"As to that," he replied, "I have a plan. It is impossible for me to be cheerful, but why should my gloom envelop you? It has done so, for nearly a year, since this illness came upon me. Every day you have brought the light of your presence to me, dear little wife, and God knows I am unspeakably grateful. But I am not so selfish as to permit this to continue. This room has been a prison to you as it has to me. I am going to open the door."

She looked at him uneasily. How had she shown him that she felt herself a prisoner?

"You have tried to do too much," he said, "and the inevitable consequence has come. It is all my fault. My selfishness was very short-sighted. If I had been wise enough at first to regulate your self-sacrifice, I might not now be the burden upon you that I am. You have read to me, talked to me, sung to me, and have been my consolation by day and by night. But what have I been to you? A sorrow and a care, the embodiment of misfortune, a spectacle of death with which your young and vigorous life could have no sympathy. What can come of it? Only unhappiness. I tell you that when nature has determined to sever a tie, it snaps; and those who cling the longest when she bids them part, suffer the most."

Her lips quivered, and a tear rolled from each of her eyes. She only half understood him; but, misled by conscience, she thought he was reproving her. It was true that she had found it very hard to give up so much of the gay life to which she had always been accustomed, yet she had done it for his sake. Why should he speak in this way? She took high ground with him.

"It is a wife's duty—" she began.

He smiled bitterly.

"It is a dead man's duty," he said, "to withdraw himself from the concerns of living persons. I have failed in that particular. Let us think less of your duty and more of mine. I am an utterly helpless creature. I cannot move either of my legs, and my right hand is just strong enough to hold my left upon my breast as I lie here, hour after hour."

"I love you," she sobbed.

"You pity me at this moment, but love me you cannot. Hereafter, when both of us are freed from the limitations of the flesh, it may be possible. But in this world, encumbered by these mortal bodies, love means life and health. It is reciprocal. It is a sentiment inspired by nature for her own purposes, and terminable at her pleasure. No human will can summon it or hold it. Am I the same to you as I was? Does your heart leap at the sound of my voice and tremble at a caress? I would not have it so. It would be unnatural, monstrous."

She tried very hard to turn him from his gloomy and desperate trend of thought.

"I am waiting," she said, "till you are well again."

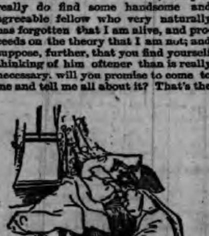
"Dear little girl," he said gently. "I shall never be well. And now let's see what's to be done about it. I have spoken too bitterly, and have frightened you. And yet it is my wish to make you happy. Listen! I want you to go out into the world, and live your life."

"What! Go away from you?"

"Now, don't be frightened. Of course you'll live here, and run into this cage of mine whenever you wish to have a look at me. I'll always be glad to see you. But don't ever think that you must come. Go out into society, and have people come here if they can stand it, knowing that my body's in the house. Get your old friends back again, and make new ones, both men and women. Dance, and play tennis, and ride in the park as you used to do. Spend a lot of money. There's plenty of it. I only wish I could help you do all these things, but, as I can't, you must do them twice as hard. And every time a gloomy thought of me comes over you, say to yourself: 'I'm doing what he wants me to do. I'm doing what will make him the happiest.' And if you fall in love—"

"Arthur!"

"Now, little girl, let's be reasonable. I've proven to you that you can't love me. And love comes when you least expect it. Suppose, just for the sake of the contract we're to make, that you really do find some handsome and agreeable fellow who very naturally has forgotten that I am alive, and proceeds on the theory that I am not; and suppose, further, that you find yourself thinking of him oftener than is really necessary, will you promise to come to me and tell me all about it? That's the contract I mentioned. It's like this: You're to be perfectly free, the absolute mistress of your own heart and conduct. I renounce all claims. And in consideration of my generosity, you agree to tell me when you fall in love with somebody else."



SHE FELL ON HER KNEES BESIDE THE COUCH.

She fell on her knees beside the couch, and, clasping his hand, shed tears upon it.

"I have been cruel to you," she sobbed. "I have let you see that sometimes I was restless and impatient of my duty. And this is my punishment. You have ceased to love me, and you no longer care what I do. You wish to drive me away from you."

"Promise!"

"To love you always."

"You made that promise two years ago—to love me while I lived. You have kept it. You have loved me while I lived. Now for the second promise. You would remember me in my grave if a new love came to you, and would hesitate for the sake of that memory. Your faith would whisper to you: 'He knows. Will he forgive?' I tell you in advance, I will. But, in this living death, I crave the power of the angels. I would know. Will you promise?"

And, protesting that it was a sacrilege, she promised.

Then he spoke very calmly and cheerfully to her.

"You see I had to make a scene of this," he said, "or we never should have come to any decision about it. I've tried, before, to make you go back into society, but you would not understand me. It was necessary to startle you as I have done. But after you think it over you'll see that I have only considered your health and happiness. As to what I've said about love, it's all true enough and I hold you to your promise. But don't make a nightmare of it. You're not obliged to fall in love with somebody else, you know, just because I've suggested the possibility. You're not obliged to do anything, in fact. That's the point; you are free. We've discussed the subject, and we've decided that it is not your duty to give all your waking thoughts to me; that, in short, you are absolved, by the nature of the case, from any duty whatever so far as I am concerned. Your own self respect is quite enough. And now we've settled the whole matter, so run away and play, little girl, with a light heart."

He would not permit her to speak seriously any more. He forced her to leave him, and promise that she would go out into the air. Presently he saw her in the garden whence she threw a kiss to him.

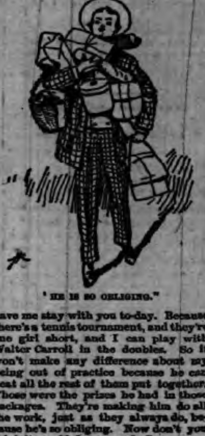
A little later she was in earnest conference across the garden fence with a big, good-looking young fellow who was ridiculously encumbered by a great variety of bundles and boxes. Lynde recognized him as Walter Carroll, a great swell in college athletics up to his graduation a year before. He passed on and directly Mrs. Lynde ran breathlessly into her husband's room.

"Arthur," she said, "if you really mean it—"

He turned pale and then laughed.

"Upon my word, you startled me," he cried. "Walter is a very fascinating young man, and—"

"Now don't be absurd any more. What I want to know is whether you were in earnest about not caring to have me stay with you to-day. Because there's a tennis tournament, and they're one girl short, and I can play with Walter Carroll in the doubles. So it won't make any difference about my being out of practice because he can beat all the rest of them put together. Those were the prizes he had in those packages. They're making him do all the work, just as they always do, because he's so obliging. Now don't you think it would do me good—"



"HE IS SO OBLIGING."

"My dear child," he said, "of course I think so. Play, by all means, and win a prize. I don't see how you can help it, considering the number of them. Now run away, and get out your prettiest tennis dress and—"

She was gone like a flash.

"Well, I didn't think she'd take this quite so easily," muttered Lynde, "but then I never did understand women."

CHAPTER II.

DAVID CHASE'S FAVORITE GAME.

Most New Englanders are content if they can find the roots of their family tree in the soil about Plymouth Rock. They can hardly lay claim to genuine Americanism, however, in the presence of Mr. David Chase, who traces his descent to the Penobscot Indians. He has proof that his ancestors were great chiefs, and, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it is hard to dispute his assertion.

Mr. Chase somewhat resembles an Indian, though the rough lines of that type have been softened by the lapse of centuries and the admixture of the invader's blood. He has a dark and powerful countenance, with remarkably keen eyes. His hair is straight, and black as ebony. In person he is somewhat above the medium height; his slender frame is notably erect, and he has the grace and strength of a savage. His voice is low, soft and very pleasing to the ear. He is a bachelor, and lives in the Kensington, on Columbia Heights, Brooklyn. He is in society, and is therefore acquainted with the Lyndes, who are Brooklyn people.

Nearly two months after the date of the occurrence described in the previous chapter, Mr. Chase—who by his general scheme of existence should have been at Newport long before—was standing with his back against the mantel in his parlor, addressing a young man who had called upon him. The visitor was Walter Carroll, who may be remembered as the organizer of tennis tournaments, already mentioned.

"This is very extraordinary, Mr. Carroll," he said, "I have been called to account for similar offenses many times, I am happy to say, but never by a person situated as you are."

Carroll was evidently abashed by Chase's manner, and not a little, too, by the nature of the business in hand.

"Of course I know it's very absurd," he said. "I haven't any right to represent Dr. Lynde, and I hardly know enough to venture to address you in a matter of this kind. But, hang it, you know, a fellow 's got to have some kind of principle; and I've tied up to the good, old fashioned golden rule. I'd want somebody to do this for me, and that's why I'm doing it for you."

"So it's on my account, is it?"

"Well, partly. I'm inclined to like you, confound it, and I hate to see you doing something that isn't right; isn't even gentlemanly or decent, if you come to that. Great Scott, man, it's too low down! There isn't anybody but a cursed cad who would take advantage of a fellow in Lynde's position. Yet it's a fact and I'm bound to say it, that your name is coupled with Mrs. Lynde's more often than you've any idea of. I hear at the club—heard it half a dozen times to-night—and I can't stand it. You know I was very good friends with her—used to go to school with her, and all that sort of thing. Of course that doesn't give me any special right to do this, but, by Jove, my right is as good as anybody's. There isn't a man left in either family, except her brother, and he's in Australia."

Chase regarded him for ten seconds with a peculiar smile.

"My dear fellow," he said, at last, "do you wish me to tell you the truth about this?"

"Why, of course! what the dickens else should you do?"

"I might get angry," responded Chase gently, "or I might lie. Probably that would be the wise thing to do. But, contrary to my custom, I am disposed to tell the truth—on one condition. You are to give me your word of honor not to repeat what I say."

"Repeat?" Carroll paused in amazement with his mouth wide open. "Why, man alive," he continued, "isn't it bad enough that we should stand here discussing a woman's reputation without our going around talking about it afterwards?"

"I have your word of honor, then?"

"Well, I should say so!"

"Remember, you are at liberty to act upon the information in any way you please, so long as you do not tell that you and I have spoken of this matter. If that information can help Amy Lynde, why that is all in the game. It's in the nature of odds. You may also profit personally by what I say, and that's partly why I say it. You were good enough to announce that you liked me. Well, I'm interested in you, and I have an idea that you're missing the best part of life."

Carroll shook his head slowly.

"I don't know just what you're driving at," he said.

"You will know immediately," rejoined Chase. "Let me say, to begin with, that your suspicions regarding me are entirely just. I am at present engaged in a most interesting game, my favorite game, the only game that is really worth while—the pursuit of a pretty woman. Amy Lynde—"

"Look here, Chase," cried Carroll, getting upon his feet with a suddenness that upset his chair, "I'm a good deal of a brute myself, but I draw the line somewhere; and you'll have to, while I'm present."

Chase courteously waved his hand.

"As you please," he said. "We will, if you prefer, confine our conversation to general philosophical principles. With most respectful consideration we will now dismiss Mrs. Lynde from our thoughts."

He pulled a box of cigars out of a drawer of his writing-table, and passed it to Carroll, who declined. Then Chase selected a cigar for himself; lifted a half-filled bottle of champagne from the floor, where it had previously been unnoticed by his visitor, and poured out a glassful for himself, after Carroll had refused the vintage by a shake of the head. While this was being done, Carroll noticed for the first time that his host was in the earlier stages of intoxication.

"As to women," Chase continued, sipping the wine, "they are the natural objects of men's pursuit. It seems strange to announce so palpable a fact seriously, but I verily believe that you have not hitherto considered the subject in that light."

"You're right," said Carroll; "I have not."

"Most men so consider them," rejoined Chase, "and most women prefer to be so considered. It is, as I have previously remarked, a game. There is no other to compare with it. A clever woman is the worthy adversary of any man. You observe that I am not one of those who underrate the intelligence of the sex. On the contrary, I have the greatest respect for woman. I drink to her—" with his left hand he motioned Carroll back— "in the abstract. I drink to woman in general. It is in that way that the sex should be regarded by philosophers. Of course we are obliged to deal with individuals, when it's a question of putting our principles into practice. The game is fought single-handed. It is a beautiful thing to see a woman play it, when she knows that she herself is the stake."

"And what, may I ask, is your stake when you play?"

"The bitterness of failure," responded Chase.

"You don't ask very much in the way of odds," said Carroll. "Hold on! I don't care to hear you expound your philosophy further. I have met plenty of rascals before, and the worst of them were members of your peculiar sect. But I confess that you have surprised me. I came here believing you to be a gentleman misled by impulse. Now I know the contrary to be the fact and I might as well face it. You have confessed to me that you are trying to win Mrs. Lynde's love, knowing that her husband is a defenseless cripple who needs her presence and her affection every hour. Now, while, in one sense, she is as safe from you, because of her own purity of heart, as if she were already in Heaven and you on the other side of the great gulf, I am willing to admit that there is an element of peril in the situation. She likes you; most women do. She can be betrayed into many innocent indiscretions. You are shrewd, and infamously experienced. Now what can I do about it? I can break my promise and repeat to her what you have said. But I won't do that, and you know it."

"I was in hopes you would, my dear fellow," said Chase, quickly. "It would show her that you love her, and that would give me a rival, which is always an advantage. Besides she wouldn't believe you."

"I've given you my word, and there's an end of it," replied Carroll, gloomily. "There's nothing I can do but keep an eye on you. I know the world too well already to open my mouth and start a scandal. You must go your own way up to a certain point. But, David Chase, if you pass the line which I shall mark out for you there'll be a stake in the game on your side that you haven't counted yet, and you'll lose it."

"You refer to my life," said Chase, filling his glass again. "I've played for it before and shall be delighted to do it again. Don't fancy that I underrate the odds. A man in your position is [illegible] forty [illegible]. But why not play fairly against me and let the woman be the stake? Of course I have a considerable advantage. For instance I've been over there this evening, and I don't mind telling you."

He sprang up a little unsteadily. Carroll checked himself and let his hands slowly open, while he took note of the other's condition. Then he seized his hat from the table and hurried out of the room. Chase sank back into his chair and laughed.

Turn the hands of the clock back an hour and you may see Amy Lynde standing at the foot of the stairs which led up to her husband's apartments. Since the early days of his illness he had wisely separated himself from her by night, that his sleep might be undisturbed. He had slept little and had often read till dawn.

She thought, as she stood there, that he would be reading on his couch with the gigantic negro, who was his body servant, as his sole companion. She had made up her mind to do a very foolish thing—to keep her promise. There was a conflict in her mind as she stood at the foot of the stairs, with her white hands clasped about the banister rail. She had taken the freedom he had offered her, without in the least meaning to do so. He had seemed quite contented, and, for her own part, she could not deny that active life and the renewal of associations broken a year before had been delightful. Then she had begun to feel Chase's black eyes upon her. She had known him for several years, but he had never had any part in her life. It seemed strange to her that she could have overlooked so remarkable a man. His tremendous energy appealed to her admiration. Profoundly respectful, and serving her as a student of women can learn to do, he made himself desirable. And at last he made himself desired.

She did not love him; of that she was perfectly certain. Yet he came within her husband's definition when he had that promise. She thought of him much oftener than she dared to confess to her own heart. He was a strong man, and she had nursed a weak one, and had felt that dangerous sentiment of pity. That evening she had been much more disturbed than ever before, and she had remembered her promise.

Continued on page 8.

Ferris'
GOOD SENSE
Corset
Waists.
SENSIBLE WOMEN WEAR THEM

BECAUSE THEY ARE
RIGHT Shape to fit properly and feel comfortable
RIGHT Material to give the best service.
RIGHT Finish because of skilled labor.
Buttons and Button Holes won't pull off.
Support from the shoulders.
Fastenings for Hose Supporters.

Why Buy an Imitation when the GENUINE Costs so Little and Wears so Long?
CHILDREN'S, 25c. to 75c. MISSES, 50c. to $1. LADIES, $1 to $2.

Choked to Death.

Clarence, the three year old son of Robert H. Lowry of Madison avenue, died very suddenly yesterday afternoon from choking. The child had been ill 36 hours with membraneous croup, and at 2 yesterday afternoon a piece of the membrane became detached and clogged up the windpipe, and the little fellow choked to death in a minute and a half. Dr. Endicott was the attending physician, but by the time he reached his side life had become extinct. He was the only child, and the affliction is a grievous one.

—The Summer residence of Walter Williams at Netherwood is receiving repairs preparatory to occupancy.

—Students in Washington School are doing considerable studying outside of school hours in the endeavor to secure promotion ahead of the regular school work laid out by teachers.

IN paint the best is the cheapest. Don't be misled by trying what is said to be "just as good," but when you paint insist upon having a genuine brand of

Strictly Pure

White Lead

It costs no more per gallon than cheap paints, and lasts many times as long.

Look out for the brands of White Lead offered you; any of the following are sure:

"Atlantic," "Jewett,"
"Brooklyn."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and color-card. Send us a postal card and get both free.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

Christian Endeavor Workers.

The chairmen of the various committees of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist Church have appointed assistants as follows:

Missionary—W. T. Spangenberg, (chairman), Charles Covover, Miss I. B. Yerkes. Prayer Meeting—Miss Alice G. Woodland, (chairman), Misses Ella Serrell, May H. Howlett, Bertha B. Needham and Charles Fountain. Social—Miss Grace Yerkes, (chairman), Mrs. Fannie Batchelor, Miss —elle Vail, Mrs. Charles Conover and Harry J. Bremer. Lookout—George F. Brown, (chairman), Arthur E. Crane, R. W. Barnes, Misses Laura Runyon and Florence Marsh. Welcome—R. W. Barnes, Robert Love, Grace Yerkes, Miss Runyon and Miss Woodland. Music—Miss Marsh, William Runyon, Florence Dodge, Clifford Brady and Harold Serrell. Press—R. W. Barnes, (chairman), Miss Emily Coriell and J. Henry Crane.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

[illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia [illegible]

[illegible]

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

FRED DOUGLASS.

STORIES OF THE EMINENT BLACK MAN'S CHARACTER.

His Dislike of the Notoriety Which Was Prompted by Curiosity. How He Squelched a Southern Senator's Son. An Imposing Orator.

The passing away of Frederick Douglass recalls a remarkable personality. Who that ever listened to him can forget the marvelous oratory, the splendid appearing man? Frederick Douglass looked the great man, and nowhere more so than when speaking. There was something in his pose, in his bearing, the manner of that straight, towering six feet of humanity which, to my way of thinking, surpassed all others, and, so far as ability was concerned, where were one more worthy to be a Senator of the United States.

For years, as many will remember, Mr. Douglass was in great demand on the lecture platform; and when I lived in an Illinois town he lectured one evening—following Gen. Howard in the course—at a town about a mile distant. He was stopping at a hotel, and as he was a friend of my grandfather, at whose house I had met him, I called to pay my respects. I was shown to his room, where I found him sitting in a rocking chair mending the fire with a large pair of tongs. He seemed very distant, if not surly at first, merely bowing and not in the slightest relaxing his efforts with the tongs. But on my mentioning the name of my grandfather, and informing him that I was that tremendously important personage—the village minister, and on his apparently sensing the idea that I hadn't called out of curiosity, but really to pay my respects, his manner changed at once and entirely.

He laid down the tongs, rose from his chair, and walking toward me, offered his hand, saying: "Pardon me, sir; I am very glad to see you. I thought—pray be seated"—with which he handed me a chair, reseating himself in his rocking chair, laid his head back and began talking. After a short time the proprietor entered the room and informed Mr. Douglass that tea was ready.

"Thank you," he replied, "I will take tea later"—and when the landlord had departed he said:

"I have been annoyed so many times at public tables that I never venture if I can avoid it." Expressing some surprise at this, he said: "Yes, I have had people leave the table when I took my seat; and the many black, scowling looks are quite as bad." Recalling his remark that Mr. Lincoln was the only man who, in the course of a visit, did not remind him in some way that he was a colored man, I held my peace. In about half an hour the landlord again appeared, and extending me an invitation, I went down with Mr. Douglass and had the pleasure of taking supper with him.

His lecture that evening was on "The Evils That Beset the Republic," and during the first part of it he read largely from his manuscript. He appeared to be ill at ease, and was, I observed continually working at the lapel of his coat with his left hand. Before long, however, he turned from the desk and notes, walked slowly round to the front of the platform, buttoned his coat, gave his mane a sort of shake, and then for nearly two hours made that kind of a speech which but few men in this world have been able to make.

At its close I went up to him to express the pleasure I had felt, and I recall that, as he walked toward me, he had unbuttoned his coat and put both hands in his vest pockets—expressive apparently of honest pride and satisfaction at the performance.

When I had finished my edifying remarks, he said: "I delivered that lecture some time ago in Baltimore, and at its conclusion a pompous young Southerner came up to me and began what he was going to say with the remark: 'Mr. Douglass, I am the son of a United States Senator.' I cut him short," said Douglass, "by saying: 'I have good reason for believing that I, too, am the son of a United States Senator.' The young man," he added, "didn't say another word, but looked at me turned and left the platform."

How a Dog Became a Teetotaler.

A lady at Westgate-on-Sea tells a remarkable anecdote of a dog who was cured of its evil habit of love for liquor. Some mischievous persons had so often given to her father's great dog bits of bread soaked in beer that Neptune grew fond of the artificial dainty. One day, when a large party was returning from a picnic, Nep was put on the box seat beside the driver of the carriage as he seemed too tired to run home all the way. He must have drunk some liquor at the feast, for on the road he fell from the carriage to the ground. No bones were broken, though he must have got a severe shake and a fright in the fall. The result was that Nep never once after that day could be induced to touch bread soaked with liquor, turning from it with loathing and contempt, the very smell of it being repulsive. In fact, he became a teetotaler.

Economizing the Time.

"We will wait a few minutes longer," said the pastor, "in order to give an opportunity for those who may wish to unite with the church to come forward and do so."

A solemn hush fell upon the congregation, but nobody moved.

At last a tall, slender, lantern jawed, long whiskered man sitting near the door rose up and said:

"While the young people in the audience are making up their minds on this all important question I should like to offer a few thoughts on the subject of free coinage."—Chicago Tribune.

Her Sweet Content.

In the impenetrable darkness she was alone with her thoughts. The chill of morning was stealing into her chamber.

"He comes," she murmured. "My husband comes."

Tears sprang to her eyes.

"Unfeeling man."

She hearkened yet again.

"Unfeeling man," she whispered, as she distinctly heard him run his face against the mattress.

A sense of sweet content possessed her now.—Puck.

The Great Modern Remedy.

"Poor Thompson! I'm dreadfully sorry for him."

"What ails Thompson?"

"Why, he's laid up with rheumatism. Can't find a doctor who can help him."

"Why doesn't he try shooting ducks in

SHE RIDES A BIKE.

OUR GREATEST TEMPERANCE APOSTLE DONS DIVIDED SKIRTS.

Miss Frances Willard, Fair, Fat and 55, Tells of Her English Experiences. She Don't Like the Cockney Accent and Won't Use It.

Miss Frances Willard is 55 and she tells it. She came back to her native land a better American and a stronger woman than ever.

England and English society agreed with her. She has primroses in her complexion and flesh on her restless little body. She brings a brain load of ideas and the manuscript of a new book.

To a reporter she said:

"God Bless America! I love it. My stay with Lady Henry Somerset was a day dream. I met most delightful people. I came near being killed with kindness. But I have been kept crying with joy ever since I returned."

"Did you get the English accent, Miss Willard?"

"No, I didn't."

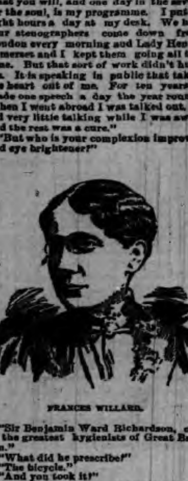
"Not just a few broad a's?"

"Not one. I didn't learn to say clark for clerk, luggage for baggage, railway for railroad, tram for street cars, brasses for checks, or gowns for dresses. I do say station for depot because I think it more expressive. And I did learn to soften my pronunciation of the word American. It is a most beautiful word and I feel justified in speaking it as beautifully as I can."

When asked the secrets of her good looks she said:

"I have had a good rest. I am an eight hour woman. Eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep and eight hours for what you will, and one day in the seven for the soul, is my programme. I put in eight hours a day at my desk. We had four stenographers come down from London every morning and Lady Henry Somerset and I kept them going all the time. But that sort of work didn't hurt me. It is speaking in public that takes the heart out of me. For ten years I made one speech a day the year round. When I went abroad I was talked out. I did very little talking while I was away and the rest was a cure."

"But who is your complexion improver and eye brightener?"



FRANCES WILLARD.

"Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, one of the greatest hygienists of Great Britain."

"What did he prescribe?"

"The bicycle."

"And you took it?"

"Yes, in large doses. It took me thirty hours to learn. First, I began with three assistants. Then I got along with two. For a long while I rode with one and now I go alone. I had a short blue suit, sweater and divided skirts, cap and shoes and I exercised every day, winter and warm weather, for half or a full hour. It was hard work but I was determined to master it."

"Did you get many black and blue spots?"

"No, because I didn't fall. I wasn't allowed. My girls took too good care of me. Even after I conquered they came with me. While I was learning I wrote a book. I simply talked and a stenographer reported me. I have called it, 'How I Learned the Bicycle and Reflections by the Way.'"

"How did you learn to ride the bicycle?"

"Well, I had two rules and I rode up to them. The major promise I took was 'I will not fall.' That is rule one. There is an old Yorkshire proverb. 'It's dogged as does it,' which I took for rule two. I used to repeat it a dozen times, and although it made the girls laugh it helped me. When I got my courage up to pitch I would tell the girl to stand aside and exert her moral influence and it sustained me. I learned to ride as I learned to walk. I define bicycling as walking six inches above ground. The pedals are six inches from the ground and the same confidence by which the child learns to walk helps the adult to ride.

"No, I didn't go out on the highway. Lady Henry Somerset had a tricycle and we took our exercise on the grounds. The estate is immense and the roads and drives left nothing to be desired. I brought my wheel with me. She presented it to me. If I had bought one, of course, I should have selected an American bicycle, for I am too loyal to believe that American labor or American skill is second to any workmanship. I called it the 'Gladys,' because it made me gladsome in my spirit. The day I took my first ride I gave Gladys the white ribbon."

DWELT IN A MINE.

The Domicile of Two Miners and Their Families at Wheeling.

A few days ago a sad case of destitution was found on the South Side, among some miners and their families who had recently removed from an Ohio mining camp to this city. Two miners and their families came to the southern portion of Wheeling about two weeks ago, and they were so poor that they had not the means to rent a house. They were fortunate enough to find some employment in the mines of a South Side man. The two families took up their abode in one of the deserted chambers in the mine, and here they remained until they could make enough money to buy sufficient lumber with which to erect a small cottage near the mines.

The house was completed a day or so ago, and now the two families have a better place to live. The men are apparently worthy in every respect, and the owner of the mine has given them all the work he has on hand. How they managed to live for ten days in a dark, damp mine is something not easily explained.—Wheeling News.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

TO CONNECT THE GREAT LAKES WITH THE HUDSON RIVER.

Erie Canal Avoided in the Project. Anti-Snappers for Postmasters in New York. Hill Recommends One Candidate, but He is Turned Down.

A reward of $100,000 for a successful invention is very liberal, and this is the amount offered by Congress to any inventor, of any nation, who shall, before the year 1900, construct an aerial vessel capable of going thirty miles an hour through the air and carrying passengers and freight. The sum of $100,000 might be a trifle to the fortune that would await the man who should construct and cover with patents the air ship thus called for.

The statue of Gen. Grant, which was designed to be erected in Statuary Hall, at the Capitol, by the Grand Army of the Republic, has arrived in Washington. It bears no resemblance to the dead soldier. It is a monstrosity—a perversion. It is to be hoped that the Joint Committee of the two Houses will refuse to allow it to be set up. There is a big principal at stake. The committee of veterans who accepted the work cannot be pardoned, for, though it does not follow that, because a man is brave and a good fighter, he is therefore a judge in matters of art, yet they ought to have insisted on something like a likeness. Statuary Hall is our national Westminster Abbey. It should be seen to that none of the eyesores which encumber the latter place get into our memorial chamber.

Before adjournment Senator Allison introduced a bill to incorporate the Maritime Canal of North America. It authorizes the construction of navigable canals through the territory of the United States between the Great Lakes, the St. Lawrence River and tidewater in the Hudson River and entrances, and terminal and other works necessary and desirable in connection therewith, and proposes to regulate commerce on and over such canals and works and to establish the same as military and post roads. The capital stock of the canal company is fixed at $10,000,000, and a bonded indebtedness of $300,000,000 is authorized. The company is empowered to construct a canal from some point near the head of tidewater navigation on the Hudson to some point on Lake Champlain; also from some point at or near the head of Lake Frances to some point on the St. Lawrence above the rapids known as the "Long Sault;" also from a point at or near Lewiston on the Niagara River to some point on the same river above the Falls, of such dimensions as to make navigable channels at least twenty feet deep and of dimensions sufficient to admit of two of the largest vessels drawing twenty feet of water and passing each other in the channel at full speed. The plans for the construction of this canal are to be approved by the Secretary of War; all tolls are to be approved by the Inter State Commerce Commission. Work is to begin within five years from the passage of the act, and the canal to be completed in ten years. There is no provision for the guarantee of bonds by the Government, but the Government may take possession of the property at any time at a value to be fixed by a Board of Arbitration.

President Cleveland's nomination of G. H. Colton to be Postmaster at Elmira, was a genuine surprise to those who have, thought that a reconciliation had been effected between Mr. Cleveland and Senator Hill. Since the latter dined at the White House it has been generally supposed that the hatchet had been buried, and that thereafter the senior New York Senator would be consulted about appointments, as other Senators are. Mr. Hill's repeated appearances as the defender of the President in the Senate and the advocate of his policies, caused a belief that he and the President had become allies and friends. The appointment of Mr. Colton, however, destroys this assumption, for he is not by any means a man whom Mr. Hill would have recommended had he been consulted. The nomination was a surprise to Senator Hill, and he frankly said that he knew little about Mr. Colton, and that he did not recommend him and was not asked for his opinion. The President sent to the Senate recently a long list of nominations of Postmasters at small towns in New York State. All of the nominees are anti-snappers. Some time ago Senator Hill and Senator Murphy broke through their rule of refusing to recommend any one to President Cleveland for appointment, and, because of extenuating circumstances, recommended a certain man to be Postmaster at Gloversville. A nomination came in for that office, but the nominee is not the man indorsed by the two New York Senators. Instead, he is a man especially obnoxious to both of them, and who is the very last person that they would like to see appointed to any office.

Mrs. May Wright Sewall, President of the National Council of Women, has received a great deal of praise for the capable manner in which she presided over the meeting of the organization in Washington. She is a strong minded woman, but is always richly and tastefully attired. Mrs. Sewall is a native of Wisconsin, though both her parents came from New England.

The nomination of William L. Wilson to be Postmaster-General seems to be satisfactory to everybody in Washington. When it was first reported that Mr. Wilson would be the successor of Mr. Bissell in the Cabinet it was said that the Senate might not be disposed to confirm him because of his criticism of certain Senators last summer during the struggle over the Tariff bill. There was no member of the Senate, however, who resented Mr. Wilson's attack earnestly enough to cause him to oppose the confirmation, and the Republicans were as willing as the Democrats to pay him the compliment of a prompt confirmation. Those who know Mr. Wilson best are surprised that he is willing to accept an office the duties of which are so onerous, and where he can hardly expect to make a reputation as an executive officer.

ROBERT LEWIS.

Beating About the Bush.

A.—What! You call me a swindler?

B.—No. But I am prepared to give 10 marks to any one who proves to me the contrary.—Deutsche Wespen.

It Aroused Enthusiasm.

Redbourn—I wonder why the Irish selected green as the color of their flag?

Chesney—It's the color of the United States currency.—Puck.

PERSEVERANCE AND GRIT.

Ten Years of Misery—A Simple Remedy.

LINCOLN CENTER, ME.—"I thank God that I used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy." Such were the words of Asa T. Griffin of this place, and any one acquainted with the benefit he derived from its use, knows that he has great reason to feel thankful. The history of Mr. Griffin's case is of so much interest that your correspondent obtained full particulars.

"For ten years past," to use Mr. Griffin's own words, "I have suffered with constant pain in my back which was brought about by a diseased condition of my kidneys. The suffering I endured at times is beyond words. I doctored and took all manner of medicines, but to no purpose. I began to be despondent for haying was coming on and I wanted to get to work. One day I was reading of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and I told my wife I would try it, and I am thankful I did so. I had used it but a short while when the pain disappeared; and I then started in and worked all through haying and helped to get in twenty three acres of grain and am feeling better than I have for years. My wife, who has also taken Favorite Remedy for the sickness women are usually troubled with, has induced many others to try this valuable medicine, and in every case it has cured, where a cure was possible." One of our local physicians recently said: "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has cured more people of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney, liver and urinary troubles, and women who are suffering from illness peculiar to their sex, than any known treatment. The great value of Favorite Remedy lies in the fact that it dissolves the excess of uric acid in the blood, expels it from the system, thus curing the disease."

In diabetes, Bright's disease and gravel, it has cured where all else failed. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy can be purchased of any dealer of medicines at $1 a bottle.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

J. H. McVey is home from Buffalo.

B. Fosgate has recovered from a severe attack of neuralgia.

James Trainor is confined to his home on West Third street with illness.

Charles Lippencott of Griffin's has accepted a position with Edward White.

Chief Marshal Pangborn of the borough is on duty again after a few-days illness.

David S. Dunavan has been compelled to take to his bed on account of severe illness.

Miss Haines of Summit avenue is visiting her brother Jonathan Moore, at Liberty Corner.

Mrs. P. Lane of Mountain View is visiting at the home of J. VanEps on East Fifth street.

Charles E. Stover has accepted a position with Coley & VanBuren, a New York banking firm.

William G. Gray, Jr., of Grant avenue is spending a few days with friends and relatives in Jersey City.

Miss Louise Holmes of East Front street, who has been very ill with pleuro-pneumonia, is much better.

Miss Bullock, principal of the Bryant School, expects to spend her Summer vacation traveling through Europe.

Mrs. George A. Vosseller of Somerville is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Holmes of Grandview avenue.

Mrs. William Hanglighter, formerly of this city and now of Philadelphia, is spending a few days with friends in town.

F. F. Couch of Atwood's Pharmacy, Broadway, New York, was a guest Wednesday of his classmate, Druggist Howard Leggett.

Capt. Nellie Merritt of the Plainfield Salvation Army Corps, who has been suffering from grip, has so far recovered as to be able to be out.

William Nicholson, formerly of the West End, who has been in Allentown, Pa., some time, has returned to this city, and expects to live here.

Mr. Travell spent part of Friday at school, and will resume his regular duties on Monday. His class will be glad to see him back, although they will be sorry to lose Miss Sherwin.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Batchelor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spratt, Miss Belle Carkhuff and Robert Barnes have purchased new wheels and are planning for many pleasant rides this Summer.

Invitations have been issued for the coming marriage of Fannie A. Westphal to George Gray, both of this city, which will take place March 27 at the home of the bride's parents, South Second st.

BY THE WAY.

—Watson J. Tunison of Watchung avenue has purchased a fine team of bays.

—Several feet of snow still remain in certain places along the road between Plainfield and Scotch Plains.

—Rev. C. E. Herring has not moved to East Third street, unreliable papers to the contrary notwithstanding.

—The Somerset County Christian Endeavor Union reports that 25 have been booked already, as delegates from that Union, for the 14th International Convention.

—Special Easter services will be held in the German Lutheran Church Sunday, April 14, after which first communion will be extended to the newly confirmed members.

—S. H. Whitney's store on East Front street, near the City Bank, is being freshened up and brightened by kalsomine, under the skilful direction of E. E. Marshall.

—The civil engineers, under direction of H. G. VanEmburgh, who started Wednesday on West Seventh street to stake out the streets for the 17 miles of new city sewers, have been compelled to suspend operations on account of the frozen ground.

CONGREGATIONAL SOCIABLE.

Guessing at Charades Affords Fun for Endeavorers and Their Friends.

A feast of good things for the mind and for the inner man was given to those who attended the sociable of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational Church given in the church parlors Friday evening. Quite a number of the young people gathered together and spent the evening in social chat and listening to the excellent programme provided.

A recitation, given in a charming manner by Miss Kathryn Dwight, was the commencement of the entertainment, after which a charade followed. The word selected was Madagascar, and it was divided into Madder-gas-car. Madder was represented by the scene in which H. Oscar Nightingale, the artist, was sketching his model, Miss Edna Howell, and kept repeatedly calling for "madder".

The model was draped with a sheet in Grecian fashion but the sketch showed a young lady of today with the usual balloon-like sleeves.

The next scene, representing "gas", was laid in a dentist's office where George Fuller, the dentist, was instructing his assistant, Lyman R. Allen, in the tricks of the trade. A knock and a mournful groan were heard and Miss Mary Robinson, accompanied by Joseph Robinson, entered. Mr. Robinson's face was covered with an immense bandage and he gave utterance to the most agonizing groans. He was placed in the chair but it gave way and he was sent sprawling. At last he was given gas but not the kind he expected, and the cause of all his agony, which proved to be a cure-all fastened on his face, was shot away with a pop-gun by Mr. Allen, while Mr. Robinson supposed his tooth was being extracted. The patient departed delighted and the dentist congratulated his assistant on his successful use of "gas".

A number of school girls who were waiting for the "car" and said good-bye as it approached was the next scene.

The entire word "Madagascar" was represented in the next scene. It was a country school with Miss Mary Robinson as teacher and Miss Julia Belknap, Miss Maud Belknap, Miss Bessie Belknap, H. Oscar Nightingale, Lyman R. Allen, and Joseph Robinson as pupils. They tried to bound New Jersey, but "Ossie" would sneeze, "Julie" would laugh and talk, and "Lyman" would tell "Jole" what was in the book. But at last it was settled that New Jersey was bounded on the south by "Madagascar." After a good deal of guessing the word was found.

A violin solo by Charles Davis was the next number on the programme, and he was heartily encored.

Another charade followed. "Lohengrin" was the word, and much laughter caused. Those who took part were: Miss Edna Howell, Miss Julia Belknap, Miss Maud Belknap, Miss Mary Robinson, Miss Nellie Winckler, Miss Bessie Pound, Lyman R. Allen, George Fuller, H. Oscar Nightingale, and Joseph Robinson.

Another recitation by Miss Kathryn Dwight followed, and then ice cream and cake were served.

Miss Adeline Parsons is chairman of the social committee, but the entertainment was under the direction of George Fuller, a member of the committee, and showed in a pleasing manner the result of his energetic efforts. The rest of the committee, who ably assisted in carrying out his plans were Miss Mary Robinson and Joseph Robinson.

President Homer.

The Junior Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational Church held its semi annual election of officers Friday afternoon in the church parlors. It resulted as follows:

President—Harold Homer.
Vice-president—Edwin Weseman.
Secretary—Miss Emma LaBoyteaux.
Treasurer—Willie Whiting.

The chairmen of the different committees are:

Lookout—Edward Suffren.
Prayer-meeting—Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux.
Missionary—James Beekman.
Social—Warren Weseman.
Scrapbook—Miss Carrie Fuller.

After the election, a sociable was held and the young people enjoyed themselves. Refreshments were served during the afternoon.

The Whist Tourney.

The New Jersey Whist League began their games yesterday, and the score complete to this morning is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.
Park Club	2	0
Fanwood	2	0
Montclair	2	0
Elizabeth Athletic Club	2	0
Newark	1	0
Elizabeth Whist Club	1	1
Orange	1	1

The Park Club is defended by S. St. John McCutchen, George Rogers, Samuel Townsend and Charles A. Reed.

Change of Landlord.

Through the agency of Wallace Vail the West Side Hotel, Scotch Plains, was today transferred by John Force to Wm. H. Lee, who will take charge immediately.

—The German Lutheran Church now has 63 members, all services being well attended.

—Wm. Hand & Son have moved Sam'l Schuyler from Somerset street to 131 West Second street.

—The uneven spots along the car tracks on West Front street have been leveled off with crushed stone.

—Writing cannot do justice to the beauty of the goods at Peck's; neither

DID NOT GET FAR.

Lawyer Quinn's Effort to Move Checked by Creditors.

S. W. Quinn is a New York lawyer, and up to last night resided on the corner of West Front street and Plainfield avenue, in this city, with his family.

Some time ago he decided to remove to the metropolis, but was somewhat hindered in carrying this undertaking out by reason of merchants who interposed objections to the removal of his furniture. Last night he packed his goods in two large vans, and, taking a roundabout route through various streets, started on the Scotch Plains road for New York.

Previous to this, however, A. G. Vogeler, the West Front street meat market man, the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, and Alexander worth, received an inkling of his intended removal, and on the strength of the debts which he owed them, secured writs of attachments against his goods. They were placed in the hands of Constable Rodenfellow, who started on the trail of the movers, overtook them at Scotch Plains, where the papers were served, and returned with them to a livery stable on North avenue. The goods now stand in front of the stable in the two vans and will probably not be released until the accounts are liquidated.

DUNELLEN.

Miss Irene Day of New Market spent yesterday with Mrs. George W. Day.

Mrs. H. Fields and son Clarence, of Bayonne, are spending a few days with friends in town.

Mrs. Harry W. Hull is spending the day with friends in New York.

C. W. Johnson called on Plainfield friends this morning.

Willis W. Masters of Pasadena, who has been visiting E. H. TenEyke, left yesterday for Cleveland.

Hiram Hornish at Rest.

Many called at the rooms of the late Hiram Hornish on North avenue Friday to take a last look on the form of one whom they had known for many years, and that to love; and at 3 in the afternoon, the time for the funeral services, there was a goodly number present.

Rev. J. W. Richardson followed out the desire of decedent, and nothing but a prayer was offered. It was Mr. Hornish's wish that no remarks be made at the service.

The body was taken to Easton on the 5:20 train, in charge of his nephew, Wm. Tronso, and was today buried at that place, with the same simple ceremony that was held here.

L. W. Randolph and M. C. Dobbins went to Easton this morning, and the will of Mr. Hornish will be read before the relatives, after which Mr. Randolph will see that it is offered for probate at the proper time. They will, as executors look after the personal effects of the decedent.

Plainfield Man Sues for Libel.

F. X. Schoonmaker, well known in this city, has instituted a suit for $100,000 damages for libel against the Chicago Evening Post. The alleged libel consisted in the publication of certain statements concerning his arrest for the alleged attempt to raise money by false pretences on his claim on the Eickemeyer collection in the Plainfield Public Library, the facts of which are well known to the reading public. Mr. Schoonmaker was exonerated from the charges by the courts, and now seeks further vindication by mulcting the Evening Post for $100,000. Carlisle & Strong of Chicago are his attorneys, a representative of whom was in Plainfield yesterday looking up the case.

Plato Knocks Out Aristotle.

The Kappa Delta Phi of the High School met yesterday afternoon. After a short address by Superintendent Maxson, a debate was held on the subject "Was Plato a greater philosopher than Aristotle?" The affirmative was ably supported by John V. Beekman, Jr., and Lewis E. Rand. The negative speakers were J. Haselwood Craig and Henry Eggerding. After an interesting, and, toward the last, an exciting debate, the affirmative was given the victory by a vote of the society. One new member was elected.

North Plainfield Solons.

The North Plainfield Borough Council will meet Monday evening to organize for the coming year. This year there is one Democrat in the Council, Mr. Howell. The Council will elect a president, who presides in the Mayor's absence.

The newly-elected Township Committee will meet to organize Monday evening at Demler's Hotel, Washingtonville. Horace J. Martin has one more year to serve as clerk, having been elected for three years in 1893. It is thought that after the first meeting all future meetings will be held in the Borough Council rooms.

Day's Opening.

James J. Day, who was recently licensed to keep an inn and tavern at his West Third street, held his formal opening Thursday. Several hundred persons were present during the afternoon and evening. The layout was more than usual on such occasions, and the menu included baked fish, salads of different varieties, and raw clams.

During the evening Mr. Day treated his guests in a most hospitable manner, and his friends and patrons wished him long life and prosperity in his undertaking.

—Druggist Mattinson has a handsome new marble in front of his soda-water

ACCOUNTS QUESTIONED.

A Plainfield Estate Under Investigation.

HEIRS SAY FRAUD WAS DONE.

Theodore J. Miller Accused of Improper Administration of the Sarah Conklin Property.

From The Press of March 15.

The Elizabeth papers of yesterday report that at the Court of Special Sessions, held yesterday morning, Counselor Craig A. Marsh of Plainfield, in behalf of the heirs of the late Sarah Conklin, asked that Theodore J. Miller, appointed as sole executor of the will of the said Sarah Conklin, be obliged to show cause why the account closed February 13 should not be reopened.

The petitioners, Edwin W. and Henry B. Conklin of Plainfield, charge Theodore Miller, the said executor of the estate, with fraud and deceit. They hold that through fraud he succeeded in being named as executor, and that in his final account it was plainly shown that he from the estate paid himself $4,925, which he claims was due him for services rendered by him to the deceased, Sarah Conklin, during her lifetime. This, the petitioners claim, is clearly a piece of fraud.

The Elizabeth Journal reports that Mr. Marsh stated that it was one of the most glaring frauds he recollected ever having been presented to this court.

Miller was the sole executor, and on Feb. 13, 1895, he filed his final accounting, charging the value of the estate at $31,545 30; debts, $7,775 59, and for distribution among the heirs, $25,778 51.

Mr. Marsh said that the will shows that Miller was made a legatee for one-ninth of the estate, in lieu of all commission and for his services to Mrs. Conklin during her lifetime. He read this clause in the will after Mrs. Conklin's death, and accepted the bequest. The will was written by Miller.

Judge McCormick took the papers presented by Mr. Marsh, and said he would consider the question of granting a rule to show cause why the accounting should not be reopened.

A BOROUGH COMMUTER'S GROWL.

Dissatisfied With a Service Which is a Losing Investment to the Company.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—The Street Railway Company has heretofore had a time-table which started their cars from the depot every twelve minutes; and the same in the return by the Somerset street line, with which line I am more familiar than the Front street. This enabled anyone, by simply keeping accurate time, to meet the car at the depot end of the route without losing time, and, by a slight calculation, he could also catch it anywhere on route.

Time is money, and to business men it is out of the question to ask them to stand on the sidewalk perhaps ten minutes to wait for a chance car. Under the system just adopted, of starting a car every eleven minutes, the even hour is made, I am informed, only once in the day. The result is utter confusion in the time-tables, and for one I would prefer to walk a quarter of a mile, without troubling myself to meet a car, to the uncertainty. In fact, it has been impossible since the new arrangement to meet a car except by chance, and I have friends who, like myself, have been riding on the cars every day, but who now walk instead. No doubt that is or will be the case all over the city.

There are two remedies only: one is a return to the twelve-minute system (if a ten-minute system cannot be inaugurated) and the other is the printing of time-cards and their distribution. The former is the true plan, as no one wants to be continually watching a time-card to see when to board a street car.

DAILY TRAVELER.

A March Freshet.

A small sized flood was caused on West Third street between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue yesterday by the breaking of a water main. The roadway and walks for a considerable distance were almost completely inundated until workmen from the water-works company arrived and cut off the supply for that section, and repaired the break. Last Fall West Third street was leveled off, necessitating the removal of several inches of dirt, and this left the pipes without sufficient protection from the frost, which caused the break.

Telescope Won.

The Kappa Delta Phi of the High School recently debated "Resolved, That the revelations of the telescope are more wonderful than those of the microscope". The speakers for the affirmative were Charles B. Morse and George A. Horne. The negative was defended by Wilbur F. Cornwell and John V. Beekman, Jr. After a most exciting debate, a committee composed of Charles Noble, Frederick [illegible] and Carlos C. Gallup, decided in favor of the affirmative.

Hospitable Socialists.

The Socialists of the West End wish to inform the people of Plainfield through the columns of The Press that their rooms on [illegible] avenue are always open, and a pleasant evening can be spent there in reading, playing games, and various

MEADOWS' WARNING.

I went down to Meadows' place one Sunday afternoon with the intention of telling Lizzie how it was with me and of asking her to be my wife. It would be the best way, I thought, of putting an end to the talk of the village, which did not please me, though it caused me no anxiety. I had lately had a rise in my wages, and was promised a further increase at the end of the year, so I hoped to satisfy Meadows as to my prospects.

I cannot tell if he suspected my intention; but it was in vain I sought for an opportunity of speaking to Lizzie that evening. Meadows talked without ceasing, and Lizzie herself seemed more occupied than usual. Instead of sitting still, she flitted about the kitchen, doing one thing or another; now reaching down plates from the topmost shelf of the dresser, then bending over the fire, where, contrary to her custom on a Sunday, she had two or three pots to attend to. I was so absorbed in watching her movements that I fear I made but an indifferent listener to Meadows' old time yarns.

We had not sat there long before I saw Ben Holding in the distance, evidently making his way toward us. So little did I fear him, that I was actually glad to see him, thinking he would take off Meadows' attention and give me a chance of a word with Lizzie. But I soon saw that was not to be. After shaking hands with us Ben strode into the kitchen, and though we followed immediately he had found time to give her a little note, for I saw her hide it in her dress as I came in.

I soon discovered he had been invited to supper, and the dishes Lizzie had been taking so much pains with were prepared in his honor. When we sat down to table the talk turned on matters of which I knew nothing, and could take no part in. Lizzie asked question after question about Holding's cottage, and displayed such an intimate knowledge of its arrangements that it was clear to me the subject had been often discussed between them. What could this mean but that the house was furnished for her as Holding's wife.

Meadows smiled placidly, and looked on with an air of approval that well nigh maddened me. I turned cold and sick; but though I never spoke, and hardly touched a morsel on my plate, they paid no heed, but continued to laugh and joke over their own affairs. At last I could stand it no longer, and, rising from the table, abruptly said it was time to go home. Then, for the first time, Lizzie seemed to perceive my agitation, for she blushed and looked confused.

"Are you going out, to-morrow, George?" Meadows asked, as I bade him good night.

"Of course," I said, briefly. "Why not?"

"I don't like the look of the weather," he explained. "I was just going to say so when Ben came up this evening. I am not one to counsel any man to stay at home when there's work to be done, but industry is one thing and rashness another. It's blowing up a gale, take my word for it, lads. There'll be mischief to-morrow, I warn you."

"What then?" I rejoined, sullenly. "Twon't be the first gale I've been out in, nor the last, maybe. And if it is, nobody will care."

I went out, and, to my surprise, Holding followed me. I hurried on, thinking to avoid him, but he soon caught me up. The sky was cloudy and dark, and on one side was an irregular streak of grayish yellow light, where the moon was struggling to break through. I saw no cause of old Luke's warning, nor did Holding, it appeared, for he began: "What can Meadows mean, Powell? It is a dirty night, no doubt; but 'twill clear before morning, I should think. What say you?"

"I think so, too," I answered between my set teeth.

"But he is not one to croak, and he is very rarely out in his predictions," Ben continued. "Would it not be wiser to stay on shore?"

"Do so, by all means, if you are afraid," I replied with a sneer. "You are your own master."

The taunt stung him, I could see, dark as it was, but he kept his temper and only said: "I don't deserve that, George, and no one knows it better than you. What ails you to-night?"

"'Taint your business."

"Powell, listen—" he began, but I would not stay to hear; I broke away from him and ran down a narrow lane that led to my lodging. I was boiling over with wrath and his coolness irritated me past all bearing.

Before sunrise next morning I was out and on my way to the beach. The morning broke gloomy and dull; the clouds were ragged and torn at the edges; telling of wind; but the sea just then was calm enough. The barometer at the coast guard station was lower than it had been for weeks. Still I had gone out many a day more stormy looking than this and I made up my mind that if Ford wished to go I would say nothing to dissuade him. It was not likely he would care to stay on shore. He was a bold, determined fellow and knew his boat, the Vixen, to be one of the stoutest and best built in the place.

He came down presently and, with a shrug of his shoulders and the remark, "We'll get a wetting to-day, more than likely," motioned to me to shove off. Ford was a man of few words.

We got on much as usual till about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Then I saw Meadows' prediction would be verified. Thunder rumbled in the distance and the waves were high and sullen. Suddenly the wind sprang up and it was all we could do to shorten sail before it was down upon us. Ford said it was a squall and we had seen the worst of it; but he was wrong, as the event proved. The gusts of wind followed each other fast. Every wave threatened to engulf the Vixen and her crew and it soon became a struggle for life. For my own safety I cared little; life had ceased to have any attractions for me; but remembering Ford's wife and children, I worked manfully to keep the boat on her course.

"Who would have thought it would blow like this?" Ford said in his usual phlegmatic fashion, as we crouched together in the stern.

"Meadows said last night 'twould be rougher than common," I rejoined. "But he is getting old now and thinks more of a hatful of wind than he used to do."

"You should have told me that," said Ford gravely. "It's never safe to go agin old Luke—he knows the weather signs better than any man. I say, George, isn't that the Mermaid yonder?"

It was not easy to distinguish anything, for my eyes were full of salt water

It was madness on his part not to put back hours ago, for he knew well enough how little the Mermaid was fitted to encounter such a sea as this. For a few minutes the wind lulled and we came within speaking distance.

"George," Holding shouted as soon as he could make himself heard, "Meadows knew what he was about last night, eh? I was a fool not to take his advice. I shall never set foot on shore again."

Ford stood up, a rope in his hand, and called to him to come on board the Vixen. But Holding shook his head. He was seaman enough to know that to attempt such a thing would in all probability swamp us all and he would not risk it.

"Tell the folks you saw us," he said calmly, though his face was white as death. "Bid them good by. I know Meadows will look after my little girl, God bless her! And you, George—Lizzie—"

His voice was lost in the roar of the waves, and indeed my heart beat so fast I should hardly have made out his words in any case. A flash of lightning, more vivid than any we had yet, half blinded me, and at the same moment we shipped a sea that nearly washed us from our seats. When we had succeeded in bailing out the water and were able to look about us I sought in all directions for the Mermaid, but she was nowhere to be seen.

I cast myself down at the bottom of the boat, overcome with horror. To have my rival thus suddenly swept from my path was more than I could bear. Last night I would have hailed with joy anything that severed him from Lizzie. Now I felt like a murderer. It was I who had lured him to his doom and wrecked the life of the girl I loved. I tried to pray for God's forgiveness, but no words would come. In my misery I would have thrown myself into the water, but I had no strength to move. Ford called to me, but his voice fell on deaf ears. I lay stunned and motionless.

I must have remained in that state for some time. Ford thought I had been struck by lightning; but it was out of his power to help me; it was all he could do, single handed, to guide our little craft. Fortunately for us both, the storm began to abate, or we should never have reached the shore.

It was dusk when we landed, and the harbor lights flashing into my eyes roused me from the lethargy into which I had fallen. A crowd was assembled on the beach, eager to welcome the friends they had given up for lost. I soon made out the tall figure of Meadows, with his granddaughter clinging to him as if for support, and I bowed my head in agony at the thought of the fatal news I had to give her. Suddenly a voice sounded in my ear, clear and sharp above the rest, and I started. It was a voice I never expected to hear again in this world.

"Here they are at last!" Ben Holding cried joyfully. "Lizzie, look up. Powell is safe, thank God! He is here!"

I staggered toward them, dizzy and faint. The joy was overpowering. By what miracle had Holding escaped with his life? He seized me by the hand and drew me forward. Lizzie said something I could not hear, and would have fallen to the ground had not some one caught her and laid her, white as a lily, in her grandfather's arms. Then ensued a babel of voices.

All the fishermen in the village seemed thronging to shake hands with me and Ford. I gathered from their talk that great anxiety had been felt on our account, that a lifeboat had been sent to our aid and had fallen in with the Mermaid only just in time to save the lives of those on board, for she had capsized and left them all struggling in the water. By the time this was effected the wind went down; and, finding the Vixen was not in pressing need of assistance, the lifeboat made for shore, where she arrived long before we did.

I was borne on the shoulders of my comrades to Meadows' house, where a good glass of grog helped to steady my nerves. But as soon as I was able to walk I insisted on going home, giving as an excuse that I wanted to turn in. To remain under Meadows' roof was intolerable.

"Well, if go you must," Luke exclaimed, when he found I would stay no longer, "I will see you to your door. Don't cry, my girl; he will be all right in the morning. Ben and I will look after him."

"Powell," Holding began, as soon as I reached my room, "you and I have a little matter to settle, and the sooner it is done the better. I know what's troubling you. I knew it last night, and I would have set you right then if you would have listened to me. I don't deny I was put out by what you said—but—Well, I have been very near death to-day, and such things seem of no importance. You think Lizzie and I are lovers, don't you? All the village thinks so. Because I have taken a little house of my own I am going to take a wife, they say. And so I am. Mary Blake and I hope to come together at Christmas. She lives at the place where I've been working all summer.

"As I haven't a creature belonging to me, I came to Lizzie for help: for what do I know of how things ought to look, or what a girl likes to have about her? But you've no call to be jealous; Lizzie is yours heart and soul. I've thought so many a day, and now I'm sure of it. I confess I pretended to make love to her last night, but it was only a bit of fun. Will you forget and forgive?"

What a relief those words were to me! I tried to tell him of all the wicked thoughts that had filled my brain, and to ask his pardon for them; but he would not let me speak, and presently went away, leaving me alone with Luke Meadows.

I could do no less than confess the state of my heart to the old man, though I was scarcely in a condition to talk coherently. But Lizzie's grief and terror during the storm had softened him; and instead of repelling me as I had feared he would do, he smiled as he said it was true he had vowed never to part with his little girl; but if I liked to come and live at the cottage, I might marry her when I pleased, and the sooner the better.

But that happy day was not to dawn yet awhile. The next morning found me unable to rise from my bed, and many weeks passed before I could leave it again. Through the fever that followed, Holding nursed me like a brother, even putting off his own wedding rather than leave me to strange hands; and I verily believe it was owing to his watchful care that I ever recovered my health—as it was to him I owed the restoration of my peace of mind.

Winter had passed away, and the Lizzie's old playfellows came to the church to see her married, and wish her happiness with the lad she had chosen, but no one's words touched me so nearly as did those of Ben Holding.

"Ah, Ben," I whispered as I wrung his hand, "I don't deserve my happiness, and no one knows that better than you do."

Of course he assured me it was all nonsense, and I must not let such thoughts trouble me; but I know well that the recollection of that terrible day will never fade from my memory.—Chambers's Journal.

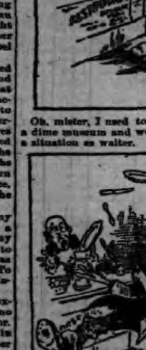
A RECORD BREAKING DIAMOND.

Leo XIII Presented With a 971 Carat Gem Found in the Transvaal.

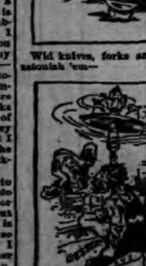
The Pall Mall Gazette says the Pope has received from the President of the Transvaal Republic a diamond weighing 971 carats. The stone was found by an African chief in the mines at Jagersfontein, and is the largest known. It is of a bluish white cast and practically perfect, its only blemish being a tiny spot, which is invisible to the naked eye.

If the description of the diamond referred to is correct it is a phenomenal gem. The Kohinoor, one of the most celebrated diamonds in the world, weighed when it came into the possession of the British Crown 186 1-16 carats, and was reduced by cutting to 106 1-16 carats. The Great Mogul, which mysteriously disappeared at the sacking of Delhi, is said to weigh 280 carats. The Orloff mounted in the imperial scepter of Russia, weighs 193 carats. The Regent, another historically famous gem, and among the most perfect in water and cutting, originally known as the Pitt diamond, weighed in the rough state 410 carats, which was reduced in cutting to 136 3-4 carats. The stone, purchased by the Duke of Orleans in 1717 for the French Crown is now the property of the French Republic and is valued at $2,500,000. The price paid for it was $675,000. The Victoria or Imperial diamond weighs 180 carats, and was purchased by the Nizam of Hyderabad for $1,500,000. Another large diamond is the De Beers. It weighs 128 carats, but its value is considerably lessened by the fact that it is of a light yellow color. It is owned by an Indian prince. It will, perhaps, be also interesting to know that a carat is 3.2 grains troy, so that the diamond just presented to the Pope weighs very nearly 6 1-2 ounces.

A Handy Man.



Oh, mister, I used to be a juggler in a dime museum and would like ter git a situation as waiter.



Wid knives, forks an' plates I could astonish 'em—an' den git off a balancing act dat would crowd de place.—New York Herald.

The Turkish Toe.

Something new is the "Turkish toe." It is two inches longer than the foot, and turned up so that the least bit of the sole appears to view when worn. It is an elongated razor toe. It is made on both men and women's lasts, and manufacturers say it will be a permanent style. There is a decided tendency to narrow toes. Even the square ones are "narrow square." As for the material in shoes, colors will lead, then patent leather, kangaroo, and, of course, glazed kid will be fashionable.

A Tenant for Life.

"Have you boarded long at this house?" inquired the new boarder of the sour, dejected man sitting next to him.

"About ten years."

"I don't see how you can stand it. Why haven't you left long ago?"

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

"THE LAND OF FLOWERS."

Last Personally-Conducted Tour of the Season to Florida by Way of Pennsylvania Railroad.

If the general sentiment concerning the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's personally-conducted tours to Florida is to be taken as an index of their popularity, they may in all verity be styled the ideal tours.

The next and last of this season's series of tours to Jacksonville will leave New York and Philadelphia March 26, and the rate, including round-trip transportation and meals and Pullman berth on special train going, is $50 from New York and $48 from Philadelphia; proportionate rates from other points. Tickets for this tour will be good for return passage on regular trains until May 31.

The number of persons for which accommodations can be provided is necessarily limited, and it would therefore be prudent for those who desire to join this party to make early application for space.

For further information apply to Ticket Agents, or address Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, to whom application for space should also be made.

A Tribute of Love.

The committee appointed to prepare a memorial of the late Rev. J. Judson Pierson, ex-President of the State Christian Endeavor Union, formerly of North Plainfield, have reported the following:

IN MEMORY OF REV. J. JUDSON PIERSON.

The death of a servant of Christ, seals his life with all its victories and righteous fruitage, to the glory of God, and the future good of man.

When our beloved brother, Rev. J. Judson Pierson, passed away, on the 18th day of January last, a hand, strong in service to God, fell, and a noble heart ceased to beat.

We miss him from the ranks of consecrated toilers, but we cannot, we dare not, grieve for him. We glory in his eternal victory; and, while we express our warmest and most prayerful sympathy for his loved ones who are left to mourn his departure, we at the same time congratulate them on their priceless heritage of a memory so sacred, which the passing years will serve to render more precious still.

We, the officers of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, most heartily pay this tribute of love to our departed brother.

ARTHUR W. SPOONER,
W. D. STULTS,
CAROLINE H. BROOKFIELD,
Committee on Resolutions.

B. Fay Mills to Preach.

The Chairman of the Programme Committee of the next Christian Endeavor State Convention, Rev. A. W. Spooner, reports that Rev. B. Fay Mills has been invited to preach the convention sermon. The Programme Committee as appointed at the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees at Trenton, are: Rev. A. W. Spooner, Camden; Rev. A. DeWitt Mason, Morristown; Joseph H. Wright, Trenton. A meeting of this committee will be called soon to outline the programme. Atlantic City has been elected as the place for the next State convention. The dates are Oct. 9-11. Preparations are in progress to make this a grand success. The convention fires will be kept burning right through the hot weather.

A Joint Field Day.

The Plainfield High School Athletic Association has decided to unite with Leal's School and give a field day in the Spring, open either to the schools of the State or those within a radius of 20 miles. The committee to confer with Leal's consists of Charles B. Morse, Carlos C. Gallup and Wilbur F. Cornwell. As soon as the preliminary arrangements have been made work will go on in earnest.

Brilliant and Brainy.

(From The Bound Brook Chronicle.)

North Plainfield is to be congratulated upon electing for Mayor the brilliant young Republican, B. A. Hegeman, Jr. He is a man of brains.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, R potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and I the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes P thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by A saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homoeopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual N physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of S taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the • number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of T tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and A perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very B slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical U profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled L and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else E you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous S is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

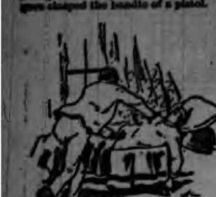
RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of • vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 Spruce St., New York.

MEN WANTED

She went slowly up the stairs and softly approached the half-open door. She peeped in. He lay upon the couch perfectly still. His left arm hung straight down by his side and the fingers clasped the handle of a pistol.



THE SERVANT APPEARED, RUSHING TOWARD THE COUCH.

As she stood there, utterly incapable of speech or motion, she heard a cry, and instantly the servant appeared, rushing toward the couch. He flung himself down beside it, seizing the pistol with both hands as he fell.

CHAPTER III.

CHASE SCORES SEVERAL POINTS AND CARROLL ONE.

"Frightened you, eh?" said Lynde, as the negro regained his feet, panting with excitement. "What did you think I was going to do?"

"'Deed, sah," replied the trembling fellow, "I was 'fraid yo' might hurt yo'self with that pistol. What yo' got it beside me?"

"It's been under the couch for six months," said Lynde, calmly. "I got it out of my trunk just before I absolutely lost the use of my legs. It occurred to me that I might need it. Don't look so frightened, Andrew. There wasn't any danger. If I'd been disposed to hurt myself with it I couldn't have done so. I was only trying to shift the thing from the left to the right side of the couch because my left arm is getting weaker all the time. But I waited too long. There was no need of any hurry on your part. I had just strength enough to hold the pistol. I couldn't have lifted it to my head if I wished to without the aid of a derrick. By Jove! what a picture of utter helplessness I was at that moment!"

Amy, who had been leaning, almost fainting, against the casing of the door, recovered herself sufficiently to stagger into the room. When Lynde saw her a great change swept over his face.

"Did you see all this, Amy?" he asked, gently.

She sank down beside him, weeping like a frightened child. He soothed her, laying the hand that still obeyed him upon her golden hair.

"I must be a particularly melancholy rascal," he said, "that you and this great fellow should jump at once to the conclusion that I was going to end it."

He motioned to the negro to leave the room, and then continued:

"It's useless, little one, for me to palter with the palpable facts. I'd better tell you the exact truth about all this. And here it is: Life has been cruel to me, and, for myself, I can expect nothing of this world. But as long as you are in it, I want to stay. This room is a prison, but if it were a dungeon, and I were racked with every torment, I would still wish to live if you lived too. While there's room enough for both of us I'll take what comes. I'm useless, certainly, but that I can endure. It's only when I become worse than useless to you that I shall wish to go. I'll know when that time comes; you've promised me that I shall. Let's not think about that. Doubtless I shall wear out first. I'm deadly sorry that this foolishness of mine frightened you so, but now you know the truth, and you won't be frightened any more. Afflicted in this dreadful way, I'm happier at this moment with you beside me than I was in the old days of youth and health before you had given me your love."

She begged to be permitted to resume her former life, devoting herself entirely to him. If David Chase could have heard her plead for that sad privilege, he might have felt like giving up the game, for he was a good judge of sincerity.

Arthur Lynde would not listen to his wife's request.

"On the contrary," he said, "I've made up my mind to send you away from the city altogether. Brooklyn is not my ideal of a summer resort. If I had been able to put a foot upon the ground we would have been away long ago; but never will I be carried about the country on a shutter. His own house is the place for a man like me. I'd have sent you away, but you seemed to be having a good time until recently. Now you must go. You know I'm to have that soulless German scientist in the house after to-morrow, and he'll probably want to experiment with me twenty-four hours a day. He can't cure me, but he can have lots of fun with me, and, if I'm a judge of men, he won't let any of it escape him. So you see I could hardly have you with me very much of the time. The summer isn't over yet, and the heat of the city is telling upon you. I'm going to send you to join Mrs. Mason's party at Crescent Beach."

Although she outwardly resisted this suggestion, Amy inwardly welcomed it. Perhaps it would be the easiest way of separating herself from Chase. She would stay only a little while, she told herself, and would then return to her duty. The details were arranged without difficulty, and on the third day after the suggestion had been made, she departed for Crescent Beach.

She was warmly welcomed by Mrs. Mason and many other friends, among whom was Walter Carroll, who had arrived the day before. This young man had learned of her intended journey, and had communed with himself very seriously.

"It would be highly improper," he had said to himself, "for me to follow Mrs. Lynde. Chase might do it, but I will not. And the only way to avoid doing it is to get to Crescent Beach first and wait for her."

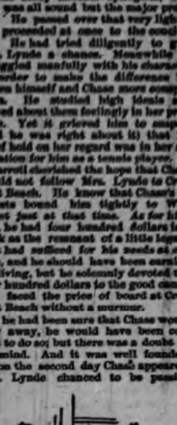
Carroll had secretly appointed himself the guardian of Mrs. Lynde. He had loved her when they were boy and girl together at school, and had never gotten over it. Her marriage had hurt him worse than all the other ills of his life combined. And second to that was the spectacle of Chase's influence over her. But for his complete confidence in her, the second would have been worse than the first.

What is a man to do in such a case as that? To see a good woman dazzled by the fascinations of a thorough scoundrel is one of the commonest spectacles of this mortal life, but a method of procedure which will be effective and steer clear of scandal is most difficult to frame. Carroll was young, and naturally deficient in strategy. The only scheme he could devise, after cogitation so fervent as to be akin to prayer, was to make his society so agreeable to Mrs. Lynde that she would not care for Chase's. This design would bear the severest test of reason. He argued somewhat thus: "A good woman naturally prefers a good man; I am a much better man than Chase—blast him! Therefore Mrs. Lynde will prefer me to him, if I give her a fair chance."

Like many another syllogism, this one was all sound but the major premise. He passed over that very lightly and proceeded at once to the conclusion. He had tried diligently to give Mrs. Lynde a chance. Meanwhile he struggled manfully with his character in order to make the difference between himself and Chase more conspicuous. He studied high ideals and talked about them feelingly in her presence. Yet it grieved him to suspect (and he was right about it) that his chief hold on her regard was in her admiration for him as a tennis player.

Carroll cherished the hope that Chase would not follow Mrs. Lynde to Crescent Beach. He knew that Chase's interests bound him tightly to Wall street just at that time. As for himself, he had four hundred dollars in a bank as the remnant of a little legacy that had sufficed for his needs at college, and he should have been earning his living, but he solemnly devoted the four hundred dollars to the good cause, and faced the price of board at Crescent Beach without a murmur.

If he had been sure that Chase would stay away, he would have been content to do so; but there was a doubt in his mind. And it was well founded, for on the second day Chase appeared. Mrs. Lynde chanced to be passing through the hall of the hotel where Mrs. Mason's party was domiciled, at the moment when Chase inscribed his name in the register, and at the sight of him she grasped Mrs. Mason's arm in a manner which betrayed to that experienced matron the exact state of affairs.



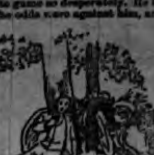
SHE GRASPED MRS. MASON'S ARM.

To Chase, looking out of the corner of his eye, the gesture was a welcome sign. He came forward to greet the ladies with as plausible a lie upon his lips as ever the recording angel charged against a sinner. The rascal at that moment felt triumphant, and nothing was ever more becoming to him. Mrs. Lynde was forced to contrast him favorably with the other men at Crescent Beach. He was so deferential, yet so masterful. He always knew just what to say and do. There was absolutely nothing in his manner or his speech or his attire that could offend. He had studied her tastes to such a nicety that of two synonymous words in the language he always used the one which she liked best. It was a point in the game, and he played with a master's attention to detail.

From that time on the condition of Walter Carroll must have been a subject of pity among the angels. He continually made mistakes and Chase made none. His plans failed and Chase's always succeeded. His motives were misconstrued, and so were Chase's—to the advantage of the latter and the undoing of the former. Mrs. Lynde began to believe that he was pursuing her; and as he was such a boy—being not more than a year older than herself—she took him frankly to task about it. She told him that his conduct was foolish, not to say dishonorable, and took occasion to mention the fact that Dr. Lynde had been a good friend to the youth. Then, while Carroll went away to meditate upon suicide, Mrs. Lynde took a stroll with Chase on the long pier, and with undisguised admiration heard him expound his well-worn theory of Platonic friendship. Ah, Chase was a noble soul, until one knew him.

This was only an incident. There were many others. The bicycle is a great invention. Forty people may go riding together with the greatest decorum, and never get into each other's way after the first half mile. Society cycled at the beach that summer. Chase's wheel always slipped an adjustment precisely at the right time, and nobody was ever near to help him but Mrs. Lynde. Many a chat they had under a tree by the roadside, waiting for a chaperone to climb a long hill.

The situation was becoming desperate. It was beginning to alarm Mrs. Mason, who had been to Narragansett Pier in the old days, and couldn't be easily frightened. There is more hypnotism in the world than most people know of, and Mrs. Lynde was under an influence which she did not understand. Chase was deliberately compromising her, and she could not see it. As for him, he had never played his favorite game so desperately. He knew that the odds were against him, and he was prepared to be easily satisfied. He would have accounted it a victory, if he could have made this woman say she loved him, even if she had fled from him that instant, and he had never seen her face again.



WAITING FOR A CHAPERONE.

And a time came when he felt fairly sure of it. She had already permitted him to speak to her in a way that she dared not remember when she was alone. He found it, however, increasingly difficult to be alone with her. Mrs. Mason on the one hand and Carroll on the other were exceedingly annoying. Of course he played the old game of exciting her resentment against them because of their unjust suspicions; and it was so successful that at last he persuaded her to consent to a really secret interview.

There was a hop at the hotel that evening. It was an especially swell hop, and everybody was sure to be there. For that reason nobody was likely to be down on the long pier, which was on ordinary nights a favorite resort. That was why Chase was there at eleven o'clock when the ball was at its height.

There were some low buildings on the end of the pier which obscured his view landward, but they would also, later on, obscure anybody's view seaward. Chase paced back and forth impatiently. There was a little boat made fast at the pier head, and there was a steam yacht anchored in the offing which had nobody aboard but the crew, and would not be required by the owner—a friend of Chase's—during the evening. It is an interesting thing to view a handsome yacht by moonlight, and quite worth the risk of a rowboat.

Chase heard a light, quick step. He turned suddenly, and confronted Carroll who was notably light of foot for a man weighing a hundred and ninety.

"Look here, by the eternal heavens," cried Carroll in a guarded tone, "you're going to meet Mrs. Lynde here, and I won't have it. You've crossed the line. Now get out. Get away from here, quick, or something will happen to you."

He stood for a moment on the end of the pier and glanced down at the little rowboat which was tugging at her painter in a three-knot tide. Chase, meanwhile, was silent, regarding the young man earnestly. Carroll had the faculty for looking twice as big when he was angry as at other times, and he was quite big enough at any time. Chase did not like the look of him. He turned away with affected contempt.

"You're a fool," he said. "And as to Mrs. Lynde, you're absurdly mistaken. You insult her. But I don't propose to stand here quarreling with you, and if you want the entire pier to yourself you can have it."

"Not that way!" cried Carroll, heading him off at the corner of the pavilion. "You're too late. She's coming."

He advanced upon Chase who, seriously alarmed, retreated before him.

"Can you swim?" exclaimed Carroll, between his teeth. "Answer me! But never mind. I remember to have seen you. Well, that settles your fate!"

Without another word, he seized Chase in his powerful hands, lifted him high in the air, and hurled him from the pier. For a moment Carroll stood panting on the edge. Then he saw Chase come to the surface and strike out for the shore. He could not swim back to the pier against the tide even if he had dared to do it. And he would not cry out; he was not the man to confess defeat in the presence of a woman. But there was murder in his heart as the tide swept him away.

A minute later Mrs. Lynde came hurriedly upon the pier. Carroll had withdrawn into the shadows, and for an instant she mistook him. Then she saw who it was.

"Yes; I know," he said. "You expected somebody else. He was here a little while ago, but he couldn't wait. He's gone up along the shore."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Love Gives a Wheel.

To the one who purchases of him the largest amount of wall-paper, carpets, shades, paints or oils, at his store, corner of North and Watchung avenues, before June 1, Love will give a beautiful Remington wheel. Love is offering beautiful wall-paper at 5 cents, and an elegant lot of gold embossed paper at 10 cents. The rush is now on.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. New York is one of the healthiest places on the Atlantic coast and yet there are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but we will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will relieve the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

BLACKMAIL AS A HERITAGE.

The Foundations of Police Blackmail in New York Laid in Peter Stuyvesant's Day.

In Stuyvesant's time many abuses of power and assessment were grafted upon the stern customs of the town. Shortly after his arrival he observed that "one full fourth part of the city of New Amsterdam have become houses for the sale of ardent spirits, of tobacco and beer;" on some of the business streets this proportion still holds good. He inaugurated Sunday closing, with the result, perpetuated to our time, of sidedoor opening. Fines were established for this, that and the other infraction of regulations which afforded the constables a legal basis for making reprisals. In 1658 eight men were constituted the rattle watch and were authorized to take "lock up" money and fees, which sums were to be brought into the house of the captain of the watch and held for the benefit of the members, a "divvy," as it is now called, occurring four times a year.

Thus extortion was put, as it were, upon a basis of police discretion and right; but there was a rule against setting up a social club on the proceeds. So the habit of police collections, contracted as a pleasurable duty, has been handed down as a vast and secret perquisite of the guardians of the public peace; and it must not be overlooked that from those days to these the police of the city have been in the personnel a continuing body. It was as necessary then as now to admonish the police not to use violence upon peaceful burghers.

"Burgher right," after the Dutch custom, was granted by Stuyvesant to please the citizens, and prevailed as a trading and electoral qualification of "freemen" into our own century. Stuyvesant fixed the fee of "great burghers," from whom municipal officers were chosen, at fifty florins; and of "small burghers," qualified to pursue a trade or to keep shop, at twenty-five florins. Partly from this seed has grown the Tammany code of assessments and reprisals on merchants.

Followers of shady callings in the early days were the spoil of the autocratic authorities, just as they have been to-day of equally irresponsible blackmailers. Some of the earliest settlers were freebooters from the Spanish main. Smuggling was as common as Indian cheating, and Stuyvesant and other governors, English as well as Dutch, were openly charged with sharing in the profits of illicit trade. Subsequent to the Dutch governors piracy found in Manhattan its chief emporium. Even reputable merchants devised moral and legal quibbles for engaging in sea poaching, usually under the cover of so-called privateering. The great William Kidd was peculiarly a Manhattan product. Gov. Fletcher in 1696 admitted that he had exchanged "presents" with the notorious pirate Thomas Tew, but explained that his chief desire in seeking his "amusing conversation" was "to reclaim him from a vile habit of swearing"—which parallels the Tammany theory that a proper way to reclaim malefactors is to appoint them to public office. In 1698 the Earl of Bellomont, who had succeeded Fletcher as governor, complained to the English lords of trade that he had endeavored to place four merchantmen, about to clear for Madagascar, under bonds not to supply pirates at that notorious trysting place with supplies, and bring their booty to Manhattan; "but the council, some of them being concerned in these ships," he writes, "unanimously opposed this method, as not prescribed by law, and because it was never practiced here before, so I was forced to discharge the said ships."—Century.

Realism in the Witness Box.

When Searcy resumed the stand, looking fresh and chipper, Mr. White handed him a 44 calibre Colt's revolver, and asked him if he knew it. He said he did; that it was Charlie Morgan's pistol; that he used it at the Aquia Creek train robbery. Then Searcy turned it over to Lawyer Shay for cross examination. Mr. Shay's examination was exhaustive, and traced the whole course of Searcy's life. Searcy's replies were terse and pointed. After telling of his travels in this country, Central and South America, Searcy got to the time of the train robbery.

His story differed only in minor details from what had already been narrated by the other witnesses until he came to describe the manner in which their masks were put on when Mr. Shay dramatically whipped out of his pocket a large red bandana handkerchief and asked Searcy to put it on in the manner the masks were worn.

"Are the holes cut?" asked Searcy.

"No," replied Attorney Shay.

"Please cut them," said Searcy.

"I am not posted in the business," said Shay; "you cut them."

Some one produced a pair of shears and Searcy cut holes in the handkerchief, which he then put on in the manner in which he said they were worn on the night of the robbery. Then Morgan's hat was produced and Searcy was requested to put that on, and there he stood, the observed of all observers, an ideal train robber.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Gray Rabbit's Nest.

Just as small boats always keep near shore, the short legged rabbit is never found far from a hiding place of some sort. Nature gave the gray rabbit a coat with a color that is a very great protection to him; and when he furls his ears and lies close to the ground, one can sometimes actually step over him without seeing that he is there. The ways of this little creature have surprised me many times; but he never actually paralyzed me with astonishment until one fine spring day when the mowers in the Smithsonian grounds were cutting the grass on the lawn, not over a hundred feet from the National Museum building. And there, on a bit of ground utterly without shrubs, bushes, or even flowers, covered with nothing but lawn grass, at that time only four inches in height, with a busy roadway and walk circling round on three sides, with the office of the curator of mammals in easy stone's throw on the other, a shop full of deadly taxidermists and osteologists looming up on the east, and dogs and bad boys literally swarming all about—there, on that naked lawn, was the nest of a gray rabbit, containing four young ones already so large that they filled the nest as full as it would hold!—St. Nicholas.

The Procession.

"Yes," remarked Mrs. Malaprop, "it was a great sight. First came the king, carrying a skeptic in his hand and wearing a beautiful red mantle all trimmed with vermin. It was a grand sight."—Truth.

Delightful Appropriateness.

It is proposed to locate a creamery on Cow Creek.—[illegible]

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

NEWARK, N. J.

Whatever fashion favors in

Coats, Capes, Suits, Separate Skirts

will be found in our greatly enlarged department now the biggest, the lightest, the most complete in New Jersey. Astonishingly small as the prices are they represent new goods only, for not one of last season's garments finds a place in our magnificent collection.

New Spring Capes

in all styles of cloths, in silks, in velvets, in velours, in moire in laces effects and crepons

$1.98 to $27.50

NEW

Spring Jackets

in black and colored, of every fashionable material, made in the latest style, with extra large sleeves, from

$3.98 to $10

Misses and Children's Dresses of cloths, cashmeres and wash fabrics, in desirable designs and choice colors, from

49c to $7.50

NEW

Separate Skirts

of desirable materials made in the very latest styles lined and interlined from

$1.98 to $25

MISSES AND CHILDREN'S REEFERS

The greatest assortment ever shown; a large variety of cloths and styles, from

98c to $7.50

WRAPPERS AND

House Dresses

Our best previous efforts have been surpassed. Our line incomparably great; prices from

44c to $5

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,

147 and 149 Market Street,

Near Broad Street

Newark, N. J.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

I suffered terribly from roaring in my head during an attack of catarrh, and became very deaf, used Ely's Cream Balm and in three weeks could hear as well as ever.—A. E. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from the nose. Physicians prescribed without benefit. After using Ely's Cream Balm a short time the disease was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

DIRECTIONS for using

CREAM BALM

Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH

COLD IN HEAD

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 30 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

6.17 p. m. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

6.32 p. m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

9 45 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

Sundays, [illegible]

For Baltimore only 1 57 p. m., week-days

For Newark and New York—[illegible] p. m. Sundays [illegible] p. m.

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

(3.25p.m. with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays 6 50 a. m.

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City 1 57 p. m. weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible] night week-days. Sundays, [illegible] p. m.

For New Brunswick—[illegible] p. m. Sundays, [illegible] p. m.

For Woodbridge—1 42 a. m. daily except Monday, [illegible] night, week-days. Sundays [illegible] p. m.

For Perth Amboy—1 42 a. m. daily except Monday, [illegible] Sundays, [illegible] p m.

For East Millstone—7 30 a. m., 12 08, 2 48 and 5 40 p. m., week-days.

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—7 30 A. M., 1 48 and 4.38 p. m., and 6.40 p.m. Sunday.

For Flemington—7 30 A. M.; 1 48 P. M.

For Freehold—7 50, 11 43 a. m. 4 38, 5 09 p. m. via. Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—7 50 and 11 43 a. m., 4 38 and 5 09 p. m., week days.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—9 45, 12 45, 4 19 5 44 p. m., 12 21 night week-days. Sundays, [illegible] a. m., and 5 44 p. m.—[illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—12 45, p. m.

For Boston—5 44 p. m., daily.

For Brooklyn N Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.

[illegible]

DEATHS.

[illegible]—At [illegible], N. J., March 14, [illegible]. Funeral services on Tuesday morning [illegible].

VOORHEES—At Rahway March 15, 1895, [illegible] Voorhees, mother of Mrs. John B. [illegible], of this city, aged [illegible] years. Funeral Monday at 2 p. m., from the residence of her son-in-law, W. L. Tier, Rahway, N. J.

FINE—On Thursday morning, March 14, 1895, Eliza E., wife of Christopher M. Fine. Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral services at her late residence, [illegible] West Front st., Sunday, March 17, at 2:30 p. m. Somerville papers please copy.

LOWRY—In this city Friday, March 15, 1895, Clarence Lowry, only child of Robert H. and Lizzie D. Lowry, aged 3 years, 7 months and 11 days. Funeral private.

RANDOLPH—At Newark N. J., March 14, 1895, George F. Randolph. Funeral services at Mt. Olive Baptist Church on Sunday, March 17, at 2:30 p. m.

CONWAY—In this city March 14, 1895, Robert Conway, aged 57 years. Funeral services at No. 3, The Row, West Fourth st. Saturday March 16, at 4 p. m.

COLLINS—In Brooklyn N. Y. March 13, 1895, Evelyn T. wife of George A. Collins. Funeral services from her late residence 25 Prospect Place, North Plainfield, Saturday March 16, at 2 p. m.

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.

A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.

2 0 tf

SHERIFF'S SALE—New Jersey Supreme Court. The City National Bank of Plainfield vs. [illegible] Y. Wilson, impld., etc. Fi. fa. de bo. et ter. In case.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on

WEDNESDAY, THE THIRD DAY OF APRIL, A. D. 1895,

at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all the right, title and interest of the above named defendant in and to all the following tract or parcel of land and premises, situate in the city of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey:

Beginning at a point in Washington avenue and corner of land of formerly Phineas F. Randolph; thence running in a northwesterly course to the abutment wall of the bridge; thence running in a southwesterly course [illegible] hundred and twenty-eight feet to a point in line of said Randolph's land, or formerly his; thence running in a southeasterly course one hundred and forty-two feet more or less to a stake and corner; thence running in a northeasterly course two hundred and twenty-eight feet more or less to the place of beginning.

GEORGE KYTE, Sheriff.

J. B. Coward, Att'y.

mh 4 4d EDJAC Fees $[illegible]

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.

Estate of John Jacob Lang, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1895, on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said decedent, under oath or affirmation, and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor should be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG,
Executrix.

2 14 9

Corporation Notice.

The undersigned commissioners heretofore appointed by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield to make an estimate and assessment of damages that any owner or owners of land will sustain by the widening and laying out of Madison avenue from the southeasterly side line of West Front street to the Northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, pursuant to the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to widen Madison avenue from the Southeasterly side line of West Front street to the Northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey," approved June 5th, [illegible], and also to ascertain the amount of damages that shall be assessed as aforesaid and of the necessary expenses incident to such widening and laying out, and to make a just and equitable assessment thereof among the owners and occupants of the lands, tenements and real estate benefited thereby in proportion to the benefits each shall be deemed to acquire, such assessment to be made pursuant to the laws now in force in the State of New Jersey governing such assessments, any of the additional provisions of the City Charter to the contrary notwithstanding, hereby give notice that they have this day filed their report and statement in the office of the City Clerk and that the same is open to inspection of the public and will be presented to the Common Council at the meeting of that body to be held at the City Council Chamber, No. [illegible] Park avenue in the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, on Monday the [illegible] day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-five at eight o'clock P. M.

Dated, Plainfield, N. J., March 20th 1895.

EDWARD C. [illegible]

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1895. No 13

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

PARK CLUB A TRUMP.

Its Whisters Jump into Great Exaltation.

QUAKERS GIVE UP THE SILVER CUP,

And Championship of Nation—The Philadelphia Players Swell Get a Surprise Most Thorough, Amazed to Meet Such Smart Defeat from Jersey's Little Borough.

The whist championship of the United States is now held in Plainfield, the Park Club 4 having on Saturday afternoon and evening defeated the Hamilton Whist Club of Philadelphia in a challenge game for the trophy. This is a large solid silver loving cup, suitably inscribed, given by the American Whist League, the National Association of Whist Clubs, as a championship emblem to be contested for by the clubs constituting the League.

The Parks will hold the trophy until beaten by some challenging club. The Park Club 4 consisted of Messrs. Townsend, Howell, Rogers and McCutcheon.

The American Whist League of the United States is composed of about 108 clubs of the strongest players known; and teams from Boston, Providence, Brooklyn, New York, Albany, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Minneapolis, Milwaukee and North Plainfield, are included in its membership.

The first half of the game was played in the afternoon, in about three hours, after which the Parks were taken to the Union League Club's elegant home and given an elaborate dinner by the Hamiltons.

In the evening play was resumed, and the last half of the game was finished. Not until the game was concluded did the teams know the score, and the excitement was intense. At times five minutes would pass before a card was played. At the close, the scores told the following story:

AFTERNOON PLAY.

PARKS.		HAMILTONS.
McCutcheon and Howell		Remak and Ballard
Townsend and Rogers	1	Work and Mogridge	6
McCutcheon and Rogers		Remak and Mogridge
Townsend and Howell	5	Work and Ballard	2
Rogers and Howell		Mogridge and Ballard
Townsend and McCutchen	5	Work and Remak	2
	11		10

EVENING PLAY.

PARKS.		HAMILTONS.
Howell and McCutchen		Remak and Ballard
Rogers and Townsend	7	Work and Ballard	5
McCutchen and Rogers		Remak and Mogridge
Townsend and Howell	3	Work and Ballard	2
McCutchen and Townsend		Work and Remak
Howell and Rogers	3	Mogridge and Ballard	5
	13		12
Total	24	Total	22

SEBRING WAS ELECTED.

Under the New Law, He Takes the Office Which R. M. Fountain Vacates.

As has already been told in The Press, a law was passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor a few days previous to the late township election in North Plainfield which legislated all members out of the office of Town Committeeman who resided in boroughs. This law legislates Robert M. Fountain out of office in North Plainfield, and it now transpires that therefore he will be succeeded by Charles P. Sebring, who ran on the Republican ticket but was defeated by Frank Kalen who ran on a citizens ticket. Mr. Fountain was elected as treasurer immediately upon the organizing of the committee just after election.

Peter H. Smith, a member of the Bridgewater Town Committee who resides in the Bound Brook borough, suffers the same fate as Mr. Fountain.

Republic Loan.

The following board of directors was elected at the last meeting of the Republic Savings and Loan Association J A Hubbard, A M Griffen, W B Grannatt, Jr, F J Pope, J J Heddkoff, T B Van-Zandt, F S Runyon, J B Coward, D W Littell, S N Spencer, E H McCullough, J D Baker, L G Timpson, Alex Thorn, A V D Honeyman, J L Blackford, N B Smalley, J F Hoeman, and Frank Bowley. They will meet Thursday evening to elect officers.

—G. S. Naylor is erecting a house at the corner of LaGrande avenue and [illegible] street. F. M. Mosher is doing the plumbing and tinning work.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT.

Plainfield Men and Women Discuss Public Ways.

FACTS AND IDEALS MINGLED.

Dr. Murray Points Out the Need of a Pesthouse and Health Inspector—Suggests Less Gilt-Edge and More Practical Utility—The Former Orders Wants Trees on the Business Streets—Playground for the Poor Suggested.

The progressive women members of the Plainfield Branch Alliance listened to paper on public improvements and public works, at their regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon in All Souls Church. The first paper was read by Dr. W. H. Murray on "Means taken for the preservation of public health". Dr. T. H. Tomlinson was to have furnished the paper, but owing to his wife's illness was unable to do so, and Dr. Murray at the last moment took what notes he had made on the subject, added some to them, and presented a very interesting talk on but brief preparation.

He said that health was a great preservative of the city's welfare, and it was the duty of its citizens to foster it by preventing disease rather than curing it. The local Board of Health has plenty of ordinances seeking that end, but it was impossible to enforce them properly because of the lack of funds to employ a skilled inspector. This is an officer, he said, that is greatly needed, but private citizens as well as public officials display great indifference to this portion of municipal government. Such a person could not be employed for less than $1,500 a year, he stated, but it would be an economical expenditure for the city. The construction of a pest-house was delayed because of the inability to purchase ground on which to erect it—owners fearing that it would decrease the value of surrounding property. As yet the city has had no occasion to use such a house, but a contingency was liable to arise at any time, and it is always well to be prepared.

In closing he urged that the burning of rubbish and leaves in the street be prohibited, and suggested that gilt-edge hose-carts might be disposed of. The money expended thereon might be invested to better advantage by the city in purchasing anti-toxine to be distributed among such families as may be afflicted with diphtheria and unable to purchase the remedy themselves—a single prescription costing $12.

Mrs. Alexander Gilbert followed with an exhaustive paper on "Water supply and street lighting—how managed".

She first took up the water supply, and recited the circumstances under which the water company secured its charter. A very interesting portion of her paper was a description of the source of the water supply coming from the "underground river", which receives the water shed from an area of 10 miles. She concluded her paper with a sketch of the introduction of electric lights into Plainfield, and the change from 60 arc lights to 670 incandescents, the latter illuminating four times the area at an increase of only 50 per cent. in cost.

A paper on "Preservation of trees and care of streets", prepared by James E. Martine, was read by Mrs. Brown, in which the writer advocated the setting of trees on all thoroughfares—business as well as residence. He considered the maple preferable for shade trees, because if fruit trees were permitted to grow the lads were quite liable to violate the Eighth Commandment and the owners the Third.

Mrs. Brown also made suggestions, and spoke in favor of the establishment of a playground for the children of the poor who have not proper romping-places at their own homes.

The programme of the afternoon was closed by Miss E. L. Adams, who told of the work of the Public Library and Art Gallery.

She said that the Library endeavored to educate the taste of those who used it, to read books that would elevate them. As a rule the middle class drew more substantial books than any other portion of the community. In the circulating department, she said, books of fiction were in the greatest demand. What was needed to extend the influence of the Library was the co-operation of the outside public.

For seven years or more Mrs. W. D. Louder, of Quincey, Ky., was subject to severe attacks of cramp colic. Mr. S. R. Morse, a druggist of that place, recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which has effected a permanent cure, saving her much suffering besides the trouble and expense of sending for a doctor, which was often necessary. For sale at Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong,

FOUR YEARS OLD.

C. E. Society Has a Birthday Celebration.

WASHINGTONVILLE WIDE-AWAKE.

Plainfield Societies Send Greetings to Their Sister Over the Mountain—Interesting Reports and Promising Outlook.

Four years ago a Christian Endeavor society was organized at Washingtonville, and since that time its growth spiritually as well as in numbers has been a source of much gratification and encouragement to all. Last evening the society celebrated its fourth anniversary in the pretty chapel on the hill, when not only the Senior but the Junior society was present, as were also representatives from the Park Avenue Baptist, Trinity Reformed, Warren Chapel and First Baptist Church societies.

The service opened with a song service which was followed with a report of the society read by the president, Miss Nettie Beeching. It was a very interesting one and all Christian Endeavorers might learn many points of advantage to them. It was as follows:

Our society has turned another leaf in its book of life, and we find ourselves tonight just four years old.

In looking over the past year's work we see many mistakes, many opportunities neglected, but we also see much that encourages us.

Our Prayer Meeting Committee have earnestly labored to elevate the standard of our prayer meetings, and many of us can testify of the blessings we have received from week to week, and we feel we have grown stronger in our Spiritual life. Open air meetings were held during the month of August, and attended with a great deal of interest.

Our Lookout Committee have been active, and report the whole number attending through the year of 1,794, averaging at each meeting 34.5.

Through the efforts of our Missionary Committee we have been brought into closer sympathy with the Master's work in foreign fields. We send our money to China, and at our last meeting souvenir cards containing the active members pledge in Chinese were given to all the members.

Our Temperance Committee have been busy. Two pleasing programmes of bright music and earnest addresses were given which have enthused us with greater zeal for this branch of Christian Endeavor work. Temperance leaflets have also been freely distributed.

As we look upon this new page so clean and white we naturally wonder what it will tell at the end of the year. We know that the greater part of the responsibility rests with us whether we will make use of the opportunities, whether we are willing to be used by God to do His will, we know His strength is sufficient that if if we abide in Him and His word abides in us we may ask whatsoever we will and He will give it to us. So we start out trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, praying that we may be more useful, more earnest, and that the influence we are exerting may tell upon the hearts and lives of all those with whom we come in contact, and advance Christian Endeavor for Christ and the Church.

R. E. Anthony of the Trinity Society was then called on by John Bicknell who presided, and made a most helpful address on Christian work. Many very interesting points were given that all thoroughly enjoyed, and that will prove a benefit to workers in the society.

Miss Bessie Blair then sang a pretty solo, "Come Unto Me", accompanied by Rev. G. E. Herring on the organ.

Mr. Herring was introduced and gave a talk on the Christian Endeavor pledge, dividing it into five parts and giving a brief explanation of each. He said the Christian Endeavor pledge was a most wonderful thing and was perfect in every respect, and there was nothing in it that any Christian could not take. In fact, a person who could not take the pledge could not be a Christian.

In speaking about different methods of praying, Mr. Herring said that he liked to walk back and forth in his study when alone and pray, that he felt a nearness to God which was not experienced in any other way.

The pledge was thoroughly analyzed, and the very best thoughts were given to the Endeavorers.

At the close of Mr. Herring's remarks, the Junior Society sang a very pleasing selection.

Miss Nettie Beeching, who has had charge of the Junior Society, then read the following report:

What is more pleasant to the eye than to see a company of Junior Endeavorers, boys and girls interested in doing the Master's work while in their youth. Our Juniors are very enthusiastic, and our committees very faithful. The members when unable to be present send their excuse, not only to the consecration meetings but all the others, setting an example that the Seniors might follow. Our Missionary Committee reports $5.20 sent to foreign missions. Our secretary reports a membership of 41, 30 active and 11 associate members, 20 of whom are boys. The number attending for the year is 1,432, giving us an average of 28. The Social Committee left many pleasant remembrances. We recall the pleasant afternoon we spent in the woods picking the beautiful hepaticas and arranging them in small bouquets for the sick in Muhlenberg Hospital. We also remember another day in the woods, when our society enjoyed a basket picnic with lots of good things to eat, and swings, hammocks and games adding to our pleasure. Among the new features of our work is the Scrapbook Committee. Short interesting stories are brought in once a month and are placed in envelopes to be sent to the children's wards in various hospitals. We have also added the "Golden Circle", each member who wills giving one-tenth of what they earn to the Lord, the money to be used for any of the members who may be sick or needy. And last, but not least, is the memory-work. Each week the Juniors have been asked to find something of interest or to learn a verse or date, and we trust the seed sown may bring forth fruit a hundred fold for Christ and the church.

Miss Beeching as president of the Senior society made a few remarks that were full of precious thoughts, and will be helpful to the members this coming year. She asked for the hearty support of all to carry on the work of the society. The services closed with a prayer by Mr. Bicknell.

A short time was spent after the services in sociability and getting acquainted with one another, during which time the members served coffee and cake in abundance.

The fourth milestone in the history of this society will be a memorable one to all.

SCHEPFLIN, SCHULTZ & CO., ASSIGN.

After Superhuman Efforts, They Forced to Close Business.

Schepflin, Schultz & Co., after almost superhuman efforts to avoid it, were compelled to make an assignment Saturday for the equal benefit of their creditors.

The assignment was made to J. Fred MacDonald. Elias R. Pope was unable to act as assignee, because of unavoidable absence from the State next month. Craig A. Marsh has been retained as counsel. The sympathy of the entire community will go out to Mr. Schepflin and his partners, for it is well known that they have made every possible self-denial in their efforts to pay their creditors in full.

HIRAM HORNISH'S WILL.

Personal Property Bestowed on Kindred and Friends.

The will of the late Hiram Hornish, the veteran nurse was offered for probate in the Surrogate's office, Elizabeth, Monday, when L. W. Randolph and M. C. Dobbins were sworn in as executors.

Of the decedent's personal property the following disposition was made:

To his sister, Mrs. Mary Funk of Easton, $500, his clothing and furniture, and all that is left after settlement.

To his nephew, William Transeau, $500.

His cabinet, curiosities, watch, clock and a number of small things are left to L. W. Randolph, M. C. Dobbins, Dr. J. T. Frittz and Frank W. Campbell of New York.

The executors are given three months in which to make a settlement.

Appointments by Gov. Werts.

Gov. Werts has made the following ad-interim appointments of persons whose nominations were rejected by the Senate last week: For law judge of Middlesex County, J. Kearney Rice; for prosecutor of Middlesex County, Robert Adrain; for prosecutor of Gloucester County, A. H. Swackhamer; for lay judge of Gloucester County, S. Bowman Cox; for lay judge of Salem County, William Newell.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per

LOW BID FOR SEWERS.

Only $42,000 Wanted for the 17 Miles.

HONAN & SONS OF CHESTER, PA.

Their Figure the Lowest, and They Are Likely to be Given the Contract—Common Council Adopts the New Building Ordinance, and Does Much Other Work—Street Railway Consents Withdrawn.

Under suspension of the rules, the first business of the Common Council last night was the opening of bids for sewer construction. Clerk MacMurray unsealed the envelopes and announced the figures; he was assisted by Councilmen Fisk and Ginna. The lobby was filled with contractors and pipe-supply men, and there was much computation among them to reach the totals of the bidders in an effort to see who would likely get the contract. All of the bids were in detail, and the aggregate had to be found by many multiplications and additions.

The bidders were as follows: Bernard Brady, Plainfield; Thos. Redling, Perth Amboy; Honan & Sons, Chester, Pa.; James J. Cogan, Bayonne; Thos. F. Moore, Buffalo; William H. Watters, Bayonne; George W. Buch, Philadelphia; F. H. Harrison & Sons, Newark; Thos. Siddall, Trenton; Patrick T. Plunkett, Jersey City; Bogert & Farrell, Brooklyn; Rehill & Nelson, Dunellen; Dodge & McGregor, Buffalo; McGuire, McKnight & Co., East Orange; Gardner & Barnett, Akron, Ohio; James F. Gillem, Brooklyn; Prout & Love, Plainfield; John Marsden, Utica.

The pipe-men figured at once that Honan & Sons of Chester, Pa., were likely the lowest bidders, and today it was found that their bid was less than $42,000 for the entire 17 miles. This is an unusually low figure, in face of the fact that the price of pipe has gone up ten per cent. The next lowest bidders are Thomas F. Moore of Buffalo, and Bogert & Farrell of Brooklyn.

The successful bidder will be announced at the April meeting of the Council. The original estimate of the cost of the sewers was $90,000 for 20 miles. The five miles already laid cost less than $19,000, and the 22 miles will therefore cost only about $60,000.

After the sewer bids were read there was an exodus of the contractors army. The long, important ordinance concerning buildings was adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised, as was also that establishing the office of inspector of buildings.

At 10:10 the regular order of business was taken up.

An impudent letter from a disgruntled foreign contractor, who charged that a small piece of business was done in discriminating in favor of those bidders who could give bonds in Union County, was received and filed.

Licenses were granted as follows:

Cartmen—John A. Scott, A. Parsons, Moses Carey, L. J. Combs, Wm. Phillips. Peddler—K. Sachar, Edward Cline, John J. Goff, Wm. Pixle. Truckmen—William Hand & Son, Thomas Finney. Stage—G. A. Schenck. Auctioneer—Wm. Hand.

Petitions were received and referred to the proper committees as follows: For a sidewalk on West Fourth street from Plainfield avenue to Grant avenue; an extension of Fred Caspar's East Front street building; for repairs to the building of E. H. Holmes at 308 West Second street; from the Y. M. C. A. for the extension of Watchung avenue; for the erection of a frame-building by Thaddeus G. Smith at 417 Madison avenue; from J. A. Smith & Bro. for the construction of the big box sign already up surrounding their awning; for crosswalks at Plainfield avenue and Short Second street, and East Sixth street and Franklin place.

Mr. Frasee said that the sign of the Smiths was an improvement, and ought to be permitted to remain up. Mr. Fisk said it was distinctly against the ordinance, and that many other signs would have to come down.

The joint memorial detail of the two G. A. R. posts was granted $100 for the decoration of the soldiers' graves.

The Public Library tax was fixed at $3,400.

The following property-holders announced that they had withdrawn their consents for the proposed Madison avenue route of the street railway: Elizabeth Tyrardt, R. E. Runyon, Mary E. Voorhies, estate Rhoda Moore, S. H. C. Dunham, Jeremiah Moore, C. F. Randolph, T. C. Smith, J. Elizabeth Titsworth, Elizabeth Runyon, A. M. Runyon, Marietta Rogers, R. Rogers, Frank Bushnell. Twenty-five dollars was advanced to the Chief of Police for witnesses' fees and traveling and similar expenses.

The bonds of Delinquent Collector Nash and E. A. Mosher were ordered cancelled.

Mr. Glenn presented the anti-saloon petition of the W. C. T. U., which has already been published in The Press. It had been addressed to him personally, and had not reached him till two days after the Council meeting.

The saloon license of Henry Hausen at 118 East Front street was granted, Messrs. Ginna and Stockton voting No.

Council adjourned.

NEW APPOINTMENTS.

Ex-Senator Adrain Nominated to Be Prosecutor of Middlesex, and a Commission Appointed to Codify the Marriage Laws.

Governor Werts sent the following nominations to the Senate Friday:

For President Judge of the courts of Middlesex County, J. Kearny Rice, reappointed; present term expires April, 1895.

Judge of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas of the County of Gloucester, Bowman Cox.

Prosecutor of the Pleas of the County of Middlesex, Robert Adrain.

Prosecutor of the pleas of the County of Gloucester, Austin H. Swackhamer.

Judge of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas of the County of Salem, William Newell.

Harbormaster for Hudson County, Peter H. Daly, reappointed.

Harbormaster for Elizabeth Harbor, John Driscoll, reappointed.

Commission to Codify Laws as to Marriage and Divorce, J. Frank Fort, of Orange; Frank Bergen of Elizabeth, and Joseph D. Bedle, of Jersey City.

Late in the afternoon an executive session was held at which all the nominations were rejected excepting Commissioners to examine the divorce and insolvency laws and for harbor masters, which which were confirmed. Among other confirmations was that of Judge J. D. Bartine.

PRESIDENT M'CUTCHEN.

North Plainfield School Board Reorganizes and Accepts a Flag.

The Board of Education of North Plainfield met last evening, pursuant to the law which requires them to meet within ten days of election to organize.

The Board elected S. St. J. McCutchen president, and S. B. Joseph, district clerk.

A communication was presented from Somerset Council, No. 104, J. O U. A. M., offering to donate to the school a United States flag.

This offer was accepted with the thanks of the Board.

White's Millinery Opening.

The opening of the Spring styles of millinery always interests every woman, and many took advantage yesterday to admire the many beautiful styles of the latest in the millinery art that was displayed by Miss Daly. Their millinery department has been enlarged to twice its original size, but even with the increased room there is none too much. All the women expressed the same opinion that the different styles, unique trimmings, and the moderate prices asked were much lower than other houses asked for inferior work.

A description of some of those most admired would not be amiss. Among them was a Dutch bonnet of shaded green straw, bow of blues ribbon with steel buckle in front and black violets; another a small yellow hat trimmed with black roses, straw ears, rhinestone buckles and egrets; another one much admired was a small bonnet of patent-leather braid, trimmed with black wings, black egrets and black velvet ribbons. They are all on exhibition in the show window.

For Foreign Missions.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the First M. E. Church was held yesterday afternoon, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Edward Winter.

Vice-presidents—Mrs. G. E. Barnes, Mrs. Anson Sperry.

Recording Secretary—Miss M. B Sharp.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss Rachel A. Day.

Treasurer—Miss Susie E. Jackson.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. New York is one of the healthiest places on the Atlantic coast and yet there are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precautions of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but we will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will relieve the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

THE SECOND PROMISE
By Howard Fielding

(Copyright by Bacheller Johnson & Bacheller)

CHAPTER IV.

AN INSTRUCTIVE EPISODE.

Under the influence of strong emotion even a very ordinary fellow like Walter Carroll can talk well. He is always at the disadvantage in comparison with such a man as Chase that he has not studied his story in advance and has probably rehearsed it with not more than one or two other women. Yet, if his heart is right, he can get along fairly.

Carroll threw conventionality to the winds, and he talked the queen's English to Amy Lynde till she believed him in spite of the fact that he was telling the truth. He painted a portrait of Chase that would not have flattered him even as he looked at that moment, crawling out of the water—in evening dress, by the way—a quarter of a mile up the beach.

The upshot of it was that Mrs. Lynde became very angry with Carroll, and assured him that he baselessly maligned her character and totally misconstrued her motives. But since he was determined to make trouble, and see a scandal in a perfectly innocent friendship—when he himself had persecuted her with his attentions most shamefully—why, such being the case, she would leave Crescent Beach next day, which was just what Carroll wanted her to do.

In her heart, though she did not forgive Carroll, she bitterly accused herself. She was also quite severe upon Chase, whose cowardly disappearance from the appointed place she was unable to understand—for of course Carroll did not tell her that he had thrown the fellow overboard.

Alone in her room, she re-read her husband's letters. He had written at first in good spirits. The "cold-blooded German scientist" had seemed to throw the first light upon the mystery of his illness. Then came a letter in which Arthur wrote that the treatment had failed; it might succeed in prolonging his existence, but he would be only a cripple at the best. After that there were no allusions to his health. He wrote only of her. She had failed to understand what he had said. At one time he seemed to be covertly urging her to the very course which she felt to be dangerous; again he pleaded for her love, though he had only a soul with which to love her. On the whole, he had not strengthened his case with these letters. She did not comprehend the language of suffering, having never suffered greatly, either in body or mind. After reading the letters she felt a strong disinclination to return to her husband. She knew that she could not tell him all the truth. She would have preferred to be alone.

The next day Carroll did a really clever thing. He lied to a young woman of his acquaintance in such a way that she was led to repeat it to Chase, who was thereby entirely deceived about Mrs. Lynde, and permitted her to leave Crescent Beach without exchanging a word with him. She took the train with the intention of returning to Brooklyn, but changed her mind when she reached New York; and, without seeing her husband, she fled to an old school friend who had married a rustic in the wilds of northern New York. From that place she wrote to her husband, telling him that she was weary of everything in the world and wished to be alone. He replied, in due course, that she had doubtless chosen wisely. As for her coming home, the scientist had turned the house upside down, and had invented sanitary conditions which no well person could live in. She would better make up her mind to remain away at least a month.

The days slipped by. Amy lived the most monotonous life that she had ever known, and had a great deal to say about fate in her confidential talks with her friend. Nobody knew what had become of her. The celebrated Tascott did not accomplish a more mysterious disappearance. Chase and Carroll had returned to Brooklyn, and there had been no collision between them. The latter was satisfied and the former was biding his time. Chase had by no means given up the game. He was using his best endeavors to find out where Mrs. Lynde had gone. Meanwhile Carroll, equally ignorant, amused himself by throwing false information in Chase's way, and succeeded in causing Chase to make a large number of unnecessary journeys.

In every letter which Amy received from her husband there was some excuse to delay her return. When at last she had determined to go, her friend fell very ill, and Amy could not desert her. For a month or more she worked harder than ever before in her life, and she was sainted in that household ever afterwards.

At last her release came. She was going home. Her husband had written that he could bear her absence no longer, and she had replied with words of affection that she would not delay. But she did not look forward to her return with pleasure. She had worn herself out in a sick room, and she was about to enter another. There is in healthy people an instinctive protest against disease. It is so truly an instinct and so far from reason that it very frequently includes the sufferer in its condemnation, and visits a sort of blame upon him for his misfortune. Amy felt this unjust sentiment toward her husband though she fought against it. If David Chase had known of this, he would have regarded it as most favorable.

On the day when Amy left her friend's house she received this telegram:

"I have found you out, and I must see you. Meet me in Albany on your way back. My husband and I will be at the Delavan.

"ISABEL MASON."

It did not strike Amy as peculiar that Mrs. Mason had learned of her whereabouts and of her intended return. Doubtless she had obtained the information directly from Dr. Lynde.

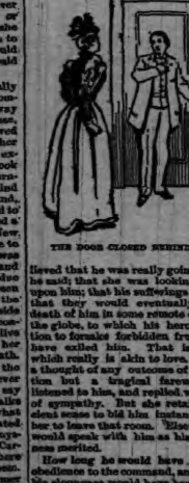
It was late in the afternoon when she arrived in Albany. She had decided to take a night train for New York, and there was time to call at the Delavan. From the parlor of the hotel she sent her card to the Masons, and a servant immediately showed her to a suite. She knocked, and entered. The door closed quickly behind her, and there was David Chase with his back against it.

What arguments he found to justify his preposterous conduct, must be left to the imagination. Certainly he had never done better in his life. At first Amy was so utterly astounded that she was bereft even of the power to scream. And then she was utterly carried away by the flow of his eloquence. He protested by every false oath in the book of lies, that his sole thought was for her good. He had something of the gravest importance to tell her, and he had taken this desperate means of intercepting her before she reached her home. With the utmost cleverness he piqued her curiosity, and delayed to satisfy it. She was ashamed and afraid to raise an outcry, and there stood Chase before the door talking incessantly.

They were in a little parlor; it was scarcely worse, he urged, than meeting in the public parlor of the hotel. And in an instant he hurried from that subject to tell her of the murderous assault committed upon him by Carroll who, in that version of the story, had clandestinely stolen upon him, and pushed him into the dangerous current of the bay, with the design, of course, of taking his place in the rendezvous. He made it look like sheer murder, and Amy was horrified.

She had delayed too long. Before she was aware of it, Chase was on his knees protesting undying love, and a devotion which no suffering could measure and no peril check. He realized the hopelessness of it, and he was taking the only means that the experienced of the race had discovered to cure his wound. He was going to leave her forever. His exile had begun. He was even then on his way westward, beyond the limits of the continent, to a land on which the sun, which had set for them, was rising even as he spoke. Could she deny him a last word, or be unforgiving if he had gained the opportunity of speaking it, by a bold and desperate stroke?

There is no lie that, when properly presented, is beyond the credence of woman. And rarely has that old and extra durable falsehood been better told that it was then. Amy believed that he was really going to do as he said; that she was looking her last upon him; that his sufferings were real; that they would eventually be the death of him in some remote quarter of the globe, to which his heroic resolution to forsake forbidden fruit should have exiled him. That is the pity which really is akin to love. Without a thought of any outcome of the situation but a tragical farewell, Amy listened to him, and replied with words of sympathy. But she retained sufficient sense to bid him instantly permit her to leave that room. Elsewhere she would speak with him as his unhappiness merited.



THE DOOR CLOSED BEHIND HER.

How long he would have stayed off obedience to the command, and whether his eloquence would have been equal to the unfolding of the remainder of the well-known story, is a problem impossible of solution, for just as he had come to that part of it which introduces the possibility of return—that familiar promise to brave a thousand deaths if ever she should need and summon him—he was interrupted by a strange and hideous sound.

It was low at first—a sort of shuddering murmur that ran through the vast hostelry; the sound of a cry far off and muffled by closed doors; a clamor rising from the street; and so, at length, the articulate name of deadly peril—fire!

Chase got upon his feet, and at first he was inclined to congratulate himself. There could be little danger. Here was a chance to prove that he was a real hero.

"Don't be frightened," he said. "Come."

He took her hand and led her to the door. She was white as marble and scarcely able to stand. The instant that that cry had fallen upon her ears she saw a judgment in it. She had listened to this man, had pitied and almost loved him, and for her sin she had been called to meet the most horrible of deaths.

Chase opened the door. The corridor looked just as it had when he had seen it last. There was a sound of hurrying feet, but for the moment no person was visible. They were in an angle, and the main exit could not be seen. He advanced calmly, leading her.

And then in an instant, as if with the discharge of a cannon, there came a puff of smoke, filling the corridor. He dropped her hand and ran ahead, calling to her. At the junction of that

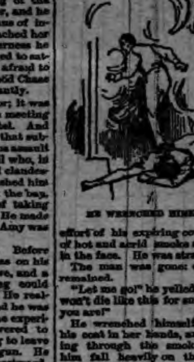
The smoke was already so thick that, looking back, he could hardly see her groping after him.

Terror seized him by the throat. The voice with which he called to her was hoarse and choked. He heard her cry: "Save me! Save me!" Then she fell at his feet. He tried to lift her in his arms, but it is only in romance that slender young men, with no air but only smoke in their lungs, pick up robust young women and run away with them.

He stumbled and fell. She clung to him. He heard her speaking fast and wildly, in hysterical terror.

"You have tried to kill my soul," she said. "Save me from bodily death, and we may both be forgiven."

Her hands clutched him. How much he would have given, so short awhile before, for that embrace! He opened his mouth to speak. It was the last effort of his expiring courage. A puff of hot and acrid smoke struck him full in the face. He was strangling.



HE WRENCHED HIMSELF FREE

The man was gone: only the brute remained.

"Let me go!" he yelled, hoarsely. "I won't die like this for such a woman as you are!"

He wrenched himself free, leaving his coat in her hands, and went plunging through the smoke. She heard him fall heavily on the stairs. She dared not follow him.

A sort of resignation came to her. She flung herself prone on the floor with no thought of further effort. But there was pure air down there. One full breath of it in her lungs, and the love of life came back.

She sprang to her feet. She reached the stairs and got a hand upon the banister rail. She reached the foot of the stairs without falling. It was very dark.

Suddenly she felt a rush of hot air. A lurid light cleft the smoke and struck straight into her face. She was blinded by it.

Then a voice cried:

"There she is! Thank God! Thank God!"

It was Walter Carroll's voice. She felt herself seized by powerful hands. Then consciousness deserted her.

CHAPTER V.

DARKNESS AND THEN LIGHT.

When Amy awoke she was lying in total darkness. There seemed to be a great weight upon her, and especially it pressed upon her face.

The most horrible thought that can be was the first that came to her. She believed that she had been buried alive. But the sound of a human voice drove away that terror. It was a woman's voice, and very gentle and sympathetic.

"You must lie still," it said. "Don't be frightened. You're in a hospital, but you're not much hurt."

"Why is my face covered?" she cried, in terror.

"Your eyes have been somewhat injured, but—"

"Blind! Was not death punishment enough?"

"No, my child, you are not blind, and your eyes will soon be as serviceable as ever they were. You were struck in the face by a jet of flame which might well have killed or blinded you. But it did neither. You will not even be disfigured."

"Does my husband know?"

"Yes."

"All?"

"I do not understand."

Amy was silent for a moment.

"Who told my husband?" she asked, at last.

"We have communicated with him," said the sister, for such was the nurse.

"Is Mr. Carroll here?"

"I do not know whether he is now in the hospital. He was here till early morning."

"Have I been unconscious all night?"

"It is now about seven o'clock."

Amy renewed her inquiries about Carroll. The sister left the room and returned immediately with the information that the young man was in the waiting-room, but that the hospital physician would not permit the patient to talk any more. If she would go to sleep, she could speak with Mr. Carroll when she woke. Having no alternative, and, being exhausted beyond measure, Amy went to sleep. It was a wonder to her, as her senses slipped away, that she could enjoy that blessing, for her body was racked with pain and every breath was agony, as a result of the smoke which she had inhaled.

She awoke much refreshed, a little after noon. The first question was whether any word had come from her husband. In reply the sister read a message full of loving sympathy. He would be beside her in spirit, he wrote, so long as she was called upon to suffer and to wait. Having heard this message twice, she renewed her request to speak with Carroll.

He came in response to the sister's summons. She asked anxiously if he had suffered any injury, and he replied jocularly that he had lost one eyebrow and a part of his hair, and considered himself exceedingly lucky.

She began to overwhelm him with thanks for having rescued her. He checked her.

"Don't make a hero out of me," he said. "I'm on the other side of the ledger. I'm one of the saved, as you are. It is true that I helped carry you out, but there was a time when I don't believe I'd have gone any further, if I hadn't had help. I'm breathing nothing but three-cornered files even now, and I was a mighty slight worse off then."

"How did you happen to be there?"

"I followed Chase," he said, with considerable hesitation.

She shuddered.

"What has become of him?" she asked.

"Heaven knows. He got out of the hotel all right, and then he skipped. You needn't say anything. I know why he has gone. He deserted you."

"How did you know that?"

"Oh, I understand his whole plot. I know how he got the information as to your hiding place. He bribed a letter-carrier after failing with all your servants. He got the postmark, of course, in that way. I learned what he was up to and watched him. It was none of my business, you know, as I told you that evening on the pier, but I was bound to do it."

"I shall thank you as long as I live."

"Don't think of it. Well, I found out that he was to leave town for Albany. I missed his train, but caught the next, and was only a little behind him. It wasn't very hard to trace him to the Delavan, but it took time. As soon as I saw 'Mr. and Mrs. Mason' on the register in his handwriting, I saw the whole game. He'd made an appointment for you in Mrs. Mason's name."

Carroll's voice trembled as he recalled his emotions at the moment of that discovery.

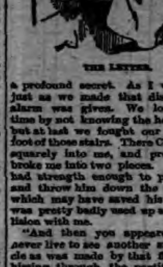
"Just as we—that is, just as I—" he continued.

"Was there some one with you?" cried Amy.

"Well, yes; I had a shrewd fellow with me, and he deserves most of the credit."

"A detective?"

"Oh, he's perfectly trustworthy. He has every reason for keeping this affair a profound secret. As I was saying, just as we made that discovery, the alarm was given. We lost precious time by not knowing the hotel better, but at last we fought our way to the foot of those stairs. There Chase dashed squarely into me, and pretty nearly broke me into two pieces. However, I had strength enough to pick him up and throw him down the next flight, which may have saved his life, for he was pretty badly used up after his collision with me.



THE LETTER.

"And then you appeared. I shall never live to see another such spectacle as was made by that flash of fire hissing through the partition beside you, and revealing you to us. The rest needs no telling. Here we are, thank heaven, and not much hurt, though I shall miss that mass of yellow curls for a time, and so will some one who has a better right. But I take the liberty of including myself in that remark as my sole recompense for helping to carry you out of that smoke and fire."

"It will not be your sole reward, if my gratitude and my friendship are worth anything."

Carroll choked as he strove to reply.

"You see my throat's pretty bad yet," he said. "And now let me put myself at your service. I know there is something I can do for you."

"I thought at first that there was," she said, "but now I see my duty clearer. I had intended to ask you to keep all this from him, but that would be a miserable mistake. I shall write him the whole story; the good sister will be my amanuensis."

"Gladly, my child," said the sister.

With many expressions of gratitude, Amy dismissed Carroll, and then she dictated a letter that was clearer than crystal. It revealed her heart from the very first moment when she had permitted her revolt against her husband's hard fate to alienate her from him. She confessed that she had taken her freedom gladly when he had given it to her; and that she had made wretched misuse of it. She wished for nothing better than to return to him and never leave him again. She commended Carroll to her husband as one who had proven a true friend.

She told Carroll that she had done this when he came next day, and he pretended that he could have asked for nothing more in the world.

"And, by the way," he added, "I ought to tell you now to be prepared for a considerable change when you see Dr. Lynde. I'm told you'll be able to see in a few days, and as soon as your eyes are all right you can go home at once."

"A change?"

"He is considerably improved."

"I thank God for it; but whether he is to regain his health or to remain a hopeless invalid, I shall never leave him again when once we are reunited. I believe that I have always had a deep feeling for the sacredness of the marriage tie; but I have a thousand times more now. If one wishes to know how holy it is, he must get a glimpse into the soul of one who is striving to break and dishonor it."

"I guess you've stated it rightly," said Carroll, thoughtfully. "I don't really know how such a fellow feels, but I'm dead sure of one thing—he doesn't love the woman."

Which is a very homely way of stating an important fact.

As Carroll spoke some one entered the room.

"Who is that?" cried Amy.

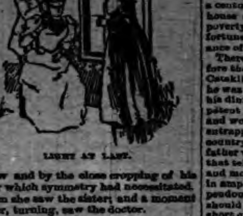
"It's the doctor," responded Carroll.

"He says that you may see to-day," said the sister, gently, "but it will only be for a little while."

[illegible] years since I have been blind. How long must time have seemed to him," she added softly.

She was sitting in a great chair; and after the window had been somewhat darkened the doctor passed behind her, and proceeded to undo the bandage that covered her eyes.

In an instant she saw Carroll, curiously disfigured by the loss of his eyebrow and by the close cropping of his hair which symmetry had necessitated. Then she saw the sister; and a moment later, turning, saw the doctor.



LIGHT AT LAST.

It was Dr. Lynde.

They were alone in the room when she recovered from her surprise and looked around for the others.

Then they sat together for a long time while he told of his recovery. It appeared that his case from the first had been totally misunderstood. It had been a surgical, not a medical case, depending upon a direct injury to the spine, which, upon discovery, had been recognized as remediable. The soulless scientist from the fatherland had accomplished it.

Lynde had wished his wife to know nothing about this until he was fully restored, and for that reason had delayed her return to him.

The reader will not need to be informed that Lynde was the shrewd and discreet friend who had accompanied Carroll to Albany, and to whose indomitable courage the escape of all of them from the burning hotel was due.

Nor is there need to carry the fortunate conclusion of the story into detail, for it goes without saying that two persons whose lives had come so near to shipwreck would be just the very ones to "live happily ever afterwards."

[THE END.]

THE BOWLING TOURNEY.

Each Team Has Four Games Still to Bowl.

Cranfords and Westfields break even in the Journal Association five-man tournament. Five times have they met in battle array, and each team has won two victories. They rolled their third and fourth games Wednesday night, with these scores: Cranford, 761; Westfield, 743. Cranford, 739; Westfield, 750.

In the city section the Alcyones twice defeated the Y. M. C. L. A. Scores: 818 to 721; 739 to 716.

The remaining schedule in the Journal Association series is as follows:

March 23,	Roselle	at	Westfield
March 2[illegible],	Y.M.C.L.A.	at	E.A.C.
March 2[illegible],	Alcyone	at	A.K.A.
March 2[illegible],	Cranford	at	Plainfield
March 2[illegible],	Roselle	at	Cranford
March 2[illegible],	Plainfield	at	Westfield
March 29,	A.K.A.	at	Y.M.C.L.A.
March 29,	E.A.C.	at	Alcyone

The record:

CITY SECTION.

Team	Won	Lost	To Play
Alcyone B. C.	6	2	4
Arthur Kulls	5	3	4
Elizabeth A. C.	3	5	4
Y. M. C. L. A.	2	6	4

COUNTY SECTION.

Team	Won	Lost	To Play
Roselle	7	1	4
Plainfield	5	3	4
Cranford	2	6	4
Westfield	2	6	4

Captain Morrell of the Elizabeth B. C. tried to get his men together Wednesday night to bowl the postponed game with Plainfield, but failed. He said yesterday that the game might be rolled next Tuesday or Wednesday night.

A Cent for Each Year.

Each member of the congregation of the Congregational Church received a little cheesecloth bag, yesterday, containing a slip of paper bearing the following rhyme:

This "Birthday Party" is given to you;
'Tis something novel, 'tis something new.
We send you each a little sack—
Please either send or bring it back
With as many cents as years you're old;
We promise the number shall never be told.
Kind friends will give you something to eat,
And others will furnish a musical treat.
The Ladies' Aid with greetings most hearty,
Feel sure you'll attend your own "Birthday Party".

On the other side of the paper it is stated that the "Birthday Party" will be held in the Congregational Church Friday evening, March 29, at 8.

DUNELLEN.

W Webber of Newark is in town on business.

Miss Gertrude Brander of Plainfield spent yesterday afternoon with her sister, Miss Elsa Brander.

Harry Peacoyre of Newark is the guest of Dwer Randolph.

Mrs Harold Tomlinson of Plainfield is visiting her mother, Mrs A Dunham.

Mrs W H Stage is in Salem.

Mrs Fred Nelson is entertaining friends from Brooklyn.

Mrs H Fields and son Clarence returned to their home in Bayonne City after spending several days pleasantly with friends in town.

LeRoye Jennings is somewhat better today.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

HOUSE OF GOULD.

OF RECENT ORIGIN THOUGH OF ANCIENT LINEAGE.

The Founder and His Famous Invention of a Mouse Trap. Titles Made Possible by the Clever Foresight and Manipulation of a Pretty Little American Actress.

Told in the book of peerages the House of Gould is not so ancient as the House of Castellane by some centuries, though doubtless the ancestors of both, if one did but know it, went back to the ark and Eden. It is only something like half a century since the founder of the former house emerged from his obscurity and poverty, and laid the foundations of the fortune which makes possible the alliance of this winter.

There were no Goulds to speak of before the original Jay came down from the Catskills, where he was born, and where he was glad to do a piece of surveying for his dinner and a half dollar, and, with his patent mousetrap, began to lay his deep and wonderfully successful plans for the entrapping of mice and men. But in this country what boots it what your grandfather was? It is not the tale of blood that tells so much as the tale of brains and money, and as the Goulds have both in ample measure and the latter is stupendous, there is no reason why anyone should wonder that it is able to take the short cut to position—a something which it is popular to say that money cannot buy, but which the events of late years have proven to be as commercial a commodity as anything that sells on the exchanges or over the counters of the world.

Time was when the second generation had no chance to step into the rose colored precincts of society, no matter what its bank account. But that time is past. What William H. Vanderbilt failed to do, George Jay Gould has succeeded in accomplishing. Like his father before him, he has done the "impossible." And when the Goulds adopt their family crest, if they have not already got one, they should put "Veni, vidi, vici" upon it as a motto. They have certainly earned the right.

So long as Jay Gould lived there was no "family." Thousands and tens of thousands of columns were written about the Little Wizard of Wall street, whose schemes kept more than the nation on the qui vive, whose campaigns of aggression were Napoleonic in their extent and their successfulness, though he never quite found his Waterloo; but absolutely nothing was written about his family. It was known that he had one, and that was about all. Toward the end of his life it was known that the elder son, George, a quiet, steady lad, with a wonderful genius for hard work and a nature apparently as secretive as his father's, had been trained to take up the burden when the father laid it down, and was given a large say in the father's business. It was not known until after his death, however, that the father had given George a power of attorney with the widest possible scope.

He could have done what he pleased with the father's property, and as he had the combination to the safe deposit vaults in which Jay Gould kept his wealth of securities he might have walked off with millions and his father would have had no legal redress. Something was known about George, but comparatively little, and all of that had to do with his business life, save when he married an actress, and those that talked at all about such things said that the young man had destroyed all chances for social preferment. How little the prophets knew that that marriage with the beautiful and accomplished Edith Kingdon would be the first stepping stone toward the attainment of that "impossible" which the House of Gould had already reached, and that the deft hand and shrewd brain of the dark eyed beauty, belonging to a profession which society has ever sneered at, would point out the short cut across lots to the point at which society would bow down to the Goulds and blue blood would be glad to form a profitable alliance with one of its fair daughters.

The sunlight of publicity first fell upon the family of Jay Gould when Jay Gould died. There was a scurrying for information then, for the family had always been so secretive that little was known about it save that the eldest daughter had become somewhat famous for good deeds, and the second son, Edwin, had been heard of in a lively escapade or two. It was found that there were six children—George Jay, Edwin, Helen, Howard, Anna and Frank.

The mother, a good, generous hearted Christian lady, after whom Helen patterns, died a short time previous. And when the will was opened—the will which Jay Gould had given to George to keep before his death—it was found that each of these children was an equal sharer in the father's wealth, with the exception of $5,000,000 paid to George "for services rendered to his father" during the last years of his life. Then the sunlight of publicity began to beat fiercely upon these interesting orphans, some of whom were yet in their teens and charges upon their elder brothers and sisters.

The Utility of Flattery.

"Say," began Raggles, as he stopped the man on the street, "you see before you—"

"Oh, I know what you're going to say," interrupted the man. "Your wife is sick, your children are starving, your house leaks, and you yourself haven't had anything to eat for 30 hours. You can't get work, and—"

"You're on to me, ain't you?" returned Raggles.

"Well, I should say I was."

"Been round a good deal, ain't you?"

"That's what I have!" and he straightened out proudly.

"It's a pretty smart man that works you for a coin. I knowed that when I first seen you. I says to myself, that a man with such an intelligent face as you has can't be fooled. But I goes against my better judgment and tries it, and now see what a fool I've made of myself. I humbly axes your pardon!" and Raggles made a humble obeisance.

"Oh, you needn't feel so bad about it," replied the man. "Here, take this," and he deposited a quarter in Raggles's uncalloused palm, and strode on with his head in the air.

"Flattery pays and it don't cost much," said Raggles to himself as he started to find his friend Dusty, and tell him to head off the soft and shining mark on the next block.—Indianapolis News.

Coogan (below)—Say, Murphy?

Murphy (above)—Phwat do yez want?

Coogan—[illegible]

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

AN ARMY FUNERAL.

Plainfield Witnesses an Unusual Spectacle.

CAPTAIN ANNIE M'IVER AT REST.

Public Services in the Barracks, With Notable Officers Attending; and Parade to the Grave in Hillside Cemetery.

The funeral of Capt. Annie McIver of the Salvation Army in the West Second street barracks on Friday was attended by a vast concourse of people who filled every seat and left a large number standing in the rear of the hall. Curious to see the manner in which an army funeral was conducted, they witnessed a service that was very impressive, though devoid of the usual funereal solemnity, and which carried into the minds of those present the conviction that the army lads and lassies are possessed of some subtle influence which checks the flow of tears and represses the sorrowfulness of mind in a moment that all others seem to feel an affliction of grief. Convinced of their departed comrade's ascension to a place of eternal reward, they sang songs of joy and hopefulness, and with smiling countenances and blissful words told of their great love and work for the Redeemer.

In a word, the funeral services were nothing more than the regulation army meeting, augmented in interest by the attendance of a number of out-of-town officers. Perhaps the feeling of those who might be considered mourners was best expressed in the words of Staff-Captain McIver, who conducted the meeting, and said:

"We don't feel that the Captain is dead. She has only fallen asleep to things that are unreal."

The remains of Captain McIver reposed in a black casket, covered over with white roses and lilies, while at the foot stood a floral cross, a tribute from the Plainfield barracks. On the casket also lay that distinguishing mark of membership—the plain black poke bonnet, with its little red band of ribbon sewed across the front of the hat on which was inscribed "Salvation Army". This was the bonnet which the departed comrade wore in her warfare out on the highways and among the hedges, and stood as a memorial to her sacrifice for humanity.

From the front of the platform the Army flag on the right and the Stars and Stripes on the left stood furled at half angle, with a white ribbon in the centre holding the emblems of Salvation and Liberty in place. Running back from the flags to the rear end of the platform the Army officers and recruits sat, the women on the right and the men on the left. Thrown over the shoulder of the women was a white sash, and around the left arm of each man a white band of ribbon was tied. Each one wore the regulation Army uniform.

The service was opened by the audience rising and singing "My Jesus I Love Thee," accompanied by piano, cornet and the beating of tune on the drums. Prayers were offered by Adjutant Sammons of Trenton, and Adjutant Wood of Morristown, after which Staff-Captain Keith of New York arose and said that Captain McIver had spent her life pleading for souls, and that now her spirit was there pleading with the unsaved sinner. She and Captain McIver had been together in the London Training School of the Army twelve years ago, and she knew the great sacrifice she was obliged to make to enter the work in which she died. Her parents forsook her when she joined the army, but when she came to this country she found a father and mother in Brigadier and Mrs. Evans, at whose home in Plainfield she died.

The remarks of the Staff-Captain were interspersed with fervent comments which are so characteristic of the army member, such as "hallelujah", "amen", etc. And when Mrs. Evans was referred to as "Mother Evans" some lasses said "God bless mother", at which there was an intermingling response of "yes, God bless mother", "Amen", "hallelujah". The Captain had not time to resume before another feminine voice cried out "and God bless father, too". "Amen", shouted the army.

After Ensign McKenzie had sung a solo, Captain Keith asked for testimony from those who had been benefited by the influence of Captain McIver or who had known of her good among others. One recruit in the rear of the stage arose and told what an inspiration she had been to him, and though he was not a fluent talker his earnestness impressed the audience.

Sergt-Maj Ferrigh lawyer of Jersey City, who has charge of the legal business of the army, spoke of her great slumming work in Jersey City.

Ensign Evans, daughter of Brigadier Evans, said that Captain McIver had resided with them for nine years, and during all this time had practiced at home what she had preached on the platform.

Ensign McKenzie read a few verses from the Bible and made a plea for souls, drawing an example from the dead Captain's life as an argument to take the first step. Her work in life, she said, had been to make hearts soft, tender and mellow, and she pleaded over her dead body for sinners to come forward and consecrate themselves to the work Captain McIver had left behind.

After prayer was offered the audience was permitted to view the remains, and for a half hour fully 1,200 people filed up the side aisles to where the casket lay, and then out through the centre aisle.

When the audience had mostly left the hall, the Army came down from the platform and took a last look at their departed comrade. Tears filled the eyes of some of the young women who commenced their Army work under the instruction of Captain McIver as they looked at her lifeless features, but restraining their emotion they passed on and gathered in groups to greet each other with their familiar "How do you do, God bless you".

Some as they passed caressed the dead woman's forehead, as though to give comfort to a suffering mind and body, but it was only to evince their great love for her. After all had passed before the casket hands were joined, and a parting song was rendered with a sympathetic and fervid feeling that made the scene pathetic, yet joyful.

At the close of the services the scene resembled more the breaking up of an entertainment in which all had become enthused with good fellowship, rather than the end of all that is earthly to a human being.

The visiting officers were as follows: Adjutant Dunham and wife, Ensign Damon, Capt. March and Capt. Taylor of New York; Capt. Watkins, Lieut. Sweet and soldiers from Bound Brook; Captain Shaw and Capt. Havering of Brooklyn; Capt. Waldron and Lieut. Mills of Elizabeth; Adjutant Agnew of New York; Lieut. Marriston of Morristown.

A short service was held in the barracks on Saturday at 10, after which a procession was formed, and the remains were escorted to Hillside Cemetery, where the interment took place. The Army returned from the grave to the inspiring march by the band of "Onward Christian Soldiers".

St. Andrew's Brotherhood.

The young men in the Church of the Redeemer have organized a chapter of this brotherhood and received their charter. The chapter will be duly instituted tomorrow at the afternoon service. A cordial invitation is extended to all young men to be present at that service.

St. Andrew's Brotherhood was started in 1883 by twelve young men in St. James Church, Chicago. They met on St. Andrew's Day and agreed to pray daily for the spread of Christ's Kingdom among young men, and to make an earnest effort each week to bring at least one young man within the hearing of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. These two rules of prayer and service have throughout its history characterized the brotherhood, which has spread throughout the United States and Canada, and there are also chapters in England, Scotland, and Australia. It has been the means of bringing many young men not only into the church but making them active workers in it. Dr. Johnstone is very much pleased at the organization of this chapter and his address at the afternoon service will have special reference to the work of young men for Christ.

A Free Race.

Every good citizen of Plainfield believes in the Watchung avenue extension, and hopes our city fathers will see that a beautiful avenue runs in the Fall from the hills to the mountains.

Love is doing all possible to bring business to that beautiful avenue by offering immense bargains in wall-paper which he sells as low as five cents, while some beautiful embossed gold papers are offered on the bargain counter at ten cents.

In fact Love says he will give his goods away to bring people there, and offers a fine Remington wheel to the largest purchaser of wall-paper, carpets, rugs, paints and oils before June 1. Why don't you try to win the prize? It is a free race open to all.

Miss Annie Negley of Monroe, N. Y., is visiting friends in this city.

Mrs. Julia Lytel and daughter of Newark are visiting relatives in Plainfield.

Henry Talmadge of Netherwood is registered at the Arlington Hotel, Washington.

Louis C. J. Randolph of Evona, who has been ill with the grip some time, is improving.

Mrs. Mabel VanBon Thoesen and Anna Valkwar of Brooklyn are visiting friends on Liberty street.

Andrew Milligan of Lansdowne, Hunterdon County, is visiting his sister-in-law, Mrs. Milligan of West Fourth street.

Frederick L. DuBois, son of L. H. DuBois of 1104 Putnam avenue, died Friday, March 22, at Thomasville, Ga. He was about 19 years old.

Dr. Ard, the eye specialist of Watchung avenue, successfully performed a critical operation on the three-year-old daughter of W. R. Mosher of 416 East Front street.

THE CLARKSON WILL.

Endows the Jennie Clarkson Home for Children.

LIFE INTERESTS HELD IN TRUST.

Mayor Gilbert and Ex-Mayor Randolph Executors—$5,000 to Y. M. C. A. and $3,000 to Muhlenberg Hospital.

The will and codicil of William B. Clarkson, late of this city, were filed for probate in New York Saturday. Mr. Clarkson gives to the Baptist Home Society $5,000, to the Baptist Ministers' Home Society of West Farms $5,000, to the Young Men's Christian Association of Plainfield $2,000, to the Muhlenberg Hospital of Plainfield $3,000, and to Rev. Frank B. Morse, D. D., $2,000. He gives to his wife, Annie E. Clarkson, in trust one-half of the residue of his estate. The other half is to be held in trust for his sister, Mary V. Ayers.

The Jennie Clarkson Baptist Orphanage was incorporated in 1893. Mr. Clarkson directs that in case the name of this corporation is legally changed to the Jennie Clarkson Home for Children, it shall receive his residuary estate subject to the life estates of his wife and sister, half to be paid over upon the death of either the wife or sister, and the other half upon the death of the survivor. If the name is not changed the will provides that Rev. Frank B. Morse, D. D., Rev. Robert S. MacArthur, D. D., Lewis V. F. Randolph of Plainfield, Thompson E. F. Randolph, and Alexander Gilbert of Plainfield, perfect the organization of a benevolent corporation to be known as the Jennie Clarkson Home for Children, to receive all the residue of the estate, subject to the life estates of the testator's wife and sister. The executors are ex-Mayor Randolph and Mayor Gilbert.

THE PRESS WAS RIGHT.

The Court Decides as It Held, in the Tingley-Runyon Case.

The Tingley-Runyon litigation apparently reached the final stage yesterday, when Judge McCormick handed down his decision that the verdict in the trespass case entitled Mrs. Tingley to costs of suit. The first suit was brought to recover a few inches of land. The case was tried in the Supreme Court and Mrs. Tingley was successful. The next case was brought in the Common Pleas Court for cutting some trees on those few inches of land and in that case Mr. Runyon called for a jury of view. The jury under the charge of the Sheriff came to Plainfield and inspected the premises and then heard the evidence and arguments of counsel and charge of the Court and decided in Mrs. Tingley's favor, fixing her damages at one hundred dollars.

The Press, in reporting the verdict, stated that it carried costs. Statements to the contrary appeared in other newspapers. The Press, as usual, was right, as the Court decided yesterday. It was the closest kind of a question and necessitated what was practically a third trial. Yesterday Craig A. Marsh, the successful counsel in all three cases, was granted an order to enter up judgment in favor of Mrs. Tingley with all costs.

THE RULE GRANTED.

Contesting the Accounts of the Conklin Estate.

The Orphans Court, after taking time to consider the matter, Saturday decided to grant a rule requiring Sarah Conklin's executor to appear and show cause why his account should not be reopened on the ground of alleged fraud. The papers were placed in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Moffett, and the hearing is to take place in Elizabeth April 12.

An Appreciative Groom.

The editor of The Railroad Employe has been getting married, and in his paper's account of it says: "The bride is a beautiful woman, and her charms were enhanced."

Newark Trolley to Elizabeth.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new trolley line along the Newark boulevard to Elizabeth, and it is expected that cars will be running by April 15. There will be through cars from any point on the Broad street line to Elizabeth.

—Several Plainfielders expect to attend a reception at the Cranford opera house Easter week.

—The hand scraper is being used to good advantage by Street Commissioner Mosher's men on Park avenue.

—Howard Starrett, ventriloquist, caricaturist and shadowgraphist, with other artists, will appear at the Monroe Avenue Chapel entertainment Tuesday, April 2, at 8 p. m.

—Robert Rushmore of Grant avenue has purchased a fine Hambletonian trotter with a strain of Trilby, and the boys of Club-car Evona hope her kicking propensities will be slight.

—Owing to the illness of the carpenter, the work on the carriers room in the postoffice has been somewhat delayed, and it will yet be several days before it is ready for occupancy.

—A generous-hearted gentleman who does not want his identity known, is having the gutters paved with blue-stone flags in front of Trinity Church property, and abating the nuisance of a mud hole so long an annoyance.

SCHEMES TO WIN POPULARITY.

The New President of France Rapidly Becoming a Public Idol.

Felix Faure, the new President of the French Republic, rose up to his high office from a tanner's apprentice. He is proud of this. Always above his desk he keeps a picture of himself in his tanner's togs. This interesting picture was taken when he was nineteen years of age.

Felix Faure is in many ways the cleverest President the French Republic has yet had. He is up to all sort of tricks and devices and snares to get popularity and keep it.

Courtesy and kindness of heart are two of the chief characteristics of the people of France, and flattery has always been one of the strongest cards a French statesman or politician could play. With hardly an exception the French Presidents have prided themselves upon their diplomacy with the people.

Of all the Chief Executives, however, Felix Faure, the new President of France is now seen to be the greatest diplomat. The Parisian populace—and indeed the people of the provinces—are rapidly raising him to the pinnacle of hero worship. In France it takes, oftentimes, but an unimportant incident, perhaps only an apt phrase or two, to put a man upon the pedestal of popularity. Felix Faure is making his place secure in the hearts of the French people by a thousand and one little acts and speeches of this sort.

In France the President's official life is dependent upon the wind that listeth. Upon the support that is given him by the Deputies the fate of his ministry and himself hangs. An adverse vote or want of confidence may force him to resign at any time. With Faure the situation is particularly critical, for, elected by a small majority, he has all the Radical influence opposed to him, and the chances of a powerful cabal against any ministry he may name.

A man thoroughly of the people, who has come up from the ranks, President Faure well understands the manner of the men and women he is dealing with. His very first official act after taking his seat as President was most significant. With the aid of his friends in the Chamber, he had a general amnesty law passed for all condemned up to Jan. 28, for crimes or plots against the internal safety of the State, for the political offenders of the press, and for those concerned in electoral frauds. This act was made sweeping in its provisions, and under it a host of political exiles and refugees—notable among them Henri Rochefort—re-entered France.

Since then he has gone even further. Just within the past ten days he has decided to extend the amnesty law to cover the five hundred or more suits now pending against Paris coachmen for petty infractions of the statutes. His good will and clemency do not stop here even, and it is quite probable that through his influence the charges will be dismissed against a large number of writers condemned for offenses against public morality.

This is one of the ways in which the new president is rapidly and effectively winning a secure place in the hearts of the people. He is making even more friends by his charities and his acts of benevolence. Though his official duties are many and pressing, he is devoting his entire time on Thursday mornings to works of charity. Among his first acts on being elected president was the gift to the poor of Paris of 20,000 francs and 1,500 francs to the poor of Havre, his native city.

Another conspicuous bid for popularity was his gift of a large sum of money for wine with which the officers and men at the barracks might drink his health.

During the recent severe weather, which has thrown the Parisian poor into a state of unexampled suffering, he and Mme. Faure distributed large sums of money for the relief of the needy through the Assistance Publique and the mayors of various provincial cities as well. They also made many personal donations of food and clothing.

An Englishman's Geography.

"So you propose to make a tour through the United States, my boy," said Englishman No. 1 to Englishman No. 2, as they sat together in a London club room.

"Yes, I'm going to make a hurried trip through the States."

"What parts of the country are you going to visit?"

"Well, I shall land in the city of New Hampshire and give the town a pretty thorough visit. Then I shall sail up the Georgia river to Denver and visit its famous university. Then I shall put in a few weeks in the great forests of Cincinnati, hunting the antelope. I expect to make a trip across the vast prairies of Rhode Island and shoot an elephant or two. After that I shall winter in Bar Harbor and study American society among its most select representatives. Early in the spring I shall hire a guide and go on a fishing excursion up the California river into the lakes of Chicago."

"Going to visit New York?"

"Don't know as I shall get so far as that."

No Patience With Bunglers.

"H'mph!" ejaculated Fellaire (formerly Rusty Rufus), eyeing the wayworn pilgrim who had called at his kitchen door, "hungry, are you?"

"Yes'r," humbly answered the pilgrim. "I ain't had anything to eat fur"—

"That'll do," interrupted Fellaire. "If you'd had sense enough to wipe off the egg that's sticking to your mouth I wouldn't know you'd had a feed not ten minutes ago and I'd give you a good hand out and a couple of shiners. Now you get away from here and don't you come back till you've learned the business better. These blamed amateurs," added Fellaire, tossing a dime at him, "make me tired!"

With Malice Toward None.

Wiggles—Why did they call it a charitable concert, do you think?

Waggles—I don't know. Possibly because it is so often necessary to be charitable toward the performers.—Somerville Journal.

Better Than No Excuse.

"What is the meaning of this, Mary? This is the second time I have found a policeman in the kitchen."

"Lor, mum! I'm so afraid of the beetles."—Pall Mall Budget.

Salaries of Two Officials.

The superintendent of the poor farm of Barton County gets $152 a year and the county physician $137.—Kansas City Star.

HOW CONGRESS DIES.

SCENES OF DISGUSTING REVELRY AMID THE MAKERS OF LAWS.

A Prolonged Saturnalia, and Pandemonium Presided. Committee Rooms Are Made Bars and Disreputable Persons Join With Congressmen.

The closing scenes of every Congress are marked by incidents more or less emotional—sometimes exasperating, pathetic, disgusting.

No one who witnessed the going out of the late Congress at twelve o'clock Monday, March 4, will be likely to forget the impressive picture presented during the closing hours. It is a fact that nothing like it has been seen since the exit of the memorable body that was retired by the people on account of the "salary grab."

Congress drew its final official breath amid a wild saturnalia. Champagne flowed like water. Committee rooms became temporary brothels. Women of ill repute swarmed the corridors and sang songs in the public restaurants with inebriated Congressmen in the small hours of the morning between roll calls. Members staggered between their places and the bottle.

It was Sunday. The church bells were ringing out the usual invitation to divine worship and their silvery sounds floated upon the shimmering sunshine that bathed the nation's capital. The benign Goddess of Peace, from her snowy dome seemed to look down upon a nation and to bless and hallow it. The doors of the churches were wide open, and the streets were full of well dressed people. All business had ceased in accordance with custom and law. But these people were not going to church. If the surpliced priests, thus deserted by their congregations, could have seen what was going on beneath that stately mask of purity and peace they might have preached sermons that would have been heard from one end of the country to the other.

Congress had sat through the greater part of the night before. Congress was on its last legs, and so overburdened was it with the sudden weight of the public business that it staggered under it. In fact, some of Congress had not only staggered during the night, but had actually fallen.

And so it happened that at the very moment the church bells were merrily ringing the public business had settled down to a hard liquor basis, and the committee tables were groaning with plain Congressional drunks.

Against this attraction the churches played to poor business.

Given the holy Sabbath, the last day of Congress and wide open bars at both ends of the Capitol, and you have the foundation for any amount of excitement amusement and private instruction. On such an occasion nearly every committee room is a barroom, though its ministrations are confined to select parties of committeemen and their friends, male and female.

"I have seventy-five dozen glasses out," said Tom Murrey, the disgusted caterer of the House restaurant. "That tells the story of the committee rooms better than any words I could utter. The capacity of this House for liquor is something astonishing. I am simply and purely a head barkeeper; the restaurant end of it is nothing but a cheap lower Broadway lunch stand. I feel degraded myself and that I have unwittingly degraded a noble calling. I never kept bar before and would not accept this position again if I were offered $25,000 a year above my expenses. I might as well be a dive keeper on Sixth avenue, New York, with a pull with the police! This Congress is never hungry; it is always thirsty. It is overstocking this House with eatables to furnish more than a loaf of bread to a gallon of whiskey."

Rarely was there ever at the Capitol on closing day such a vast and variegated crowd. Men women and children; statesmen, politicians, strangers, citizens, working people, lobbyists, bums, Sunday school children, fast women, government officials, great and small; a motley concourse ten thousand strong.

The galleries are packed hours before the time set for the expiration of the recess of the night session begun a few hours previously. The corridors swarm with the populace in Sunday clothes. The rotunda presents a curious picture of an uneasy, shifting crowd, in the absence of other occupation gazing at the frescoes under the dome and criticising the historic paintings on the circular walls. Long rows of surplus expectants are coiled in the upper corridors at every gallery door.—New York Herald.

A Kindly Warning.

A little girl in Washington, in saying her prayers the other night, was told to pray for her father and mother, who are both very ill, and for one of the servants who had lost her husband. She did as instructed, and concluded her petition with these words: "And now, O God, take good care of yourself, because if anything should happen to you we would all go to pieces. Amen."

Useless.

Watts—I see that some one has invented an automatic cradle for rocking the baby. I wonder if it would be an infringement if a fellow were to get up an automatic spanking machine?

Potts—It wouldn't be an infringement, but neither would it sell. What satisfaction could an outraged parent get out of a mere machine?

Fishing Tackle.

The daughter was going over her father's fishing tackle, straightening it up for him to be ready for the spring campaign, when she came across a corkscrew.

"Why, mamma," she exclaimed, "what's this for?"

"Um!" sniffed mamma, "I guess that's a hook to catch bait with."—Detroit Free Press.

The Punishment Was Postponed.

"Katie," sternly exclaimed the little girl's father at the breakfast table, "you are too noisy! I shall certainly have to punish you."

"Well, there ain't anybody holdin' you, is there?" said Katie, with flashing eye and quivering lip.—Chicago Tribune.

When Bedtime Comes Too Soon.

The clocks don't know their A B C's,
And so they cannot spell;
But yet they count much more than I,
And seem to count quite well.

But what good so much counting does
I'd really like to know!—
Just sending people off to bed
Before they want to go.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.
From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

R

I

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. Now as to the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

P

A

N

S

T

A

B

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

U

L

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

E

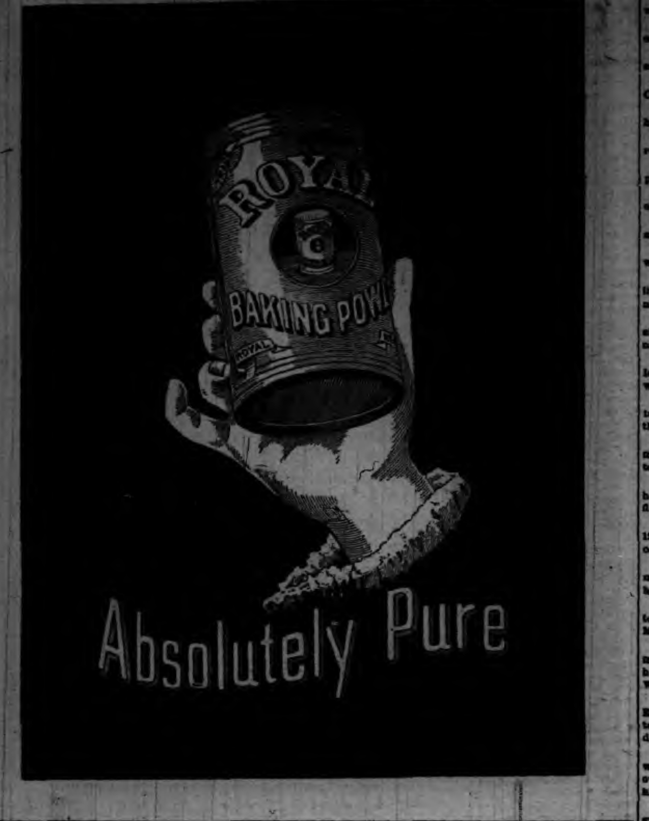
S

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 Spruce St., New York.

MEN WANTED [illegible]



LAST CHANCE GONE.

Plainfield Bowlers Will Not Get the County Championship.

The bowling game between Plainfield and Cranford last night on the Board of Trade alleys was devoid of particularly good playing, though the bowlers were considerably enthused over the games. The first game was won by Plainfield by 20 points and the second by Cranford by 15 points.

In the absence of Capt. VanEmburgh, James Petrie bowled in his stead.

The loss of one of these games practically ends the chances of the Plainfield bowlers to finish first in the county section of the Elizabeth Journal League, the winner of which is to play the winner of the Elizabeth city section, and the county championship decided on the play off. From present prospects Roselle will probably finish first in the county section.

The score follows:

FIRST GAME.

PLAINFIELD.		CRANFORD.
Petrie	137	Sharp	154
VanAlstyne	171	Wilber	144
Wilbur	161	Rogers	155
Maltby	149	Pace	152
Vail	161	Cox	154
	779		759

SECOND GAME.

PLAINFIELD.		CRANFORD.
Petrie	141	Sharp	156
VanAlstyne	157	Wilber	153
Wilbur	148	Rogers	156
Maltby	130	Pace	146
Vail	172	Cox	152
	748		763

Tantalizing Hoodlums.

Considerable excitement was rife on Madison avenue near Front street last night at 7, when two young hoodlums broke the street sign of A. Wolf, a Hebrew tailor, and otherwise tantalized the hapless foreigner so that he gave chase and finally caught the youngest. As soon as he grabbed hold of him the captive's comrade struck Wolf a terrible blow on the side of the face, with the result of both escaping and making their disappearance.

A gang of hoodlums have for some time taken particular delight in making as much trouble as possible for Wolf, who conducts his business in a peaceable manner in a small building on Madison avenue, between Front and Second streets, by breaking windows, tearing down signs, etc. If caught by the police they will doubtless be dealt severely with.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills Cure Sick Headache.

At all druggists', 25c.

SICK HEADACHE is usually caused by indigestion. If you take Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills, you won't have sick headache.

Send to us for a free sample.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO., Kingston, New York.

HYMENEAL.

Adams—Kurzhals.

A charming home wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Kurzhals, 110 West Second street, when their daughter, Miss Emma Kurzhals, was married to Arthur G. Adams.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis at 7:30. The bride was gowned in white silk crepon, trimmed with white moire ribbons, and the bridesmaid wore a gown of white trimmed with white satin ribbons.

Harvey Thorne was best man, and Miss Anna Kingston bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams received a large number of handsome and useful presents, one of which was a dining room set of furniture from the groom's friends in the Jersey City office of the Jersey Central Railroad, where the groom has an excellent position.

Among those who witnessed the ceremony were the following: Mr and Mrs F J Sauermann and family, Bayonne; Mr and Mrs Decker, Elizabeth; Mrs Lequay, German Valley; Mrs Kiaffer and Miss Shultz, Long Island; Mr and Mrs H B Kurzhals, Westfield; John Porr, New York city; Mrs Kershaw, Greenville; Mr and Mrs P A VanFleet, Miss May VanFleet, Mr and Mrs Kingston and family, Mrs. Zeiss and family, Mr and Mrs Kesselring and family, the Misses VanDeventer, E H Clevely, Mr and Mrs Samuel C Terry, Sr, J H Adams, Samuel C Terry, Jr, Miss Rosa Adams, Mr and Mrs Ackerman and family, Theodore A Kurzhals, Jr, and others.

Mr. and Mrs Adams left on the 9:37 train for Washington and the South. They will probably visit Richmond before their return.

FOUNTAIN STAYS IN.

North Plainfield Town Committee Getting Down to Business.

Frank Mobus, chairman, R. M. Fountain, treasurer, Elias Allen, and Clerk H. J. Martin, North Plainfield Township Committee, met at Demler's Hotel last evening.

R. M. Fountain qualified as treasurer, and it was decided that according to the last law passed he was entitled to his seat in the Township Committee, as was stated in The Press yesterday.

The Commissioners of Appeal, Charles Mooney, Philip H. Acker, and Amos Vail, also qualified; and the bonds of the treasurer and Constables G. N. Stewart and J. W. Van Horn were accepted.

The bonds of the collector were reduced from $15,000 to $5,000; treasurer, from $7,500 to $3,000; and overseer of poor from $500 to $200. The constables' bonds remain the same, $500.

W. B. Codington was chosen township counsel. The committee adjourned to meet Saturday evening at 8, at the same place.

A PALACE OF BARGAINS.

Plainfield's Biggest Mercantile Show Opened to the Public.

For the past week the employes of Edsall's Commercial Palace have been constantly at work arranging for the opening of their annual Spring sale, and this morning the scene presented at the store was one of activity and beauty. A Daily Press reporter visited this establishment at noon today, and wending his way through the various departments was struck with the enterprise of its proprietor in providing such opportunities as are usually only found in metropolitan stores.

The three large display windows, filled with cut glass, bric-a-brac, dress goods, spring novelties and shoes are arranged with such taste as to attract the eye of all passers-by. Entering the store, with two little colored boys in blue suits and brass buttons to open the doors, the vision is greeted with two large lace arches, trimmed with a combination of Japanese lanterns and flowers. Turning to the right one meets the perfumery counter, the contents of which diffuse a fragrance all through the store. Going from here down through the main centre aisle, by picking your way through the crowds of customers that have been attracted there by the full-page advertisement published exclusively in The Press, the visitor's eyes see a profusion of varied colored bunting and ribbons strung across from counter to counter, the side decorations being a display of goods from the department which they front.

The grand staircase leading to the lower floor is arched over with bunting, supplemented with palms and lanterns. Two arches at the entrance of the underwear and suiting department composed of red, white and blue bunting, effect to make a pretty scene, while on the other side of the stairway lace curtains, silks and velvets set off the upholstery department to good advantage. Adjoining is the white goods department, and with its bright tints of wash goods relieves the sombre colors of the woollen goods.

The millinery department is resplendent with Easter bonnets, trimmed in a manner that pleases the feminine visitor.

Having viewed the first floor the visitor descends to the basement, and the first thing he views is a glittering spectacle of Bohemian cut glass, of fancy colors, arranged in a pyramid at the foot of the steps and shown off by lighted lamps.

In the grocery, woodenware and carpet departments everything is arranged with a neatness and novelty that completes the dazzling scene observed on the floor above.

The decorations were made under the supervision of Sidney Westmore, who is the buyer for all departments on the first floor.

—To manufacture vanilla and peptone is the purpose of the Elizabeth Chemical Company of which Cullen T. Pond of Plainfield is an incorporator.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

H. G. Thomas is confined to his room with an attack of lumbago.

John Schenck of the borough has recovered from an attack of grip.

Mark Schoenlin has moved from Somerset street to 16 Linden avenue.

Editor D. D. Clark of The Dunellen Call was in town today on business.

Dr. Charles E. Thiers is confined to his home on Grove street with the grip.

Rev. Hobart Clark will take up his residence on East Sixth street April 1.

Mrs. E. R. Hannigan of 15 Prospect place moved yesterday to 3 Craig place.

Lewis Brown of Prospect place has changed his residence to 25 Craig place.

Johnston Barber of Fanwood will move Thursday to Netherwood avenue.

Editor Hugh Boyd of the New Brunswick Home News was in town yesterday.

Rev. Mr. Miller of Brooklyn will deliver a sermon in Holy Cross Church tonight.

John Fellows and family of Grove street will move tomorrow to 1108 Putnam avenue.

John Henry Ross of North Branch has leased the house 29 Park place, where he will move April 1.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Vessey have returned to this city from a pleasant trip through the South.

E. C. Searing and family yesterday removed from Hart's flats on Park avenue to 520 West Fifth street.

Miss Anna Searing is confined to her home on Madison with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

J. A. Hasbrouck will move Friday from 19 to 128 Grove street into the house now occupied by John Fellows.

Fred Moffett of 4 Mercer avenue will move Friday to 26 Duer street, into the house just vacated by J. C. Martin.

Miss Julia Lytel returned yesterday to her home in Newark, after a visit with Mrs. George Vroom of Somerset street.

Albert Johnston of Scotch Plains has moved to 110 Netherwood avenue into the house formerly occupied by Walter C. Williams.

Hon. E. R. Pope and wife and Mulford Estil are booked for Honeyman's 41-day tour in California, which starts Thursday, April 11.

Brereton Clapp of Waynewood place wears a smile on his countenance today over the advent of a little brother into his family last night.

William P. Reed of Newark was the guest yesterday of his brother-in-law, F. M. Masker. He likes Plainfield so well that he is thinking of settling here.

On account of the illness of Wm. Stewart of West Fifth street the contemplated removal of Mr. Stewart and his mother to Somerville has been postponed till April 1.

Pierre Mall and family of Plainfield and New York were among the cabin passengers on the steamship Majestic, which sailed yesterday for Liverpool. They intend making a short European tour, and will return June 1 to their country-seat, East Front street, where they will spend the balance of the Summer. Mrs. Mall is the daughter of the late John Taylor Johnston.

The Best in Headwear, at Edsall's.

Edsall's millinery department, in charge of Miss Gayton, had its Spring opening this morning, and the gentler sex all say that is the place to patronize if one wants to be pleased both in designs and price.

The tasteful array of hats and bonnets for women's wear is enough in itself to please the most fastidious, but when one views the dainty trifles for the little ones, one longs to be young once more—so tempting is the arrangement of delicate tulle, flowers, laces and ribbons.

Dreier—Krone.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Sarah Krone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abr. Krone of Brooklyn, to Garrett Dreier of this city. The ceremony will take place Tuesday afternoon, April 2, at 5, at Posch Gallery, 345 Classon avenue, near Greene avenue, Brooklyn. A reception will be held in the evening at 8

THERE is but one way in the world to be sure of having the best paint, and that is to use only a well-established brand of strictly pure white lead, pure linseed oil, and pure colors.*

The following brands are standard, "Old Dutch" process, and are always absolutely

Strictly Pure White Lead

"Atlantic," "Jewett," "Brooklyn."

* If you want colored paint, tint any of the above strictly pure leads with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

CARPETS

Made and Laid With Paper Without Charge

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.

are making and laying Carpets with paper without charge, which is a saving of 15c per yd.

Parties about going to housekeeping will find no larger stock of Parlor Suits and Bedroom Suits to select from at such low prices. All of the latest Spring styles of Bedroom Suits of the Hall & Lyon manufacture, and Parlor Suits of all the latest manufactures and of the latest designs and coverings.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

All other goods suitable to furnish a house with in our line are sold at the lowest prices. Terms easy; one dollar per week.

The Portland Range!

The Court of Errors has just unanimously affirmed the opinion of the lower courts that no other dealer can take any range and put the name Portland on it and try to hoodwink the people that they are selling the original Portland Range, when such is not the case. 7,000 of these ranges now in use and not one complaint. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Goods delivered to all parts of the State free of charge.

Storing Furniture

Our new building just erected at 88, 90, 92 Bank street, seems to be the only building in the State to store furniture, the way it is being filled up. Furniture moved with vans at reasonable rates in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

A Newsboy with Whiskers.

James H. Davis, minus one leg, is about the city today soliciting alms by presenting a piece of poetry termed "The Newsboy's Appeal". The "newsboy" has whiskers on his chin, and says he wants to engage in business in Plainfield.

—Wm. H. VanWinkle of Park place never gets left on raising early vegetables. He planted his peas last Saturday.

—A useful ornament adorns the wall of the ladies' private sanctum in the postoffice, one of the pretty calendars, with fire-alarm box locations, issued by The Daily Press.

—Wm. Hand & Son today moved C.D. Purdy from Westervelt avenue to 186 North avenue; Rev. Cornelius Schenck from East Second to his new house on West Front street; and H. O. Howell from East Third street to Westervelt avenue.

—The letter-carriers room in the Plainfield postoffice is now ready for occupancy during the carriers' leisure moments. All the furnishings of the room were donated by merchants of this city, and thanks to their generosity the carriers have very comfortable quarters.

—Samuel H. P. Meigs, who dropped dead in New York Monday, formerly lived on West Fifth street, Plainfield.

—The store on West Front street occupied by the Sherman Outfitting Company is receiving a coat of paint.

—Gavett's is the only place in Plainfield to buy the greatest gas burner ever invented, the Welsbach. If you give him an order to put one in your library you will not let him take it out. Call and see it burning at his crystal palace, East Front street.

—Mr. Tuller, special agent of the Orient Insurance Company, paid Edward Campbell the full amount of the policy on his furniture destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. The loss was paid by check in full, Friday. Lyman & Petrie were the agents.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. Baldridge, Millersville, Ill. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

—Pharmacist Leggett has provided a most complete and convenient junior postoffice in his drug store, Park avenue and Front street.

—The boys connected with the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will hereafter meet Thursday afternoons in addition to the other afternoons.

—Charles Matthews is having his driveway covered with crushed stone, and is making other improvements on his property, corner of Grove street and Prospect place.

—A meeting of all boys interested will be held in the small hall of the Y. M. C.A. Building, Saturday morning at 9, at which time a Junior Bicycle Club will be formed. Officers will be elected. A full attendance is desired.

—A rich treat is offered the lovers of high-class entertainment in the series of Shakespearean, Dickens and Sheridan recitals announced by the Circle of King's Daughters (young daughters of the King, Washington Park) to be given by Charles F. Underhill, who excels as a monologue impersonator. He gives condensations of whole plays, entirely from memory, with dramatic force.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

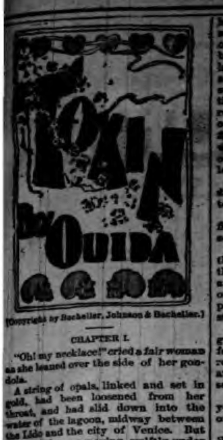
I suffered terribly from roaring in my head during an attack of catarrh, and became very deaf, used Ely's Cream Balm and in three weeks could hear as well as ever.—A. E. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from the nose. Physicians prescribed without benefit. After using Ely's Cream Balm a short time the disease was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

Fifty Dollars Given Away.

To raisers of poultry, the most wonderful and valuable monthly is The Poultry Keeper. The publishers offer fifty dollars free. Send for sample copy free and see how. Any of the following back numbers worth a dollar but sent post-paid for only five cents each: Brooders Incubators, Appliances, Poultry Houses (Illus) Aug. '89 Aug. '94. Worth $25. Poultry Houses, April '9[illegible], Oct. '93 and July '91 (60 illus). Preserving eggs, Sep. '91. Turkeys, Mar. '91. Poultry diseases Nov. '87. How to Feed for Eggs, Oct. '91. All About Lice, Oct. '87, Dec. '91. Feeding Eggs, June '91 and June '93. How to Make the Hot Water Incubator July '92. Sample free. Address The Poultry Keeper Co., Parkesburg, Pa.



[Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

CHAPTER I.

"Oh! my necklace!" cried a fair woman as she leaned over the side of her gondola.

A string of opals, linked and set in gold, had been loosened from her throat, and had slid down into the water of the lagoon, midway between the Lido and the city of Venice. But the gondola was moving swiftly under the impulsion of a rower fore and aft, and, though they stopped a few moments after at her cry, the spot where it had fallen was already passed and left behind. She was vexed and provoked. She had many jewels, but the opal necklace was an heirloom, and of fine and curious workmanship. The gondoliers did their best to find it, but in vain. They were in the deeper water of the sailing roads, which were marked out by the lines of poles, and the necklace, a slight thing, had been borne away by the current setting in from the open sea.

Neither of the men could swim; many Venetians cannot; but they got over the side, and waded up to their waists in the water, and with their oars struck and sounded the sandy bottom; but the lagoon, which has been the grave of so many, kept the drowned opals.

"We will go back and send divers," she said to her men who, wet to their waists, were well content to turn the head of the gondola back to the city. They wore white clothes with red sashes and red ribbons round their straw hats; they were in her private service; they steered quickly home again over the calm waterway, and in and out the crowded craft by the Schiavone past the customs house, and S. Giorgio and the Salvature, until they reached a palace on the Grand canal, which was their mistress' residence, with poles painted red and white, with coronets on their tops, marking the landing stairs in the old Venetian fashion.

"I have lost my opals in the water!" she cried to a friend who was on one of the balconies of the first floor.

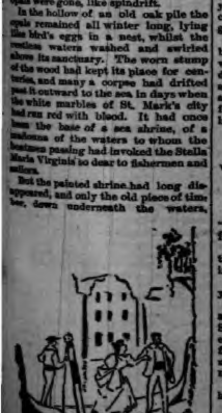
"I am glad you have lost them," replied her friend. "They are pierres de malheur."

"Nonsense! They were beautiful, and they were Ninetta Laranigra's, poor Carlo's great-great-grandmother; they were one of her nuptial presents a hundred years ago. Her portrait hangs in the Belle Arte. She was beautiful, and had a tragic fate. I must have the men dive and dredge till they are found. The water is so shallow. I cannot think how they have vanished so completely in such a moment of time."

On the morrow, when it was known through Venice that the rich and generous Countess Laranigra had lost her jewels, all the best divers hurried to the place where it had dropped and worked sedulously from daybreak to find it, sailors and fishermen and boatmen all joining in the search, in hope to merit the reward she promised. But no one of them succeeded. Their efforts were useless. The tenacious water would not yield up its prey. The opals were gone, like spindrift.

In the hollow of an old oak pile the opals remained all winter long, lying like bird's eggs in a nest, whilst the restless waters washed and swirled above its sanctuary. The worn stump of the wood had kept its place for centuries, and many a corpse had drifted past it outward to the sea in days when the white marbles of St. Mark's city had run red with blood. It had once been the base of a sea shrine, of a madonna of the waters to whom the boatmen passing had invoked the Stella Maria Virginis so dear to fishermen and sailors.

But the painted shrine had long disappeared, and only the old piece of timber, down underneath the waters, rooted in the sand amongst the ribbon weed and mussels, had had power to resist the forces of the tide and tempest. All the winter long the old pile kept the opals safe and sound.



"I'VE LOST MY OPALS IN THE WATER."

But one day, when the peach and pear and plum trees had in turn burst into blossom on the isles, and the flocks of gulls who had survived the stress of famine and cold had returned to their feeding places on the outer lagoons, a barge from ship coming from the Black sea gave a rude shock in passing to the old oak pile; the top of it under the blow parted and fell asunder; the necklace was washed out of its hiding place, and, carried in the heavy trough of the steamer's path, was floated ashore up the creeks into the long grasses and reeds beneath the Devil's bridge at Torcello. The yellow water iris was then flowering, and two little reed warblers were nesting amongst the flags, as the opals were drifted up under some hemlock leaves and there rested.

"I think they are eggs, but they are all strung together," said the warbler to his mate.

"They look more like the spawn of a fish," said the little winged lady, with scorn.

A water rat came up and smelt at them, then went away disdainfully—they were not good to eat. For birds and beasts do not care for jewels; it is only humanity, which thinks itself superior to them, which sees any value in stones, and calls such toys precious.

There is nowhere in the world any grass richer than that of Torcello, and forget-me-nots, honeysuckles, and wild roses grow down to the water's edge and around the hoary stones of the deserted isle.

"What a God-forgotten place!" said a young man as he sprang from a boat on to the bank by the bridge.

"Torcello was the mother of Venice; the daughter has slain her;" replied an older man as he laid down his oars in the boat, and prepared to follow his companion.

His foot trod amongst the hemlock leaves and was entangled by them; he stooped, and his eyes, which were very keen, caught sight of the string of opals.

"A woman's necklace!" he said, as he drew it from under the salt seaweed and the dewy dock leaves. It was discolored, and had sand and mud on it, and bore little traces of its former beauty, but he recognized that it was a jewel of worth; he perceived, even dulled as they were, that the stones were opals.

"What have you there?" cried the younger man from above on the bank. "The skull of an archimandrite?"

The other threw the necklace upon the grass.

"You would have been a fitter finder of a woman's collar than I."

"Opals! The stones of sorrow!" said the younger man, gravely, as he raised it and brushed off the sand. "It has been beautiful," he added. "It will be so again. It is not really hurt, only a little bruised and tarnished."

"Lend me your glass," said the younger man. The glass was of strong magnifying power. When it was handed to him he looked through it at some little marks on the back of the clasp of the opal collar. "Laranigra, 1775," he read aloud. "Laranigra, is a Venetian name.

"There is a Ca' Laranigra on the Grand canal. It is next to the Laredan. You admired its Moorish windows on the second story this morning. Carlo Laranigra died young. He has a widow who is only twenty now. She was a daughter of the duke of Monfalcone, a family of the Trentino, but pure Italians in blood. Their place is in the mountains above Garizia. It must be she who owns this necklace, an heirloom, probably."

"Take it to her," said the finder of it, with indifference. "I cede you my rights."

The younger laughed.

"Ah! who knows what they may become?"

"Whatever they may become they are yours. I do not appreciate that kind of reward."

"Really?" said the younger man. "If so I pity you!"

"Nay; I pity you," said the elder.

The young man still stood with the opals in his hands; with a whisp of grass he had cleared the sand in a measure off them; the pearly softness and the roseate flame of the stone began to show here and there; two alone of their number were missing.

"Come," said his companion, with impatience. "Put that broken rubbish in your pocket and let us go and see the cathedral and S. Fosca, for it will soon grow dark."

They went, without visiting the basilica, back to Venice in the twilight which deepened into night as they drew near the city; the moon was high and the air still. They dined in the spacious rooms set aside in the hotel for Andreis. When the dinner was over he rose.

"Will you come?" he asked.

"Where?" asked Damer.

"To the Ca' Laranigra," said Andreis, with a boyish laugh.

"Not I," replied Damer.

"A rivederci, then," said Andreis.

But he lingered a moment.

"It will not be fair to you," he said, "for me to take the credit of having found this necklace."

"Whatever honor there may be in the salvage I cede it, I tell you, willingly."

"Of course I shall tell her that it was you."

"There is no need to do so; I am not a squire of dames. She will prefer a Sicilian prince to a plain man of science. However, you must find the lady first. The true owner lies under some moss-grown slab in some chapel crypt, no doubt."

"Why will you speak of death? I hate it."

"Hate it as you may, it will overtake you."

He looked at his companion as he spoke, and thought what he did not speak:

"Yes; strong as you are, and young as you are, and fortunate as you are, you too will die like the pauper and the cripple and the beggar!"

The reflection gratified him; for of the youth, of the beauty, of the fortune, he was envious, and with all his scorn of higher intellect he despised the childlike, happy, amorous temperament, and the uncultured mind, which went with them.

"If I had only his wealth," he thought often. "Or if he only had my knowledge!"

The sun was setting behind the Istrian hills, and they depended on their own oars to take them back to Venice in the rose-hued dusk, and a few seconds later the splash of the canal water beneath the balcony told his companion that the gondola was moving.

It was twelve o'clock when into the empty brilliantly lighted room Andreis entered and came across it to where Damer sat on the balcony.

"I have found her!" he said, with joyous triumph. The moonlight shone on his dark, starry eyes, his laughing mouth, his tall figure, full of grace and strength like the form of the Greek Hermes in the Vatican.

Damer laid aside his papers with impatience.

"And she has welcomed you, apparently? It is midnight and you look victorious."

Andreis made a gesture of vexed protestation.

"Pray do not suspect such things. I sent in my card and begged her majordomo to say I had found her necklace. She sent word for me to go upstairs that she might thank me. Of course my name was known to her. She had a duenna. It was all solemn and correct. She was enchanted to find her necklace. It was an heirloom which Laranigra gave her. He was killed in a duel, as I told you, two years ago. She is very beautiful and looks twenty years old, even less. I was very honest; I told her that an Englishman who was traveling with me had had the honor of finding the opals; and she wishes to see you tomorrow. I promised to take you in prima sera; you surely ought to be grateful."

Damer shrugged his shoulders and looked regretfully at his papers and pencils.

"WHY WILL YOU SPEAK OF DEATH?"

"Women only disturb one," he said, ungraciously.

Andreis laughed.

"It is that disturbance which perfumes our life and shakes the rose leaves over it. But I remember, to attract you a woman must be lying, dead or alive, on an operating table."

"Alive by preference," said Damer. "The dead are little use to us; their nervous system is still, like a stopped clock."

"A creature must suffer to interest you?"

"Certainly."

Andreis shuddered slightly.

"Why did you save me?"

Damer smiled.

"My dear prince, it is my duty to save when I can. I should have preferred to let you alone and study your natural powers of resistance in conflict with the destruction which was menacing them. But I could not follow my preferences. I was called in to assist your natural powers by affording them artificial resistance; and I was bound to do so."

Andreis made a grimace which signified disappointment and distaste.

"If my mother knew you looked at it in that way she would not adore you, my friend, as she does."

CHAPTER II.

Veronica Laranigra was charmed to find her necklace; she was still more charmed to find an adventure through it.

This beautiful youth with his starry eyes, soft with admiration, who had brought her back the opals, looked like a knight out of fairyland. She was young; she was weary of the seclusion of her widowhood; she was kept in close constraint by those who had authority over her; she was ready to reenter life in its enjoyments, its amusements, its affections, its desires. The tragic end of her husband had impressed and saddened her, but she had recovered from its shock. The marriage had been arranged by their respective families, and the hearts of neither had been consulted. Laranigra, however, had become much in love with her, and had left her all which it was in his power to leave, and that had been much.

"How clever it was of you to see my opals under the grass and the sand!" she said, a few minutes later, as Andreis presented Damer in the long, dim room hung with tapestries and rich in bronzes, marbles, pictures and mosaics.

She was like a picture of Caterina Cornaro as she stood on the balcony of her house; her gold hair was enclosed in a pearl-sown net, and her cloak of red satin, lined with sables, lay on her shoulders and fell to her feet like the robes of a Dogaressa; for her dead lord she had felt no regret. The balcony was filled with spiraea, whose white blossoms were like snow about her in the starlight and lamplight as the gondola which brought Andreis and his companion to her palace passed below at the water-stairs. She threw her cloak on a couch as she spoke; she was dressed in black, but the gauze sleeves of the gown showed her fair arms, and the bodice was slightly open on her bosom; her face was bright like a rose above the deep shadow of the gown; her hair had been a little ruffled by the

Continued on page 8.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists
Quality, Workmanship, and Shapes, unexcelled.
Over A MILLION Mothers, Misses, and Children, wear them.
Modern ideas of healthful dress are perfected in this Corset Waist. For sale by all leading retailers. Children's, 25c. to 75c. Misses', 50c. to $1.00. Ladies', $1.00 to $2.00.

Clerk Toms Replies.

To the Editor of The Constitutionalist—In reply to the anonymous communications in The Constitutionalist of the 21st inst., in regard to school affairs of the Township of Warren, and the election of members of the Board of Education of said township, held at the Warrenville schoolhouse, Tuesday the 19th inst, will say: The board did ask for $450, which was not in excess of the amount thought to be necessary for the current expenses of the schools for the ensuing year. By a majority of the votes cast we were allowed $300. This may be a brilliant piece of financial engineering, but of this we have our doubts, as it will necessitate the calling of a special meeting for the raising of an additional amount to meet our expenses.

The statement that there was $1,000 spent last year for books, and that there was dissatisfaction over the manner of the purchase, is, to say the least, very misleading, and made without a knowledge of the facts. The actual amount spent last year by the board for books was less than $600, which is a small amount when it is taken into consideration that there are five schools in the township, and they were all supplied with books. The statement that some scholars had eleven books may be true in a sense, if a set of bookkeeping blanks is counted as separate books. The statement that a boy seven years of age had eight books, is also true, as he carried the books of an older sister. The board was also censured, by your correspondent, for the manner of the purchase of books; without a knowledge of the truth of the matter. The books were contracted for by the Board of Education with the agents of the several book companies, at a regular meeting of the board, and a contract price agreed upon, and signed by said agents, and by the President of the Board, and attested by the District Clerk; which precludes the possibility of any member of the board making a commission on said purchase. There was over $1,000 spent. But out of this amount there was nearly $800 spent for the painting of four of the schoolhouses, over $75 for supplies, and the balance was spent for current expenses, for which the District Clerk has an itemized account, and to which he is willing to make a sworn statement at any time he is required to do so.

Hoping this statement will prove satisfactory, and have the desired effect of quieting the nerves, and relieving the mind of your anonymous correspondent; and that he may not pass any sleepless nights, I will also say we have nothing to conceal, and that the books are open to the inspection of any one interested at any time. W. Howard Toms,
District Clerk.

Warrenville, N. J., March 27, 1895.

—The Constitutionalist was named by the Governor on Wednesday as an official paper to publish the laws.

—Contractor M. Uhdal is doing a very creditable piece of work in the grading of Martine avenue and Martine court. He thoroughly understands his business, and never fails to fulfil his contracts to the letter. During his many years of residence in Plainfield he has done a large amount of grading and landscaping, all of which are a credit to him.

The personal and professional regard in which W. R. Codington is held is shown in the fact that he is now chosen town counsel for Piscataway, Fanwood and North Plainfield.

Purity of ingredients is essential in medicines, else they are apt to do more harm than good.
Allcock's
Porous Plaster
is absolutely pure. It can do no harm. It is effective. As an external remedy for pains in the chest, back or side, it is unequaled.
Let no Solicitation induce you to accept a substitute. ALLCOCK'S is absolutely the best.
Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.
Brandreth's Pills
may be taken by old and young. They simply assist nature.

ELY'S
Cream Balm
CATARRH
Is quickly absorbed.
Cleanses the Nasal Passages,
Allays Pain and Inflammation.
Heals the Sores.
Protects the Membrane from Additional Cold.
Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell.
COLD IN HEAD
IT WILL CURE. A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren st., New York.

[illegible]

Now that the frost is out of the ground, the several teamsters who haul cracked stone from the Smalley stone crusher to the different parts of the city and borough come by the way of Grove street instead of Somerset, thus avoiding the trolley tracks. Grove street would make a splendid thoroughfare to the mountains, if the borough would have the upper end of the street macadamized, which could be done at small expense.

—A special business meeting of the W.T.A.S. will be held in Reform Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

JOHNSON'S FOURTH
Auction Sale for 1895
OF HORSES,
At TAYLOR'S HOTEL, Dunellen,
Saturday, March 30
at 1 o'clock, rain or shine.
One Car Load of Western Horses, suitable for all purposes. Also a number of Jersey Horses and Mares, suitable for farm or road.
Usual credit and guarantee given to every purchaser. 3 26 4-c 1

Telephone Rates
IN PLAINFIELD.
$40, $50, $60, according to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distant equipment. Address The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North avenue Plainfield.
3 22 2w-c 2

The Pennsylvania Railroad.
The Standard Railway of America
Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.
On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:
FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 35 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.
4.57 p. m. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.
5.34 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.
8 48 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.
For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]
Sundays, [illegible]
For Baltimore only [illegible] p. m., week-days.
For Newark and New York—[illegible]
For New York only, [illegible] a. m. daily.
For Philadelphia—[illegible]
FOR ATLANTIC CITY
[illegible]
Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] p. m. weekdays.
For Rahway—[illegible]
For New Brunswick—[illegible]
For Woodbridge—[illegible] daily except Monday, [illegible]
For Perth Amboy—[illegible] daily except Monday, [illegible]
For East Millstone—[illegible] week-days.
For Trenton—[illegible]
For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]
For Flemington—[illegible]
For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.
For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible] week days.
For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible]
For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]
For Boston—[illegible] p. m., daily.
For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.
Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]
S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.
J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

Prof. A. Wehner,
TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.
ALSO VOICE CULTURE.
Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.
References given and required.
Address letters to the office of this paper.
1 21 tf-c

The Finderne,
FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.
Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.
HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.
(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.
A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.
1 9 tf

HIGHLY CONCENTRATED
MANURES
ALBERT'S Horticultural, Garden, Special Garden, Vineyard, Fruit-tree. MANURES.
No Sand. No Dirt. No Organic Matter. Nothing but Pure, Soluble, and Immediately Available Plant-Foods COMBINED with each other.
Guaranteed Analysis: Nitrogen, [illegible] per cent; Available Phos. Acid, [illegible] per cent; Potash, [illegible] per cent. The others are equally concentrated. Prices and Booklet on request.
ROBT. L. MERWIN & CO., Gen'l Agts., United States
64 Wall Street, New York.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.
(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)
Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.
PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]
PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave Newark [illegible]
Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.
PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave Somerville [illegible]
PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave Easton [illegible]
PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.
LEAVE PLAINFIELD.
[illegible] a. m. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.
[illegible] a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge branch.
[illegible] a. m. for Flemington, [illegible] Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.
[illegible] a. m. for Flemington, High Bridge branch, D. L. & W. R. R., Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Shamokin, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.
[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.
[illegible] p. m. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.
[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.
[illegible] p. m. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.
[illegible] p. m. for Flemington.
[illegible] p. m. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.
[illegible] p. m. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.
[illegible]
For Atlantic City, [illegible]
LONG BRANCH, OCEAN GROVE, &c.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
For Perth Amboy, [illegible]
For Freehold, [illegible]
ROYAL BLUE LINE.
Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]
For Trenton [illegible]
For Baltimore and Washington [illegible]
For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through Pullman sleepers, via Shenandoah Valley Route [illegible]
For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west [illegible]
RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA
[illegible]
From 24th and Chestnut streets, [illegible]
Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker streets, [illegible]
Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.
Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.
J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Superintendent.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

A LUNAR ECLIPSE.

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE SEE IT IF THE SKIES ARE BRIGHT.

Every Eclipse From the Beginning of Time to the End of Time Can Be Calculated to a Second. Laws That Do Not Change.

The last total eclipse of the moon on the evening of March 11 was visible entire to North and South America and the Atlantic Ocean, and more or less to Europe, Africa and the Eastern Pacific Ocean.

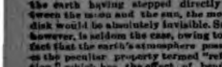
Observers at all points within this region saw the eclipse at exactly the same moment, though of course the clock time at various points differ according to the difference in longitude and the different methods of recording the time.

The eclipse was very nearly central; that is, the moon passed almost directly through the middle of the earth's shadow, so that the duration of totality fell much short of the greatest possible limit. Under circumstances the most favorable for a total lunar eclipse the moon may remain entirely within the shadow of the earth about two hours.

In an eclipse the shadow appears to move over the moon's disk, but in reality the eclipse is caused by the moon moving through the shadow. The instant when the last bright glimmer on the moon's western limb is blotted out is technically known as the beginning of totality.

One would naturally expect that then, the earth having stepped directly between the moon and the sun, the moon's disk would be absolutely invisible. Such, however, is seldom the case, owing to the fact that the earth's atmosphere possesses the peculiar property termed "refraction," which has the effect of bending the sun's rays into the shadow. The result is that when the moon has wholly entered the shadow her disk is usually distinctly visible, illuminated with a dull, copper colored light, which is sunlight deflected around the earth into the shadow cone. To an observer stationed on the moon the disk of the earth would appear to be surrounded by a narrow ring of brilliant sunshine, colored with sunset hues by the same vapor which tinge terrestial sunsets, but acting with double power because the light will have traversed a double thickness of our air.

If the weather happens to be very clear on the rim of the earth as seen from the moon, the quantity of light transmitted through the atmosphere is very considerable, and the moon is strongly illuminated. If, on the other hand, the weather happens to be stormy in this region, the clouds cut off nearly all the light. In the lunar eclipse of 1886 the moon was absolutely invisible to the naked eye.



From the beginning of totality, until the moon once more reveals herself, there is little to interest the ordinary observer. It is during this period, however, that the astronomers are especially active. At the time when the brilliant light of our satellite is cut off by the interposition of the earth between her and the sun it is possible to observe the moon's passage over small stars which suddenly spring into prominence owing to the unusual darkness.

As the copper colored limb of the eclipsed moon approaches one of these bright stars a very interesting phenomenon takes place. The star retains its full brightness until all at once it will vanish without the least warning. Its reappearance on the western limb of the moon is equally sudden and more startling. These occultations, as they are called, are of much importance in determining the exact position of the moon in her orbit. Not that there is much doubt as to this, but astronomy is an exact science, and astronomers eagerly seize upon any opportunity to detect a variation of a fraction of a second.

These occultations are also important in that they demonstrate the entire absence of atmosphere on the moon. The presence of even the slightest atmosphere would cause a gradual obscuring of the star's light until it finally passes behind the moon.

It is not generally known that a great many important dates in history have been fixed by means of lunar eclipses. Since these occur in obedience to absolute mathematical law, which is accurately understood by astronomers, it is possible not only to forecast every eclipse of the moon that will take place in the future, but also to reckon backward, and determine precisely the dates at which they have occurred in the past. Eclipses of the sun and moon were regarded with much awe by the ancients, and frequent instances have been recorded of their extraordinary behavior at the occurrence of these phenomena.

The Chinese supposed that the trouble was due to a large and greedy dragon which, in his effort to satisfy his extraordinary appetite, was devouring the moon or the sun, as the case should be. In order to avert this evil the people were accustomed to beat upon brazen instruments, to shout and make all possible noise. The dragon, frightened at the strange commotion, eventually disgorged his prey.

A familiar story is told of how Columbus forced the natives of an island to supply him with food by threatening to deprive them of the light of the moon if they refused. The Indians, remaining obdurate, and skeptical of the white man's power to perform this miracle, the eclipse duly began, whereupon they lavished food upon the famished sailors and implored the stranger to put back the moon in her place. Columbus promised to consider the matter and retired to a cabin for that purpose.

Shortly before the time for the moon to appear, Columbus also appeared and promised to restore the moon if they would be good Indians in the future. They promised, and the moon emerged from the shadow. It may be remarked that on this critical occasion Columbus was fortunately provided with a nautical almanac.

She Was a Kansas Girl.

"My task in life," said the pastor of one of our churches, complacently, "consists in saving young men." Whereupon one of our fair maidens, with a soulful longing replied, "Save a good one for me."—Troy Chief.

Conflicting Symptoms.

"Poor Chollyl What did he die of?"

"The doctors are not quite certain whether it was cigarettes or unrequited love."—Chicago Tribune.

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

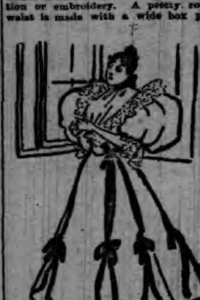
THE WISE WOMAN MAKING READY FOR HOT WEATHER.

New Styles in Skirts and Bodices, Ribbons and Trimmings. The Blouse in All Its Variations to Prevail in Thin Gowns. Piques for Cool Mornings.

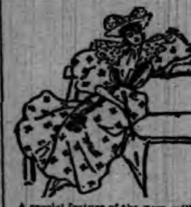
The fashions which are most anxiously anticipated are the styles for making up the various cotton fabrics into gowns to be worn in midsummer. The average woman is too wise to let the warm weather find her napping, so she prepares for the first hot day long before it comes by making all her outing costumes and dainty organdies in the early spring.

Last season's gowns are inspected and renovated for use again, and fortunately the ways of fashioning these thin dresses do not differ so materially from one season to another that this cannot be done with great success. The reigning box plaits, which must declare themselves many times in her summer outfit if she would be up to date can easily be added to a simple full waist made last year, and if the required material is lacking the blouse effect may be gained by bands of satin ribbon covered with embroidery. The blouse style of bodice, in all its variations, will prevail in all thin gowns, and for heavier materials, such as piques, cotton cheviots, duck and linens, short coats, turned back in front, with revers to show a shirt front, will be worn, as will also the Norfolk waists, with and without the basque effect.

Piques, some in lovely pale shades, make very effective gowns for cool mornings in summer. The skirts are usually plain, but if desired they may be trimmed with rows of heavy lace insertion or embroidery. A pretty round waist is made with a wide box plait up the middle of the back and down the front, and trimmed with a wide square collar, edged with the heavy lace or English open work embroidery. The belt and neckband may be made of the pique, covered with embroidery, or of satin ribbon in a contrasting color. Both colored and black velvet ribbons are used on these gowns. In fact ribbons of every description, and the new varieties, many and charming, are to be a feature of all thin summer gowns. The thin blouse waists of organdie, Swiss and nainsook have a decided droop in front over the satin ribbon belt and are striped lengthwise with lace or embroidered insertions or tucked in narrow tucks, which are edged with Valenciennes lace. This manner of trimming is quite new this season and especially dainty and pretty.



Valenciennes lace, in the narrow widths, has revived its old time popularity, and the deep cream shade is very effective on white or colored muslins. It trims silks with equally good effect. A very stylish waist, lately imported, is made of black accordion plaited point d'esprit and striped at intervals from neck to belt and on the puffed sleeves with bands of half inch black satin ribbon, on the edges of which is sewed narrow valenciennes lace and in the middle a tiny line of jet. It is almost needless to add that the effect is charming.



A special feature of the new millinery is that the flowers and leaves are mostly very large, the hydrangea being one of the favorite blossoms. Petunia is one of the most popular colors and appears in straw hats as well as flowers and ribbons. The wide effect gained by wings and outspreading bows is still a dominant characteristic of both hats and bonnets, but the broad Dutch bonnet, so fashionable all winter, has grown a little point in front, which makes it resemble the Marie Stuart shape, and is infinitely more becoming to the majority of faces.

The jet bonnets, with their bunches of bright flowers at either side, are very attractive. Three shades of one flower are usually grouped together, and three feathers also. Fine plaitings of chiffon, with either flowers or feathers, are arranged from both hats and bonnets to fall onto the hair at the back, and a curtain of lace caught up in the middle is another fancy. A pretty jet bonnet with widespreading wings of jet is trimmed with cream colored pansies above the ears. Violets and roses are used in combination, and roses in all the unnatural colors are mingled with the uncommon tints of the new ribbons, which are ovely with chine figures and both satin and velvet stripes.—New York Sun.

All Right.

Dobson—I am writing a verse to the landlady's daughter; give me a rhyme for "spoons."

Foggs—"Prunes."

"Doctor, I have an important physiological question to ask you. When I stand on my head the blood rushes into my head. Now, when I stand on my feet, why does it not rush into my feet?"

"Because your feet are not hollow."

PLAINFIELD'S GOOD HEALTH.

Sustaining Her Reputation for a Lower Death Rate Than the State's Average, Despite Her Being a Resort for Foreign Invalids.

The eighteenth annual report of the State Board of Health, for the year 1894, has just been issued, and contains very much information of great interest and value, including vital statistics and special articles giving many valuable suggestions for public and personal care of cleanliness and health.

The vital and mortuary statistics show some interesting facts. In the State the annual average number of marriages, births and deaths for fifteen years, 1878 to 1892, was: Marriages, 10,225; births, 26,843; deaths, 25,111.

Number of marriages, births and deaths, July 1, 1893, to July 1, 1894: Marriages, 15,245; births, 33,662; deaths, 30,004.

In Union County, from June 30, 1893, to June 30, 1894, there were 530 marriages, 1,765 births, and 1,436 deaths.

In Clark Township there were no marriages; Cranford, 5; Elizabeth, 285; Fanwood, 4; Linden, 18; New Providence, 4; Plainfield, 96; Rahway, 69; Springfield, 4; Summit, 21; Union, 9; Westfield, 8.

In Clark there were 5 births; Cranford, 23; Elizabeth, 1,071; Fanwood, 22; Linden, 21; New Providence, 16; Plainfield, 277; Rahway, 93; Springfield, 17; Summit, 90; Union, 25; Westfield, 87.

The deaths were; In Clark, 5; Cranford, 19; Elizabeth, 801; Fanwood, 20; Linden, 57; New Providence, 15; Plainfield, 229; Rahway, 137; Springfield, 20; Summit 48; Union, 23; Westfield, 54.

Of the deaths in the State, 2,213 were children under one month, of which 1,559 died in large cities. Of those dying under one year, 5,629 died in large cities. Of the 11,477 that died under five years, 8,333 died in the large cities. The total death rate from consumption, as compared with total deaths, 11.44, the deaths being 2,313 in cities, 1,220 outside. The death rate per 1,000 inhabitants in the State was 19.09.

In Union County, of 1,436 deaths, 129 were children under one month, 244 under one year, 161 one to five years, 86 five to twenty, 471 twenty to sixty, 383 over sixty.

The death rate per 1,000 inhabitants in Elizabeth was 18.95; Plainfield, 17 53, (considerably lower than that of any other city of its size in the State); Rahway, 18 76; Orange, 19.37.

In Plainfield, with an estimated population of 13,151, the deaths were: Under one month, 13; between one month and one year, 34; one to five, 20; five to twenty, 18; twenty to sixty, 78: over sixty, 65. Causes: Remittent fever, 3; enteric fever, 3; scarlet fever, 1; whooping cough, 2; diphtheria and croup, 14; diarrhoeal diseases of children, 27; consumption, male, 11, female, 17; acute lung diseases, 36; brain and nervous diseases of children, 9; diseases of heart and circulation, 25; renal and cystic diseases, 11; adult brain and spinal diseases, 19; digestive and intestinal diseases, 12; cancer, 5; acute rheumatism, 2; puerperal, 1; violent deaths, 12. The scarcity of contagious diseases is marked.

North Plainfield had 59 deaths, 18 from lung trouble; 3 from cancer; 3 violent: 15 from digestive and intestinal troubles, the balance diversified.

Dr. Westcott for Fanwood reports, "a little more malarial trouble than in former years, especially along the brook which is the boundary line of portions of Somerset and Union counties. Here the dry summers, in connection with deposits from mills and sewage from Glenside Park, have caused much trouble." Fanwood had 20 deaths, 10 from lung troubles; 3 violent.

HAS A GOOD EYE.

Detective Blackford Calculated a Man was a Thief, and He Was.

Detective John Blackford saw a man on East Third street last Saturday. He mentally calculated that the man was a tramp and was bent on evil doing. The detective kept an eye on the man's movements, and very soon after saw him stealing coal from a car on the Jersey Central railroad. Now the railroad company pays good money for its coal and doesn't like to dispose of it without recompense. Besides it's a crime to take coal without asking for it and without paying for it. Detective Blackford knew this and also knew that it was his duty to arrest the man. So he concealed himself where he could see the man but the man could n't see him. That's part of his duty as a detective. Pretty soon he saw the man descend from the car and help another man carry a bag of coal down to Cottage place. The other man was on the car all the time but the detective had not seen his face, so he could arrest no one whose face he could not identify. Therefore he only arrested the man who he calculated was the tramp. The tramp said his name was Wm. Barry. He also said that he did n't steal coal. The way he happened to be there, so he said, was that he saw the man struggling with the bag. It was too heavy for him. Then he offered to lend him a helping hand. When he attempted to make good his offer the detective arrested him.

The tramp did n't think it was right for him to be arrested for stealing coal. He did n't own a stove, and did n't live in Plainfield. The only thing he stole was a ride on the train.

Judge Coddington did n't respect his plea and sentenced him to pay a fine of $8 or go to jail for 30 days. He went to jail.

THE PINK OF PERFECTION.

A Charming Progressive Euchre Party in the Borough.

Nine tables were filled with merry players at the progressive euchre party given by Miss Lillian A. Force at her home, 22 Duer street, Thursday. The parlors were a beautiful sight, decorated with a tasteful arrangement of choice cut flowers and palms, and illuminated with handsome banquet lamps. Full evening dress prevailed, and the toilettes of the fair sex were exquisite. Pink was the predominating color, and the effect was charming. The tally cards of the players were adorned with pink ribbons, and the designs were crescents and stars.

The tedium attending skilful attention to play was relieved by refreshments daintily served, and the sociability that reigned was of the cheeriest nature. After the victors were announced, and the prizes awarded, Tommy Atkins was introduced, and was a jolly entertainer till the happy gathering dispersed.

Mrs. Fred M. VanEmburgh was the winner of the first prize for the gentler sex, an elegant crystal vase of peachblow tint and gold. Miss A. DeCamp was awarded a handsome jewel case of Persian gold and enamel, second prize. For the men, J. G. McLaughlin won first prize, a silver coat-marker; and Edward O. Clark won second, a grip-marker of leather and silver.

Guests attended from Plainfield, Brooklyn, Wilmington, Somerville, Chester and Westfield, and were:

Mr and Mrs Fred M Van Emburgh, Mr and Mrs F S Cutter, Mr and Mrs W Y Williams, Mr and Mrs S W Clark, Mr and Mrs F E Woodruff, Mr and Mrs E A Meeker, Mr and Mrs T H Hardy, the Misses Todd, J Van Winkle, Ernestine Smith, May Stelle, E Gillies, M Woodruff, Gertrude Valck, L DeCamp, A DeCamp, E Krymer, and L A Force, and Messrs W Gaston, W Holmes, E O Rand, F Fulton, W O Dobbins, F L C Martin, H O VanEmburgh, G W Moreton, F Howland, David Sutphen, John G McLaughlin, J. Herbert Case, Robert M Clark, and Edward O Clark.

A WIT A BISHOP.

Plainfield Profits by a Chatty Paper on Sydney Smith.

An intellectual audience was present in All Souls Church Friday night to hear the second paper of the series on five great humorists, read by Miss Edith R. Leonard, whose subject was Sydney Smith.

In opening she said that Smith was above all things a laugher, and diffused brightness wherever he went. His great achievements as a reformer must not be forgotten, but his humor lent flavor to a somewhat monotonous life.

Born in 1771, he spent the best portion of his life as an obscure country clergyman, obtaining church advancement and prosperity only late in life. Unlike some other men of talent, he was as delightful a companion in his home as before the world. His description of building a house and getting settled in Yorkshire, and the hardships he had to overcome, told of one of the events of his life.

She told how the little country girl, "Bunch", was made into the "best butler in the county"; and also of his clever devices, "rheumatic armor" and "universal scratcher". His fun was never practical joking, but sometimes became boyish frolic as in "parsonic deer".

He was probably not acting out his true destiny in becoming a clergyman, but having assumed church duties he per*formed them faithfully and energetically,* and at the same time dispensed medicines with original names to his parishioners. His humor probably hindered his advancement in the church, because of the incongruity of making a noted society wit, a bishop. His character was shown in the boldness of criticising what seemed to him inconsistencies and abuses in the church.

An instance of his struggle for toleration was the "Letters of Peter Plymley". His frequent articles on political, social and ecclesiastical questions are not absorbingly interesting today, because they deal with dead issues, but display great thought. He was one of the most important contributors to the Edinburgh Review, of which he was one of the founders. Mrs. Jameson says that his wit almost always involved a thought worth remembering for its own sake, as in his description of dining out in the country. When in London he was greatly in demand, and his presence usually insured the success of any entertainment. Never coarse nor irreverent, he made fun of his friends without alienating their friendship.

In fact his friendships were warm and enduring, and some of them with interesting women. In closing, she said that perhaps he would not have been an acceptable conversationalist at the present day, but he was such a humorist as his age demanded, and left the world brighter, happier and better for his living in it.

At the conclusion of the paper, a general and open discussion followed, in which many interesting points were brought out.

—Cranford has a baby three weeks old, measuring 13 inches long and weighing 2½ lbs.

—West Front street from DeKalb avenue to the city limits has been improved by the use of crushed stone on the roadbed.

—The Stevens Indicator, the quarterly published by the Stevens Institute of Technology, will hereafter be found in the reading room of the Free Public Library. It is contributed by the editors.

MADISON AVENUE.

Official List of Benefits and Damages.

ASSESSMENTS FILED AT LAST.

E. C. Mulford, Wm. M. Stanford and J. F. MacDonald, commissioners, report the following assessments of damages and benefits:

DAMAGES AWARDED.

Madison avenue—
Samuel Drier	$4,080 00
Henry Piker	244 19
Chas. E. Austin	486 60
Estate Theodore J. Gillies	600 00
Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company	277 50
J. W. Jackson	585 00
E. H. & E. M. Holmes	487 50
Obstructing estimates on moving buildings, mason work, etc., and expenses of assessments assessed as damages	351 65
Total	$7,513 75

BENEFITS ASSESSED.

Madison avenue—
Julia A. Rogers	$ 180 00
M. E. Church	1,250 10
Levi Hetfield	62 60
James Connelly	19 87
Catharine Flynn	44 10
Chas. S. Dawson	99 47
Estate Peter Ross	83 79
Keziah C. Dunham	36 13
Estate Rhoda Moore	35 23
David H. Thickstun	30 58
Marietta Rogers	24 60
Lizzie Titsworth	23 95
Frank Bushnell	66 25
Frank W. Rogers	36 18
John A. Thickstun	23 31
Spicer & Hubbard	106 90
Levi Hetfield	90 92
Seventh-Day Baptist Church	60 95
Phineas M. French	28 60
Elizabeth Runyon	32 88
Alex. M. Runyon	25 27
Estate Jas. Brand	30 46
Seventh-Day Baptist Church	45 95
S. H. C. Dunshee	24 50
Estate I. F. Randolph	77 47
Eva H. VanSlyckle	25 51
F. A. Dunham	25 20
Elmer E. Runyon	21 00
J. Frank Hubbard	21 00
West Front street—
T. J. Carey	55 60
Christian Schepflin	98 25
A. C. Baldwin	110 00
Estate George H. Babcock	125 45
Estate George H. Babcock	251 61
Catharine B. Sebring	63 53
James Clark	73 68
Estate C. H. Stillman	122 66
Amelia H. French	30 39
Levi Hetfield and E. V. Lindabury	23 24
Henry Liefke	24 30
Amelia H. French	25 88
E. S. Pope and J. F. Hubbard	87 38
Joseph A. Patterson	64 45
William W. Coriell	38 12
Frank Linke	26 67
Walter England	56 49
Daniel W. Martine	113 65
Elizabeth Stevens	199 10
Philip J. Kriestling	77 23
M. E. Church	171 90
L. L. Manning	60 08
L. L. Manning	45 45
Joel Manning	77 48
Charles P. Sebring	49 39
West Second street—
Julia A. Rogers	31 08
Hattie N. King	28 45
Charles B. Clifton	33 76
W. M. Stillman	31 07
F. B. Gillette	13 85
William Howell	17 18
John Darling	109 27
Estate Warren Ackerman	64 81
Estate E. F. Randolph	47 77
Mary Vermeule	30 08
Rebecca M. Holmes	42 00
Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Co.	115 20
Estate John C. Sutphen	27 39
West Third Street—
Maria McDermott and Margaret K. Vail	62 08
Levi Hetfield	67 60
West Fourth street—
Frank S. Wells	32 17
Michael F. Marcley	24 50
Gertrude Vandenberg	39 65
Kate Fisher	29 51
Francis T. Humbert	11 76
Sam'l D. Collins	24 50
Susan S. Collins	28 52
Jeremiah Moore	27 82
Estate Geo. H. Babcock	38 40
John W. Murray, Jr.	23 75
West Fifth street—
Joseph F. Sheppard	16 79
Ellen Mullen	11 20
Charlotte Hallock	15 73
Cornelia A. Gavett	19 20
Elizabeth A. Golding	14 60
R. Frank Coriell	15 80
Estate Geo. H. Babcock	24 31
West Sixth street—
Lucy Hooley	10 80
Estate Geo. H. Babcock	17 90
Chas. Stimpson	26 40
Lizzie Taylor	8 40
West Seventh street—
Congregational Church	40 12
Union County Country Club	30 14
J. Frank Hubbard	31 08
Fanny C. Cox	30 61
Benefits assessed upon the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield	2,832 15
Total	$7,613 75

Now that the project to widen the avenue is assuming definite shape, it is to be hoped that for the benefit of the town the plan to extend the avenue into North Plainfield will be forthwith revived and consummated. This great public improvement should be no longer delayed.

SPECIAL VACATION.

Easter Holiday Tour to Washington, D. C., via Pennsylvania Railroad.

For the benefit of those who have been unable to take advantage of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's tours to Washington, D. C., during the Lenten season, that company has arranged a Special Easter Holiday Tour, to leave New York and Philadelphia Thursday, April 18, returning on the following Saturday.

The rates, including accommodations at Washington's best hotels, are $12 50 from New York and $11.50 from Philadelphia; proportionate rates from other points.

Detailed itinerary will be sent on application to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

BRIAR PIP
GIVEN AWAY

WITH EVE
ONE POUN
bale
OF

DUKES
MIXTURE for 35 cen
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE or ATC
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

Space	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	32.00	54.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of print matter you require we can of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings.
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRE
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Work
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I sh be pleased to do it for you.
I buy only first-class Marble and Granite do not sell unless at prices that will enable to put up the work with credit to myself justice to the parties purchasing.
I employ no agents and therefore am ena to make a reduction in the price of my wo the customer, of the commission generally to agents.
I am under a very small expense in ru
my shop, myself and my son doing the la portion of the work, and we personally a to the setting of all work, and look upon ness in this light, that Good Work and G
Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing ad tisement for my business, which will he build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant no dealer can sell you the same work and m stock any cheaper than I can.
Hoping to be favored with your patrona am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager.
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
H. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGA
The best nickel cigar in the State, and
[illegible]
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALT
A large assortment of the Choicest Bra
Foreign and Domestic Cigars. Cigarette
Tobacco always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Var

Woolston & Buck
PAINTERS,
Wall Paper
PAINTERS SUPPLIES. 143-145 NORTH

QUEER TRADE MARKS

UNCLE SAM HAS REGISTERED 26,000 OF THEM.

Some of the Official Marks Are Absurd as Well as Queer. Grounds Upon Which Registration May Be Refused. Favorite Designs and Newly Coined Words.

Uncle Sam registered trade mark No. 26,000 the other day. The fee paid was, as usual, $25. This is a very profitable part of the business of the patent office. It is governed by regulations which in many respects are both odd and interesting. The trade marks themselves are curiosities and not a few of them freaks, for a device of this kind is more valuable if absurd than if sensible.

The newer an invention the more valuable it is. If it has been in public use for so short a time as two years it cannot be patented. With a trade mark the case is exactly opposite; its worth grows steadily with age. It represents a business or a marketable article, with the growth of sale of which it obtains value progressively. It is the symbol of a trade. When one buys a cigar he looks on the box not for the name of the manufacturer but for the trade mark. If the cigar does not correspond to the trade mark you are annoyed and the maker of the cigar to which that trade mark properly belongs is injured.

It is the same way with any other sort of goods. You pick up a newspaper and you find the advertising columns full of trade marks. Here is the "Diana" flour, pure as the virgin snow. Your wife never buys any other brand. She doesn't even know the name of the manufacturer. The same remark applies to "Hygeia" hams. The trade mark is the business, an infringement is robbery. Accordingly the law protects it. Great fortunes are frequently at stake in suits that have to do with these trade emblems.

Anybody may get a trade mark for nothing. He has only to adopt it and it becomes his exclusive property, so long as nobody has taken it previously for designating goods of the same sort. Furthermore, the law will defend him in this right. But if he is a prudent man he has the trademark registered—that is to say, put on record at the patent office. The $25 paid for this is money well spent. He thus obtains the privilege of suing in the United States courts in case of infringement. The practice of these courts in such matters is settled, so that justice is pretty sure to be done. Otherwise he would be obliged to go to the State courts, where the outcome of legal proceedings on these grounds is more doubtful.

There is another good reason for registering a trade mark. The word "registered" appears to signify that the owner is disposed to defend his property, and thus it is apt to scare off persons who might be tempted to infringe. A registration is good for thirty years and may be renewed indefinitely. But an unregistered trade mark is a legal right in perpetuity and can never die, unless the business which it represents goes out of existence. It is common law property and passes from hand to hand with the business. Another odd thing about a trade mark is that it may possess considerable value, though the article for which it stands be utterly worthless.

The purpose of a trade mark is to identify origin and ownership. It ought to denote nothing else. Under the regulations it must not be descriptive of the ingredients of which an article is composed or in any other way. On that ground the patent office has refused to register the name "Fruit Butter" as a trade mark. It has likewise ruled against "Egg Macaroni" as being descriptive or calculated to deceive. Here was a case where the name signified that certain materials were used in making the food. If these materials were not so used people would be misled. If they were actually employed the term was objectionable on the ground already mentioned. Similar rulings have been made against "Snow White" for flour, "Think Back" for saws, and "Tasteless."

"Gold Prize" has been ruled out as either descriptive or deceptive. If no gold prize was given to the article the purchaser might be deceived. A similar instance was that of the legend "There's Money In It" on soap boxes. Registration for this also was refused. It was decided by a recent commissioner of patents that the word "stylographic," being generic for pens, could not be used as a trademark for an ink specially adapted for stylographic pens. Other adverse rulings have been made respecting "Shake" blown into bottles and "Burglar Alarm." "'Alf an' 'Alf" was shut out because the trade mark "1-2 and 1-2" had been previously registered in the class of drinkables. On the descriptive ground "Chili Colorow" was not allowed as a trade mark for pickles because it is provincial Spanish for red pepper.

People often try to secure the registration of trade marks that embody figures or emblems associated with religion. This is severely frowned upon by the patent office. For example, not long ago a design of this sort submitted included a representation of the Virgin Mary. It was promptly rejected as offensive. Acting in a spirit of broad catholicity, this ruling is not applied merely to matters having to do with Christianity. On one occasion it shut out a picture of a Chinese god. The red Greek cross is objected to also, though on other grounds. It will not do as a trademark for any article that might serve to supply invalid soldiers. The reason for this is quite obvious. It is the emblem of the Red Cross Society, an international organization. Its use as a trade mark on certain classes of goods might lead people to imagine that those goods were indorsed or actually manufactured by the society.

Favorite designs for trade marks are figures representing Hercules, Atlas supporting the world, an Indian, an alchemist, a saint and a good samaritan. The star and crescent frequently occur, separately or together. The owl is found in a variety of classes of marketable articles, being very old in the tobacco trade. The crow is conspicuous in pills, dyes and leather dressings. An odd emblem is a railway train for "Express Ointment." Another is a bottle shaped like a watch and containing pills. Yet another for pills is a conventionalized Roman candle shooting its balls, the latter being termed "Rheumatic Bullets." The more odd, and even nonsensical, a design, the better it serves for a trade mark.

Any man's signature will do for a trade mark. A word from the dictionary will serve the same purpose, likewise the name of a god or goddess of mythology. "Eureka" or "Excelsior" will pass, but not so if anybody has previously registered the same word or name in the same class of goods. For example, if Jones has adopted and registered the name "Hygeia" for his pills, Smith must select some other name for his pellets of health. Objection is raised against geographical names, but rulings on this point have been somewhat contradictory. A while ago the word "Concord" was submitted and the application was refused. On appeal to the commissioner of patents it was successfully argued that "concord" was recognized in the English language as having a meaning entirely apart from its geographical significance. So it went through. On the strength of this precedent "Atlanta" was admitted, the contention being that the word was historically derived from a period far more remote than the founding of the capital city of Georgia.

However, it is not necessary that a word should be accepted by lexicographers in order that it may serve for a trade mark. People engaged in introducing new articles into the market commonly coin words to fit their purposes. This they do very often by adding the terminations "in," "ine" and "line"—as "Lamina," "Absorbine," "Epidermaline," and "Vulnerine." One purpose of the trade mark, and a very important purpose incidental to advertising, is to attract attention. "Society Polish" is a first rate name for a leather dressing, for instance. It has a double meaning, you see. The same idea is illustrated by such trade marks as "Skin Success," "Bile Beans" and "Chill and Fever Breakers."

From what has been said already it will appear that the same trade mark may be used over and over again in different classes of marketable articles. The prohibition is against its employment in any way that may lead to mistake on the part of the purchaser. On this ground many applications for rights in the name "Liebig" have been rejected. But obviously "Owl" pills could not be mixed up in anybody's mind with "Owl" sheetings. The cross is no trade mark—that is to say, nobody is permitted to monopolize it in all of its patterns in any class of goods. Having numerous typical shapes—the Greek, Roman, etc.—it may only be made proprietary in a specific pattern. An opposite rule applies to the eagle. There are several species of eagles in the world, but only one type is recognized by the patent office, simply for the reason that the public at large does not differentiate the bald eagle from the golden eagle, and so forth.

Rebuses and monograms are peculiar as trade marks. In many cases one finds the familiar "I-X-L." Geographical names are admissible if printed in some distinctive manner. For example, "Baltimore" would not be registerable if printed in ordinary type, but in red script it would go. Arbitrary arrangements of words and letters will serve as trade marks, inasmuch as in a manner they represent new designs. Representations of the United States flag or coat of arms are not allowed, because the proprietor must have exclusive ownership of the design. An arrangement of colors will not do for a trade mark, unless associated with some emblem or other design. In other words, form as well as color is required.

A portrait may be a trade mark. Manufacturers of patent medicines commonly use their likenesses for this purpose. The portrait of a public man, or of any other living person, may be employed lawfully, with the consent of the individual. But when the person is dead his portrait ceases to be his private property and may be utilized for advertising purposes for anybody. Thus Washington and Franklin are most frequently made use of to give a post-mortem indorsement to articles which in many cases they would doubtless disapprove of most highly.

One of the oddest of registered trade marks is the "Angel Belt"—a medicinal belt that is represented in the design as hung upon a ladder. This ladder, of course, is the one that is supposed to lead to heaven. Labels, it should be said, cannot be registered as a rule. Either they contain descriptive matter or they include trade marks registered as such. There is a journal in this country called the Trademark Record, which is published chiefly for the purpose of recording proceedings instituted in the courts in behalf of rights secured by trade marks.—Boston Transcript.

The Country Preferable to Chicago.

A farmer in central Illinois wrote that he wanted to hire a married man to help him on the farm. The wife was to do the housework and the pay for the couple was to be $25 a month, not a large sum, but much more than many a family in Chicago has at the end of the month after paying house rent and grocery bills. In a few days the bureau found an honest appearing and willing German who had been out of work for a long time and who gladly went with his wife to accept the offer. Two weeks later the couple sent for the wife's sister, who was a widow, and her two children.

The sister became housekeeper for a neighboring farmer. Within two months the German sent for his parents, whom he had been compelled to support. They had been paying $6 a month house rent in Chicago. He found a cottage and garden patch which could be rented for $3 a month.

The colony wrote back to the bureau that the change was for the better.—Chicago Record.

The Chicago Man's Tale.

"It is my experience," said the Chicago man, "that a rat terrier makes the best kind of bird dog.

"I have a trained rat terrier that can locate a covey of birds at any distance. Now, the minute he gets a covey located he begins tapping with his tail. We have a code arranged between us. He gives me the signals under the Morse system of dots and dashes. For instance, the last time I was out with him he stopped suddenly and began marking off the dots and dashes with his tail. I kept count and read: 'P—C—30.' That meant 'prairie chickens 30 yards ahead.'

"'How many?' I whispered to him.

"He sneaked up a little distance and counted off forty-three. I slipped in one of my special make cartridges, which are so flattened that the shot spread from side to side, but not up and down. By the use of these cartridges when a covey of chickens rise in a line I can bag the whole lot.

"When the chickens lifted I blazed away, and not one of them fell—at least I didn't see any fall—but I walked up to the place and the ground was literally covered with the feet of prairie chickens. I had aimed just a little bit too low. I counted the feet and there were exactly eighty-six—two for each chicken. I did it merely to check up the dog's count. It shows how well the dog is trained."—Chicago Record.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS. PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J B Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Horsley Barker Grove and Front sts
G W V Moy 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville
J B Gutteridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 8th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	879 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	40 Grove st
Adams H C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Fen	122 North av
Andrews F H	615 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 9th st
Alert Hose Co. No 1	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, P W Dr	Dunellen
Boone G W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 9th st
Bearbower, J E	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	123 E 5th st
Blair A G	140 North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	246 Park av
Board of Education	8th st and Arlington av
Booth, E H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	612 Central av
Central Times	108 E Front st
Clark, E B	131 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chace Fred F	651 North av
Clawson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
Constitutionalist Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	230 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	16 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, E A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, E F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
Daily Press	105 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief F F D	428 W 5th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	2d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	25 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	428 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1012 Park av
French, C Frank	60 Somerset st
do do	327 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	700 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	161 North av
Howell E O	191 North av
Holmes E H	208 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	28 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	229 Park av
Ivins D C	211 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	213 W Front st
Kaufman W T	633 W 7th st
Keely & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W S	120 Jackson av
Lowrie R H, Dr	612 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	227 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Mallinson A D	205 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	116 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	108 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James R	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W V	Park av and 4th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	610 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	737 Watchung av
Murray J W	313 W 4th st
Music Hall	495
Myers, J K	139 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Fenton T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	254 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	8 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	104 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	605 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	143 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	27 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	69 Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	408 W 6th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	137 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, D W	232 W 2d st
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	402 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	416 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	429 Park av near Fifth st
Runkle, H. G	531 6th st
Runyon, Chas W	169 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	95 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	825 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, E J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	27 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
Streuli, H A	1308 Hillside av
Stevens F E	702 South av
Stevens Geo O	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	148 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	10 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	209 W 2d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jas A	225 Madison av
Titsworth, Jos M	413 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	228 La Grande av
Tobin Geo J	127 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	440 9th st
Tunison W J	742 Watchung av
Tweedy, G. B	129 Crescent av
Ulrich & Blatz	118 W Front st
Union Beef Co	309 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	125 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	122 North av
Wadsworth, W H	437 8th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	516 3rd Place
Woltman, E	509 West Seventh st
Wiechers, J F	W 8th st., near Grant ave
Wiertz Bros	544 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD,	NEW JERSEY
Asbury Park, N J...60c	Hempstead N Y...45c
Astoria, N Y...50c	Hoboken N J...35c
Babylon, N Y...60c	Hunter's Point N Y...45c
Bath, N Y...40c	Irvington N J...40c
Bayonne N J...45c	Islip N Y...60c
Bergen Point N J...35c	Jamaica N Y...45c
Bayside N Y...50c	Jersey City N J...35c
Bay Shore N Y...75c	Keyport N J...50c
Bayville N Y...60c	Kingston N J...35c
Belleville N J...40c	Laurel Hill N Y...45c
Blissville N Y...45c	Leonia N J...45c
Bloomfield N J...35c	Little Neck N Y...50c
Bloomingdale N J...45c	Little Silver N J...50c
Boonton N J...45c	Long Branch N J...50c
Brooklyn N Y...35c	Madison N J...40c
Caldwell N J...45c	Matawan N J...50c
Carlstadt N J...45c	Millburn N J...35c
Centreville N J...45c	Montclair N J...35c
Chatham N J...50c	Morristown N J...45c
Closter N J...45c	Newark N J...25c
Colt's Neck N J...75c	New Brunswick N J...25c
Coney Island N Y...45c	Newton N Y...45c
Cresskill N J...45c	New York N Y...35c
Dover N J...45c	Orange N J...35c
East Norwich N Y...60c	Pamrapo N J...45c
Eatontown N J...60c	Passaic N J...35c
Elizabeth N J...25c	Paterson N J...35c
Englewood N J...35c	Perth Amboy N J...25c
Fairview N J...45c	Rahway N J...25c
Fanwood N J...15c	Red Bank N J...50c
Far Rockaway N Y...45c	Seabright N J...50c
Flatbush N Y...35c	Short Hills N J...35c
Flushing N Y...40c	South Amboy N J...35c
Fort Lee N J...45c	South River N J...35c
Franklin Park N J...35c	Staten Island N Y...35c
Freehold N J...60c	Westfield N J...15c
German Settlem't N Y...60c	Woodbridge N J...25c
Glen Cove N Y...60c	Yonkers N Y...60c
Gravesend N Y...45c	Trenton N J...60c
Hackensack N J...35c	Tarrytown N Y...60c

—A district meeting of the Knights of Pythias will be held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge next Friday evening, at which Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath of Jersey City and several other grand lodge officers, will be present.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,

Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware, blacksmiths' supplies, etc.
sole agents for Union county.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc. Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master members Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood!
Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

FOR MALARIA.
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1896, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. Box 149, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 921 E. Front street, corner 9th street. jly196

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.

OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Offic cor. Front St. and Park Av.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.
Mar30tf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 31 SOMERSET ST. 3-15-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE: CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.
mch20tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER.
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 208 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. ap4y

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. f17yl

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.

TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.

Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.

Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and
Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—jo6tf

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 133, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIERS,
Dentist.
44 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—jo6tf

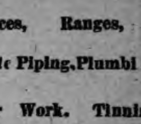
LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey.]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—44 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 3. Piano moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 20½ W. Front street, to 262 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET. 3 doors above Peace street.



MR. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Livery and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Steam Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning.
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL. 6. 11 11-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free.

Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

wind of the evening as she had stood on the balcony.

"Madam," said Damer, as he bowed to her with a strange and unwelcome sense of embarrassment, "Prince Andreis should not have told you that I had such good fortune. I am no fit bearer of diamonds; he is."

She did not catch his meaning. She turned from him a little impatiently, and addressed Andreis.

She spoke of music. Andreis was accomplished in that art; there was a mandolin lying on the grand piano; he took it up and sang to it a Sicilian love-song; she took it from him and sang Venetian barcarolle and stornelli; then they sang together, and their clear, youthful voices blent harmoniously. People passing on the canal stopped their gondolas under the balcony to listen; some Venetian professional musicians in a boat applauded. Damer sat in the shadow and listened, and looked at them. Music said little or nothing to him; he had scarcely any comprehension of it; but something in the sound of those blended voices touched a chord in his nature—made him feel vaguely sad, restlessly desirous, foolishly irritated. The light fell on the handsome head of Andreis, on the carnations at the lady's throat, on the rings on their hands which touched as they took the mandolin one from the other; behind them was the open casement, the balcony with its white spiræa; the lighted frontage of a palace on the opposite side of the canal. As they ceased to sing the people below on the water applauded again, and cried: "Brava! brava! brava!"

THEY SANG TOGETHER.

"Prince Andreis is a poet," said Damer, with a harsh tone in his voice.

"Who never wrote a verse," said Andreis, as he handed a cup of coffee to his hostess.

Through the closed windows the sounds of a chorus sung by the strolling singers below came faintly and muffled into the room; the lamplight shone on the white spray of the spiræa, which looked like a crystal of snow.

"If I had found the opals I should have been inspired by them," he added. "As it is, I am dumb and unhappy."

Veronica Laranigra smiled.

"If you are dumb, so was Orpheus."

"And if you are unhappy," added Damer, "you are only so out of wantonness because the gods have given you too many gifts."

"Or because he has stolen a piece of spiræa," said Veronica.

"I may keep my theft?" asked Andreis.

"Yes. For you brought back the opals, though you did not find them."

Soon after they took their leave of her and went down to the waiting gondola. The boatload of musicians had drifted upwards towards Rialto, the colors of their paper lanthorns glowing through the dark. There was no moon. They did not speak to each other in the few minutes which carried them to their hotel. When they reached it they parted with a brief good night. Neither asked the other what his impressions of the evening had been.

When the young Sicilian prince, Lionello Andreis, head of an ancient Hispano Italian family, had met with a hunting accident and the tusks of an old boar had brought him near to death, an English surgeon, by name Frederic Damer, who was then in Palermo, did for him what none of the Italian surgeons dared to do, and, so far as the phrase can ever be correct of human action, saved his life. A year had passed since then; the splendid vitality of the Sicilian had returned to all its natural vigor; he was only twenty-four years of age and naturally strong as a young oak in the woods of Etna. But he had a mother who loved him, and was anxious; she begged the Englishman to remain awhile near him; the Sicilian laughed but submitted; he and Damer had traveled together during several months, and were now about in another month to part company; the Sicilian to return to his own people, the Englishman to occupy a chair of physiology in a town of northern Europe. Their lives had been briefly united by accident and would have parted in peace; a collar of opals was by chance washed up amongst the flags and burdocks of Torcello and the shape of their fate was altered.

Damer was the son of a country physician, but his father had been poor, the family numerous, and he, a third son, had been sent out into the world with only his education as his capital. He practiced surgery to live; he practiced physiology to reach through it that power and celebrity for which his nature craved and his mental capacity fitted him. But at every step his narrow means galled and fretted him, and he had been a demonstrator, an assistant, a professor in schools, when his vast ability and relentless will fitted him for the position of a Helmholtz or a Virchow in that new priesthood which had arisen to claim the rule of mankind, and sacrifices to itself all sentient races.

In Andreis he saw all the powers of youth and wealth concentrated in one who merely used them for a careless enjoyment and a thoughtless good nature which seemed to himself as senseless as the dance in the sun of an amorous negro. Andreis and the whole of his family had shown him the utmost gratitude, liberality and consideration, and the young prince bore from him good-humoredly sarcasms and satires which he would not have supported from an emperor; but Damer in his turn felt for the Sicilian and his people nothing but the contempt of the great intellect for the uncultured mind, the irritation of the wise man who sees a child gayly making a kite to divert itself out of the parchments of a treatise in an unknown tongue which, studied, might have yielded up to the student the secret of perished creeds and of lost nations. There is no pride so arrogant, no supremacy so unbending, as those of the intellect. It may stand, like Belisarius, a beggar at the gate; but, like Belisarius, it deems itself the superior of all the crowds who drop their alms to it, and while it stretches out its hand to them its lips curse them.

"I wish I had lived when this collar was new," Veronica Laranigra said, when her jewelers returned to her the opals restored to their pristine brilliancy. "Life in Venice was one long festa then. I have read of it. It was all masque and serenade and courtship and magnificence. People were not philosophical about life then; they lived—Mina Laranigra was a beautiful woman. They have her portrait in the Belle Arte. It is by Lucchi. She holds a rose to her lips and laughs. She was killed by her husband for an amour. She had these opals on her throat when he drove the stiletto through it. At least so Carlo used to tell me. But perhaps it was not true."

"Do not wear them," said Andreis, to whom she was speaking. "Do not wear them if they are blood-stained. You know they are pierres de malheur."

She laughed.

"You Sicilians are superstitious. We northerners are not. I like to wear them for that very reason of their tragedy."

She took up the necklace and clasped it round her throat; some tendrils of her hair caught in the clasp; she gave an involuntary little cry of pain; Andreis hastened to release her hair from the clasp. His hand trembled; their eyes met, and said much to each other. Damer, who was near, drew nearer. She was silent, looking at him with that mixture of curiosity, interest and vague apprehension which he always aroused in her. She was not very intelligent, but she had quick susceptibilities; there was that in him which alarmed them and yet fascinated them.

"He awes me," she said later in the day to Andreis. "So often one cannot follow his meaning, but one always feels his reserve of power."

It was a grave speech for a light-hearted lover of pleasure. Andreis heard it with vexation, but he was loyal to the man who had saved his life.

"He is a person of great intellect," he answered; "we are pigmies beside him. But—"

"But what?"

"He used his brains to save my body. So I must not dispute the virtue of his use of them. But sometimes I fancy that he has no heart. I think all the forces in him have only nourished his mind, which is immense. But his heart, perhaps, has withered away, getting no nourishment. He would say I talk nonsense; but I think you will understand what I mean."

"I LIKE TO WEAR THEM FOR THE REASON OF THE TRAGEDY."

"I think I understand," said Veronica, thoughtfully.

She had thought very little in her careless young life. She had begun to think more since these two men had come into it.

"Andreis merits more than you give him," said her duenna to her. "How long will you keep him in suspense? You ought to remember 'what hell it is in waiting to abide.'"

"A hell!" said Veronica, with the color in her face. "You mean a paradise."

"A fool's paradise, I fear," replied the elder woman. "And what does that other man do here? He told me he was due at some university in Germany."

"How can I tell you why either of them stays?" said Veronica, disingenuously, as her conscience told her. "Venice allures many people, especially in her spring season."

"So does a woman in her spring," said the elder lady, dryly, with an impatient gesture.

"You are angry with me."

"No, my dear. It is as useless to be angry with you as to be angry with a young cat because in its gambols it breaks a vase of which it knows nothing of the preciousness."

Veronica Laranigra did not resent or reply. She knew the vase was precious. She did not mean to break it; but she wanted to be free awhile longer. Mutual love was sweet, but it was not freedom. And what she felt ashamed of was a certain reluctance which she felt to allow Damer to see or know that she loved a man of so little intellectual force as Andreis, a man who had nothing but his physical beauty and his gay, glad temper and kind heart.

MERITED REWARD.

SALES OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

Unequalled in the History of Medicine. Remedy, Excellence, Faithfulness Fitly Rewarded.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkhams wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today. From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful Ailments of Women.

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is frequently found of great value for local application. Correspondence is freely solicited by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., and the strictest confidence assured. All druggists sell the Pinkham's remedies. The Vegetable Compound in three forms,—Liquid, Pills, and Lozenges.

"Do you want nothing more than these?" the gaze of Damer seemed in her imagination to say to her.

Andreis was delightful to her; his beauty, his gayety, and his homage were all sympathetic to her. She knew that he loved her, but she prevented him telling her so; she liked her lately acquired liberty; she did not want a declaration which would force her to decide in one way or another what to do with her future. And she was affected without being aware of it by the scarcely disguised contempt which his companion had for him. It was seldom outspoken, but it was visible in every word of Damer, in every glance.

"He is beautiful, yes," he said once to her. "So is an animal."

"Do you like animals?"

"I do not like or dislike them. The geologist does not like or dislike the stones he breaks up, the metallurgist does not like or dislike the ore he fuses."

"You are what they call a physiologist?" she said once, suddenly.

"I am," replied Damer.

She looked at him under her long silky lashes as a child looks at what it fears in the dusk of a fading day. He attracted her and repelled her, as when she had herself been a child she had been at once charmed and frightened by the great ghostly figures on the tapestries, and the white and gray busts of gods and sages on the grand winged staircase of her father's house in the Trentino. She would have liked to ask him many things, things of mystery and of horror, but she was afraid. After all, how much better were the sea, the sunshine, the dog rose, the barcarolle, the laughter, the lute!

CHAPTER III.

She turned to Andreis, who at that moment came along the sands of the beach, his hands filled with spoils from the blossoming hedges—turned to him as when, a little child on the staircase in the dusk, she had run to reach the shelter of a warmed and lighted room. He was of her own country, her own age, her own temperament; he carried about him a sense of gladness, an atmosphere of youth; he was of her own rank; he was as rich as she and richer. There was no leaven of self-seeking in the love he bore her; the passion she had roused in him was pure of any alloy; it was the love of the poets and the singers. If she accepted it, her path, from youth to age, would be like one of those flowering meadows of his own Sicily, which fill the cloudless day with perfume.

She knew that; her foot was ready to tread the narcissus-filled grass, but by an unaccountable indecision and caprice she would not let him invite her thither. She continually evaded or eluded the final words which would have united them or parted them.

SHE TURNED TO ANDREIS.

"Have you given up your appointment?" he asked once, directly.

Damer merely answered: "No." He did not offer any explanation; but he continued to stay on in Venice, though he had removed from the fine apartments occupied by his friend to a house on the Fondamente Nuovi, where he had hired two chambers.

Andreis, who was very generous and had always a grateful and uneasy sense of unrepaid obligation, vainly urged him to remain at his hotel. But Damer, somewhat rudely, refused.

"I cannot pursue any studies there," he replied.

The house he had chosen was obscure and uninviting, standing amidst the clang of coppersmiths' hammers and the stench of iron foundries in what was once the most patrician and beautiful garden-quarter of Venice, and which is now befouled, blackened, filled with smoke, and clamour, and vileness, where once the rose terraces and the clematis-covered pergole ran down to the lagoon and the marble stairs were white as snow under silken awnings.

"What do you do there?" Veronica wished to ask him; but she never did so; she felt vaguely afraid as a woman of the middle age would have feared to ask a magician what he did with his alembics and his spheres.

Although the eyes of lovers are proverbially washed by the collyrium of jealousy, those of Andreis were blind to the passion which Damer, like himself, had conceived. The reserve and power of self-restraint in Damer were extreme, and served to screen his secret from the not very discerning mind of his companion. Moreover, the pride of race which was born and bred in Andreis rendered it impossible for him to suspect that he possessed a rival in one who was, however mentally superior, so far socially inferior, to himself and to the woman he loved.

That a man who was going to receive a stipend as a teacher in a German university could lift his eyes to Veronica Laranigra would have seemed wholly impossible to one who had been reared in patrician and conservative tenets. He never noticed the fires which slumbered in the cold, wide-open eyes of his friend and monitor. He never observed how frequently Damer watched him and her when they were together, listened from afar to their conversation, and invariably interrupted them at any moment when their words verged on more tender or familiar themes. He was himself tenderly, passionately, romantically enamoured; his temper was full of a romance to which he could not often give adequate expression; his love for her had the timidity of all sincere nascent passion; he was pained and chafed by the manner in which she avoided the definite declaration of it, but he did not for a moment trace it to its right cause—the magnetic influence which Damer had upon her, the hesitation which was given her by vague hypnotic suggestion. If any looker-on had warned him he would have laughed and said that days of magic were past.

Damer read the young man's heart like an open book and he knew that it was wholly filled with the image of Veronica. He had never liked Andreis; he had no liking for youth or for physical beauty, or for kindliness and sweetness and simplicity of character. Such qualities were not in tune with him; they were no more to him than the soft, thick fur of the cat in his laboratory, which he stripped off her body that he might lay bare her spinal cord; the pretty, warm skin was nothing to science.

He had saved the life of Andreis because it had interested him and recompensed him to do so; he had traveled with him for a year because it suited him financially to do so; but he had never liked him, he had never been touched by any one of the many generous and delicate acts of the young man, nor by the trust which the mother of Andreis continually expressed in her letters to himself. Where jealousy sits on the threshold of the soul, goodness and kindness and faith knock in vain for admittance. Envy is hatred in embryo and only waits in the womb of time for birth.

One day Veronica asked him to go and see an old servant of the Laranigra household who was very ill and in hospital; they had begged him not to go to the hospital, but he had wished to do so, and had been allowed to fulfill his wish. Damer went to see him. He found the man at death's door with cancer of the food and air passages.

"If he be not operated on he will die in a week," said Damer.

None of the hospital surgeons dared perform such an operation.

"I will operate if you consent," said Damer.

The surgeons acquiesced.

"Will Biancon recover?" asked Veronica, when he returned and told her on what they had decided.

"In his present state he cannot live a week," replied Damer, evasively.

"Does he wish for the operation?"

"He can be no judge. He cannot know his own condition."

"But it will be frightful suffering."

"He will be under anæsthetics."

"But will he recover?"

"Madame, I am not the master of fate."

"But what is probable?"

"What is certain is that the man will die if left as he is."

He performed the operation next day. The man ceased to breathe as it was ended; the shock to the nervous system had killed him. When Veronica heard that he was dead she burst into tears.

"Oh! why, oh! why," she said passionately to Damer, later in the day, "if you knew he must die, did you torture him in his last moments?"

"I gave him a chance," he replied, indifferently. "Anyhow he would never have survived the operation more than a few weeks."

"Why did you torture him with it then?" said Veronica, indignantly.

"It was a rare and almost unique opportunity. I have solved by it a doubt which has never been solved before and never could have been without a human subject."

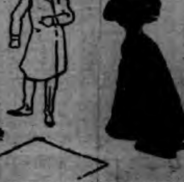
She shrank from him in horror.

"You are a wicked man!" she said, faintly. "Oh, how I wish, how I wish I had never asked you to see my poor Biancon! He might have lived!"

"He would most certainly have died," said Damer, unmoved. "The life of a man at sixty is not an especially valuable thing, and I believe he did nothing all his life except polish your palace floors with beeswax or oil; I forget which it is they use in Venice."

She looked at him with a mixture of horror and fear.

"But you have killed him!—and you can jest."



"BUT YOU HAVE KILLED HIM!"

"I did not kill him. His disease killed him," replied Damer, with calm indifference. "And his end has been a source of knowledge. I should wish my own end to be as fruitful."

She shuddered, and motioned to him to leave her.

"Go away, go away, you have no heart, and no conscience."

Damer smiled slightly.

"I have a scientific conscience; it is as good as a moral one, and does better work."

Andreis began to desire the exile of his companion, though his loyalty withheld him from trying to obtain it by any unfair means or unjust attack. He began to perceive that Damer had an influence on Countess Veronica which was contrary to his own, and adverse to his interests. He did not attach importance to it, because he saw that it was purely intellectual; but he would have preferred that it had not existed. So would she.

"Pierres de malheur! Pierres de malheur!" she said, as she looked at the opals that night. "Why did you bring that cruel man into my life?"

She might banish him, as Andreis had said, but she felt that she would never have courage to do it. Damer awed her. She felt something of what the poor women in the salpetière had felt, when he had hypnotised them and made them believe that they clasped their hands on red-hot iron, or were being dragged by ropes to the scaffold. She strove to resist and conquer the impression, but she was subjugated by it against her will.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

—The Lenten sermon in the usual course in St. Mary's Church will be given this evening by Rev. Eugene Carroll of Elizabeth.

Mothers

have never found a preparation so well adapted to the needs of thin, delicate children, as Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites.

Children almost universally like the taste of it, which makes its administration easy, and it supplies their blood with the food properties that overcome wasting tendencies.

Scott's Emulsion enriches the blood, promotes the making of healthy flesh, and aids in a healthy formation of the bones.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute.

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

NEWARK, N. J.

Whatever fashion favors in

Coats, Capes, Suits, Separate Skirts

will be found in our greatly enlarged department, now the biggest, the brightest, the most complete in New Jersey. Astonishingly small as the prices are, they represent new goods only, for not one of last season's garments finds a place in our magnificent collection.

New Spring Capes

in all styles of cloths, in silks, in velvets, in velours, in moire, in laces, flects and crepons.

$1.98 to $27.50

NEW

Spring Jackets

in black and colored, of every fashionable material, made in the latest style, with extra large sleeves, from

$3.98 to $10

Misses and Childrens Dresses of cloths, cashmeres and wash fabrics, in desirable designs and choice colors, from

49c to $7.50

NEW

Separate Skirts

of desirable materials, made in the very latest styles, lined and interlined, from

$1.98 to $25

MISSES AND CHILDRENS REEFERS

The greatest assortment ever shown, a large variety of cloths and styles, from

98c to $7.50

WRAPPERS AND

House Dresses

Our best previous efforts have been surpassed. Our line incomparably great; prices from

44c to $5

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,

147 and 149 Market Street,

Near Broad Street. Newark, N. J.

MARRIAGES.

ADAMS—KURZHALS—At the home of the bride's parents 130 West Second street on the evening of March 26, 1896, by Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., Mr. Arthur Gilbert Adams, to Miss Emma Kate Kurzhals.

HOUSE and building lots for sale in Westfield, N. J., high ground, good neighborhood, convenient to depot. Address box 104 Westfield N. J.

3 24 6-3 26 4 e

IN MEMORIAM.

LAING—In loving remembrance of our mother Avis Mosher Laing, who died in Washington D. C., who died one year ago today, Thursday March 26, [illegible].

Buried one year, our true and loving mother,
The heart that beat responsive to our own;
We start, we pause, we gaze at one another,
Then wondering ask, can she, indeed, be gone?
Vanished the gentle smile by which she won us
Ever to duty's path; and must we say
Of all the love and truth she lavished on us
We buried it one year ago today.

BY HER CHILDREN,
Augustus and Eva.

DEATHS.

MORALLEE—In this city March 24, 1896, Anna wife of Lewis Morallee, aged 54 years.

Funeral services from her late residence, 109 West 3d street, Tuesday, March 26, at 9 a. m., and from St. Mary's R. C. Church at 9:30.

DU BOIS—At Thomasville, Georgia, Friday, March 20, Frederick L. son of L. H. and E. DuBois, of 1124 Putnam avenue, Plainfield.

STURTEVANT—In this city March 23, 1896, Ann S. wife of Austin Sturtevant, and daughter of the late Charles Bell, in her 61st year. Funeral services from her late residence, 25 Liberty street, Monday afternoon March 25, at 3. Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend.

Newark and Paterson Sunday papers please copy.

SHERIFF'S SALE—New Jersey Supreme Court. The City National Bank of Plainfield vs. Jas. Y. Wilson, impld., etc. Fi. fa. de bo. et ter. In case.

By virtue of the abo[illegible] ciae to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on

WEDNESDAY, THE THIRD DAY OF APRIL, A. D. 1896,

at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all the right, title [illegible] of the above named defendant in and to all the following tract or parcel of land and premises situate in the city of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey:

Beginning at a point in Washington avenue and corner of land of formerly Phineas F. Randolph; thence running in a northwesterly course to the [illegible] wall of the bridge; thence running [illegible] southwesterly course five hundred and [illegible]-eight feet to a point in line of said Randolph's land, or formerly his; thence running in a southeasterly course one hundred and forty-two feet more or less to a stake and corner; thence running in a northeasterly course two hundred and twenty-eight feet more or less to the place of beginning.

GEORGE KYTE, Sheriff.

J. B. Coward, Att'y.
mh 4 td EDJ&C Fees $[illegible]

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.

Estate of John Jacob Lang[illegible].

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1896, on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said decedent, under oath or affirmation, and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG,
Executrix.

2 14 9 [illegible]

Corporation Notice.

The undersigned commissioners heretofore appointed by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield to make an estimate and assessment of damages that any owner or owners of land will sustain by the widening and laying out of Madison avenue from the southeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, pursuant to the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to widen Madison avenue from the southeasterly side line of West Front street to the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey," approved June 5th, [illegible], and also to ascertain the amount of damages that shall be assessed as aforesaid and of all necessary expenses incident to such widening and laying out, and to make a just and equitable assessment thereof upon the owners and occupants of the lands, tenements and real estate benefited thereby, in proportion to the benefits each shall be deemed to acquire, [illegible] assessment to be made pursuant to the [illegible] laws now in force in the State of New Jersey governing [illegible] [illegible] of the City Charter to the same, [illegible] they have this day filed their report and assessment in the office of the City Clerk and that the same is open to inspection of the public and will be presented to the Common Council at the [illegible] meeting of that body to be held at the Council Chamber, No. [illegible] Park avenue in the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, on Monday the [illegible] day of April, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, at eight o'clock P. M.

Dated, Plainfield, N. J., March [illegible], 1896.

EDWARD C. MULFORD.
WM. M. SANDFORD,
J. FRED MACDONALD,
Commissioners.

[illegible]

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1895. No 14

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

THE TOWN TROLLEY.

Council at Last Presents the Extension Ordinance.

CARS ARE TO COVER THE TOWN.

Various Routes Provided for the Speeding of the Electric Cars, and Many Safeguards Stipulated for the Protection and Revenue of the City—Even Through-Line Trains Must Stop at the Signal of Citizens—Successful Sewer Bidder Announced—Other Important Municipal Business.

When the Common Council Monday got to business at 8:45 the sewer matter was immediately taken up, and the contract was awarded to Michael Honan & Sons of Chester, Pa., they being the lowest bidders, and having qualified with the American Surety Co. as bondsmen. Mr. Honan was present, and as soon as the result was announced he said "Good night, gentlemen, much obliged!" and left. The certified checks of the unsuccessful bidders were ordered returned.

The report of the commissioners on the proposed widening of Madison avenue was filed, and the Finance Committee instructed to ascertain the city's position in regard to the assessment against it, also the city's liability for damages, etc.

E. P. Thorn applied for a liquor license. The application was referred to the License Committee.

Application of the Street Railway Company for extension privileges was received and filed, with map accompanying.

Mr. Fisk presented the following ordinance:

AN ORDINANCE

locating the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and regulating the construction and operation of the same, and also concerning the compensation to be paid by said Plainfield Street Railway Company to the City of Plainfield.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company's railway be and are hereby located in the following streets, roads and alleys of the city of Plainfield:

1. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue through Watchung avenue to East Fifth street, through East Fifth street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to Putnam avenue, and through Putnam avenue to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to South avenue, through South avenue to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at Netherwood.

2. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue, through Watchung avenue to East Third street, through East Third street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to North avenue, through North avenue to the city line at the township of Fanwood.

3. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue, through Watchung avenue to Fourth street, through Fourth street to Madison avenue, and through Madison avenue to Sixth street.

4. From the present terminus of the road in Front street at Grant avenue through Front street to the city line at Dunellen.

5. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue, through Watchung avenue to Fourth street and through Fourth street to Grant avenue.

And in those portions of said streets, roads and alleys marked out and shown on map filed in the office of the city clerk of said city April 1, 1895, entitled "Map showing location of tracks, turn-outs, poles, etc., of Plainfield Street Railway Company's extension, dated, April 1, 1895", to which reference is made and the same hereby made a part of this ordinance; and the said company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its extension to a street railway in said portions of said streets, roads and alleys under and subject to certain restrictions and regulations hereinafter specified or referred to; the same being such restrictions and regulations as the common council hereby deem requisite for the public interests, as well as subject to such further reasonable regulations as may be hereafter enacted by said common council. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed with the city clerk by said company, and be approved by said common council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

Sec. 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track railway for said extension, to be laid upon the middle line of the street, and shall construct the tracks, switches, turnouts and poles in the manner and at the points and places indicated on the same on said map.

Sec. 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the Committee on Streets, the paving or other surface materials of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks. In case of double tracks, or switches or turnouts, the expression "occupied by its tracks" shall be construed to mean all space in the street between the outermost rails. In case the city shall at any time determine to pave or repave any street or section of a street, the said company shall forthwith repave any portion of said street or section of street which may be occupied by the company's tracks and for eighteen inches beyond, with same material and in same manner, and shall do so at the company's expense under the supervision of the street commissioner. If said company shall at any time fail to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the work or repairs hereinbefore specified may be done or made by or under the direction of said committee on streets, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall on demand be paid by said company to said city; provided that the said committee on streets or a majority of them shall give at least ten days notice in writing of the intention to do such work or make such repairs, said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Sec. 4. The said company and its officers, agents, servants or employees shall not, nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or avenue, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel thereon; but, when removing said snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its officers, servants, agents or employees shall cause the same to be immediately levelled between said track or tracks and the gutter lines on each side thereof, unless the fall of snow shall have been too heavy to make it practicable to level the same, in which latter case the said company shall pay its pro rata of the expense of the removal of said snow. Upon violation of any of the provisions of this section, there shall be incurred a penalty of twenty dollars for any city block in which any such violation shall take place, to be paid to the city by said company or by any of its said officers, agents or employees so offending, for each and every offence.

Sec. 5. That the rights and privileges intended to be given by this ordinance to said company are subject to all limitations, provisions, terms and conditions set forth and contained in sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of the ordinance of the city, entitled, "An ordinance locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and regulating the construction and operation of the same and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars", approved April 27, 1891, to the same extent and with the same effect as if said sections were re-enacted in full as a part of this ordinance.

Sec. 6. That the gauge of the tracks of said company to be hereafter laid shall be four feet eight and one-half inches, and the other tracks of said company already laid may be made of the same gauge. That all the cars of the said company shall be similar to those now in use by it or such as shall be approved by the common council of said city. They shall be lighted by electricity, and properly heated in winter. Said company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing and equip said cars with proper bells or gongs, and said cars shall be run at a speed of not more than twelve miles an hour. No salt shall be used by said company on any part of its tracks, except on the curves and cross-overs. For violation of any of the provisions of this section there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for each offence and ten dollars additional for every day that such violation shall continue not exceeding one hundred dollars on any one conviction.

Sec. 7. That said company shall on or before the first day of August, 1895, equip each street railway car by it operated or run within the city of Plainfield, with fenders of the most improved pattern, to be selected by a commission of 3 appointed by the Mayor, and so attached to the car as best to protect from injury persons or vehicles using the streets or riding on the said cars; that after said last mentioned date no street railway car, the motive power of which is electricity, shall be operated or run upon any of the streets of said city, unless such car is equipped with fenders as above required, and in case any such car is operated or run contrary thereto the said company and every person or persons who shall either as president, manager, conductor or motorman or otherwise be engaged in so operating or running any such car shall be deemed to have violated this section and on conviction shall forfeit and pay fifty dollars for each day during which such violation shall continue, not exceeding one hundred dollars in any one conviction.

Sec. 8. If the said company shall fail to build or construct its extension in Fourth street from Madison avenue to Grant avenue within six months from the time when so directed by the common council, or shall fail to build or construct the remaining extensions herein provided for with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within nine months next after the passage of this ordinance, or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid daily and every day for the space of three consecutive months, all the rights, powers and privileges and every one of them of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this supplemental ordinance, shall thereupon cease and determine, and this ordinance shall be null and void so far as the grant of any such right, power and privilege to said company is concerned, and in either of such cases the common council expressly reserve the right to cause the said railroad or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them, and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repairing the said street or streets, and of restoring the same as nearly as possible to its or their original condition, to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns, provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement, signed by the city clerk, and published in any one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

The time during which the said company shall be delayed in the prosecution of its work or in the operation of its road or in any section thereof by injunction or other legal proceedings in the courts of New Jersey, or the federal courts in New Jersey, shall not be included within the nine months within which the said extensions are to be constructed and put into complete operation.

Sec. 9. That the said company shall for each and every mile of track laid already or that shall hereafter be laid, whether under the provisions of the ordinance hereinabove referred to, approved April 27, 1891, or the amendment thereof approved May 4, 1892, or under the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance authorizing the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend the location of its tracks", approved Oct. 4, 1892, or under this ordinance, or under any other ordinance, and also for every mile of track that may be owned or operated or that may hereafter be owned or operated by said company within the limits of the city of Plainfield, pay or cause to be paid to the collector of taxes of said city for the use of the said city, the following sums, to wit: For the year beginning Jan. 1, 1896, fifty dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1897, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1898, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan 1, 1899, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1900, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1901, one hundred and twenty-five dollars a mile, for each and every mile of track; said payments to be made each and every year in advance. For the years succeeding that beginning 1901 the said company shall pay at the same rate as for the year 1901, provided that when the gross receipts in any one year from the entire system within the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield shall equal or exceed eighty thousand dollars, then for that year and annually thereafter, the said company shall pay annually to said city collector for the use of said city five per cent. of the gross earnings of said company, and said gross earnings shall be construed to include all earnings of said company and full proportion on all earnings on through traffic to be calculated according to the proportion between the entire length of the journey and the number of miles travelled within the limits of the city of Plainfield or the borough of North Plainfield or both as the case may be. That to enable the city to ascertain from time to time the amount of gross earnings of said company the books of the company shall be open to inspection by the finance committee of the common council or such other person or persons as the common council shall for that purpose designate.

Sec. 10. That the tracks and cars of said company shall be used for the carrying of passengers only; that no freight shall be carried by said company or over its tracks, and that no baggage other than hand baggage actually carried by passengers shall be carried or allowed upon the cars of said company or any other cars passing over said tracks. That cars shall not be run in trains of more than two cars over any of the tracks of said company, and that all cars shall stop upon being signalled by any foot passenger at any street corner past which said tracks are or shall be laid and passengers shall be freely allowed to board said cars or alight therefrom at any of said street corners. Any violation of any of the provisions of this section by said company or any of its employes shall be subject to a penalty of twenty dollars fine for each and every offence.

Sec. 11. That in case said company shall lease its tracks or any portion of the same, or sell, or assign its franchises, or attempt so to do, said company will cause to be inserted in any such lease, deed, bill of sale, assignment or other transfer, a stipulation and covenant and condition that the same is made subject to the provisions of this ordinance, and that the lessee, vendee, assignee or other person to whom such lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer may be made or intended to be made in accepting the same agrees to be bound thereby and to conform thereto, and will in turn insert a clause similar to that required by this section in case of any lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer to be made, so that no persons or corporations shall acquire any rights in the premises except subject to the same terms and conditions as herein provided.

Sec. 12. That said company upon the final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby, shall as a condition precedent file with the city clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the corporation counsel, wherein said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein, on the part of said company, required to be observed, kept and performed; that it will, at any and all times hereafter, fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield of and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns, of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action, suit or proceeding.

Sec. 13. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract, file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the common council and corporation counsel of said city, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained, on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by the said company, its successors or assigns.

Sec. 14. The company shall file with the city clerk, within thirty days next after the passage of this ordinance, their acceptance, under their corporate seal and signed by their president, of the terms and provisions, restrictions, and regulations hereof, and every one of them, and, in default thereof, it shall be understood and held that they decline to accept the same, and thereupon all rights, powers and privileges, to them granted hereby, shall forever cease and be at an end, in the same manner and with the same effect as if this ordinance had never been passed.

The ordinance was tabled after reading, to enable all to examine and discuss it at the next meeting.

The Council adjourned to meet again Monday night, April 8, when all interested in the street railway extension will be given a chance to be heard.

THE SCHOOL BOARD MEETS.

Fire Escapes and Building Repairs the Chief Topics of Consideration.

Little business of importance was transacted at the regular April meeting of the Board of Education, held last evening.

All the members were present, and President Probasco was in the chair.

Considerable time was occupied in auditing the many monthly bills.

The matter of fire escapes for the school buildings was brought up, and after a short discussion was referred to the proper committee.

The question of school repairs came in for considerable amount of discussion, some thinking that the bills for this work were running up too high; but explanations were made; and when all understood that none except necessary repairs had been made, the subject was dropped.

Collector Johnson reported $500 collected as school-tax money, the same having been deposited in the bank.

The Board made a request that the City Assessor make the rate of .45 per cent. on taxable valuation of the city property for the coming year's expenses.

It was voted to raise $4,000 this year for mortgage indebtedness. $1,406.87 was reported as having been received from County Superintendent Holmes.

Mr. Lovell, chairman of committee on teachers, stated that there was too much crowding in the schools, and suggested that an additional room be opened in the Wadsworth building and used as a kindergarten.

The need of a flag walk across the grounds at the Bryant School was reported, also that of a curb on the Sixth street side. They will be looked after by the Board.

A cement walk was reported as being laid in the Bryant School to replace the wornout board floor in the basement. It was decided that city water be placed in all the schools not having the same.

It was stated that the need of new furniture in the Wadsworth building was paramount. The matter was left with the proper committee.

Chandler Riker communicated with Board asking for consent to run the trolley through Fourth street. The Board was not inclined to sign for it, unless the company would promise not to go through Arlington avenue.

The matter will be considered, and legal advice will be obtained.

This Car Beats Two.

The new passenger elevator which is being placed in the Babcock Building by the Elektron Manufacturing Company of Springfield, Mass., will be of quartered oak, with combination gas and electric lights, capable of carrying 2,000 pounds or 10 people. The work of placing the elevator in position is under the supervision of F. A. Wallace, an expert in this line of work.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

PARK CLUB HOLDS IT.

Still Whist Champion of the United States.

THE FOUR WIN BY 3 POINTS.

Quaker City Again Routed, in an Intensely Absorbing Contest for the Challenge Silver Trophy—Other Experts to Try Their Mettle.

The Park Club whist team again displayed their superior skill at this great American game of cards, Saturday, when they defeated the Philadelphia Whist Club of Philadelphia, by the score of 21 to 18, for the silver championship trophy of the American Whist League, which is composed of the crack whist clubs of the principal cities in the United States.

The score:

AFTERNOON GAME.

PARKS.		PHILADELPHIA.
Townsend and Rogers McCutcheon and Howell	4	Lowry and Hart Neff and Hill	3
Townsend and Howell Rogers and McCutcheon	2	Neff and Hart Hill and Lowry	2
Rogers and Howell Townsend and McCutcheon	3	Lowry and Neff Hill and Hart	4
Totals	9		10

EVENING PLAY.

PARKS.		PHILADELPHIA.
Townsend and Rogers McCutcheon and Howell	5	Lowry and Hart Neff and Hill	3
Townsend and Howell Rogers and McCutcheon	3	Neff and Hart Hill and Lowry	4
Rogers and Howell Townsend and McCutcheon	5	Lowry and Neff Hill and Hart	1
Totals	12		8

Park Club	21
Philadelphia Club	18

Examination for Admission to West Point and Annapolis.

Hon. Charles N. Fowler, member of Congress from this district, has issued the following notice:

The examination of applicants for the appointments to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, and the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis will be held at 9 Saturday, June 1, 1895, at the Pingry School Building, in Elizabeth.

The appointment at West Point, having become vacant, must be filled at once.

The candidates for the appointment at the naval academy must be between the ages of 15 and 20. The candidates for the appointment at the military academy must be between the ages of 17 and 22.

All candidates must be free from any deformity, disease or infirmity which may render them unfit for service, and should be physically sound, well formed and of robust constitution.

All candidates must be well-versed in reading, in writing, including orthography, in arithmetic, and have a knowledge of the elements of English grammar, of descriptive geography and of the history of the United States.

Will Meet the Crack Shots.

Neaf Apgar went to Paterson today to participate in the great American handicap shooting match, in which 57 of the best amateur and wing shots of the country have paid an entrance fee of $25 to contest for the valuable prizes to be given to the winners. The conditions of the shoot are 25 live birds, with handicaps ranging from 26 to 33 yards, 50 yards boundary and a 33-yard dead line. Mr. Apgar's shooting number is 24, handicapped at 30 yards. The New York Sun speaks of Mr. Apgar as one of the best amateur shots in the contest.

—John Powers of Grove street is improving his property by raising the sidewalk up to the grade and setting out trees.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

OBITUARY.

Louis J. Denton.

Just as the sun had passed below the western horizon Saturday evening, the life of one of God's noblest works, an honest man, passed peacefully away, to awake in the fullness of eternal glory.

For the past eleven weeks Louis J. Denton of Prospect Hill has been a sufferer from chronic cystitis and inflammation of the stomach, until Saturday evening when the end came.

He asked those who had watched so lovingly and tenderly by his bedside if they would turn his face to the West, that he might once more see the sinking sun. This wish was gratified, and as he was placed thus upon his bed his life went out so quietly and gently that the change was scarcely noticeable.

Not once during the eleven-weeks illness did one impatient word pass his lips. He rested entirely on the arm of Him who was his strength. The disease which had fastened its grip upon him caused considerable restlessness, and often during the night when this uneasiness would seem to get the best of him, his sister, Mrs. Bliss, would read selections to him from the Psalms. The comfort and ease given would call forth the words, "That 's beautiful! That's grand!"

Mr. Denton's life was a quiet one, and made up of deeds more than words. As a thorough Christian man he followed closely the lines of duty, and his identity with aggressive religious movements was marked, and his activity in the First Baptist Church and its missions was cause for much encouragement to all. His attendance at divine services was regular, and previous to his illness he had missed only three Sundays at church services in thirteen years. It was his delight to be with God's people, and assist in the work that was so near and dear to his heart. Before he passed away he called to his bedside his employes, and his regret seemed to be that he had n't done enough for them. He urged them to place their trust in his heavenly father.

Louis James Denton, who was next to the youngest of eight children, was born in Benton, Yates County, N. Y., June 16, 1838, and was nearly 57 years old. His boyhood days were spent in Benton, and at an early age the family moved to Penn Yan, a few miles distant, where he lived for some time. At the age of 16 he united with the Penn Yan Baptist Church, and was a member until the family moved to Plainfield in 1859. When the family had settled here an impressive incident occurred, when the family of seven united with the First Baptist Church. Louis and his brother Sylvester formed a partnership, and started the nursery on Prospect Hill, where it stands today. After the death of Sylvester Louis continued the business, and up to the time of his illness was very active in it.

September 15, 1881, Mr. Denton married Emma D. Brown of Dunellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses D. Brown, who with faithful wifely attentions ministered to every want and comfort that could make happy his closing days. Mrs. Denton and three children, Sarah Pauline Denton, Arthur Lewis Denton and Frank Chester Denton, are left. Two sisters, Miss Clara R. Denton and Mrs. Bliss, wife of Rev. E. W. Bliss of Washington, also survive him.

The funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 from his late home. Interment will be private.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY.

Plainfield to Have the Only Chamois-Skin Finishing Plant in the United States.

Within the course of a few weeks ground will be broken on the land situated between Evona station and Rock avenue, on South Second street, for the erection of an immense chamois-skin finishing plant. For some time New York capitalists have been considering the investment of money in such a plant, and last week, through the real-estate agency of Bacon & Vail, a deal was consummated whereby the promoters have purchased 800 feet of ground fronting on South Second street, from the New Jersey Land Improvement Company, with the privilege of buying 400 feet additional when desired.

Plans for the erection of buildings necessary to conduct the business, are now in the hands of New York architects, and as soon as finished will be put into the hands of contractors, who will immediately break ground for the structures.

This will be the only factory of its kind in the United States, and will in all probability give employment to a large number of Plainfield people, especially young women.

—The letter-box which was attached to the signpost in front of F. L. C. Martin's bicycle headquarters on Park avenue was removed yesterday afternoon to Moy's corner.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Legacy of $200 Received from the Joanna Craig Estate—Plan to Make the Y. M. C. A. Building a Central Delivery Station.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading-room, held last evening, there were present M. W. Tyler, W. S. Larrabee, J. B. Dumont, Rowland Cox, and Wm. M. Stillman. The minutes of the meetings of Feb. 5, March 5, and March 8, were read and approved.

The treasurer reported that he had received from the estate of Joanna K. Craig the legacy of $200 bequeathed by Mrs. Craig to the Library.

His report was received and approved, and he was directed to set aside the money received as a special fund for the improvement and extension of the Library building.

The following bills were ordered paid from the general fund: Miss E. L. Adams, $50; Morrill Bros., $9; Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Co., $11.90; E. E. Davis, $30; Thorpe & Ivins $11.50; W. H. Williams, $12.45; Samuel H. Allen, $41.85; and the following will come out of the special fund, derived from the Babcock houses: D. J. Van Norstrand Co., subscription to magazines, etc., $62.25.

The following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, That this Board do hereby adopt a common seal."

The secretary was directed to obtain such a seal, and keep the same in his custody.

A communication from the Young Men's Christian Association referring to the Library using their building as a delivery station, was referred to the Library Committee with power.

Librarian's Report for the Month of March, 1895.

Volumes on accession-book, Feb. 28, 1895	12,[illegible]
" added by purchase	59
Volumes added by gift	25
Volumes now in the library	12,[illegible]
Number of card-holders	2,[illegible]
Cash rec'd from fines	$ 19.12
" " " non-resident subscriptions	$ 4.00
Cash received from sale of catalogues	$ 2.00
House Circulation.
Fiction	1479
Juvenile	640
Biography	199
Travel	229
Philosophy	30
Religion	48
Sociology	73
Philology	1
Natural science	89
Useful arts	46
Fine arts	49
Literature	296
History	164
General works	58
Total	2877
Total for March, '94	[illegible]
Increase	199
Average circulation per day	115
Visitors to building	5,734

Gifts during the month—

Mch 5. From State of New Jersey, Report of Geological Survey, 1893.

Mch 5. From Mrs. Ephraim Miller, Hinton's "History of the U. S."

Mch 11. From Miss H. Gardner, Dickens's Works, 15 vols.

Mch 14. From Chas. Bullman, Muhleman's "Money of the U. S."

Mch 15. From Smithsonian Inst., Rockhill's "Journey Thro' Mongolia".

Mch 30. From Mrs. W. H. Sampson, New York Hist. Society Collections, 6 vols.

EMMA L. ADAMS,
Librarian.

Dunellen Election.

The following ticket was elected in Dunellen yesterday:

Borough Commissioners — Peter W Brakeley, Fred E Wilcox,

Assessor—Chas A Coriell.

Collector—Geo W Day.

Freeholder—Firman H Giles.

Justice of the Peace—Peter V Huff.

Commissioners of Appeal—Samuel Lockey for 3 years, John P Apgar for 2 years, Henry V Dunham for 1 year.

Pound Master—C Wesley Risler.

Overseer of the Poor—Wm H Cole.

Constable—Albert W Warden.

Appropriations — Borough purposes, $1,600; Poor, $200.

—Alexander Adams is erecting a barn on his property on Netherwood avenue.

Those who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Koniken, of Bolan, Worth Co., who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Fort Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine, and he uses his own words: "It cured me right up." He also says: A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me, he procured a bottle of it and it cured them up in a week. 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TOXIN
By OUIDA

[Copyright by Bacheller Johnson & Bacheller.]

CHAPTER IV.

After the death of the servingman Biancon the name of the English scientist and surgeon became known and revered amongst the persons of his profession in Venice. The poor man had died certainly from the shock to the nerves, but that was of small moment. The operation had been eminently successful, as science counts success. It had been admirably performed, and had, as he had said to Veronica, cleared up a doubt which could not, without a human subject, have been satisfactorily dissipated. His skill, his manual dexterity, his courage, were themes of universal praise, and more than one rich person of the Veneto entreated his examination, and were submitted to his treatment.

Andreis saw but little of him in the daytime, but most evenings in prima sera they met in the Palazzo Laranigra. Then Damer spoke little, but he spoke with effect; and, when he was silent, it seemed to this young mistress of the house that his silence was odiously eloquent, for it appeared always to say to her: "What a mindless creature you are! What a mindless creature you love!"

"You play with your happiness," said her duenna, angrily, to her.

"I do not play, indeed," she answered, seriously, but said no more.

Even in broad daylight, and on the sunlit waters of the lagoon, as she saw in the distance the foundry flames and factory smoke of the Fondamente, where Damer's tower stood, she shuddered in the hot midsummer noon. It seemed as if even from that distance the eyes of the strange Englishman could see her and lay silence on her lips and terror on her heart. It was but a morbid fancy—she knew that; but she could not shake off the impression. Even when far out on the green waves of the Adriatic, when Venice had long dropped away out of sight, the chilliness and oppression of the hallucination remained with her.

As summer drew on Andreis decided if he could not persuade her to promise herself to him in Venice he would follow her to the hills above Cadara, and there decide his fate. He had little doubt that he would succeed before the summer should have wholly fled.

He went out one day to make some purchases of glass and metal work for which one of his sisters had written him. He thought that when they were completed it would be but courtesy to go and tell Damer that he himself was about to leave the city, and offer him his yacht to go in, if he desired it, to Trieste. The indulgent kindliness of Andreis made him wish to part friends with a man to whom he considered that he owed his life.

He bade his gondolier steer northwards to the Fondamente. In passing the Ponte del Paradiso, a sandalo, in which there was one person alone, fouled his own in the narrow channel, and that solitary person was Damer.

"I was just going to your apartments," cried Andreis, while his gondolier swore as his prow grazed the wall of Palazzo Narni.

"I am going to the hospital, and shall not be at home till dark," replied Damer, ungraciously.

"I was coming to tell you that I am about to leave Venice."

"And are going to Goritz, no doubt," said Damer, with a dark, brief smile.

"I may be and I may not," replied Andreis, in a tone which implied that wherever he chose to go was no business of anyone's. "Anyhow, I am led to say that the schooner is entirely at your disposition if you remain here or if you cross to Trieste."

"Thanks. Yachts are rich men's toys for which I have no use," answered Damer, without saying where he was going or what he intended to do. "Send yours to her docks in Messina, if you do not require her yourself."

"You might be a little more polite," said Andreis, half angrily, half jestingly. "I should be glad to do you any services."

"Poor men cannot accept such services."

"Why do you constantly speak of your poverty? You have intellect; that is much rarer than riches."

"And much less esteemed," said Damer, with that brief, dull smile which always depressed and troubled Andreis. "I fear I cannot stay to gossip," he added. "I am already rather late for a conference at the hospital."

They were about to part—Damer to pass underneath the bridge, Andreis to pursue his way to a coppersmith's workshop, when a weak, infantine cry smote on their ears, echoed by other shriller childish voices.

Some children were playing on the black barges which were laden with firewood and coal. They were small creatures, half naked in the warm air and sportive as young rabbits. They ran, leaped, climbed the piles of fuel, caught each other in mimic wrestling and screamed with glad laughter. There was only one who did not join in the games, a little boy who lay languidly and motionless on some sacks, and watched the others with heavy

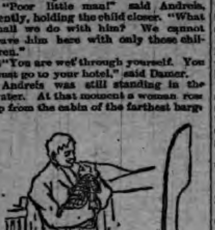
As their gambols passed under that wall the sporting children, growing wilder and more reckless, rushed in their course past and over the little sick boy, and jostled him so roughly that they pushed him over the edge of the barge, and he fell, with a shrill cry, into the water. The others, frightened at what had befallen them, gathered together, whispering and afraid, irresolute and incapable. The fallen child disappeared. The water hereabouts is thick and dark, and sewage flows unchecked into it. It was in that instant of his fall that his cry, and the shrieks of his companions, rose shrilly on the morning silence. In a second Andreis had sprung from the gondola, dived for the child, who had drifted underneath the barge, and brought him up in his arms. He was a child of some five years old, with a pretty pale face and naked limbs; his small, curly head fell in exhaustion on the young man's shoulder, his ragged clothes were dripping.

Damer looked at him with professional insight. "That boy is ill," he said to Andreis. "You had better put him out of your arms."

"Poor little man!" said Andreis, gently, holding the child closer. "What shall we do with him? We cannot leave him here with only those children."

"You are wet through yourself. You must go to your hotel," said Damer.

Andreis was still standing in the water. At that moment a woman rose up from the cabin of the farthest barge



"POOR LITTLE MAN!" SAID ANDREIS.

and came leaping wildly from one barge to another, screaming: "The child! the child! my Carlino!"

She was his mother. Andreis gave him to her outstretched arms and slipped some money into the little ragged shirt.

"I will come and see how he is in an hour," he said to her, amidst her prayers and blessings. "He is not well. You must take care of him—not leave him alone."

The child opened his eyes and smiled. Andreis stooped and kissed him.

"Go home by yourself. I will stay and see what is the matter with him," said Damer. Andreis went. Damer, bidding the woman go before him, walked over the barges until he reached the one in which she had a sort of rude deck-house or cabin, in which she and five children lived. There he examined the little boy.

"A sore throat," he said, simply. "I will bring you remedies."

He hailed a passing gondola and went to his house in the Fondamente.

"What is amiss with him?" said Andreis, later in the day.

"You would have done better to leave him in the canal water," replied Damer. "He is a weak little thing; he has never had any decent food; he will never recover."

"But what is it?"

"A sore throat," replied Damer as he had replied to the mother.

The went both to the Ca' Laranigra that evening. There were several people there; the night was very warm; the tall lilies and palms on the balcony glistened in the light of a full moon; there was music. Veronica held out the lute to Andreis.

"Will you not sing with me to-night?"

"Alas! You must forgive me. I am rather hoarse. I have no voice," he answered, with regret.

"I heard of what you did this morning," she murmured, in a low tone. "Your gondolier told mine. Perhaps you have taken a chill. I will go and see the little child to-morrow."

"We will go together," he replied, in the same soft whisper, while his hand touched hers in seeming only to take the lute. Damer saw the gesture where he sat in the embrasure of a window speaking of a frontier question of the hour with a German minister who was passing through Venice.

When they left the house two or three other men accompanied them on to the water-steps. Warm though as the night was, Andreis shivered a little as he wrapped his overcoat round him. "I could bear my sables," he said, as he descended the stairs. Damer looked at him in the moonlight, which was clear as the light of early morning.

"You should not plunge into sewage water and embrace little beggars," he said, coldly, as he accompanied one of the Venetian gentlemen whose palace was near the Fondamente, and who had offered him a seat in his gondola.

Andreis, refusing the entreaties of his companions to go and sup with them at Florian's, went to his rooms at the hotel. He had a flood of happiness at the well-springs of his heart, but in his body he felt feverish and cold.

"It is the sewage water. It got down my throat as I dived," he thought, recalling the words of his friend. "I shall sleep this chill off and be well again in the morning."

But he did not sleep; he drank some iced drinks thirstily, and only fell into a troubled and heavy slumber as the morning dawned red over the roofs of Venice, and the little cannon on the Giudecca saluted a new day.

He felt ill when he rose, but he bathed and dressed, and, though he had no appetite for breakfast, went down to his gondola, which he had bidden to be before the hotel at nine o'clock.

At parting from her he had arranged with Veronica that they should go at that hour to see the little child of the Bridge of Paradise.

As he stood on the steps and was about to descend Damer touched him on the arm.

"You are going to take the Countess Laranigra to the sick boy?"

"Yes," said Andreis, with a haughty accent; he did not like the tone of authority in which he was addressed.

"I forbid you to do so, then," said Damer. "She would only see a dead body, and that body infectious with disease."

Andreis was pained.

"Is the little thing dead?" he said, in a hushed voice. "Dead already?"

"He died twenty minutes ago. He had been ill for three days."

"Poor little pretty thing!" murmured Andreis. "I am sorry. I will go to the mother."

"You had better go to your bed. You are unwell. You did a foolish act yesterday."

"I am quite well. When I require your advice I will ask it," said Andreis, impatiently, as he entered his gondola and went to the house of Veronica. Damer, standing on the steps of the hotel, looked after him with a gaze which would have killed him could a look have slain.

Her house was bright in the morning radiance, the green water lapping its marbles, the lilies and palms fresh from the night's dew, the doors standing open showing the blossoming acacias in the garden behind.

She came to him at once in one of the smaller salons.

"I am ready," she said, gayly. "Look! I have got these fruits and toys for your little waif."

Then something in his expression checked her gladness.

"What is it?" she asked.

"The child is dead," said Andreis.

"Oh, how sad!" She put down the little gifts she had prepared on a table near her; she was tender-hearted and quickly moved; the tears came into her eyes for the little boy whom she had never seen.

Andreis drew nearer to her.

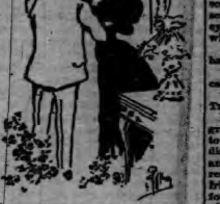
"Mia cara," he murmured. "Do not play with me any longer. Death is so near us always. I have told you a hundred times that I love you. I will make you so happy if you will trust to me. Tell me—tell me—"

She was softened by emotion, conquered by the answering passion which was in her; she did not speak, but her breast heaved, her lips trembled; she let him take her hands.

"You will be mine—mine—mine!" he cried, in delirious joy.

"I love you," she answered, in a voice so low that it was like the summer breeze passing softly over the lilies. "Hush! Leave me! Go now. Come back at three. I shall be alone."

The doors were open and the windows; in a farther chamber two liveried servants stood; approaching through the ante-room was the figure of the major-domo of the palace.



"YOU WILL BE MINE—MINE—MINE!"

Andreis pressed her hands to his lips and left her. He was dizzy from ecstasy, or so he thought, as the busts and statues of the entrance hall reeled and swam before his sight, and his limbs felt so powerless and nerveless that, if one of his gondoliers had not caught and held him, he would have fallen headlong down the water-steps.

CHAPTER V.

When three of the clock chimed from the belfries of St. Mark she awaited him alone in her favorite room, clothed in white with a knot of tea-roses at her breast; she was full of gladness; she looked at herself in the many mirrors and saw that she was as fair as the fair June day.

"How beautiful our lives will be!" she thought. "Poor little dead child! It was his little hands joined ours. Perhaps he is an angel of God now, and will be always with us!"

She heard the swish of oars at the the water-stairs below; she heard steps ascending those stairs; she heard the voice of her head servant speaking. It was he! She put her hand to her heart; it beat so wildly that the leaves of the roses fell; she crossed herself and murmured a prayer; such happiness seemed to merit gratitude.

Through the vista of the ante-chambers came the figure of a man. But it was not that of Andreis.

Damer came up to her with his calm, expressionless face, his latent eyes, his hair of authority and of indifference.

"You expected the Prince Andreis," he said to her. "I regret to tell you, madame, that he is unable to keep his appointment with you. He has taken the disease of which that child on the barge died this morning. He has what the vulgar call diphtheria."

Andreis lay in the large salon where they had dined together in the evening after finding the opal necklace. Damer had caused a bed to be taken into it and placed in the center of the room, as affording more air from the four large windows than was to be obtained from the lesser bedchamber adjoining. He did not give the true name to the disease in speaking to the people of the hotel: he spoke merely of cold and fever from a plunge in the hot noonday into foul canal water; on the local doctor, whom he paid the compliment of calling in, he enjoined the same reserve.

"The prince is very rich," he said. "he will pay for any loss which may be incurred, any renewal of furniture and of draperies."

From Andreis he did not conceal the truth.

Indeed, Andreis himself said, in a hoarse, faint voice: "I have the disease which the child had. Cure me if you can, for—"

He did not add why life was more than ever beautiful to him, but the tears rose into his eyes; the other understood what remained unspoken.

When three in the afternoon sounded from the clock-tower on the south side of the hotel he raised his head, and, with a despairing gesture, said to Damer: "She expects me. Go and explain to her; say I am ill. Tell her I would get up and keep my tryst if I died at her feet, but I fear—I fear—the contagion—for her."

"Lie where you are, and you will probably be well in a few days," said Damer. "I will leave Stefanio with you and take your message. I shall soon return. Meanwhile your man knows what to do."

Stefanio was the valet.

The eyes of Andreis followed him from the room with longing and anguish. He was not yet so ill that the apathy of extreme illness dulled his desires and stilled his regrets. Both were intense as life still was intense in him. He would have risen and dragged himself to the Ca' Laranigra; but as he had said he feared the infection for her which would be in his voice, in his touch, in his breath, in his mere presence.

"She loves me, she loves me," he thought, and he like a coward, like a knave, must be untrue to the first meeting she had promised him!

"Why is it," he thought, as the tears welled up under his closed eyelids, "that our better, kinder impulses always cost us so much more heavily than all our egotisms and all our vices?"

If he had left the little child underneath the barge to drown, would it not have been better even for the child? The little thing had only suffered some eighteen hours longer through his rescue.

"What did you tell her?" he asked, breathlessly, when Damer at last returned.

"I told her the truth," replied Damer, as he placed the thermometer under the sick man's armpit. "You have worried and fretted; your fever has increased."

"What did she say? She is not angry—offended?"

"Who can be so at the misfortune of disease? Of course she knows that you have incurred this misfortune through your own folly."

"Did she say so?"

"No; I am not aware that she said so. But she no doubt thought it. She bade me tell you not to agitate yourself."

"Was that all?"

"She added—for her sake," said Damer, with a cold, slight smile. He was truthful in what he repeated; he scorned vulgar methods of misrepresentation and betrayal. The heavy eyes of Andreis gleamed and lightened with joy.

"Thanks," he said softly, and his hot hand pressed that of his friend.

"I will write to her," he added. "You can disinfect a note?"

"Yes. But do not exert yourself. Try to sleep."

He crossed the room and closed the green wooden blinds; he gave an order to Stefanio, and dipped his hands in a disinfecting fluid; then he sat down and took up a book. But he could not read. He saw before him that blanched, frightened face, which a little while before had been raised to his as the voice of Veronica had cried to him: "Save him! You will save him? You have so much knowledge, so much power. You will save him for my sake!"

He had promised her nothing; he had only said briefly, in the language of people who were fools, that the issue of life and of death was in the hands of Deity. He had promised her nothing; in his own way he was sincere. Up to that time he had done everything which science and experience could suggest to combat the disease.

He called in a second medical man of the town and two sisters of charity to replace Stefanio, who grew alarmed for his own safety and would no longer approach the bed.

"Send for my mother," said Andreis, in his choked voice.

"Certainly," answered his friend; but Damer telegraphed only to the Andreis' palace in Palermo, and he knew that it was unlikely she would be in that city in the summer heats of the end of June.

It might be forwarded or it might not; Italian households are careless in such matters.

The disease which had fastened on Andreis was not one which waits. But when he murmured once and again. "Send for my mother!" Damer could, with a clear conscience, reply: "I have telegraphed."

The day wore into night, and the night waned into dawn. All the animation of Venetian life began again to awake with the whirr of the pigeons taking their sunrise flight from dome and cupola and pinnacle and gutter. To the sisters of charity their patient seemed better; to the surgeons of the city also; Damer said nothing.

Andreis drew his pencil and paper to him and wrote feebly: "Veronica?"

Damer read the name.

"She came to see you an hour or two ago," he answered. "But I could not allow it. Your illness is infectious."

He spoke in his usual brief, calm, indifferent manner. Andreis sighed, but it was a sigh of content; he was half asleep; he turned on his pillows and drew the little note which he had hidden under them once more against his cheek.

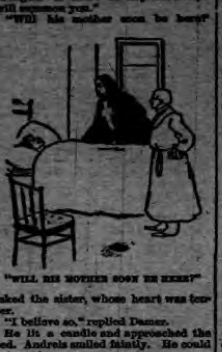
"He will sleep himself well," said the nun.

"Let us hope so," replied Damer; but she heard from his tone that he did not share her belief.

It was now eleven o'clock.

"Go and rest," he said to her. "You need it. I and his servant will watch to-night. If there be any necessity I will summon you."

"Will his mother soon be here?"



"WILL HIS MOTHER SOON BE HERE?"

asked the sister, whose heart was tender.

"I believe so," replied Damer.

He lit a candle and approached the bed. Andreis smiled faintly. He could not speak.

"Let me see your throat," said Damer.

He saw that the nun had spoken truly; the fungus growth was wasting, the false membrane was shrinking; there was a healthier look on the tongue. He set the lamp down and said nothing.

"Is he not better?" said the sister, anxiously.

"Perhaps," he replied. "If there be no re-formation of the false membrane he may be saved. Go, my good woman, and rest while you can."

She went, nothing loth, to her supper and her bed. Damer was alone with the man who trusted him and whose mother trusted him.

"Man cannot control circumstances," he thought, "but the wise man can assist circumstances, the fool does not."

Once it had suited him to save that young man's life; now it suited him to end it.

One action was as wrong or as righteous as the other. It was an exercise of power, as when the monarch grants an amnesty or signs a death warrant. Who blames the monarch who does but use his power? The prerogative of superior reason is higher than the prerogative of a monarch

His professional conscience would have shrunk from giving the disease, but it did not shrink from making death certain where it was merely possible. He did but add a stronger poison to that which nature had already poisoned.

Men slew their rivals in duels and no one blamed them; who should blame him because he used the finer weapon of science instead of the coarser weapon of steel? He did but carry out the doctrine of the laboratory to its just and logical sequence.

What he felt for Veronica was not love, but passion, and not passion alone, but the sense of dominion. He knew that the fair creature shrank from him, but submitted to him. All the intense instinctive tyranny of his nature longed to exercise itself on her, the beautiful and patrician thing, so far above him, so fragile and so fair. He knew that he would never possess her or command her except through fear; but this would suffice to him. The finer and more delicate elements of love were indifferent to him, were, indeed, unknown. They had existed in Andreis, whom he had despised; but in his own temperament they could find no dwelling-place.

Late at night and early at dawn messengers came from the Ca' Laranigra. Damer replied to all inquiries: "It is impossible to say what turn the disease may take."

Andreis had written at intervals various penciled notes to her; indistinct, feebly scrawled, but still coherent. He pointed to each when it was written and looked at his friend with supplicating eyes. He could not speak, for the false membrane filled his throat. Damer had taken each note.

"To Countess Laranigra?" he had asked.

Andreis gave mute assent. Damer had carried each note to the next room, read it, then disinfected it, then sent it to its destination. He was of too proud a temper to use the usual small arts of the traitor.

Once she wrote in reply.

"I cannot see, my eyes are too weak," Andreis scrawled on a scrap of paper. "Read it to me."

Damer opened and read it aloud. It was short, timid, simple, but a deep love and an intense anxiety spoke in it. Andreis took it and laid his cheek on it with a smile of ineffable peace. It seemed to give him firmer hold on life.

Damer sat by the bedside and watched him.

He believed that he would recover.

Andreis slept, his cheek on the little letter, as a child falls to sleep with a favorite toy on its pillow.

In the dark Damer was told that a lady who was below in her gondola desired to see him. He descended the stairs prepared to find Veronica Laranigra. She was veiled; he could not see her features, but he knew her by the turn of her head, the shape of her hand, before she spoke.

"You come for news of the prince?" he said, coldly and harshly. "I can give you none. The disease is always uncertain and deceptive."

"Let me see him! oh, let me see him!" she murmured. "I came for that. No matter what they say. No matter what danger there be. Only let me see him!"

"That is wholly impossible," replied Damer, in an unchanged tone. "Why do you come on such errands?"

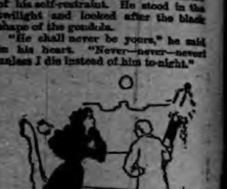
"Who should see him if not I? Who are you that you should keep me from him?"

"I am a man of science whose duty it is to protect you from yourself. Go home, madame, and pray for your betrothed. That is all that you can do."

"Why does she love him?" thought Damer. "Like to like. Fool to fool. Flower to flower!"

From his soul he despised her, poor, lovely, mindless, childlike creature! But her voice turned his blood to flame; the sound of her weeping deepened his scorn to hate; the touch of her ungloved hand was ecstasy and agony in one. He loved her with furious, brutal, unsparing passion, like lava under the ice of his self-restraint. He stood in the twilight and looked after the black shape of the gondola.

"He shall never be yours," he said in his heart. "Never—never—never! unless I die instead of him to-night."



"LET ME SEE HIM! OH! LET ME SEE HIM!"

CHAPTER VI.

He remained there some minutes whilst the water traffic passed by him unnoticed and the crowds flocked out from a novena in the Salute. One of the medicine men whom he had summoned came out on to the steps.

"The sisters say the prince is better. He seems so," said his colleague.

"What do they know?" said Damer; and added, less harshly: "It is too early to be able to make sure of recovery; it is a disease which is very treacherous."

"You have more knowledge than I," said the Venetian, who was a meek man, not very wise.

"Come to my laboratory in the Fondamente, and I will show you something and tell you something," said Damer.

His Italian colleague, flattered, complied with the request.

What he showed him were three animals, two rabbits and a cat—inoculated with and dying of diphtheria; what he explained to him were the theories of Loffler and Klebs and the discovery of the antidote by Behring; and displayed to him some serum which he had received from Roux, who was only then at the commencement of his applications of Behring's theory.

The Venetian doctor inspected and listened with deep respect.

"Why do you not try this treatment on the prince?" he said, which was what Damer desired and intended him to say.

"I will do so on my own responsibility if he is no better in the morning," he replied. "But you will admit that the responsibility will be great, the theory of the cure being at present unknown to the general public, and no one of his family being at present in Venice to authorize the experiment."

"We are there as your colleagues, and we shall support you," replied the more obscure man, touched and flattered by the deference of one who was in the confidence of French and German men of science.

"If there be no other way," said Damer, as he put the small phial of serum back into a locked case.

The dual meaning which lay in the words was like a devil's laugh in his ears.

When the Venetian doctor had left him he had taken the phial of serum, inoculating syringe, and another smaller bottle containing a clear liquid; he had put these together in the breast pocket of his coat. He looked up at the Ca' Laranigra as he passed it; its windows were all dark, and the white lilies had no light upon them save that from the rays of the moon. As he entered the lighted hall of the hotel they handed to him a telegram. It was from the Princess Andreis.

She had received his dispatch twelve hours late, as she had been in her summer palace in the mountains; she had left Sicily immediately, and said that she would travel without pause at the utmost speed possible. She added: "I commend my darling to God and you."

Damer crushed the paper up in his hand with a nervous gesture and flung it out, by the open doorway, into the water below.

Then he ascended the staircase, and entered his patient's room.

The night was very warm; the windows stood wide open; there was a shaded porcelain lamp on the table. One nun watched whilst the other slept. Andreis lay still on the great bed in the shadow; he was awake, his eyes were looking upward, his mouth was open, but his breathing was easier and less hard. The sister of charity whispered to Damer: "I think he is better. The fungus growth seems loosening. We have given the wine and the meat essence. He could swallow."

Damer said nothing. He was absorbed in meditation. The infliction of death was nothing to him; could be nothing; he was used to kill as he was used to torture with profound indifference, with no more hesitation than he ate or drank or fulfilled any natural function of his body. What was the man lying sleeping there to him? Only an organism like those which daily he broke up and destroyed and threw aside. Only an organism, filled by millions of other invisible organisms, by a myriad of parasite animalculæ, numerous as the star-dust in the skies.

He sat by the window and looked out absently at the night.

He knew that the nun was right; he knew that the disease was passing away from the sick man; that, if left alone, sleep and youth would restore him to health, to love, and joy.

Should he leave him alone?

The mother of Andreis could not be there before another day, travel as rapidly as she would. He knew the effect of affection on the nervous system, and that the sight and sense of a beloved person near often gave to enfeebled frames the power of resistance and recovery. Those emotions were not in himself, but he recognized their existence, and he knew that to Andreis the emotions and the affections were very strong in proportion as the mental powers were slight.

"What thou doest, do quickly," he murmured in words which he had heard in his childhood as he had sat in the old parish church of his native village. He rose and walked to the bed.

Andreis still seemed to sleep, the breathing was heavy and forced chiefly through the nasal passage; but there was a look of returning serenity on his features—a look which the man of science is well aware precedes recovery, not death. As surely as anyone can gauge the unseen future, he was sure that if let alone Andreis would recover. He no longer hesitated; he no longer doubted. He went to the adjacent chamber, where the two nuns, still dressed, were sleeping. He awakened them.

"Come," he said gently. "He is worse. I am about to try the cure of Behring. It may succeed. It will be necessary to hold him. I require you both."

He was well aware that it would be unwise to essay that operation alone—it would rouse comment in the day to come.

"Hold him motionless," he said to the two women. "Do not awake him if you can avoid it."

He filled the inoculating syringe from one of the little phials which he had brought from the Lattere. He stood in the full light of the lamp so that the two sisters could see all that he did.

"Loosen his shirt," he said to them. Andreis still slept; in his predisposition to sleep the few drops of chloral had sufficed to render him almost insensible.

Damer bent over him and inserted the injecting needle into the side of his throat; the incision disturbed him without wholly loosening the bonds of the soporific; he struggled slightly, moaned a little, but the nuns succeeded in resisting his endeavor to rise.

The face of Damer in the lamplight was not paler than usual, but his hand trembled as he withdrew the syringe.

"What is Behring's cure?" asked the nun who felt most interest in her patient.

Damer had walked to the window and stood looking out at the moonlit water.

"An antitoxin; the serum of an immune beast," he answered, calmly, as he turned slightly towards her. The nun did not understand, but she was afraid of troubling him with other questions.

He had left on a table the syringe and the phial of serum which was half empty. But in the breast pocket of his coat he had the phial of toxin, which was wholly empty. The nuns, engaged in holding down Andreis, had not seen that the phial on the table was not the phial from which the syringe had been filled; and, when used, Damer had plunged the syringe immediately into a bowl of disinfecting acid. There was no trace anywhere that the toxin had been used—no trace whatever save in the tumifying vein of the sick man's throat.

"You had better stay, you may be wanted, and it is two o'clock," said Damer to the nurses. "I shall remain here. There will be, I hope, a great change soon."

He went out on to the balcony and turned his back on the watching women and leaned against the iron work, looking down on the canal, where nothing moved except the slow, scarcely-visible ripple of the water.

He did not repent or regret; he did not see any evil in his act. The right of the strong, the right of the sage was his; he had but exercised his reason to produce an issue he desired.

So he thought as he leaned against the iron scroll work and watched the thick, dark water glide by the Salute. There was a faint light in the sky on the east, but he could not see the east where he stood; it was still completely night between the walls of the Grand canal. The voice of a man called up to him from the darkness below.

"Madame sends me to know how goes it with the prince?"

Damer looked down. "Tell the Countess Laranigra that things are as they were. A new remedy has been essayed."

The man who had come by the calle retired by them, swinging a lantern in his hand.

The vulcans of the clock tower, hard by in St. Mark's square, struck four times upon their anvil. Damer looked up the darkness of the canal where nothing was to be seen but the lamps which burned on either side of it with their reflections, and the lanthorns tied to poles before some of the palaces. He could not see the Ca' Laranigra, which was not in sight even in the day, but he saw it in remembrance with its flowering balconies, its tapestried chambers, its red and white awnings, its great escutcheon over its portals. He saw her in his vision as she must be now—awake, listening for her messenger's return, in some white, loose gown no doubt, with her hair loose, too, upon her shoulders, her face white, her eyes strained in anxiety, as he had seen them that afternoon and evening. If Andreis had lived she would have been his wife; that was as certain as that the sea was beating on the bar of Malamocco underneath the moon.

"I have done well; I have exercised my right," he thought. "We have right of life and death over all birds and beasts and things which swim and crawl, by virtue of our greater brain; in like manner has the greater brain the right to deal as it will with the weaker brain when their paths meet and one must yield and go under. The fool hath said that there is sanctity in life, but the man of science has never said it. To him one organism or another has the same measure in his scales."

He was consistent enough and sincere enough to follow out the theories of the laboratory to their logical sequence without flinching. He honestly held himself without [illegible].

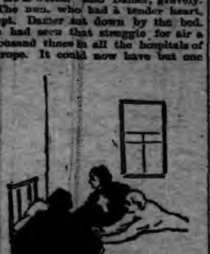
He called up to his command that power of will which had never failed him; he returned to the bedside as he would have returned to visit a dog dying under atmospheric pressure. Andreis still lay in the same position. About the almost invisible orifice where the needle had punctured there was a slight tumified swelling.

"He seems worse," whispered the nun.

The head of Andreis was thrown back on the pillows; his eyes were closed; his face was pallid and looked blue round the mouth and about the temples. He was now straining for breath like a horse fallen on the road, blown and broken.

"He is worse," said Damer, gravely.

The nun, who had a tender heart, wept. Damer sat down by the bed. He had seen that struggle for air a thousand times in all the hospitals of Europe. It could now have but one end. A little while after they brought him a note and a telegram. The first was from Veronica. It said: "How good you are. How I thank you."



THE NUNS SANK ON THEIR KNEES.

The second was from the mother of Andreis. It said: "I have reached Bologna. I shall soon be with you. God bless you for your goodness to my son."

He read them, and put them in his breast pocket beside the empty phial of toxin.

They would be useful if any called in question the too late usage of the Behring serum. They would show the complete confidence placed in him by the writers. At that moment his two Venetian colleagues arrived. The day had dawned. The women put out the light of the lamps.

"You have given the anti-toxin?" said the elder of the Venetians, glancing at the syringe.

"I have," replied Damer. "But, I believe, too late."

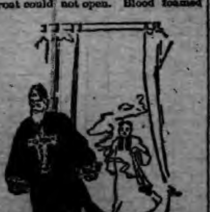
"I fear too late," replied the Venetian. "Not less admirable is your courage in accepting such responsibility."

The pure light of earliest daybreak was in the whole of the vast chamber.

It shone on that ghastly sight, a man dying in his youth, struggling and straining for a breath of air, fighting against suffocation.

The poisoned growth filled every chink of the air passages as though they were tubes mortared up and closed hermetically. His face grew purple and tumid, his eyes started from their sockets, his arms waved wildly, beckoning in space; he had no sense left except the mere instinctive mechanical effort to gasp for the air which he was never to breathe again. The five persons round him stood in silence, while the stifled sobs of the nun were heard, the splash of oars echoed from the water below, somewhere without a bird sang.

The minutes went on; the nuns sank on their knees; the one who wept hid her face on the coverlet of the bed. All which had been the youth, the form, the vitality of Andreis wrestled with death as a young lion tears at the walls of the den which imprisons him. The terrible choking sounds were heard through the air to which his closed throat could not open. Blood foamed in froth from his lips, which were curled up over the white teeth, and were cracked and blue. Damer ceased to look; almost he regretted.



IN THE CORRIDOR BEYOND WAS A PRIEST IN HIS CANONICALS.

"He is out of pain," said one of the Venetians.

"He is dead," said Damer.

The women crossed themselves.

The little bird outside sang loudly.

The door opened, and the mother of Andreis stood on the threshold.

In the corridor beyond was a priest in his canonicals and a boy bearing the Host.

Six months later the man who had killed him wedded Veronica Laranigra. Her family opposed and her friends warned her in vain; she shrank from him, she feared him, but the magnetism of his will governed hers till he shaped her conduct as the hand of the sculptor moulds the clay.

He became master of her person, of her fortune, of her destiny; but her soul, frightened and dumb, escapes from him, and hides in the caverns of memory and regret.

[THE END.]

A CENT FOR EACH YEAR.

Highly Enjoyable Birthday Party in the Congregational Church.

This "birthday party" is given to you;
'Tis something novel, 'tis something new,
We send you each a little sack,
Please either send or bring it back
With as many cents as years you're old;
We promise the number shall never be told.
Kind friends will give you something to eat,
And others will furnish a musical treat,
The Ladies Aid, with greetings most hearty,
Feel sure you'll attend your own "Birthday Party."

Such was the invitation, which, accompanied by a little cheese-cloth bag, was sent by the Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational Church to all the members of the church and congregation. In consequence, the pleasant parlors of the church were last evening filled to overflowing, and the evening was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The rooms presented a charming appearance. Dainty little tables stood about, supporting beautiful lamps, candles and books. Handsome rugs lay here and there, and some most comfortable chairs added to the homelike appearance. Not the least among the decorations were the lovely flowers sent by Mrs. W. H. Brower.

At about 8:30 the programme commenced with a selection by the Ladies Orchestra, "Les Sirenes", by Waldteufel. The members of the orchestra were: Miss Whiton, violin, Miss Mary Whiton, piano, Miss Whiting, guitar, Miss Morse, autoharp, Miss May Parmelee, banjo. An orchestra composed of these instruments was something entirely out of the usual, and after a very pleasing rendering of their selection, the young women were heartily applauded.

This was followed by the reading of an original poem, by Mrs. Esther K. Miller, one of the oldest and best loved members of the church.

Miss Nellie Winckler next played very acceptably a brilliant and difficult piano solo, Mattei's "Grande Valse de Concert", after which Miss May Parmelee recited that touching little poem, "Papa's Letter", which was much enjoyed.

Next followed a violin solo by Miss Walton, accompanied by Mrs. M. E. Dwight, a "Lullaby", by Brahms, to which the audience listened to with great pleasure.

L. B. Morgan then read an original poem, a reply to the invitation verse.

The programme closed with the presentation of the little sacks containing the birthday pennies. A collection plate was placed on a little table among flowers and lighted candles. Rev. C. L. Goodrich took his stand near this table and read a poetical extract descriptive of each month. At the close of the selection describing each month, those whose birthdays occurred in that month were requested to come forward and deposit their sacks in the plate, which soon vanished from sight under the mass of gayly-colored little bags, from the contents of which the Ladies Aid society realized a goodly sum.

An hour of sociability followed the sack depositing, and cake and coffee were served. The young women who assisted in the serving were Miss Parsons, Miss Shepherd, Miss Suffern, Miss Whiton, Miss Mary Whiton, Miss Morse, Miss Harriet Loomis of New York, Miss Jenkins, Miss Julia Belknap, Miss Howell.

The evening was a decided success, both socially and financially, and reflected great credit on the Ladies Aid Society of which Mrs. H. E. Nomer is the efficient president.

DESTITUTE THROUGH FIRE.

A Poor Family on the Mountain Burned Out of House and Home.

George Totten, who lives on top of the mountain back of Smalley's stone crusher, lost his house by fire yesterday afternoon, while he was at work.

The fire started at the chimney flue, and soon spread over the room. The room was speedily a blazing furnace.

Mrs. Totten had difficulty in the excitement in getting out the children, the hair of one being badly singed and its clothes burned.

They lost everything they had except the clothes they had on. He is a poor and deserving man, and has a family of small children. A subscription has been started to build him a new house. Any donations sent to The Daily Press office will be forwarded to him.

Artistic Progress.

People who like to see for themselves the evidences of the growth of inventive genius should go to Collier's and note the wonderful evidences there shown of artistic progress in designs of gold and silverware. Not only is the stock here shown remarkable in this regard—daintily elegant and of rare design—but each article constitutes a present to be kept and cherished; of intrinsic as well as sentimental value.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

GOODBYE TO THE PASTOR

Farewell Meeting of Monroe Avenue Methodists.

REV. H. B. MUNSON LEAVES TOWN

Much Regret Evinced at His Departure—Mr. McGee Makes a Speech, and Mr. Batson Reads a Poem.

The farewell reception given to Rev. Hubert B. Munson on Friday in Monroe Avenue Chapel was attended by a large number of his friends, who made this last meeting an occasion to express regret at his leave-taking after a pastorate of two years, and also to express appreciation for his effective work in bringing to the chapel much of its present success.

The exercises in the early part of the evening were composed of piano solos by Miss Isabella, singing by George Stevens, cornet solos by Raymond McGee, solos by L. B. Bond, and recitations by May Palmer. The various numbers were received with marked appreciation, and each entertainer was recalled.

At the close of the literary and musical features, Henry McGee delivered the farewell address on the part of the chapel to Rev. Mr. Munson. He said that whatever might be the history or success of the chapel in the future, its beginning of growth was during the ministry of the pastor who was about to leave for broader fields of labor. But in saying goodbye it was meant that the work which he had instituted would be carried on to accomplishment by the friends and co-workers he would leave behind. His work here in Plainfield had been largely successful because of the confidence which people felt in his endeavors.

In closing, he offered words of encouragement to Mr. Munson in the new field which he was about to enter.

Mr. Munson replied very feelingly, and tears filled his eyes at the close of his response, which attested better than anything else the regret which he felt in terminating the close acquaintances and friendships which he has enjoyed during his two-years pastorate in Plainfield. The most pleasant thought, he said, which he would carry with him, was the knowledge that the work he had commenced would be perpetuated and carried into its natural consequences.

At the conclusion of the response L. C. Batson read an original poem, in which he told a story of Mr. Munson's work in the chapel and of the mingled regret and pleasure which were aroused by his resignation.

During the serving of light refreshments, those present freely indulged in social chat, and nearly all as a finale to the reception gave Mr. Munson a parting handshake, and bade him success in his new work.

FITCHBURG & WEST SHORE.

Wm. Huston and E. A. Palmer's Experience.

There is no body of men who labor more hours continuously than railroad men. So constant and tiring are their responsible duties that there are few who do not suffer from overwork and nervous troubles, and it does not take long before the strongest constitution gives way to the ravages of disease. Dyspepsia, rheumatism, urinary and kidney troubles have incapacitated many a man that could have been saved if the proper precaution had been taken.

Engineer Wm. Huston, of the West Shore railroad, says: "For years I suffered from kidney trouble and dyspepsia; at times I was in so much pain. I thought I would have to give up my engine. I had been under the treatment of various physicians, but derived no benefit. Finally, one day Conductor Fraser, of our road, said to me, 'Huston, get a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; it will do you more good than all the doctors in existence.' I followed this advice, and in a few days I began to feel better and I have been well ever since."

E. A. Palmer, of the Fitchburgh Railroad's freight department at Troy, N. Y., in speaking of the great good he had received from using Favorite Remedy, said. "I was troubled with urinary difficulty for a long time. My attention was called to Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; I began its use, and in a few weeks was cured of the trouble. I have since used it as a family medicine with splendid results, especially in cases of constipation and stomach difficulty."

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a natural antidote for diseases arising from uric acid in the blood; in cases of scrofula, sleeplessness or nervousness, it cures where all else fails.

In Honor of L. M. Alcott.

The North Plainfield Public School held a Louisa M. Alcott exercise, Friday. The programme was as follows: "The Fringed Gentian", Bryant. Sarah Douglass; "The Clover Song", Saxe Holme, Winnie Gulick; "The Ocean Depths", Percival, Florence Duck. Song. Sketch—Ida Fountain. Extract from her journal on her childhood—Carrie Weiss. Miss Alcott's first poem, written at 8 years of age, "To a Robin"—Ada Van Horn. A sample of her lessons—Agnes Morse and Edna Moffett. Poem, "My Kingdom", written at 13 years—Mabel Ladd. A letter to her sister—Nellie Schutt. Singing. Extract from "Hospital Sketches"—Annie Emmons. "A Song from the Suds"—Bessie Martin. A letter to her mother—Mildred Everitt. A letter to her nephews—Josephine Feller. A letter to the editor of St. Nicholas, concerning the publication of "Jack and Jill"—Joan Anderson. "My Prayer"—Julia Williams. Singing.

—Peck says he is proud of his goods this season, and likes to show them off.

—S. E. Cheesly's restaurant and cigar store presents an improved exterior appearance because of the new coat of white paint.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

DEATH OF ABRAHAM C. CORIELL.

He Was a Member of the Legislature in 1866 and 67.

The death occurred at his homestead in Greenbrook, at 11:30 Thursday, of Abraham C. Coriell. He would have completed his 76th year June 27, 1895.

Abraham C. Coriell was born at the old homestead near the present Dunellen station. The house in which he was born was moved to Front street when the station was built, and is now occupied by W. P. Stevens. He lived where he died, the past 18 or 20 years, and of late Jonathan Doty had farmed the place for him, and he and Mrs. Doty faithfully cared for him.

Four years ago Mr. Coriell had a stroke of paralysis, and had been unwell ever since, though able to be about. Another stroke came last night, and he was found helpless in his bed Saturday morning.

Mr. Coriell never married. He was always a strong Democrat, and served the State as a member of Assembly in 1866 and '67. He was a brother of W. McD. Coriell of Clinton avenue.

Rev. Mr. Martine will conduct the funeral services from the Greenbrook homestead Sunday afternoon at 2. The pall-bearers will be Masons, decedent having been a member of Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M.

Mr. Coriell was one of Dunellen's oldest residents, and was the youngest son of Ephraim and Sarah Coriell, who inherited most of the land which is now Dunellen. After the death of his parents the bulk of the property was sold to the Land Improvement Company, a town site was laid out, and some lots were sold at auction in 1868.

THE SEWER BIDDERS.

As The Press First Stated, Hosnan & Sons Are Lowest.

Following is the correct list of sewer bids submitted at the Council meeting Monday night:

Patrick T. Plunkett, Jersey City....	$54,384 11
Rehill & Nelson, Dunellen..............	57,652 19
Dodge & MacGregor, Buffalo............	64,824 56
Maguire, McKnight & Co., E. Orange.	51,316 55
Gardner & Barnett, Akron, Ohio.......	59,601 89
J. H. Hurley, Trenton....................	42,944 12
Thos. T. Moore, Buffalo..................	43,316 60
Bogert & Farrel, Brooklyn...............	56,093 0-
Bernard Brady, Plainfield................	58,824 21
Thos. Redding, Perth Amboy...........	66,866 50
Michael Hosnan & Sons, Chester, Pa..	41,887 92
James J. Cogan, Bayonne...............	47,144 65
Wm. H. Walters, Bayonne...............	56,320 37
Geo. W. Rush & Co., Philadelphia....	50,768 67
P. H. Harrison & Sons, Newark........	49,316 25
Thos. Siddall, Trenton....................	48,623 39
Jas. F. Gillen, Brooklyn..................	74,974 90
Prout & Love, Plainfield..................	51,261 66
John Marsden, Utica, N. Y...............	46,097 24

The engineering department is busy locating monuments and getting ready for active work.

Holy Week Services at All Saints Church, Scotch Plains.

On Palm Sunday, April 7, the Holy Communion will be administered at 9:30, a. m., the second service at 10:45 will consist of morning prayer, litany and sermon. The Sunday-school will meet at 3 p. m. as usual, and rehearse the Easter carols. At 7:30 p. m., by the courtesy and help of the Messrs. Hall of Fanwood, the Rector will deliver a lecture on "The Events of the First Palm Sunday", which will be illustrated by the gentlemen named above, by stereopticon views, including pictures of Bethany, the brook Kedron, Gethsemane, Jerusalem, etc. There will be no postponement of this service on account of the weather. On Wednesday following, at 8 p. m., there will the usual litany service and sermon on the "Betrayal of Christ". On Thursday there will be morning prayer, Holy Communion and sermon at 11 a. m., and evening prayer at 4 p. m. Good Friday, April 12, full morning service and sermon at 11 a. m., and evening prayer and sermon at 7:30 p. m. Easter-Even, (Saturday) there will be evening prayer with Holy Baptism at 4 p. m. On Easter-Day, there will be an early celebration of the Holy Communion at 8; full morning service, sermon and second celebration at 10:45 a. m. Evening prayer will be said at 4 p. m. The Children's Easter Festival, singing of carols and presentation of Easter gifts, will take place in the evening at 7:15. All the seats in this church are free, and strangers are cordially welcomed at all services.

Edw. H. Treat Rector.

—Miss Lucy Rafferty has resigned her position in the crockery department at Edsall's.

—The annex which W. H. Rogers has been adding to his bicycle emporium on West Fifth street is completed.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding for Prescriptions.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a R variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years I ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was P extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by A saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homoeopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual N physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of S taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice • through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to T his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making A them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention B of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical U profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet L manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the E doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous S is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have • been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and who has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 Spruce St., New York.

MEN WANTED [illegible]

The Constitutionalist
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
PUBLISHED AT
Plainfield, New Jersey.
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.
A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.
Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

CLEVER PERFORMERS.

Expert Artists Entertain a Monroe Avenue Audience.

Ventriloquism and shadow-graphy formed the principal part of the entertainment in the Monroe Avenue Chapel last evening. The room was comfortably filled with an appreciative audience. The programme commenced with a piano solo, artistically rendered by Mr. Jenke, which was heartily encored.

Howard S. Starrett was then introduced, and drew several crayon sketches, one of which, the Brooklyn bridge by moonlight, was very effective. The next number on the programme was a whistling solo by Mr. Evans. In response to the vigorous applause, Mr. Evans gave another selection.

Mr. Starrett now appeared with his dolls, "Tommy", "Joe", "Miss Jones" and Mr. Smith", with which he gave a very entertaining exhibition of ventriloquism. Mr. Starrett is certainly very proficient at that art, giving not the slightest sign when he spoke. "Mr. Smith" recited, "Miss Jones" sang, and "Tommy" kept up a running comment on everybody and everything. "Tommy" and "Joe" were at last returned to the box, where his repeated "Get over on your own side" kept the audience in roars of laughter.

Another piano solo by Mr. Jenke followed, and then Mr. Starrett gave a number of accurate representations. Mr. Evans gave another whistling solo, after which Mr. Starrett concluded the evening's entertainment with a very amusing exhibition of shadow graphy. The quickness of his fingers was marvelous, and rabbits, butterflies, and dogs, appeared in rapid succession. Then the figures became more complex, and men appeared. A love scene followed, in which the girl, the lover, and, of course, the enraged parent, all came on the scene. The man out rowing brought down the house, especially when he raised a bottle to his lips and began to drink. After a number of other equally amusing representations, the entertainment came to an end, and the audience dispersed.

FOR A CAMPFIRE.

Sons of Veterans Arranging Fraternal Festivities.

The meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 26, Sons of Veterans, held last evening, was largely attended, and a considerable amount of business was transacted. One recruit received the Degree of Loyalty.

The committee appointed to arrange with the Somerville and Flemington Camps for a campfire reported that Flemington had dropped out on account of the distance from either Somerville or Plainfield, and that the arrangements would be made with the latter Camp. It was decided that a delegation attend the next meeting of the Somerville Camp, Monday evening, April 15.

The committee to secure a stand of colors for the camp reported progress. It is the intention to have them by Decoration Day.

The matter of guns and equipments was brought up, and it was stated that the necessary steps had been taken to secure the same.

Until further notice Friday evening of each week was set as drill-night. Martin's Armory will be used for this purpose.

The question of the Camp joining the Funeral Benefit Association of the order was discussed, and was finally laid on the table till the next meeting. The programme for Decoration Day was talked about, and the committee appointed to confer with the joint detail from the G. A. R. Posts and Woman's Relief Corps stated what was done at the last meeting.

An invitation was extended the Camp to attend a reception Thursday evening, April 11, in the W. C. T. U. rooms, and was accepted.

Acute
pains require prompt relief. The best remedy is one that can be used immediately and by anybody.

Allcock's
Porous Plaster
meets the case exactly, for all sorts of pains and aches, as sprains, strains, lameness of the back or limbs.

When you buy Allcock's you obtain the best plaster. Don't be duped into taking any other.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills
purify the system, and thus remove the cause of many diseases.

BEAUTY IS POWER.

Perfection of Form, Feature, and Mind Render Women All-powerful.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

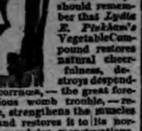
Yet blended with these perfections must be perfect health. Women are to-day stronger in their character, better in their nature, truer in their love, warmer in their affections, than they ever were.

But most women do not know themselves; and often when their influence is doing the most good, break down. They drift gradually and unconsciously into that tempestuous sea of woman's diseases.

Then they should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restores natural cheerfulness, destroys despondency, cures leucorrhœa,—the great forerunner of serious womb trouble,—relieves backache, strengthens the muscles of the womb, and restores it to its normal condition, regulates menstruations, removes inflammation, ulceration, and tumors of the womb, etc.

It is a remedy of a woman for women. Millions of women owe the health they enjoy, and the influence they exert, to Mrs. Pinkham; and the success of her Vegetable Compound has never been equalled in the field of medicine for the relief and cure of all kinds of female complaints. So say the druggists.

Here is another one of thousands who speaks that others may know the truth:—



"For five years I suffered with falling of the womb, and all the dreadful aches and pains that accompany the disease. I tried several doctors and different medicines, until I lost all faith in everything. I had not tried your Compound. I watched your advertisements from day to day, and each day became more hopeful. At last I resolved to try it. I have taken seven bottles, and have gained forty pounds. My pains have all left me, and I am a well woman. I do all my own work, and can walk two miles without feeling tired. Your Compound has been worth its weight in gold to me. I cannot praise it enough." MATILDA ENNAN, Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Mrs. Elizabeth VanZandt Dies While Talking to Her Daughter.

Mrs. Elizabeth VanZandt, widow of the late John VanZandt, who has been a resident of Plainfield the past twelve years, died very suddenly yesterday while sitting in a chair talking with her daughter, Mrs. M. M. Dunham, at her home on Arlington avenue.

There was a sudden break in her talk, and Mrs. Dunham noticed that her head inclined slightly forward, and on a second look discovered that life had left the body. Death was caused by neuralgia of the heart.

Mrs. VanZandt was apparently in her usual good health, and the announcement of her death was a great shock to all.

Mrs. VanZandt was born near South Branch seventy-eight years ago, and later moved near Somerville, where she lived forty years. Her husband died fifteen years ago, leaving the widow and three daughters, Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, Mrs. M. M. Dunham, and Miss VanZandt. Mrs. VanZandt lived among her daughters.

Decedent was a member of Trinity Reformed Church, and was an excellent Christian woman, beloved for her many amiable qualities.

The funeral services will be held Friday morning at 11:30 from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. M. Dunham. Interment will be in Somerville.

The death of Mrs. VanZandt was a fulfilment of a wish which she had expressed while waiting on the Dunhams. Mr. and Mrs. Dunham were ill, and she said "I hope I shan't have to linger and suffer like them. When I die, I want to go like a flash."

Mrs. Blair to Speak.

Mrs. Ellen A. D. Blair of Nebraska, National W. C. T. U. Organizer and Artist Lecturer, will give a chalk talk under the auspices of the Y's, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Church at 3:30 p. m., Saturday, April 6. The Loyal Temperance Legion and Junior C. E. societies will be present. Mrs. Blair delights young and old, and it is hoped that a large audience of children will enjoy the chalk-talk. Mrs. Blair will also speak in the First Presbyterian Church Sunday at 4 p. m., under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. All are invited.

Our better halves say they could not keep house without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is used in more than half the homes in Leeds. Sims Bros., Leeds, Iowa. This shows the esteem in which that remedy is held where it has been sold for years and is well known. Mothers have learned that there is nothing so good for colds, croup and whooping cough, that it cures these ailments quickly and permanently, and that it is pleasant and safe for children to take. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

NEW OFFICERS INTRODUCED.

Young Ladies Mission Band Reception at Home and Education Abroad.

The Young Ladies Mission Band, which is composed of members from the First Presbyterian and Crescent Avenue churches, held their regular April meeting in the parlors of the First Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon. The newly-elected officers were introduced informally to the members. They are: President, Miss Emily Tracy; Vice-president, Miss Harriet Halloway; Secretary, Miss Kathrene Thorn; Treasurer, Miss Josephine Poirie; Board of Managers, Miss Marguerite Yerkes, Miss Bessie Hull, Miss Mary Brosson, Miss Louise Patten, Miss Etta Bilsch.

Business of a routine nature was transacted. The reports showed that the Band was in a flourishing condition. One hundred dollars was reported in the treasury, besides a contingency fund.

The Band contributes regularly to a school in Brazil, a teacher in India, and the Foreign Mission Board.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards was present at the meeting, and after the business was concluded he gave a most excellent and helpful talk on "Systematic Giving".

The membership of the Band is sixty active and six associate.

At the close of the meeting, chocolate and wafers were served, and a short time was spent socially.

JUNIOR GYMNASTS.

After Entertaining Their Visitors with Evolutions, They Have a Tug of War.

The Junior department of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium gave their first public exhibition in the building yesterday, under the direction of Physical Director MacPhie. The number of visitors was large, and all thoroughly enjoyed the exhibition, which was highly creditable in every respect.

The different branches of work were all executed with piano accompaniment, and graceful changes were made from one apparatus to another. The 70 boys in the class were divided into four sections, according to age and size.

The dumb-bell drill was a pleasant feature of the exhibition, and was well performed.

An exciting tug of war was held at the close, the boys being very evenly matched. The first pull was won by Captain Walter Long's team, the second by Captain Irving Clark's, and the final by Captain Long's. Loud applause greeted the victors when the war was ended.

The teams were as follows: Captain Long's—A Finch, G Oberland, M Slater, John Hull, Stanley Peck, R T Phillips. Captain Irving Clark's—Fred Bonny, W A Townsend, Orville Waring, Aubrey Hull, Wilbur Opdyke, Donald McGee.

Dreier—Krone.

The imposing and pretty service of the Jewish Church made the wedding of Garrett Dreier of this city to Sarah Krone of Brooklyn, in Bouch's gallery, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon at 5, a brilliant affair. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Geisenheim of the Brooklyn Temple, assisted by Rev. Mr. Goodstein. Miss Bertha Dreier, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, and Peter Krone, brother of the bride, the best man. There were also four bridesmaids and four groomsmen. The bride was gowned in white satin. After the ceremony, an elaborate supper was served, during which Revs. Geisenheim and Goodstein and William Newcorn, of this city, made brief remarks. A dance followed the supper, at the conclusion of which the bridal couple left for a tour through the South.

Those present from Plainfield were Samuel Dreier and family, William Newcorn and wife and Henry Piker. The couple will reside in Brooklyn.

Two Wagons Collide.

While endeavoring to turn around in the roadway on Park avenue near Justice Nash's office this morning the buggy of Joseph W. Sandford of West Seventh street was struck broadside by the pole of the Metuchen stage and completely turned over on the side. The coachman was thrown out, but not injured. With the aid of Chief Grant and several bystanders the carriage was righted up and the driver proceeded home with nothing more serious than a mud-bespattered wagon.

A Beneficial Talk.

The meeting of the Christian Alliance at 317 East Front street last night, addressed by Miss Louise Sheppard of New York, was attended by about 125 persons. Miss Sheppard wrought great interest among her hearers with the logical and beneficial discussion which she developed from the subject of "Have you received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" Her singing of the "Holy Guest", and "Days of Heaven", with a beautifully-trained soprano voice, also charmed those in attendance.

Death of Mrs. Cadmus.

The death occurred last evening of Mrs. G. W. Cadmus, widow of the late Jasper Cadmus, in her 84th year, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. R. Vail, Dear street. Her son, Clark Cadmus, was taken ill while on a visit here, and died only recently. Mrs. Cadmus was well known in Plainfield, having been a resident here for many years.

The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2 from Grace P. E. Church.

—E. L. Tolles of Westervelt avenue is riding a new Cleveland wheel.

A WONDERFUL PUSSY.

"Nig" Exhibits Great Frenzy at the Sound of the Fire Gong.

There are dogs that howl when the fire gong sounds, and cats that run when the dogs howl, but for pussies to become frightened at the noise that induces the canines to bark is an uncommon thing, and is only practised by uncommon cats. Such a feline is "Nig", blacker in color than night, who makes her abode in the coal office of Boice, Runyon & Co. on Park avenue.

Though "Nig" pays no attention to the regular test blows of the gong at 12 noon and 5 at night, every time the gong sounds for a fire this wonderful pussy seems to become possessed of a wild desire to get into the open air, and if an avenue of escape through a door or window is not immediately provided by some one in the office, she goes around the room as though filled with Mephistopheles himself.

However, Messrs. Runyon and Newman, who are generally in the office, have become accustomed to this peculiar trait of "Nig", and every time the gong sounds they make haste to provide an exit for her. As soon as she gets out into the open air, she scoots into some secluded nook, not to put in an appearance again until all noise has quieted down. Then she comes wandering back, curling her tail and purring as though she was the happiest of all things. These peculiar actions are accounted for by the fact that three years ago when the old lumber yard of Boice, Runyon & Co., situated on the south side of the railroad, was burned, "Nig" had a narrow escape from being cremated while locked in the office, a portion of which was burned. Ever since then she has become filled with complete terror at the sound of the gong for a fire.

How she is able to distinguish the regular tests from the alarms is something that mystifies all who know of her actions, and still more how she ever learned in the first place what the gong signified. For fear that the cat might jump through a pane of glass in the window in her frenzy, she is never permitted to remain in the office after business hours.

"Nig" yesterday gave birth to four tiny pussies, and is now exercising a motherly oversight over her offsprings, too busy to be interviewed when the Daily Press reporter called to see her this morning. Her friends are wondering whether or not she will bring up her children with the same disposition she has evidenced towards conflagrations.

A Museum in Town.

The Nickel Plate Museum Company have opened a place in the store on East Front street formerly occupied by Druggist J. G. Miller. They have a wonderful collection which will interest everyone.

One of the great features is the "Seal Band", composed of two seals which are trained to do many clever tricks, such as beat drums, smoke a pipe, turn a grindstone, and play tambourines and bells.

A rare species of the armadillo, known as the Brazilian grave-robber, is also on exhibition.

A large collection of prairie dogs, well trained, is a pleasing sight, and two fine monkeys delight the children.

Three beautiful Australian cockatoos with their fine plumage are well worth the price of admission. There is also an excellent collection of alligators, "Florida's best", and a pet rat that is trained to perform many tricks.

J. T. Jordan, the celebrated glass blower, and a fortune teller, are additional attractions to this interesting museum.

The show is open from 1 p. m. to 10 p. m., and the admission is 10 cents.

Sons of Temperance.

Howell Division, S. of T., had a splendid meeting last night, and installed the following officers, Sylvester Scribner acting as deputy, and W. B. Mattox as grand conductor:

Worthy patriarch, Sarah A Mattox; worthy associate, Emma Cox; financial scribe, Wm B Ayers; grand scribe, Sylvester Scribner; treasurer, Annie Angleman; chaplain, Annetta Corwin; conductor, Sarah Keeyer; assistant-conductor, Harry Mattox; inside sentinel, James E Huntington; and outside sentinel, Wm E Keeyer.

Do not be deceived.
The following brands of White Lead are still made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion. They are standard, and always

Strictly Pure
White Lead

The recommendation of
"Atlantic," "Jewett,"
"Brooklyn." &c

to you by your merchant is an evidence of his reliability, as he can sell you cheap ready-mixed paints and bogus White Lead and make a larger profit. Many short-sighted dealers do so.

For Colors.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free; it will probably save you a good many dollars.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

What is
CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
UNITED HOSPITAL AND DISPENSARY,
Boston, Mass.
ALLEN C. SMITH, Pres.,

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

CARPETS
Made and Laid With Paper Without Charge

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,
73 Market Street, Near Plane Street

are making and laying Carpets with paper without charge, which is a saving of 15c per yd.

Parties about going to housekeeping will find no larger stock of Parlor Suits and Bedroom Suits to select from at such low prices. All of the latest Spring styles of Bedroom Suits of the Hall & Lyon manufacture, and Parlor Suits of all the latest manufactures and of the latest designs and coverings.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

All other goods suitable to furnish a house with in our line are sold at the lowest prices. Terms easy; one dollar per week.

The Portland Range!

The Court of Errors has just unanimously affirmed the opinion of the lower courts that no other dealer can take any range and put the name Portland on it and try to hoodwink the people that they are selling the original Portland Range, when such is not the case. 7,000 of these ranges now in use and not one complaint. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Goods delivered to all parts of the State free of charge.

Storing Furniture

Our new building just erected at 88, 90, 92 Bank street, seems to be the only building in the State to store furniture, the way it is being filled up. Furniture moved with vans at reasonable rates in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,
73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

EUTERPES ARE AWAKE.

They Will Give Plainfield a Startling Performance, With Many Novelties.

The Country Club Casino, judging from present indications, will hold as brilliant an audience, on the occasion of the first public musical entertainment of the Euterpe Society, April 25, as it has ever held.

The overture will be performed by three members of the society on one piano. Miss F. May Grant of the First Baptist Church will render an aria from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet", accompanied by Miss Lillian A. Force. The genial and refined artist Hugh J. Emmett will appear in three numbers on the programme, giving his famous violin solos, imitations of various animals, and playing in every conceivable position and under many difficulties. The Musical Russells have added a number of new and novel instruments to their equipment since they last appeared in Plainfield, and are a host in themselves. The clever Martyne, from Keith's Theatre, Chicago, will stimulate his popular "sixty laughs in sixty minutes". He does it well, too, and is the only man who can laugh and cry at the same time, while delineating fifteen different people.

The Euterpe itself, although organized only a short time, has enjoyed a prosperous growth. It is composed of musical and literary people of this city, and friends who have a liking for the muses. Every two weeks meetings will be held, and selections rendered by those members present, who are always expected, when they attend, to assist with some entertainment in their particular line.

The organizers are H. A. Kerf, Murray Bartis, R. A. Lowe, J. de J. Costales, A. Costales, T. H. Cuming, Chas. Reisak and L. Spangenberg, who is president.

—Fifth street from Watchung to Park avenue, and Park avenue at the intersection of East Fifth street, are torn up today while an unfinished section of [illegible]

A Musical Veteran.

Marshal Pangborn took care of a colored veteran last night named Charles Carter, a member of the 26th U.S. Colored Troops, enlisted in Erie County, Pa. He was on his way to New York, and needed assistance. He had a violin made of a cigar box, and discoursed quaint music to the genial marshal, and along the streets today.

The Whist Championship.

The Albany Whist Club will contest the Park Club whist four for the American championship trophy the latter part of this week, under the same conditions that the Philadelphia Club was defeated last Saturday, except that the first half of the game will in all probability be played Friday night and the last half Saturday night, so as not to interfere with the business duties of the players.

I recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. There is no better liniment made. I have sold over 100 bottles of it this year and all were pleased who used it. J. F. Pierson, druggist, South Chicago, Ill. It is for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

—Joseph A. Blair moved his furniture yesterday from 72 Somerset street temporarily to the Arlington Hotel, while awaiting the completion of his house on Somerset street. Mr. and Mrs. Blair will make their home for a few weeks with Mrs. Blair's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Ulrich of East Fifth street.

Fifty Dollars Given Away.

To raisers of poultry, the most wonderful and valuable monthly is The Poultry Keeper. The publishers offer fifty dollars free. Send for sample copy free and see how. Any of the following back numbers worth a dollar but sent postpaid for only five cents each: Brooders Incubators, Appliances, Poultry Houses (illus) Aug. '90 Aug. '91. Worth $50, Poultry Houses, April '91, Oct. '89 and July '91 (80 illus). Preserving eggs, Sep. '91. Turkeys, Mar. '92. Poultry diseases, Nov. '91. How to Feed for Eggs, Oct. '91. All About Lice, Oct. '91, Dec. '91. Testing Eggs, June '91 and June '92. How to Make the Hot Water Incubator, July '92. Sample free. [illegible]

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD

How the Brigadier held the King

BY

A. CONAN DOYLE

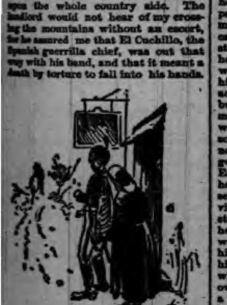
(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson and Bacheller.)

CHAPTER I.

I believe that the last story that I told you, my friends, was about how I received at the bidding of the emperor the cross for valor which I had, if I may be allowed to say so, so long deserved. Here upon the lapel of my coat you may see the ribbon, but the medal itself I keep in a leathern pouch at home, and I never venture to take it out unless one of the modern peace generals, or some foreigner of distinction who finds himself in our little town, takes advantage of the opportunity to pay his respects to the well-known Brigadier Gerard. Then I place it upon my breast, and I give my mustache the old Marengo twist which brings a gray point into either eye. Yet with it all I fear that neither they, nor you, either, my friends, will ever realise the man that I was. You know me only as a civilian—with an air and a manner it is true—but still merely as a civilian. Had you seen me as I stood in the doorway of the inn at Alamo on the first day of July in the year 1810 you would then have known what the hussar may attain to.

For a month I had lingered in that accursed village, and all on account of a lance thrust in my ankle which made it impossible for me to put my foot to the ground. There were three of us at first—old Bouvet, of the hussars; Jacques Regnier, of the cuirassiers, and a funny little voltigeur captain whose name I forget—but they all got well and hurried on to the front, while I sat gnawing my fingers and tearing my hair, and even, as I must confess, weeping from time to time as I thought of my hussars and the deplorable condition in which they must find themselves when deprived of their colonel. I was not a brigadier yet, you understand, although I already carried myself like one. But I was the youngest colonel in the whole service, and my regiment was wife and children to me. It went to my heart that they should be bereaved. It is true that Villaret, the senior major, was an excellent soldier, but still even among the best there are degrees of merit.

Ah, that happy July day of which I speak when first I limped to the door and stood in the golden Spanish sunshine! It was but the evening before that I had heard from the regiment. They were at Pastores on the other side of the mountains face to face with the English—not forty miles from me by road. But how was I to get to them? The same thrust which had pierced my ankle had slain my charger. I took advice from Gomez, the landlord, and from an old priest who had slept that night in the inn, but neither of them could do more than assure me that there was not so much as a colt left upon the whole country side. The landlord would not hear of my crossing the mountains without an escort, for he assured me that El Cuchillo, the Spanish guerrilla chief, was out that way with his band, and that it meant a death by torture to fall into his hands.



"IT IS I WHO CAN HELP YOU."

The old priest observed, however, that he did not think a French hussar would be deterred by that, and if I had had any doubts they would of course have been decided by his remark.

But a horse! How was I to get one? I was standing in the doorway plotting and planning when I heard the clink of shoes, and, looking up I saw a great bearded man with a blue cloak frogged across in military fashion coming towards me. He was riding a big black horse with one white stocking on his near foreleg.

"Hullo, comrade!" said I, as he came up to me.

"Hullo!" said he.

"I am Col. Gerard, of the hussars," said I. "I have lain here wounded for a month and I am now ready to rejoin my regiment at Pastores."

"I am M. Vidal, of the commissariat," he answered, "and I am myself upon my way to Pastores. I should be glad to have your company, colonel, for I hear that the mountains are far from safe."

"Alas!" said I, "I have no horse. But if you will sell me yours I will promise that an escort of hussars shall be sent back for you."

He would not hear of it, and it was in vain that the landlord told him dreadful stories of the doings of El Cuchillo, and that I pointed out the duty which he owed the army and to the country. He would not even argue but called loudly for a cup of wine. I craftily asked him to dismount and to drink with me, but he must have seen something in my face, for he shook his head, and then as I approached him with some thought of seizing him by the leg he jerked his heels into his horse's flanks and was off in a cloud of dust.

My faith, it was enough to make a man mad to see this fellow riding away so gayly to join his beef barrels and his brandy casks, and then to think of my five hundred beautiful hussars without their leader. I was gazing after him with bitter thoughts in my mind when who should touch me on the elbow but the little priest whom I have mentioned.

"It is I who can help you," said he. "I am myself traveling south."

I put my arms about him and as my ankle gave way at the same moment we nearly rolled upon the ground together.

"Get me to Pastores," I cried, "and you shall have a rosary of golden beads." I had taken one from the convent of Spiritu Sancto. It shows how necessary it is to take what you can when you are upon a campaign, and how the most unlikely things may become useful.

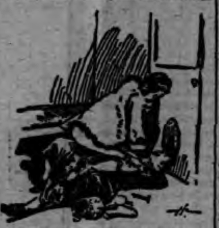
"I will take you," said he, in very excellent French, "not because I hope for any reward, but because it is my way always to do what I can to serve my countryman, and that is why I am so beloved wherever I go." With that he led me down to the village to an old cowhouse in which we found a tumbledown sort of diligence such as they used to run early in this century between some of our more remote villages. There were three old mules, too, none of which were strong enough to carry a man, but together they might draw the coach. The sight of their gaunt ribs and spavined legs gave me more delight than the whole two hundred and twenty hunters of the emperor which I have seen in their stalls at Fontainebleau. In ten minutes the owner was harnessing them into the coach, with no very good will, however, for he was in mortal dread of this terrible Cuchillo. It was only by promising him riches in this world, while the priest threatened him with damnation in the next, that we at last got him safely upon the box with the reins between his fingers. Then he was in such a hurry to get off out of fear lest we should find ourselves in the dark in the passes, that he hardly gave me time to renew my vows to the innkeeper's daughter. I cannot at this moment recall her name, but we wept together as we parted, and I can remember that she was a very beautiful woman. You will understand, my friends, that when a man like me, who has fought the men and kissed the women in fourteen separate kingdoms, gives a word of praise to the one or the other it has a little meaning of its own.

The little priest had seemed a trifle grave when we kissed good-bye, but he soon proved himself the best of companions in the diligence. All the way he amused me with tales of his little parish up in the mountains and I in my turn told him stories about the camp, but my faith I had to pick my steps, for when I said a word too much he would fidget in his seat and his face would show the pain that I had given him. And of course it is not the act of a gentleman to talk in anything but a proper manner to a religious man, though with all the care in the world one's words may get out of hand sometimes. He had come from the north of Spain, as he told me, and was going to see his mother in a village of Estremadura, and as he spoke about her little peasant home, and her joy in seeing him, it brought my mother so vividly to my thoughts that the tears started to my eyes. In his simplicity he showed me the little gifts which he was taking to her, and so kindly was his manner that I could readily believe him when he said that he was loved wherever he went. He examined my own uniform with as much curiosity as a child, admiring the plume of my busby and passing his fingers through the sable with which my dolman was trimmed. He drew my sword, too, and then when I told him how many men I had cut down with it, and set my fingers on the notch made by the shoulder bone of the Russian emperor's aide-de-camp, he shuddered and placed the weapon under the leathern cushion, declaring that it made him sick to look at it.

Well, we had been rolling and creaking on our way whilst this talk had been going forward, and as we reached the base of the mountains we could hear the rumbling of cannon far away upon the right. This came from Messena who was, as I knew, besieging Ciudad Rodrigo. There was nothing I should have wished better than to have gone straight to him, for he was the best Jew that I have heard of since Joshua's time, and if you are in sight of his beaky nose and bold, black eyes you are not likely to miss much of what is going on. Still a siege is always a poor sort of a pick-and-shovel business, and there were better prospects with my hussars in front of the English. Every mile that passed my heart grew lighter and lighter until I found myself shouting and singing like a young ensign fresh from Saint Cyr, just to think of seeing all my fine horses and my gallant fellows once more.

As we penetrated the mountains the road grew rougher and the pass more savage. At first we met a few muleteers, but now the whole country seemed deserted, which is not to be wondered at when you think that the French, the English and the guerrillas had each in turn had command over it. So bleak and wild was it, one great brown wrinkled cliff succeeding another, and the pass growing narrower and narrower, that I ceased to look out, but sat in silence thinking of this and that, of women whom I had loved and of horses which I had handled. I was suddenly brought back from my dreams, however, by observing the difficulties of my companion, who was trying with a sort of bradawl which he had drawn out to bore a hole through the leathern strap which held up his water flask. As he worked with twitching fingers the strap escaped his grasp and the wooden bottle fell at my feet. I stooped to pick it up, and as I did so the priest silently leaped upon my shoulders and drove his bradawl into my eye.

My friends, I am, as you know, a man steeled to face every danger. When one has served from the siege of Genoa to that last fatal day of Waterloo, and has had the special medal, which I keep at home in a leathern pouch, one can afford to confess when one is frightened. It may console some of you when your own nerves play you tricks to remember that you have heard even me, Brigadier Gerard, say that I have been scared. And besides my terror at this horrible attack, and the maddening pain of my wound, there was a sudden feeling of loathing such as you might feel were some filthy tarantula to strike its fangs into you. I clutched the creature in both hands and hurling him onto the floor of the coach I stamped on him with my heavy boots. He had drawn a pistol from the front of his soutane, but I kicked it out of his hand, and again I fell with my knees on his chest. Then for the first time he screamed horribly, while I, half blinded, felt about for the sword which he had so cunningly concealed. My hand had just lighted upon it, and I was dashing the blood from my face to see where he lay that I might transfix him, when the whole coach turned over upon its side, and my weapon was jerked out of my grasp by the shock. Before I could recover myself the door was burst open and I was dragged by the heels on to the road



THEN HE SCREAMED HORRIBLY.

CHAPTER II.

But even as I was torn out onto the flint stones and realised that thirty ruffians were standing around me, I was filled with joy, for my pelisse had been pulled over my head in the struggle and was covering one of my eyes, and it was with my wounded eye that I was seeing this band of brigands. You see for yourself by this pucker and scar how the thin blade passed between socket and ball, but it was only at that moment when I was dragged from the coach that I understood that my sight was not gone forever. The creature's intention, doubtless, was to drive it through my brain and, indeed, he loosened some portion of the inner bone of my head, so that I afterwards had more trouble from that wound than from any one of the seventeen which I have received.

They dragged me out, these sons of dogs, with curses and execrations, beating me with their fists and kicking me as I lay upon the ground. I had frequently observed that the mountaineers wore cloth swathed round their feet, but never did I imagine that I should have so much cause to be thankful for it. Presently, seeing the blood upon my head, and that I lay quiet, they thought that I was unconscious, whereas I was storing every ugly face among them in my memory, so that I might see them all safely hanged if ever my chance came around. Brawny rascals they were, with yellow handkerchiefs round their heads, and great red sashes stuffed with weapons. They had rolled two great rocks across the path, where it took a short turn, and it was these which had torn off one of the wheels of the coach and upset us. As to the reptile who had acted the priest so cleverly and had told me so much of his parish and his mother, he, of course, had known where the ambuscade was laid, and had attempted to put me beyond all resistance at the moment when we reached it.

I cannot tell you how frantic their rage was when they drew him out of the coach and saw the state to which I had reduced him. If he had not got all his deserts he had at least something as a souvenir of his meeting with Etienne Gerard, for his legs dangled aimlessly about, and though the upper part of his body was convulsed with rage and pain he sat straight down upon his feet when they tried to set him upright. But all the time his two little black eyes, which had seemed so kindly and so innocent in the coach, were glaring at me like a wounded cat, and he spat and spat and spat in my direction. My faith, when the wretches jerked me onto my feet again, and when I was dragged off up one of the mountain paths, I understood that a time was coming when I was to need all my courage and resources. My enemy was carried upon the shoulders of the men behind me, and I could hear his hissing and reviling first in one ear and then in the other as I was hurried up the winding track.

I suppose that it must have been an hour that we ascended, and what with my wounded ankle and the pain from my eye, and the fear lest this wound should have spoiled my good looks, I have made no journey to which I look back with less pleasure. I have never been a good climber at any time, but it is astonishing what you can do, even with a stiff ankle, when you have a [illegible] brigand at each elbow

PARTICULAR MENTION.

E. S. Peck is suffering with sore eyes.

Frank Sheppard is suffering from tonsilitis.

John Dierbower is suffering from a severe cold.

Paul Kimball is ill at his home with bronchitis.

John VanNess will soon remove to Pittsburgh.

Miss Etta Stats is spending a few days with friends in Brooklyn.

Miss Gottschalk of Newark is visiting friends on East Front street.

Bertram Tallamy is an addition to the choir of Grace P. E. Church.

Mrs. Eliza Stites of West Front street is visiting relatives in Newark.

Squire Brown of Duer street is convalescent from his recent illness.

Carl Gallup of West Front street has recovered from his recent illness.

Floyd D. Fuller of Watchung avenue is confined to his home with the grip.

Miss Alice Holmes of Eastport, Maine, is visiting Miss Delphine L. Bowers.

J. C. VanName of Elmwood place has not improved much from his severe illness.

Jedediah Smalley, the North Plainfield butcher, is suffering with an attack of pinkeye.

Lawyer C. L. Moffett has removed his family from Dunellen to 328 Watchung avenue.

Walter Thorn of Orchard place is assisting Secretary J. H. Manning at the Y. M. C. A.

Daniel Gulick and family have taken up their residence in the Yoehl flats, East Front street.

Miss Lizzie Wilcox of Manning avenue has resumed her duties in Edsall's after a brief illness.

DeWitt C. Ivins is extending the porch and making other improvements around his home on Hillside avenue.

Charles Zimmerman and family of 45 Prospect place have moved to 1011 Washington avenue, New York city.

Francis Bartell of Washingtonville, who has been under treatment the past two years, came home yesterday entirely cured.

Harry L. Day, who has been seriously ill at his home on Rockview avenue, the past ten days, with typhoid fever, is slowly improving.

Mrs. Frank Leland returns to her home in Chicago Monday, after a two-weeks visit with her mother, Mrs. N. Godown, East Fifth street.

Edward J. Patterson of this city contributes interesting "Anecdotes of Dr. McCosh" to the current issue of The Presbyterian Journal.

Margaret, daughter of John Moran of Grove street, who was stricken with diphtheria a week ago, is improving under the careful treatment of Dr. Adams.

William Turner will soon assume a clerkship in Moy's Pharmacy on Park avenue. His friends wish him the success his talents and energies merit.

W. E. MacClymont will give his twelfth annual free organ recital in the First Presbyterian Church April 11, assisted by Raymond W. Smith, tenor, of Newark.

Little Robbie Loughlin of East Front street, who severely injured his hand by falling on a piece of glass Monday afternoon, is doing nicely under the care of Dr. Adams.

Wm. Tucker, who has been superintending the Henry Clay Randolph farm for the past year, on the Rahway road, has resigned and removed with his family to Grandview avenue.

The North Plainfield Whist Club, who have been holding a series of games during the Winter, will hold their final meeting of the season Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Tolles of Westervelt avenue.

Charles J. McNabb, who has been confined for the past week to his home on Rahway road with a severe cold, has so far recovered that he is enabled to resume his studies in the New York University School of Law, New York city.

—Good goods at low prices is the secret of Boehm's big trade. His departments are winning popular patronage because one gets more for his money and spends less of it, than at many other stores.

—Titsworth & Co. have established a neat and thrifty restaurant and lunch room on North avenue, opposite the office of The Daily Press. Their enterprise gives evidence of being the success it deserves.

Stop that Cough!

It may lead to serious consequences. Cough remedies will not do it, because it means more than a simple cold. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will do it, and at the same time will build up and fortify the system against further attacks.

We are putting up a 50-cent size for just these local difficulties. For ordinary Coughs and Colds that quantity will doubtless cure. If it is deep-seated it may require more.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!
Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

Ferris' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists.

SENSIBLE WOMEN WEAR THEM

BECAUSE THEY ARE
RIGHT Shape to fit properly and feel comfortable.
RIGHT Material to give the best service.
RIGHT Finish because of skilled labor.
RIGHT Buttons and Button Holes won't pull off.
RIGHT Support from the shoulders.
RIGHT Fastenings for Hose Supporters.

Why Buy an Imitation when the GENUINE Costs so Little and Wears so Long?
CHILDREN'S, 25c. to 75c. MISSES, 50c. to $1. LADIES, $1 to $2.

BY THE WAY.

—F. G. Hui has removed his barber shop from East Front street to Park avenue.

—John King is erecting a new fence and laying a sidewalk in front of his property on Netherwood avenue.

—Baker & Young, the enterprising contractors, have secured the contract for remodeling the house owned by Frank Links on West Second street. It was at one time owned by the late Joseph S. Cutter.

—Postmaster Heifield received yesterday from the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, New Haven, Conn., six additional wardrobes, making twelve in all, for the letter-carriers' department in the postoffice, thus finishing the contract between the company and the Babcock Estate.

—A dance will be given in New Market Friday evening, April 10. The committee who have charge of the arrangements are E. VanDorn and F. Faulks. Music will be by Guttman.

—The Second New Jersey Brigade will hold their reunion in Trenton Tuesday, April 9. Those who will attend from this city are W. W. Coriell, J. W. VanHorn, Albert Runyon, William H. Williams, Robert Mundy, John Goodwin and Abram Dunham.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

I suffered terribly from roaring in my head during an attack of catarrh, and became very deaf, used Ely's Cream Balm and in three weeks could hear as well as ever.—A. E. Newman, Garling, Mich.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from the nose. Physicians prescribed without benefit. After using Ely's Cream Balm a short time the disease was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 189[illegible], trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 25 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

6.57 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Sunday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

6.56 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 46 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

For Baltimore only 1 57 p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 20 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

[illegible]

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City 1 57 p. m. Weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible]

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible]

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible]

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible]

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]

For Boston—[illegible] daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)
Station in New York foot of Liberty street.
Time Table in effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield, [illegible]

Leave New York, foot Liberty Street at [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible]

Leave Newark, at [illegible]

Passengers for Newark please change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible]

Leave Somerville at [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible]

Leave Easton at [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield at 9 24 a. m.; 5 65 p. m.

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

5 45 A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

8 18 A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R., Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

9 54 A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

[illegible]

THE BISHOP'S BEER.

THE FUN A CHICAGO DIVINE IS HAVING RUNNING A SALOON.

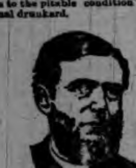
His Bartenders Are Artists in Concocting Drinks. Tricks Played by Rivals. The Church Saloon Seems Popular and Its Number May Increase.

Fancy a Reverened Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church selling beers and drinks about a saloon, the foam dripping down the front of his clerical coat or splashing in his face as a bartender slides the glasses along the shiny, polished cherry bar toward him!

Yet this is what happens every day in Chicago. And the Bishop not only serves drinks, but deals out hash, kidney stew and pork and beans as well. The clerical subject is the Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, and the place where he performs these interesting things is the "Home Salon," at 155 Washington street.

The place has not been in operation long yet the average attendance per day has been 2,400. Four thousand persons patronized it on the opening day. Crowds throng the place day and night, and its promoters have difficulty handling the crush and furnishing the drinks, which are becoming famous.

Bishop Fallows believes men do not drink beer—that is, the majority do not —for the alcohol that is in it, nor for the tipsiness overindulgence induces. He maintains that they drink it as a beverage simply, and that the drunkenness is in most cases the result of unintentional excess. He believes, too, that many slaves of drink have been made so through their first indulgence in what at the time they thought was a harmless beverage, but that the alcohol in it, awakening an appetite dormant in many and only becoming active as it was fed, finally saturated the victim and reduced him to the pitable condition of the habitual drunkard.



REV. DR. FALLOWS.

The place is in a stuffy, narrow, badly ventilated basement in the heart of the office building district of Chicago. Its entrance is a narrow marble staircase, on one side of which in great brass letters is the sign, "Home Salon."

There is nothing to indicate that the cellar is different in character from the thousands of basement saloons that flourish in Chicago. In fact, the highly polished brass posts and railings leading into the basement are in strong imitation of their alcohol subsidized competitors, and a stranger going into it and asking for a glass of beer would probably leave with no suspicion that he had not had the genuine thing, except a slight peculiarity in the taste of the beverage.

On the left side of the basement as one enters is the brilliantly lighted bar, glistening with the usual glassware and bottles and decanters exactly similar to those used in saloons and filled with many colored liquids, all non alcoholics. Behind the bar are the four bartenders, resplendent in white jackets, well groomed and as dexterous in mixing decoctions and serving drinks as a Hoffman House studio artist. In fact, the head bartender, F. L. Newman, for many years tended bar in one of the Delmonico houses in New York, and his assistants are George Bradley, late of Chapin & Gore's and Hannah & Hogg's; George Wilson and George Castles, both old time dispensers of liquid refreshment.

The Bishop has acquired such a Bacchalian dexterity in the serving of the drinks that he would create a furore at a Coney Island beer garden.

On each side of the back bar is a portrait of Miss Frances Willard and Neal Dow, and about the room in conspicuous places are placards announcing the different kind of drinks.

The beer, or beerette, or Bishop's beer, as it is variously called, is, as explained by the expert German chemist, who makes it, "a pure brewed extract of hops and malt, and while there is no alcohol in it, any beer drinker will declare it to be a good drink, and a close counterfeit, without any of the bad effects of lager beer." Its exact composition the chemist says is a secret which he intends to jealously guard, for he thinks "there are millions in it."

A funny complication arose on the opening day. The amount of beerette manufactured and on hand for prospective customers proved to be distressingly inadequate to the demand, so that by 2 P. M. the foaming beverage had run out. In the emergency some practical joker whispered to Bishop Fallows that weiss beer was just as free from alcohol as was his beerette, and suggested that a supply of that be obtained. The suggestion was acted upon, and several dozen cases hurriedly bought. Customers who knew the difference between beer and beerette that afternoon softly "winked the other eye" after drinking the weiss beer, and ordered the Bishop to "set 'em up again."

The hilarious manner in which his customers began to act astonished the good Bishop, but not an inkling of the real state of affairs occurred to him until two revenue officers entered and said they understood the "Salon" was selling weiss beer. The Bishop acknowledged it, and was thunderstruck when they informed him the weiss beer he was selling contained 3 per cent. of alcohol, and that if he wanted to continue he must take out a saloon license. The weiss beer was thrown into the sewer forthwith and the house closed while an investigation was begun.

One Week of Sunshine in Georgia.

One week o' sunshine fills the cup
O' pleasure to the brim:
The mockin' birds primpin' up—
The bluebird's on the limb.

An' fur an' nigh the bendin' sky
Is bright with livin' blue;
An' in the meadows you can spy
The daisy in the dew.

If this ain't spring, I'm bound to tell
It's got deceiving looks:
For here's a man with clocks to sell—
Another one with books!
—Atlanta Constitution.

SAD FRENCH WIDOWS.

CUSTOMS WHICH MAKE THEIR LOT ANYTHING BUT PLEASANT.

Practically Their Only Chance for Social Pleasure Is in a Second Marriage, which Is Not Always So Easy to Arrange. Taxed to Maintain the Army.

The Paris widow is a surprise. I cannot tell exactly what I had expected, but for some reason or other the thought of French widows always called up vague recollections of the bereaved young person in "A Trip to Chinatown." I humbly beg the pardon of the real Paris widow. She is much more like the Oriental wives who die on the funeral pyres of their husbands, and she is often almost as secluded as if she were buried alive.

Naturally this does not refer to the people, as the French call the working classes. When the small grocery man dies his widow, who has sat at the desk and been cashier and bookkeeper during his lifetime, sits there still, and everything goes on as before except that there is a "Vve" put before the name to show that "Widow (Veuve) Maurice," or whatever her name may be, is at the head of the business. There is no attempt made, as there often is in America, to give the impression that affairs are in the hands of a man. The women are too shrewd and experienced as shopkeepers to need any such pretense.

With the women of society it is different. It is not easy for a stranger to make observations in this field, and above all in the direction of widows. The easiest way to gain information is to cultivate some widow who has seen better days, and get her to reveal the secrets of her sad estate. This is not difficult. Widows with money are the prey of designing relatives and unscrupulous guardians, so that there are always plenty of them who have been reduced to keeping boarders, which, after the pawnshop, is their sole resource.

"In France if a husband dies without a will, leaving a widow but no children, all his property, even though it may have been held in common during his lifetime, goes to his family. His widow has nothing. If he dies without a will, leaving a widow and children, all the property goes to the children. The widow may live on the income with her children, provided she can arrange it with their guardian, but if he is so inclined he can forbid her receiving a cent from her children and compel her to earn her own living. It is terrible, isn't it?"

It was a bright, attractive little French woman of forty who told me this. She has been a widow ten years, and although her husband left her a fortune of $150,000, and although she had her own dot of $12,000, she is now keeping boarders for the princely sum of $5 a week. Her brother-in-law, in whose bank her entire fortune was placed, failed at a judicious interval after her husband's death, and Mme. T. found herself with a young son to educate, without income or without resources, except a small country house. This she sold and put her 15-year-old boy in college. By the advice of prominent lawyers she set about trying to recover her dot, which is supposed to be the inalienable property of a married woman. She failed, and in the meantime had sold or pawned most of her jewelry and furniture.

Her son was scarcely out of college before, like every other Frenchman, he was obliged to go into the army. Most young men are obliged to serve for three years, but the only sons of widows are let off with one year. This is not such a concession as it seems at first, for the young man at the end of his year is taxed a certain amount annually until he attains the age of sixty. Not only this, but if he cannot or does not pay this tax his mother, the unfortunate widow, becomes responsible for it. If she fails to pay it her furniture, or whatever possessions she may have, is seized. In effect, therefore, it is she who is taxed in lieu of the military service from which she is supposedly exempt.

Her son, during his year of military service, receives one cent a day. With this he is obliged to buy blacking for his boots, tobacco and other things. He receives his clothes and an insufficient amount of food from the government. If his mother did not send him food he would fall ill from pure hunger.

These are a few of the practical inconveniences of being a French widow. In the social line she is much worse off, especially if she happens to be a daughterless or a penniless widow.

There are two classes of human beings in France who have no liberty. They are young girls and widows, and of the two the former are much the happier, because their seclusion does come to an end, since they are almost sure to marry. The widow is liberated by the same method, but the road is a more difficult one.

Yes, the Paris widow certainly is a surprise. A Frenchman would never have written "A Trip to Chinatown." And as for Tony Weller, if his immortal wisdom had blossomed on this side of the channel he would never have said "to beware of vidders," but beware of being one.

Good Ammunition.

While in London last summer the saunterer strayed into one of the cheaper London Music Halls. All through the music the audience was chaffing the orchestra, for even the lowest of European audiences knows good music, and is free in venting its approval or disapproval. Suddenly in the back of the gallery a fight arose, and two costermongers, locked in a close but unfriendly embrace, gravitated to the rail overhanging the pit. At last one of them got the better of the other, and grabbing him by the collar, held him over the rail. Apparently he was going to throw him into the pit. But from the audience in the pit, arose a voice, shrill and small, but perfectly audible:

"Don't waste 'im, 'Arry! Throw 'im h'at the trombone!"—Boston Budget.

Had Papa On the Hip.

A hospital nurse mania has set in among Canadian young women of good family and no necessity, whose energies have been transplanted to New York. Within the past month seven Canadian girls have become nurses at St. Luke's, making an overwhelming majority of British subject employes within one institution.

This nursing craze is a veritable fever in Canada just now. The reply of a young English girl on a visit to Toronto to her father's angry letter of rebuke, voices the situation exactly:

"What on earth" wrote the irate parent, "could have induced you to think of becoming a nurse?"

"Because every one I knew was becoming a nurse," came the daughter's re-

A FRESH YOUNG MAN.

The Cat Was All Right, But the Boy Needs a Spanking.

At 6:45 last night a young man was coming down North avenue, and in his arms carried a cat. The cat was all right, but the young man was too fresh. When in front of Hotel Grenada he met two young women going in an opposite direction. Here is where the young man thought he would be funny, so he made a quick motion as if to throw the feline into the face of one of the girls. The young woman is subject to fits, and this act had the effect of immediately bringing one on. She dropped to the sidewalk and the guests in the hotel rushed out with a chair and lifted her into it. For nearly an hour the unfortunate girl's hands were rubbed, her forehead was bathed with cold water and various other remedies were brought into use, but she recovered very slowly. Finally a physician was called, and the young woman, still in a helpless condition, was removed to her home on West Fourth street. After the physician had administered several remedies, she finally regained consciousness.

The fresh young man escaped without being recognized. Had he remained to view the result of his freshness, there would probably be a young man wearing two eyes draped in mourning, for the men of the neighborhood were greatly aroused.

THE STOVE WAS TOO HOT.

And Set Fire to the Bed, Which Called Out the Department.

"Me, oh my, what 'll me husband say when he sees this", cried Mrs. Edward Kline of 307 Plainfield avenue as she viewed the ruins of her spare bedroom suit from the ravages of fire this noon.

She had had a hot fire in a coal stove near the bed all the morning, and at 11:15 commenced to smell burning feathers. Going from her work about the house and opening the bedroom door, a great cloud of suffocating smoke belched forth. Mrs. Kline ran out of the house and gave the cry of fire. Policeman McCue who was near by heard her and sent in an alarm from Box 43 at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Front street, at 11:25.

All the apparatus of the fire department responded, but three hand extinguishers sufficed to put out the fire, which had ruined the bed, coverings and carpet. One ambitious fireman attempted to save the feather bed, and in so doing scattered its contents all over the house, much to the discomfiture of Mrs. Kline. The damage will not exceed $50; insured.

ENTERPRISING JUNIORS.

They Show How Well They Can Entertain, and at What a Profit.

The Junior Christian Endeavor society of the Trinity Reformed Church, under the direction of Mrs. R. A. Meeker and Miss Susie Berg, assisted by Miss Mabel Wilson, gave a delightful entertainment last evening which was attended by a large number of the Senior members and their friends. An admission fee of one cent was charged for children and five cents for adults, the proceeds to go towards helping needy churches in the West.

A well-rendered piano duet by Isabelle Edwards and Violet Beerbower opened the evening's exercises, and then followed an interesting recitation by Robert Metler, "Yankee Doodle Kitchen". Evelyn Berg gave a pleasing piano solo which was well received.

In one corner of the room a photograph gallery had been arranged with pink and green bunting and presented an attractive appearance. This was in charge of J. Berg, Charles Dunlap William Swaim, Everitt Leighton and George Reynolds. All wishing a photograph called on the young men and for five cents were given a "brownie". Much amusement was afforded those who desired a picture.

Continuing the programme Jennie Thorn gave a recitation of much merit.

Members of the Society then formed themselves into a "butterfly group" and the picture was exceedingly pretty.

A recitation by Charles Suhr, preceded a piano solo by Lucy Cortell.

Fifteen minutes was again given those present to secure their photographs.

The entertainment concluded with "Mother Goose" by the Society and a recitation by David Wikoff.

The Juniors will realize about $12 from the entertainment which is very encouraging to the young Endeavorers.

—Robert Bowden of West Second street is a new bicycle rider.

—Thomas Smith will ride a new Cleveland wheel this season.

—Miss Gaskell has resumed her duties in Edsall's after a brief illness.

—A brick chimney 80 feet high has been built on the new building of the American Steam Laundry Company, East Front street.

—The store front of the place formerly used by Jules Boutet on West Second street is being torn down, and improvements are being made about the dwelling.

—The union services on Good Friday will be held in the First M. E. Church. The list of speakers will be published in due time. Revs. Richards, Rodman and Barnes are the Committee of Arrangements.

J. E. Stewart and family have returned from their Winter home in New York city and again taken up their residence at 602 West Seventh street.

LITTLE ENDEAVORERS.

They Entertain an Audience With Novel Exercises.

The home missionary exercises under the auspices of the Junior Christian Endeavor society in the First Presbyterian Church last night, were participated in by 23 little Endeavorers who furnished an entertaining evening to the large number assembled.

The exercises were of a novel character, each of the twenty-three representing a portion of a railroad train and in turn performing the part of reciting or singing. Those who took part were Mary and Bertha Anglehart, Charlotte and Lind Cave, Jennie and Mamie Dunham, Mabel and Willie Mohl, Mildred and Carl Ulrich, Beatrice and Vincent Miner, Ethel Lang, Donald Bechtelle, Roy Radford, Douglas and Chauncey Murphy, Flossie and Edna Martin, Etta and Ella Havens, Pierson Morgan and Willie Hepborn.

Rev. Dr. Wm. R. Richards of the Crescent Avenue Church made a few remarks appropriate to the mission work, telling of his experience in the West with the needy, and how well the efforts of the little workers were merited ere in our own country.

The exercises were arranged by and under the supervision of Misses Lou Peck and Bessie Blair, who devoted much time and energy to perfecting their young pupils.

TEA AND MUSIC.

The Ladies Society Entertained by Mrs. Henry A. McGee.

The tea and musicale given by the Ladies Aid Society of the First M. E. Church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Orchard place, yesterday from 4 to 7, afforded a pleasant time to all who attended, and netted a handsome sum for the society. Those who received were Mrs. McGee, Mrs. Ockeifair and Mrs. Davis.

The dining room looked very pretty, decorated with yellow daffodils. The table was presided over by Mrs. George T. Rogers and Mrs. J. H. Howell, assisted by the Misses Smith, Miss Pangborn, Miss Chandler, Miss Barnes, Miss Mulford and Mrs. S. W. Clark.

During the serving of the light refreshments the musicale was enjoyed. Miss Addie Parker Jackson recited "The Prize Violin" and "How Mrs. O'Toole and her five children got to Twenty-ninth street." Both were entertaining pieces, and the elocutionary powers of Miss Jackson added much to the happy effect on her hearers.

Miss Grace Whiting of Brooklyn, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Mrs. J. B. Morrill, rendered the Venetian song and "Sweet Phyllida". The Slumber song was played on the cornet by Raymond McGee, which completed the programme.

Prizes Presented.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, at their meeting last night, initiated one member, John Shirley, and after transacting routine business closed the meeting, and reopened again for the Foresters and their friends of which the room was filled to its capacity. Chief Ranger Whitley presided, and beside him on the platform were High Chief Ranger Bingham of Elizabeth, Court Physician Lowrie of Plainfield, Court and other officers. Chief Ranger Whitley welcomed the friends of the order in a few happy words, and also introduced the various numbers on the programme. High Chief Ranger Bingham delivered a ringing address on Forestry which was well received by all present, and then in a few well-chosen words presented on behalf of the High Court handsome gold badges to Court Deputy High Chief Bird, Chief Ranger Whitley, Past Chief Ranger Allen, and Brother William Rankin, for valuable services rendered the Court in securing members. Chief Ranger Whitley replied in a short speech of thanks for himself and brethren. Refreshments were then served in abundance to all present, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a happy termination.

Following was the programme:

Song, Scotch medley, Wm. Rankin; guitar and harmonica solo, Harry McComas; German dialect, John Carney; banjo solo and song, Harry Dreier; vocal duet "Minute-Gun at Sea", Messrs Wharton and Comerford; English hornpipe and Irish jig, Albert McComas; solo "The Fatal Wedding", F. W. Bowden; Highland fling, Wm. Rankin; song "Maid of Glen Colam", Charles McIntosh.

All About a Hat.

Motorman Keefe of the street railway lost his hat Thursday night while running his car near Grant avenue on West Front street, and it necessitated his taking the headlight from his car to look for it in the vacant lots. Conductor Michael Nevins suggested that he could get him a hat that would stay on by sending to Ireland for it, but the motorman did not accept the offer.

How the Teams Finished.

The final games in the county section of the Journal Association were rolled Thursday night, and Roselle came out ahead. The scores on the whole were excellent, and the showing made by the teams was of a quality of which any team might be proud.

Roselle won the series with nine victories and three defeats.

Plainfield finished second, with seven victories and five defeats.

Westfield and Cranford are tied for third place, each with four wins and eight losses.

THE TROLLEY COMING.

Fanwood Township Adopts the Ordinance.

COMPANY'S ACCEPTANCE AWAITED.

Unsuccessful Attempt to Limit the Franchise to 50 Years—Old Feltville Road to Be Opened.

The Fanwood Township Committee met at the rooms in Excelsior Hall Friday evening to consider the trolley matter. Chairman Terry called the meeting to order. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and on motion the trolley ordinance was taken up and gone through in sections by the Committee and Mr. Gaddis, the representative of the trolley company. Few changes were made, as the Committee had been over the ordinance at their previous meeting. The Town Committee wished to place a limit of 50 years on the ordinance. Mr. Gaddis objected to having the limit placed. He said the power to do so lay with the Committee, but he hoped they would not put it in the ordinance.

Mr. Gaddis objected to the section relating to the right of way at crossings, the ordinance reading "The public shall have the first right of way at crossings, whether on foot, horseback or in vehicle". The Committee would not change the section as it served as a protection to the public using the crossings. Mr. Gaddis made several other objections during the reading, but the objections were overruled by the Committee. After the reading of the ordinance Mr. Nichol asked Mr. Gaddis if the ordinance as read, (if passed), would be accepted by the company. He said he could not say, as they submitted all ordinances before accepting, to legal advice. He wished the committee would reconsider the 50-year limit in the ordinance, as it would hurt the company if they wished to put a mortgage on their franchises. Mr. Nichol moved that the clause be stricken out of the ordinance, and the motion was carried.

Mr. Nichol then moved that the ordinance as read be passed. The motion was carried unanimously, and Mr. Gaddis was given a copy to present to the legal adviser of the company for his approval.

When this is secured, a long fought battle will have been ended with Scotch Plains on top, with a good strong ordinance protecting the township and public in every way. The Committee deserve a great deal of praise for the stand they have taken in the matter from beginning to end.

The petition for opening the old Feltville road was taken up. Mr. Miller moved that the Committee employ surveyors to survey and open up the road. His motion was carried.

Bills were read and ordered paid, the treasurer's report was read and accepted, and the Committee adjourned.

Rockview Avenue Masquerade.

Miss Grace E. Overton of Rockview avenue entertained friends at her home, last evening, with a masquerade.

After a general promenade to view the different costumes, interesting and amusing games made the evening pass very pleasantly.

Every one present was given the name of an animal and drew it on a blackboard while the rest guessed the name. This caused no end of fun. After playing "advertisements" and "chips" the masks were removed.

Miss Elizabeth Fish and George A. Horne received the first prizes for the best disguises. Herbert W. Moore won the booby prize.

Among the striking costumes worn were: Misses Edith L Burt, flower girl; Grace E Overton, Japanese; Mabel Ladd, "Mary, Mary, quite contrary"; Eleanor T Van Deventer, nun; Eva Dayton, jester; Elizabeth Fish, "Liberty"; Sadie Douglass, Swiss girl; Lucie Davis, Japanese; Mary Hull, milkmaid; and George A Horne, baby; Nathan Lane, Jr., French nurse; Everett J Peck, shepherd; Herbert W Moore, shepherd; Raymond A McGee, student; Herbert Richardson, prince; Fred Fullerton, Henry II; J Vincent Rittenhouse, flower girl; Robert Douglass, devil; A Murphy, executioner; Carleton Potts, fat man; Philip Sufforn, black domino.

Miss Overton was assisted in receiving by Miss Kate Overton, Miss Grace Bonny, Miss Elsie Horne, and Miss Edith Lane.

During the evening there were recitations by Miss Grace E. Overton and Miss Mary Locky and a song "Cum Bonus Homo" by Miss Eleanor T. Van Deventer.

An elaborate collation was served and the gay party broke up shortly after twelve.

Washingtonville Election.

The annual business meeting of the Sunday-school teachers and officers of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel, Washingtonville, was held last evening with a very large attendance.

After hearing excellent reports from the different committees the following officers were elected: President—E. L. Bonny; Vice-president—Andrew Wilson; Treasurer—J. G. Bicknell; Secretary—W. E. Bicknell; Organist—Miss Nettie Beeching; Assistant-organist—Miss Carrie Bellman; Librarian—George Howard; Trustee, 3 years—George Wissens.

—It is conceded by all prejudiced shoe dealers that the Johnston & Murphy patent leather shoes are the finest made in the country. You can find a fresh supply at Doane & Edsall's preparatory for Easter.

BRIAR PIPE
GIVEN AWAY
WITH EVERY ONE POUND
bale
OF DUKES
MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE or
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

SPACE	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	32.00	54.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRE
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.
I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.
I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.
I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the largest portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.
Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager.
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
H. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGA
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and ... the palm fr from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest ... Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes, Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Va

L. A. WOOLSTON,
Woolston & Buck
PAINTERS,
Wall Paper
PAINTERS SUPPLIES, 141-143 NORTH

THE BISHOP'S BEER.

THE FUN A CHICAGO DIVINE IS HAVING RUNNING A SALOON.

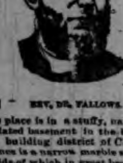
His Bartenders Are Artists in Concocting Drinks. Tricks Played by Rivals. The Church Saloon Seems Popular and Its Number May Increase.

Fancy a Reverened Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church selling beers and drinks about a saloon, the foam dripping down the front of his clerical coat or splashing in his face as a bartender slides the glasses along the shiny, polished cherry bar toward him!

Yet this is what happens every day in Chicago. And the Bishop not only serves drinks, but deals out hash, kidney stew and pork and beans as well. The clerical subject is the Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., Bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church, and the place where he performs these interesting things is the "Home Salon," at 155 Washington street.

The place has not been in operation long yet the average attendance per day has been 2,400. Four thousand persons patronized it on the opening day. Crowds throng the place day and night, and its promoters have difficulty handling the crush and furnishing the drinks, which are becoming famous.

Bishop Fallows believes men do not drink beer—that is, the majority do not—for the alcohol that is in it, nor for the tipsiness overindulgence induces. He maintains that they drink it as a beverage simply, and that the drunkenness is in most cases the result of unintentional excess. He believes, too, that many slaves of drink have been made so through their first indulgence in what at the time they thought was a harmless beverage, but that the alcohol in it, awakening an appetite dormant in many and only becoming active as it was fed, finally saturated the victim and reduced him to the pitable condition of the habitual drunkard.



REV. DR. FALLOWS.

The place is in a stuffy, narrow, badly ventilated basement in the heart of the office building district of Chicago. Its entrance is a narrow marble staircase, on one side of which in great brass letters is the sign, "Home Salon."

There is nothing to indicate that the cellar is different in character from the thousands of basement saloons that flourish in Chicago. In fact, the highly polished brass posts and railings leading into the basement are in strong imitation of their alcohol subsidized competitors, and a stranger going into it and asking for a glass of beer would probably leave with no suspicion that he had not had the genuine thing, except a slight peculiarity in the taste of the beverage.

On the left side of the basement as one enters is the brilliantly lighted bar, glistening with the usual glassware and bottles and decanters exactly similar to those used in saloons and filled with many colored liquids, all non alcoholics. Behind the bar are the four bartenders, resplendent in white jackets, well groomed and as dexterous in mixing decoctions and serving drinks as a Hoffman House studio artist. In fact, the head bartender, F. L. Newman, for many years tended bar in one of the Delmonico houses in New York, and his assistants are George Bradley, late of Chapin & Gore's and Hannah & Hogg's; George Wilson and George Castles, both old time dispensers of liquid refreshment.

The Bishop has acquired such a Bacchalian dexterity in the serving of the drinks that he would create a furore at a Coney Island beer garden.

On each side of the back bar is a portrait of Miss Frances Willard and Neal Dow, and about the room in conspicuous places are placards announcing the different kind of drinks.

The beer, or beerette, or Bishop's beer, as it is variously called, is, as explained by the expert German chemist, who makes it, "a pure brewed extract of hops and malt, and while there is no alcohol in it, any beer drinker will declare it to be a good drink, and a close counterfeit, without any of the bad effects of lager beer." Its exact composition the chemist says is a secret which he intends to jealously guard, for he thinks "there are millions in it."

A funny complication arose on the opening day. The amount of beerette manufactured and on hand for prospective customers proved to be distressingly inadequate to the demand, so that by 2 P. M. the foaming beverage had run out. In the emergency some practical joker whispered to Bishop Fallows that weiss beer was just as free from alcohol as was his beerette, and suggested that a supply of that be obtained. The suggestion was acted upon, and several dozen cases hurriedly bought. Customers who knew the difference between beer and beerette that afternoon softly "winked the other eye" after drinking the weiss beer, and ordered the Bishop to "set 'em up again."

The hilarious manner in which his customers began to act astonished the good Bishop, but not an inkling of the real state of affairs occurred to him until two revenue officers entered and said they understood the "Salon" was selling weiss beer. The Bishop acknowledged it, and was thunderstruck when they informed him the weiss beer he was selling contained 3 per cent. of alcohol, and that if he wanted to continue he must take out a saloon license. The weiss beer was thrown into the sewer forthwith and the house closed while an investigation was begun.

One Week of Sunshine in Georgia.

One week o' sunshine fills the cup
O' pleasure to the brim;
The mockin' birds primpin' up—
The bluebird's on the limb,

An' fur' an' nigh the bendin' sky
Is bright with livin' blue;
An' in the meadows you can spy
The daisy in the dew.

If this ain't spring, I'm bound to tell
It's got deceiving looks;
For here's a man with clouds to sell—
Another one with books!

—Atlanta Constitution.

SAD FRENCH WIDOWS.

CUSTOMS WHICH MAKE THEIR LOT ANYTHING BUT PLEASANT.

Practically Their Only Chance for Social Pleasure Is in a Second Marriage, which Is Not Always So Easy to Arrange. Taxed to Maintain the Army.

The Paris widow is a surprise. I cannot tell exactly what I had expected, but for some reason or other the thought of French widows always called up vague recollections of the bereaved young person in "A Trip to Chinatown." I humbly beg the pardon of the real Paris widow. She is much more like the Oriental wives who die on the funeral pyres of their husbands, and she is often almost as secluded as if she were buried alive.

Naturally this does not refer to the people, as the French call the working classes. When the small grocery man dies his widow, who has sat at the desk and been cashier and bookkeeper during his lifetime, sits there still, and everything goes on as before except that there is a "Vve" put before the name to show that "Widow (Veuve) Maurice," or whatever her name may be, is at the head of the business. There is no attempt made, as there often is in America, to give the impression that affairs are in the hands of a man. The women are too shrewd and experienced as shopkeepers to need any such pretense.

With the women of society it is different. It is not easy for a stranger to make observations in this field, and above all in the direction of widows. The easiest way to gain information is to cultivate some widow who has seen better days, and get her to reveal the secrets of her sad estate. This is not difficult. Widows with money are the prey of designing relatives and unscrupulous guardians, so that there are always plenty of them who have been reduced to keeping boarders, which, after the pawnshop, is their sole resource.

"In France if a husband dies without a will, leaving a widow but no children, all his property, even though it may have been held in common during his lifetime, goes to his family. His widow has nothing. If he dies without a will, leaving a widow and children, all the property goes to the children. The widow may live on the income with her children, provided she can arrange it with their guardian, but if he is so inclined he can forbid her receiving a cent from her children and compel her to earn her own living. It is terrible, isn't it?"

It was a bright, attractive little French woman of forty who told me this. She has been a widow ten years, and although her husband left her a fortune of $150,000, and although she had her own dot of $12,000, she is now keeping boarders for the princely sum of $5 a week. Her brother-in-law, in whose bank her entire fortune was placed, failed at a judicious interval after her husband's death, and Mme. T. found herself with a young son to educate, without income or without resources, except a small country house. This she sold and put her 15-year-old boy in college. By the advice of prominent lawyers she set about trying to recover her dot, which is supposed to be the inalienable property of a married woman. She failed, and in the meantime had sold or pawned most of her jewelry and furniture.

Her son was scarcely out of college before, like every other Frenchman, he was obliged to go into the army. Most young men are obliged to serve for three years, but the only sons of widows are let off with one year. This is not such a concession as it seems at first, for the young man at the end of his year is taxed a certain amount annually until he attains the age of sixty. Not only this, but if he cannot or does not pay this tax his mother, the unfortunate widow, becomes responsible for it. If she fails to pay it her furniture, or whatever possessions she may have, is seized. In effect, therefore, it is she who is taxed in lieu of the military service from which she is supposedly exempt.

Her son, during his year of military service, receives one cent a day. With this he is obliged to buy blacking for his boots, tobacco and other things. He receives his clothes and an insufficient amount of food from the government. If his mother did not send him food he would fall ill from pure hunger.

These are a few of the practical inconveniences of being a French widow. In the social line she is much worse off, especially if she happens to be a daughterless or a penniless widow.

There are two classes of human beings in France who have no liberty. They are young girls and widows, and of the two the former are much the happier, because their seclusion does come to an end, since they are almost sure to marry. The widow is liberated by the same method, but the road is a more difficult one.

Yes, the Paris widow certainly is a surprise. A Frenchman would never have written "A Trip to Chinatown." And as for Tony Weller, if his immortal wisdom had blossomed on this side of the channel he would never have said "to beware of vidders," but beware of being one.

Good Ammunition.

While in London last summer the saunterer strayed into one of the cheaper London Music Halls. All through the music the audience was chaffing the orchestra, for even the lowest of European audiences knows good music, and is free in venting its approval or disapproval. Suddenly in the back of the gallery a fight arose, and two costermongers, locked in a close but unfriendly embrace, gravitated to the rail overhanging the pit. At last one of them got the better of the other, and grabbing him by the collar, held him over the rail. Apparently he was going to throw him into the pit. But from the audience in the pit arose a voice, shrill and small, but perfectly audible:

"Don't waste 'im, 'Arry! Throw 'im h'at the trombone!"—Boston Budget.

Bad Fads On the Hip.

A hospital nurse mania has set in among Canadian young women of good family and no necessity, whose energies have been transplanted to New York. Within the past month seven Canadian girls have become nurses at St. Luke's, making an overwhelming majority of British subject employes within one institution.

This nursing craze is a veritable fever in Canada just now. The reply of a young English girl on a visit to Toronto to her father's angry letter of rebuke, voices the situation exactly:

"What on earth" wrote the irate parent, "could have induced you to think of becoming a nurse?"

"Because every one I know was becoming a nurse," came the daughter's re-

A FRESH YOUNG MAN.

The Cat Was All Right, But the Boy Needs a Spanking.

At 8:45 last night a young man was coming down North avenue, and in his arms carried a cat. The cat was all right, but the young man was too fresh. When in front of Hotel Grenada he met two young women going in an opposite direction. Here is where the young man thought he would be funny, so he made a quick motion as if to throw the feline into the face of one of the girls. The young woman is subject to fits, and this act had the effect of immediately bringing one on. She dropped to the sidewalk and the guests in the hotel rushed out with a chair and lifted her into it. For nearly an hour the unfortunate girl's hands were rubbed, her forehead was bathed with cold water and various other remedies were brought into use, but she recovered very slowly. Finally a physician was called, and the young woman, still in a helpless condition, was removed to her home on West Fourth street. After the physician had administered several remedies, she finally regained consciousness.

The fresh young man escaped without being recognized. Had he remained to view the result of his freshness, there would probably be a young man wearing two eyes draped in mourning, for the men of the neighborhood were greatly aroused.

THE STOVE WAS TOO HOT.

And Set Fire to the Bed, Which Called Out the Department.

"Me, oh my, what 'll me husband say when he sees this", cried Mrs. Edward Kline of 307 Plainfield avenue as she viewed the ruins of her spare bedroom suit from the ravages of fire this noon.

She had had a hot fire in a coal stove near the bed all the morning, and at 11:15 commenced to smell burning feathers. Going from her work about the house and opening the bedroom door, a great cloud of suffocating smoke belched forth. Mrs. Kline ran out of the house and gave the cry of fire. Policeman McCue who was near by heard her and sent in an alarm from Box 43 at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Front street, at 11:25.

All the apparatus of the fire department responded, but three hand extinguishers sufficed to put out the fire, which had ruined the bed, coverings and carpet. One ambitious fireman attempted to save the feather bed, and in so doing scattered its contents all over the house, much to the discomfiture of Mrs. Kline. The damage will not exceed $50; insured.

ENTERPRISING JUNIORS.

They Show How Well They Can Entertain, and at What a Profit.

The Junior Christian Endeavor society of the Trinity Reformed Church, under the direction of Mrs. E. A. Mosher and Miss Susie Berg, assisted by Miss Mabel Wilson, gave a delightful entertainment last evening which was attended by a large number of the Senior members and their friends. An admission fee of one cent was charged for children and five cents for adults, the proceeds to go towards helping needy churches in the West.

A well-rendered piano duet by Isabelle Edwards and Violet Beerbower opened the evening's exercises, and then followed an interesting recitation by Robert Metler, "Yankee Doodle Kitchen". Evelyn Berg gave a pleasing piano solo which was well received.

In one corner of the room a photograph gallery had been arranged with pink and green bunting and presented an attractive appearance. This was in charge of J. Berg, Charles Dunlap William Swaim, Everitt Leighton and George Reynolds. All wishing a photograph called on the young men and for five cents were given a "brownie". Much amusement was afforded those who desired a picture.

Continuing the programme Jennie Thorn gave a recitation of much merit.

Members of the Society then formed themselves into a "butterfly group" and the picture was exceedingly pretty.

A recitation by Charles Suhr, preceded a piano solo by Lucy Coriell.

Fifteen minutes was again given those present to secure their photographs.

The entertainment concluded with "Mother Goose" by the Society and a recitation by David Wikoff.

The Juniors will realize about $12 from the entertainment which is very encouraging to the young Endeavorers.

—Robert Bowden of West Second street is a new bicycle rider.

—Thomas Smith will ride a new Cleveland wheel this season.

—Miss Gaskell has resumed her duties in Edsall's after a brief illness.

—A brick chimney 90 feet high has been built on the new building of the American Steam Laundry Company, East Front street.

—The store front of the place formerly used by Jules Bastes on West Second street is being torn down, and improvements are being made about the dwelling.

—The union services on Good Friday will be held in the First M. E. Church. The list of speakers will be published in due time. Revs. Richards, Rodman and Barnes are the Committee of Arrangements.

J. E. Stewart and family have returned from their Winter home in New York city and again taken up their residence at 612 West Seventh street.

LITTLE ENDEAVORERS.

They Entertain an Audience With Novel Exercises.

The home missionary exercises under the auspices of the Junior Christian Endeavor society in the First Presbyterian Church last night, were participated in by 23 little Endeavorers who furnished an entertaining evening to the large number assembled.

The exercises were of a novel character, each of the twenty-three representing a portion of a railroad train and in turn performing the part of reciting or singing. Those who took part were Mary and Bertha Anglehart, Charlotte and Lind Cave, Jennie and Mamie Dunham, Mabel and Willie Mehl, Mildred and Carl Ulrich, Beatrice and Vincent Miner, Ethel Lang, Donald Bechtelle, Roy Radford, Douglas and Chauncey Murphy, Flossie and Edna Martin, Etta and Ella Havens, Pierson Morgan and Willie Hepborn.

Rev. Dr. Wm R. Richards of the Crescent Avenue Church made a few remarks appropriate to the mission work, telling of his experiences in the West with the needy, and how well the efforts of the little workers were merited are in our own country.

The exercises were arranged by and under the supervision of Misses Lou Peck and Bessie Blair, who devoted much time and energy to perfecting their young pupils.

TEA AND MUSIC.

The Ladies Society Entertained by Mrs. Henry A. McGee.

The tea and musicale given by the Ladies Aid Society of the First M. E. Church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Orchard place, yesterday from 4 to 7, afforded a pleasant time to all who attended, and netted a handsome sum for the society. Those who received were Mrs. McGee, Mrs. Cokefair and Mrs. Davis.

The dining room looked very pretty, decorated with yellow daffodils. The table was presided over by Mrs. George T. Rogers and Mrs. J. H. Howell, assisted by the Misses Smith, Miss Pangborn, Miss Chandler, Miss Barnes, Miss Mulford and Mrs. S. W. Clark.

During the serving of the light refreshments the musicale was enjoyed. Miss Addie Parker Jackson recited "The Prize Violin" and "How Mrs. O'Toole and her five children got to Twenty-ninth street." Both were entertaining pieces, and the elocutionary powers of Miss Jackson added much to the happy effect on her hearers.

Miss Grace Whiting of Brooklyn, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Mrs. J. B. Morrill, rendered the Venetian song and "Sweet Phyllida". The Slumber song was played on the cornet by Raymond McGee, which completed the programme.

Prizes Presented.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, at their meeting last night, initiated one member, John Shirley, and after transacting routine business closed the meeting, and reopened again for the Foresters and their friends of which the room was filled to its capacity. Chief Ranger Whitley presided, and beside him on the platform were High Chief Ranger Bingham of Elizabeth, Court Physician Lowrie of Plainfield, Court and other officers. Chief Ranger Whitley welcomed the friends of the order in a few happy words, and also introduced the various numbers on the programme. High Chief Ranger Bingham delivered a ringing address on Forestry which was well received by all present, and then in a few well-chosen words presented on behalf of the High Court handsome gold badges to Court Deputy High Chief Bird, Chief Ranger Whitley, Past Chief Ranger Allen, and Brother William Rankin, for valuable services rendered the Court in securing members. Chief Ranger Whitley replied in a short speech of thanks for himself and brethren. Refreshments were then served in abundance to all present, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a happy termination.

Following was the programme:

Song, Scotch medley, Wm. Rankin; guitar and harmonica solo, Harry McComes; German dialect, John Carney; banjo solo and song, Harry Dreier; vocal duet "Minute-Gun at Sea", Messrs Wharton and Cumerford; English hornpipe and Irish jig, Albert McComes; solo "The Fatal Wedding", F. W. Bowden; Highland fling, Wm. Rankin; song "Maid of Glen Coloen", Charles McIntosh.

All About a Hat.

Motorman Keefe of the street railway lost his hat Thursday night while running his car near Grant avenue on West Front street, and it necessitated his taking the headlight from his car to look for it in the vacant lots. Conductor Michael Nevins suggested that he could get him a hat that would stay on by sending to Ireland for it, but the motorman did not accept the offer.

How the Teams Finished.

The final games in the county section of the Journal Association were rolled Thursday night, and Roselle came out ahead. The scores on the whole were excellent, and the showing made by the teams was of a quality of which any team might be proud.

Roselle won the series with nine victories and three defeats.

Plainfield finished second, with seven victories and five defeats.

Westfield and Cranford are tied for third place, each with four wins and eight losses.

THE TROLLEY COMING.

Fanwood Township Adopts the Ordinance.

COMPANY'S ACCEPTANCE AWAITED.

Unsuccessful Attempt to Limit the Franchise to 50 Years—Old Fettville Road to Be Opened.

The Fanwood Township Committee met at the rooms in Excelsior Hall Friday evening to consider the trolley matter. Chairman Terry called the meeting to order. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and on motion the trolley ordinance was taken up and gone through in sections by the Committee and Mr. Gaddis, the representative of the trolley company. Few changes were made, as the Committee had been over the ordinance at their previous meeting. The Town Committee wished to place a limit of 50 years on the ordinance. Mr. Gaddis objected to having the limit placed. He said the power to do so lay with the Committee, but he hoped they would not put it in the ordinance.

Mr. Gaddis objected to the section relating to the right of way at crossings, the ordinance reading "The public shall have the first right of way at crossings, whether on foot, horseback or in vehicle". The Committee would not change the section as it served as a protection to the public using the crossings. Mr. Gaddis made several other objections during the reading, but the objections were overruled by the Committee. After the reading of the ordinance Mr. Nichol asked Mr. Gaddis if the ordinance as read, (if passed), would be accepted by the company. He said he could not say, as they submitted all ordinances before accepting, to legal advice. He wished the committee would reconsider the 50-year limit in the ordinance, as it would hurt the company if they wished to put a mortgage on their franchises. Mr. Nichol moved that the clause be stricken out of the ordinance, and the motion was carried.

Mr. Nichol then moved that the ordinance as read be passed. The motion was carried unanimously, and Mr. Gaddis was given a copy to present to the legal adviser of the company for his approval.

When this is secured, a long fought battle will have been ended with Scotch Plains on top, with a good strong ordinance protecting the township and public in every way. The Committee deserve a great deal of praise for the stand they have taken in the matter from beginning to end.

The petition for opening the old Feltville road was taken up. Mr. Miller moved that the Committee employ surveyors to survey and open up the road. His motion was carried.

Bills were read and ordered paid, the treasurer's report was read and accepted, and the Committee adjourned.

Rockview Avenue Masquerade.

Miss Grace E. Overton of Rockview avenue entertained friends at her home, last evening, with a masquerade.

After a general promenade to view the different costumes, interesting and amusing games made the evening pass very pleasantly.

Every one present was given the name of an animal and drew it on a blackboard while the rest guessed the name. This caused no end of fun. After playing "advertisements" and "chips" the masks were removed.

Miss Elizabeth Fish and George A. Horne received the first prizes for the best disguises. Herbert W. Moore won the booby prize.

Among the striking costumes worn were: Misses Edith L Burt, flower girl; Grace E Overton, Japanese; Mabel Ladd, "Mary, Mary, quite contrary"; Eleanor T Van Deventer, nun; Eva Dayton, jester; Elizabeth Fish, "Liberty"; Sadie Douglass, Swiss girl; Lucie Davis, Japanese; Mary Hull, milkmaid; and George A Horne, baby; Nathan Lane, Jr., French nurse; Everett J Peck, shepherd; Herbert W Moore, shepherd; Raymond A McGee, student; Herbert Richardson, prince; Fred Fullerton, Henry II; J Vincent Rittenhouse, flower girl; Robert Douglass, devil; A Murphy, executioner; Carleton Potts, fat man; Philip Suffern, black domino.

Miss Overton was assisted in receiving by Miss Kate Overton, Miss Grace Bonny, Miss Elsie Horne, and Miss Edith Lane.

During the evening there were recitations by Miss Grace E. Overton and Miss Mary Lucky and a song "Cum Bonus Homo" by Miss Eleanor T. Van Deventer.

An elaborate collation was served and the gay party broke up shortly after twelve.

Washingtonville Election.

The annual business meeting of the Sunday-school teachers and officers of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel, Washingtonville, was held last evening with a very large attendance.

After hearing excellent reports from the different committees the following officers were elected: President—H. L. Bonny; Vice-president—Andrew Wilson; Treasurer—J. G. Bicknell; Secretary—W. E. Bicknell; Organist—Miss Nettie Boeshing; Assistant-organist—Miss Carrie Seliman; Librarian—George Howard; Trustee, 3 years—George Wilson.

—It is conceded by all prejudiced shoe dealers that the Johnston & Murphy patent leather shoes are the finest made in the country. You can find a fresh supply at Doane & Kissell's preparatory for

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF DUKES MIXTURE for 35 cents

Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE OR ATC

2 OZ. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

Space	Weeks 1	2	3	Months 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	1.50	2.00	2.50	4.00	5.00	9.50	[illegible]
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	[illegible]
3 in.	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	[illegible]
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	[illegible]
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	[illegible]
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	[illegible]
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	30.00	54.00	[illegible]
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	[illegible]

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.
I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.
I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.
I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.
Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR.
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobacco always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety

A. M. WOOLSTON, J. P. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES. 143-145 NORTH AVENUE

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Premonitory Symptoms of Imperial Impetuosity.

DISMISSED FROM THE SERVICE

Participation in the Corsican Uprising Costs His Commission in the French Army—Imbued With Revolutionary Ideas—Vagaries of a Genius.

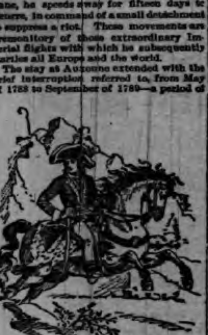
[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

VI.—GENIUS IN A QUANDARY.

At this stage, rapidity becomes the chief characteristic of Bonaparte. He darts from place to place with astonishing celerity, and in many instances with insufficient or undiscoverable motives of transit.

His flights are like those of a bird; say, an eagle's. Thus during his stay in Corsica he suddenly springs off, in October of 1787, and is at Paris for more than a month. But at Christmas he is back at Ajaccio with an extension of his leave of absence. Again, during his stay at Auxonne, he speeds away for fifteen days to Seurre, in command of a small detachment to suppress a riot. These movements are premonitory of those extraordinary Imperial flights with which he subsequently startles all Europe and the world.

The stay at Auxonne extended with the brief interruption referred to, from May of 1788 to September of 1789—a period of fifteen months. His occupations at that place were much like those at Valence and Ajaccio. He performed his military duties in a desultory way, but with more exactitude than the French code of military ethics at that time required. But military duty demanded only a fraction of his time; the rest was given to that intense but fragmentary study by which his mind was trained and supplied with a wide range of information.



NAPOLEON BY APPIANI.

The ambition of Napoleon to be an author did not for the present subside. At one time he was on the eve of bringing out at Paris his "History of Corsica." A publisher agreed to do the work on condition of share-and-share-alike in the proceeds. But just at that juncture Monseigneur Marbœuf, Bishop of Sens, to whom the work was dedicated, was deposed from his see in disgrace. Here was a state of things indeed, to dedicate a great work to a disgraced ecclesiastic! The publication was accordingly postponed, and the manuscript recast, with an inscription to Paoli. This was a plain indication that the author's mind, as between French despotism and Corsican independence, was strongly tending to the latter.

The winter of 1788-89 was passed by Bonaparte in his quarters at Auxonne. In the following April that disturbance occurred at Seurre which called forth a half-month's petty campaign from Napoleon's company, and ended in nothing. It was like the episode at Lyons, but less important. As yet, Lieutenant Bonaparte had never as a soldier drawn blood, or seen it drawn by others. His restlessness now bore him rapidly on to action. His passion for doing something and for "following his destiny"—a fiction which he was always dwelling upon—led him to commit himself (ambiguously) to the Corsican patriots. His adroitness was such, however, that he kept ever a cord to his purposes whereby he might recover himself for France. In fact, he knew not what thing he would be called to do, or in what cause his sword should first be actually unsheathed. His nature was always to avail himself of the first contingency. Napoleon is doubtless—such was his sleepless vigilance—the only great man of history who never lost an opportunity!

Bonaparte was with his regiment, so-called "of Iron," at Auxonne, when the great Revolution in France began. Within a month from the trifling event at Seurre, the States-General assembled at Versailles. There, on the 5th of May, 1789, the most remarkable political body of modern times went into session, on the condition of France and mankind. There was a procession of great men; a gathering to their seats in the Hall of Menus; a seating of six hundred representatives of the people; a looking down from the gallery of the young Baroness de Staël-Holstein on the heads of Riquetti de Mirabeau, the philosophic Volney, the lean Jean Paul Marat, the big young Danton of Arcis-sur-Aube, the lithe Camille, the Sea-green Robespierre, and the rest. It was the beginning of the end of much—the opening of a small crevasse in the great dyke whereby a feudal civilization had walled in the destinies of mankind for centuries. Outside that ancient wall lay the roaring ocean, soon to rush in wave on wave, till the deluge, flecked with blood, should rise to the pinnacles of all palaces, and splash the domes of all cathedrals.

The bruit of the great event reached the towns and cities and people of France. Men wot not the thing they did. None knew that the ancient order was rushing on to doom. None imagined that the French monarchy itself was going headlong down to Orcus and eternal night. All stood together on the crumbling verge of the chasm, and supposed that they would easily bridge it over with some new card-boards of finance and paper billets legislating bread for men. Vain delusions of an awful hour! Surely salvation for France and for mankind lies not that way, O Representatives of the People!

The effects of the extraordinary movement thus begun for the reform of the French nation were strikingly diverse in the different parts of the kingdom. France was as yet homogeneous in nothing. The towns of the South, under the loyal sentiments of the old Provençal race, received the news in one spirit, and the towns of the North in another. They of the Gironde in the far south west heard the tidings as a proclamation of good news to men, while they of Lyons and Montpellier and Marseilles and Toulon and Nice, in the far southeast, caught the intelligence with doubt and solemnity.

On men themselves the news fell from week to week with varying effects according to their personal character and prejudice of race. In general, they who had imbibed the principles of the new French philosophy either went after the Revolution or ran before it waving a flag. Such a mind was Bonaparte's. No doubt he was a born revolutionist—provided always he could himself control the revolution. His nature was fitted in every part for that state of fruitful anarchy which tends again to order. He was essentially a man for the storm and hurricane, but suited best the after stages of the tempest.

Would not this revolutionary fire in France leap the sea and kindle itself in Corsica? Does not occasion now offer for the recovery of Corsican independence? Does not the path of destiny open by way of Ajaccio rather than by way of Paris? Or if the cause indeed lies by way of Paris, does it not first extend through the native island? The patriot Paoli resides in English exile; perhaps he may return to Corsica, and we as his lieutenant-in-chief may yet lead the patriots to independence and glory. To sum up all, Napoleon at this stage was whirled along by the coming storm; but he cautiously kept his bearings, became practical rather than theoretical, and impatiently awaited the opportunity to become great.

Lieutenant Bonaparte remained with his regiment at Auxonne until the 15th of September, 1790. The Revolution had now been in progress a year and four months. The movement had become more and more portentous at every step. The ruined Bastile was already a baleful, but glorious, reminiscence. At this time Corsica was represented in the National Assembly by two moderate patriots, named Salicetti and Colona. The royal delegate from the island was that Buttafuoco whom Choiseul had used in establishing the French protectorate in Corsica.

The people of the island were divided into several hostile factions. First of all, there was a royal faction, very few in number, composed of the petty Corsican nobles and the higher ecclesiastics. These virtually constituted the insular "government." Secondly, there was a moderate party favorable to liberalism, but supporting the French protectorate. In the third place, there was a powerful revolutionary party, favoring absolute independence, and seeking by the recall of Paoli to overthrow all foreign authority. This condition of affairs, as well as the deplorable state of his family, induced Napoleon to obtain another leave of absence, and to return to his native country.

On his way homeward he stopped at Aix; and there he found his brother Lucien. That obstinate personage had withdrawn from the military academy at Brienne, but had failed to secure admission to the theological school at Aix. There he was in poverty and hopelessness, when Napoleon came and conducted him back to Ajaccio. The latter, at Marseilles, visited the Abbe Raynal; but there is no record of what occurred. Once at home, the young French officer was recognized as a man of importance; for he was the only Frenchman in the island possessing a thorough military education.

The project was now on for the organization of the Corsican militia; and Napoleon was necessary for success. He entered into the revolutionary intrigues of the day, moving obscurely and dangerously among the popular leaders, wholly distrusted by the few aristocrats, and identified with the moderate liberals only at the risk of his commission as an officer in the French army. That army was still the King's army; but the officers were nearly all, like Napoleon, infected with revolutionary sentiments to the extent that almost every sword might be said to have Republique dimly etched on the blade.

The history of this period at Corsica is small, treacherous, chaotic. From September of 1790 to the 1st of June, 1791, Napoleon remained in the island, committing himself more and more (but ever cautiously) to the motions of upheaval. Had it not been for the universal dissolution he must at once have suffered arrest and dismissal from the army. From the middle of October until the following February, he overstaid his leave of absence, working all winter at the various intrigues which were rife among his turbulent countrymen. He then devised a plausible excuse which was accepted at headquarters, and the next day procured another extension of his leave! Nor did he cease to flourish among the agitators of Ajaccio until his final departure to rejoin his command in May of 1791.

Such had been the shifting connection of Lieutenant Bonaparte with the Iron Regiment that he was almost an unrecognized force in his own division of the army. His absences from the command had far exceeded in duration his presence with it. On returning to France, he was assigned to the Fourth Regiment of artillery, stationed at Valence. His irregularities as an officer had not so far prevailed over the opinion of his great abilities and solid acquirements as to prevent his promotion at this time to the rank of lieutenant en premier.

On the political side, Napoleon was now drawn with great force towards the Revolutionary party in France. Perhaps the notion dawned in him that with the success of the Revolution and the rebuilding of the nation on a new republican basis, Corsica herself, by like revolt and renovation, might join in the common movement to greater advantage than could be gained by naked rebellion. This sentiment was fanned by a proposition made at this time in the Assembly to enlarge the titles of the "King of the French" by adding the names of the Navarrese and Corsicans formally to the list of his subjects. All such intermediary projects came to naught with the onrushing of the Revolution. They were soon swallowed up with the King himself and all kingly things in the deep hell-throat that opened.

But ever and anon the Corsican trend was strong on Lieutenant Bonaparte. Hardly had he got his place in the Fourth Regiment, at Valence, until he broke away again for his native island. There the stage of actual tumult had come. Napoleon was elected lieutenant-colonel of the Second Battalion of the Corsican army. He cautiously accepted the post, but at the same time kept his eye fixed on France. Then, after holding his place in the army of insurgents for less than a month, he suddenly sped away to his regiment on the Rhone. Arriving, he found himself dismissed from the service!

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

The Submarine Indicator.

The submarine indicator used in searching for wrecks on the sea bottom has a metallic sinker, which is trailed along near the bottom. When it approaches a mass of metal, the indicator on the searching ship is electrically disarranged and a bell is rung. The Hughes induction balance suggested the plan of the apparatus.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTIONS WITH OVER [illegible] SUB-CENTERS—PROTECTION AGAINST FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Brewley Barber Grove and Front sts
G W Y Moy 4th and Park avenue
Frank Hawley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville
J B Coddington, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 5th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	3 E West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove st
Adams H C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Son	122 North av
Andrews F E	209 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 5th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 3d st
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, J W Dr	Dunellen
Boone O W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 6th st
Boerhouser, J K	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	123 E 5th st
Blair A G	109 North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	240 Park av
Board of Education	6th st and Arlington av
Booth, E E	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	412 Central av
Central Times	123 E Front st
Clark, E B	221 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	451 North av
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
CONSTITUTIONALIST Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	226 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	15 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, B F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
DAILY PRESS	105 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, E M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	420 W 5th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John E	121 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 3d st
Engine No 2	3d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	27 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	22 Grove st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	4 W 5th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	420 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1012 Park av
French, C Frank	60 Somerset st
do do	237 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	203 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	161 North av
Howell E O	201 North av
Holmes E H	208 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	20 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	273 Park av
Ivins D G	311 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	213 W Front st
Kaufman W T	421 W 7th st
Kelly & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W E	128 Jackson av
Lowrie E E. Dr	612 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L. N	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	227 W Front st
Lounsbury, F O	Plainfield av
[illegible] A D	206 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	126 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	109 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James R	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W Y	Park av and 4th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	6 8 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	727 Watchung av
Murray J W	313 W 4th st
Music Hall	493
Myers, J K	139 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Peaton, T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	154 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	8 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	106 Park av
Potter, C jr	417 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	666 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	143 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	27 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	40 Belvidere av
Rhoades L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	406 W 5th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D C	127 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, B W	271 W 2d st
Rooms, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	402 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	416 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	428 Park av near Fifth st
Rankin, H. C	[illegible] 4th st
Runyon, Chas W	1 9 North av
Rice, E. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	25 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	623 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, E J	Front st., opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	27 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	N 7th av
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
Streib, H A	1205 Hillside av
Stevens F E	703 South av
Stelle Geo Q	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	148 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	20 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	149 W 2d st
Thompson, A D	347-349 [illegible] av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jas A	227 [illegible] st
Thornwall, Geo H	413 W 7th st
Tompkins, Dr T H	325 La Grande av
Tuttle Geo A	131 [illegible]
Tracy, J Everts	[illegible] st
Tamson W J	725 Watchung av
Tweedy, C. E.	121 Crescent av
Tucker & Sons	14 W Front st
Union Hose Co	226 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	161 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Boskirk J W	112 Grove av
Wadsworth, W S	[illegible] 4th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wheeler, Clifton Jr	226 3rd Place
Wollmann, E	702 West Seventh st
Winchert, J F	W 5th st., near Grant ave
Warren Hall	244 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES' CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	60c
Astoria, N Y	45c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	80c	Hunter's Point N Y	40c
Nack, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	30c
Bayonne N J	40c	Islip N Y	80c
Bergen Point N J	30c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	30c
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	30c
Fayville N Y	40c	Kingston N J	45c
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
Blauvelt N Y	45c	Leonia N J	45c
Bloomfield N J	40c	Little Neck N Y	60c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	50c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	50c
Brooklyn N Y	40c	Madison N J	30c
Caldwell N J	40c	Matawan N J	30c
Carlstadt N J	35c	Millburn N J	25c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	30c
Chatham N J	35c	Morristown N J	45c
Chester N J	45c	Newark N J	25c
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	25c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	35c
Dover N J	45c	Orange N J	25c
East Norwich N Y	80c	Pamrapo N J	45c
Eatontown N J	50c	Passaic N J	35c
Elizabeth N J	25c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	25c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	20c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	30c
Far Rockaway N Y	60c	Seabright N J	50c
Flatbush N Y	50c	Short Hills N J	25c
Flushing N Y	60c	South Amboy N J	30c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	30c
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	25c
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	15c
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	25c
Glen Cove N Y	80c	Yonkers N Y	50c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	50c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

The Name Is Everything.

The many tricks of trade that are practiced in these times are justified by a prominent soap manufacturer of Philadelphia as being positively necessary to influence a stupid public to buy what is for their benefit. The article in which he takes the most pride is a pure Castile soap, purer and better than that made in Castile. He stamped it as American Castile and was unable to sell any quantity. The people would not buy what little was taken by retail dealers. Under these circumstances the manufacturer changed the stamp on his soap to one abounding in Spanish words which meant the same thing. Since the change in stamp the sales have been remarkable and the soap is ever gaining in popularity.—Philadelphia Record.

A Robin Dined With the Captain.

Touching instances of the recent stress of weather comes from the mountainous districts of Wales. At Ffestiniog a sheep actually walked into a house and placed its forelegs on a lady's lap to beg a bit of bread which she held in her hand. At Barmouth a robin took up its quarters on board a steamship (the Telephone), accompanied it on its voyage to Liverpool and back again, and at dinner hours hopped on to the table and dined with the captain.

A Compliment.

"That boy of yours, madam," remarked the conductor as he punched the half fare ticket, "looks remarkably well developed for a child under 12."

"Thank you," replied the lady very calmly. "It's so gratifying for me to have any one notice Tommy's remarkable precocity."—Chicago Record.

According to Dean Hole there are fifty silly young men for one silly young woman.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanlike manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers' Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS

Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhœa, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

FOR MALARIA.
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.,
RAHWAY, N. J.

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD, [illegible]
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 165, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 16 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 311 E. Front street, corner [illegible] street. 7y29tf

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES. PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.

OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Av.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.
Mar16tf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 2½ SOMERSET ST. 8-18-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.
mch20tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 573 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. ap4y

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. 1217y1

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.

TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.

Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.

Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODDINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—jy6tf

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 128, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIERS,
Dentist,
46 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—je4tf

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey.]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—36 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box [illegible] Piano moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from [illegible] W. Front street, to [illegible] West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 3 doors above Peace street.

Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Livery and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Gas Piping. Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6. 11 21-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Instalments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. [illegible] used a nine-inch blade within touch of your whiskers. We came at last to a place where the path wound over a ridge and descended upon the other side through thick-pine trees into a valley which opened to the south. In time of peace I have little doubt that the villains were all smugglers and that these were the secret paths by which they crossed the Portuguese frontier. There were many mule tracks, and once I was surprised to see the marks of a large horse where a stream had softened the track. These were explained upon reaching a place where there was a clearing in the fir-wood. I saw the animal itself haltered to a fallen tree. My eyes hardly rested upon it when I recognized the great black limbs and the white near the foreleg. It was the very horse which I had begged for in the morning.
MUNN & CO., New York, 361 Broadway.

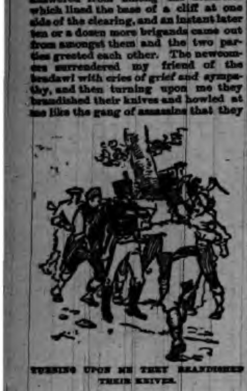
What then had become of Commissariat Vidal? Was it possible that there was another Frenchman in as perilous a plight as myself? The thought had hardly entered my head when our party stopped and one of them uttered a peculiar cry. It was answered from among the brambles which lined the base of a cliff at one side of the clearing, and an instant later ten or a dozen more brigands came out from amongst them and the two parties greeted each other. The newcomers surrendered my friend of the bradawl with cries of grief and sympathy, and then turning upon me they brandished their knives and howled at me like the gang of assassins that they were. So frantic were their gestures that I was convinced that my end had come, and was just bracing myself to meet it in a manner which should be worthy of my past reputation when one of them gave an order, and I was dragged roughly across the little glade to the brambles from which this new band had emerged.



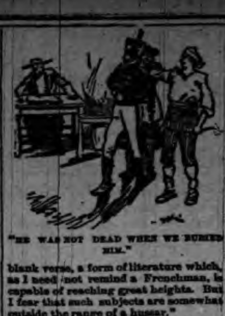
TURNING UPON ME THEY BRANDISHED THEIR KNIVES.

A narrow pathway led through them to a deep grotto in the side of the cliff. The sun was already setting outside and in the cave itself it would have been quite dark but for a pair of torches which blazed from a socket on either side. Between them there was sitting at a rude table a very singular-looking person, whom I saw instantly, from the respect with which the others addressed him, could be none other than the brigand chief who had received, on account of his dreadful character, the sinister name of El Cuchillo. The man whom I had injured had been carried in and placed upon the top of a barrel, his helpless legs dangling about in front of him and his cat's eyes still darting glances of hatred at me. I understood from the snatches of talk which I could follow between the chief and him that he was the lieutenant of the band, and that part of his duties was to lie in wait, with his smooth tongue and his peaceful garb, for travelers like myself. When I thought of how many gallant officers may have been lured to their death by this monster of hypocrisy it gave me a glow of pleasure to think that I had brought his villainies to an end—though I feared it would be at the cost of a life which neither the emperor nor the army could well spare.

As the injured man, still supported on the barrel by two comrades, was explaining in Spanish all that had befallen him, I was held by several of the villains in front of the table at which the chief was seated, and had an excellent opportunity of observing him. I have seldom seen any man who was less like my idea of a brigand, and especially of a brigand with such a reputation that in a land of cruelty he had earned so dark a nickname. His face was bluff, and broad and bland, with ruddy cheeks and comfortable little tufts of side whiskers, which gave him the appearance of a well-to-do grocer of the Rue St. Antoine. He had not any of those flaring sashes or gleaming weapons which distinguished his followers, but on the contrary he wore a good broadcloth coat like a respectable father of a family, and save his brown leggings there was nothing to indicate a life among the mountains. His surroundings, too, corresponded with himself, and beside his snuff box upon the table there stood a great brown book, which looked like a commercial ledger. Many other books were ranged along a plank between two powder casks, and there was a great litter of papers, some of which had verses scribbled upon them. All this I took in while he, leaning indolently back in his chair, was listening to the report of his lieutenant. Having heard everything he ordered the cripple to be carried out again, and I was left with only three guards waiting to hear my fate. He took up his pen and, tapping his forehead with the handle of it, he pursed up his lips and looked out of the corner of his eyes at the roof of the grotto.

"I suppose," said he at last, speaking very excellent French, "that you are not able to suggest a rhyme for the word Covilha."

I answered that my acquaintance with the Spanish language was so limited that I was unable to oblige him.



"HE WAS NOT DEAD WHEN WE BURIED HIM."

"It is a very rich language," said he, "but less prolific in rhymes than either the German or the English. That is why our best work has been done in blank verse, a form of literature which, as I need not remind a Frenchman, is capable of reaching great heights. But I fear that such subjects are somewhat outside the range of a hussar."

I was about to answer that if they were good enough for a guerrilla they could not be too much for the light cavalry, but he was already stooping over his half-finished verse. Presently he threw down the pen with an exclamation of satisfaction and declaimed a few lines which drew a cry of approval from the three ruffians who held me. His broad face blushed like a young girl who receives her first compliment.

"The critics are in my favor, it appears," said he. "We amuse ourselves in our long evenings by singing our own ballads, you understand; I have some little facility in that direction and I do not at all despair of seeing some of my poor efforts in print before long, and with 'Madrid' upon the title page too. But we must get back to business. May I ask what your name is?"

"Etienne Gerard."

"Rank?"

"Colonel."

"Corps?"

"The Third hussars."

"You are young for a colonel."

"My career has been an eventful one."

"Tut, that makes it the sadder," said he, with his bland smile.

I made no answer to that, but I tried to show him by my bearing that I was ready for the very worst which could befall me.

"By the way, I rather fancy that we have had some of your corps here," said he, turning over the pages of his big, brown register. "We endeavor to keep a record of our operations. Here is a heading under June 24. Have you not a young officer named Soubiron, a tall, slight youth with light hair?"

"Certainly."

"I see that we buried him upon that date."

"Poor lad!" I cried. "And how did he die?"

"We buried him."

"But before you buried him?"

"You misunderstand, colonel, he was not dead before we buried him."

CHAPTER III.

"You buried him alive?" For a moment I was too stunned to act. Then I hurled myself upon the man, as he sat, with that placid smile of his upon his lips, and I would have torn his throat out had the three wretches not dragged me away from him. Again and again I made for him, panting and cursing, shaking off this man and that, straining and wrenching, but never quite free. At last, with my jacket nearly torn off my back and the blood dripping from my wrists, I was hauled backwards in the bight of a rope and cords passed around my ankles and my arms.

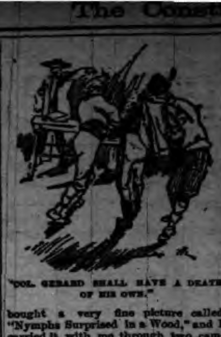
"You sleek hound," I cried. "If ever I have you at my swordspoint I will teach you to maltreat one of my lads. You will find, you bloodthirsty beast, that my emperor has long arms, and, though you lie here like a rat in its hole, the time will come when he will tear you out of it, and you and your vermin will perish together." My faith, I have a rough side to my tongue, and there was not a hard word that I had learned in fourteen campaigns which I did not let fly at him, but he sat with the handle of his pen tapping against his forehead and his eyes squinting up at the roof as if he had conceived the idea of some new stanza. It was this occupation of his which showed me how I might get my point into him. "You spawn," said I, "you think that you are safe here, but your life may be as short as that of your absurd verses, and God knows it could not be shorter than that."

Oh, you should have seen him bound from his chair when I had said the words. This vile monster, who dispensed death and torture as a grocer serves out figs, had one raw nerve which I could prod at pleasure. His face now grew livid and those little bourgeois side whiskers quivered and thrilled with his passion.

"Very good, colonel. You have said enough," he cried, in a choking voice. "You say that you have had a very distinguished career; I promise you also a very distinguished ending. Col. Etienne Gerard, of the Third hussars, shall have a death of his own."

"And I only beg," said I, "that you do not commemorate it in verse." I had one or two other little ironies to utter, but he cut me short with a furious gesture which caused my three guards to drag me from the cave.

Our interview, which I have told you as nearly as I can remember it, must have lasted some time, for it was quite dark when we came out, and the moon was shining very clearly in the heavens. The brigands had lighted a great fire of the dried branches of the fir trees: not of course for warmth, since the night was already very sultry, but to cook their evening meal. A huge copper pot hung over the blaze, and the rascals were lying all around in the yellow glare, so that the scene looked like one of those pictures which Junot stole out of Madrid. There are some soldiers who profess to care nothing for art and the like, but I have always been drawn toward it myself, in which respect I show my good taste and my breeding. I remember, for example, that when they were selling the plunder after the fall of Danzig, I bought a very fine picture called "Nymphs Surprised in a Wood," and I carried it with me through two campaigns until my charger had the misfortune to put his hoof through it.



"COL. GERARD SHALL HAVE A DEATH OF HIS OWN."

I only tell you this, however, to show you that I was never a mere rough soldier like Rapp or Lefebvre. As I lay in that brigands' camp I had little time or inclination to think about such matters. They had thrown me down under a tree, the three villains squatting round and smoking their cigarettes within hand's touch of me. What to do I could not imagine. In my whole career I do not suppose that I have ten times been in as hopeless a situation. "But courage," thought I, "courage, my brave boy, you were not made a colonel of hussars at twenty-eight because you could dance a cotillon. You are a picked man, Etienne, a man who has come through more than two hundred affairs and this little one is surely not going to be the last." I began eagerly to glance about for some chance of escape, and as I did so I saw something which filled me with great astonishment.

I have already told you that a large fire was burning in the center of the glade. What with its glare and what with its moonlight everything was as clear as possible. On the other side of the glade there was a single tall fir tree which attracted my attention because its trunk and lower branches were discolored, as if a large fire had recently been lit underneath it. A clump of bushes grew in front of it which concealed the base. Well, as I looked towards it I was surprised to see projecting above the bush, and fastened apparently to the tree, a pair of fine riding boots with the toes upwards. At first I thought that they were tied there, but as I looked harder I saw that they were secured by a great nail which was hammered through the foot of each. And then suddenly, with a thrill of horror, I understood that they were not empty boots, and, moving my head a little to the right, I was able to see who it was that had been fastened there and why a fire had been lit beneath the tree. It is not pleasant to speak or think of horrors, my friends, and I do not wish to give any of you bad dreams to-night, but I cannot take you among the Spanish guerrillas without showing you what kind of men they were and the sort of warfare that they waged. I will only say that I understood why Monsieur Vidal's horse was waiting masterless in the grove, and that I hoped that he had met this terrible fate with sprightliness and courage, as a good Frenchman ought.

It was not a very cheering sight for me, as you can imagine. When I had been with their chief in the grotto I had been so carried away by my rage at the cruel death of young Soubiron, who was one of the brightest lads who ever threw his thigh over a charger, that I had never given a thought to my own position. Perhaps it would have been more politic had I spoken the ruffian fair, but it was too late now. The cork was drawn and I must drain the wine. Besides, if the harmless commissariat man was put to such a death, what hope was there for me, who had snapped the spine of their lieutenant? No, I was doomed in any case, so it was as well, perhaps, that I should have put the best face on the matter. This beast could bear witness that Etienne Gerard had died as he had lived, and that one prisoner at least had not quailed before him. I lay there thinking of the various girls who would mourn for me, and of my dear old mother, and of the deplorable loss that I should be both to my regiment and to the emperor, and I am not ashamed to confess to you that I shed tears as I thought of the general consternation which my premature end would give rise to.

But all the time I was taking the very keenest notice of everything which might possibly help me. I am not a man who would lie like a sick horse waiting for the farrier sergeant and the pole ax. First I would give a little tug at my ankle cords, and then another at those that were around my wrists, and all the time I was trying to loosen them I was peering round to see if I could find something which was in my favor. There was one thing which was very evident. A hussar is but half formed without a horse, and there was my other half quietly grazing within thirty yards of me. Then I observed yet another thing. The path by which we had come over the mountains was so steep that a horse could only be led across it slowly and with difficulty, but in the other direction the ground appeared to be more open, and to lead straight down into a gently sloping valley. Had I but my feet in yonder stirrups and my saber in my hand, a single bold dash might take me out of the power of these vermin of the rocks.

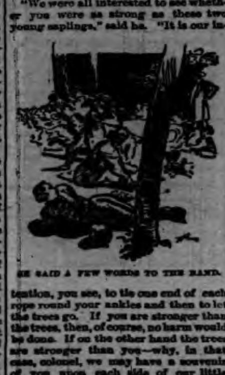
I was still thinking it over and straining with my wrists and my ankles when their chief came out from his grotto and after some talk with his lieutenant, who lay groaning near the fire, they both nodded their heads and looked across at me. He then said some few words to the band, who clapped their hands and laughed uproariously. Things looked ominous, and I was delighted to feel that my hands were so far free that I could easily slip them through the cords if I wished. But with my ankles I feared that I could do nothing, for when I strained it brought such pain into my lance wound that I had to gnaw my mustache to keep from crying out. I could only lie still, half free and half bound, and see what turn things were likely to take.

For a little I could not see what they were after. One of the rascals climbed up to the top of a well-grown fir tree up on one side of the glade, and tied a rope around the top of the trunk. He then fastened another rope in the same fashion to a similar tree on the other side. The two loose ends were now dangling down, and I waited with some curiosity and just a little trepidation to see what they would do next. The whole band pulled upon one of the ropes until they had bent the strong young tree down into a semi-circle, and they then fastened it to a stump, so as to hold it so. When they had bent the other tree down in a similar fashion, the two summits were within a few feet of each other, though, as you understand, they would each spring back to their original position the instant that they were released. I already saw the diabolical plan which those miscreants had formed.

"I presume that you are a strong man, colonel," said the chief, coming toward me with his hateful smile.

"If you will have the kindness to loosen these cords," I answered, "I will show you how strong I am."

"We were all interested to see whether you were as strong as these two young saplings," said he. "It is our intention, you see, to tie one end of each rope round your ankles and then to let the trees go. If you are stronger than the trees, then, of course, no harm would be done. If on the other hand the trees are stronger than you—why, in that case, colonel, we may have a souvenir of you upon each side of our little glade." He laughed as he spoke, and at the sight of it the whole forty of them laughed also. Even now if I am in my darker humor, or if I have a touch of my old Lithuanian ague, I see in my sleep that ring of dark savage faces with their cruel eyes and the firelight flashing upon their strong white teeth.

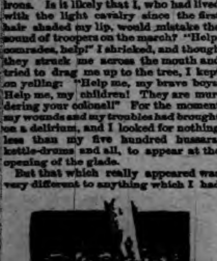


HE SAID A FEW WORDS TO THE BAND.

CHAPTER IV.

It is astonishing—and I have heard many make the same remark—how acute one's senses become at such a crisis as this. I am convinced that at no moment is one living so vividly, so acutely, as at the instant when a violent and foreseen death overtakes one. I could smell the resinous fagots, I could see every twig upon the ground, I could hear every rustle of the branches, as I have never smelled, or seen, or heard, save at such times of danger. And so it was that, long before anyone else, before even the time when the chief had addressed me, I had heard a low, monotonous sound, far away, indeed, and yet coming nearer at every instant. At first it was but a murmur, a rumble, but by the time he had finished speaking, while the assassins were untying my ankles in order to lead me to the scene of my murder, I heard, as plainly as ever I heard anything in my life, the clinking of horseshoes, and the jingling of bridle chains, with the clank of sabers against stirrup irons. Is it likely that I, who had lived with the light cavalry since the first hair shaded my lip, would mistake the sound of troopers on the march? "Help, comrades, help!" I shrieked, and though they struck me across the mouth and tried to drag me up to the tree, I kept on yelling: "Help me, my brave boys! Help me, my children! They are murdering your colonel!" For the moment my wounds and my troubles had brought on a delirium, and I looked for nothing less than my five hundred hussars, kettle-drums and all, to appear at the opening of the glade.

But that which really appeared was very different to anything which I had conceived. Into the clear space there came galloping a fine young man upon a most beautiful roan horse. He was fresh faced and pleasant looking, with the most debonnaire bearing in the world and the most gallant way of carrying himself, a way which reminded me somewhat of my own. He wore a singular coat which had once been red all over, but which was now stained to the color of a withered oak leaf wherever the weather could reach it. His shoulder straps, however, were of golden lace, and he had a bright metal helmet upon his head with a coquettish white plume upon one side of its crest. He trotted his horse up the glade, while behind him there rode four cavaliers in the same dress—all clean shaven, with round comely faces, looking to me more like monks than dragoons. At a short gruff order they halted with a rattle of arms, while their leader cantered forward, the fire beating upon his eager face and the beautiful head of his charger. I knew of course by the strange coats that they were English. It was the first sight that I had ever had of them, but from their stout bearing and their masterful way I could see at a glance that what I had always been told was true, and that they were excellent people to fight against.



"HELP, COMRADES, HELP!"

"Well, well, well!" cried the young officer, in sufficiently bad French: "What devil's game are you up to here? Who was that who was yelling for help, and what are you trying to do to him?"

It was at that moment that I learned to bless those months which Obriant, the descendant of the Irish kings, had spent in teaching me the tongue of the English. My ankles had just been freed, so that I had only to slip my hands out of the cords, and with a single rush I had flown across, picked up my saber where it lay by the fire, and hurled myself onto the saddle of poor Vidal's horse. Yes, for all my wounded ankle, I never put foot to stirrup, but was in the seat in a single bound. I tore the halter from the tree, and before those villains could so much as snap a pistol at me I was beside the English officer.

"I surrender to you, sir," I cried, though I dare say my English was not much better than his French. "If you will look at that tree to the left you will see what these villains do to the honorable gentlemen who fall into their hands."

The fire had flared up at the moment, and there was poor Vidal exposed before them, as horrible an object as one could see in a nightmare. "Godam!" cried the officer, and "Godam!" cried each of the four troopers, which is the same as with us when we cry "Mon Dieu!" Out rasped the five swords and the four men closed up. One who wore a sergeant's chevron laughed and clapped me on the shoulder. "Fight for your skin, froggy," said he.

Ah! it was so fine to have a horse between my thighs and a weapon in my grip. I waved it above my head and shouted in my exultation. The chief had come forward, with that odious smiling face of his.

"Your excellency will observe that this Frenchman is our prisoner," he said.

"You are a rascally robber," said the Englishman, shaking his sword at him. "It is a disgrace to us to have such allies. By the Lord, if the general were of my mind we would swing you up to the nearest tree."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

NEWARK, N. J.

—THE—

JAFFRAY STOCK,

(From which we were among the earliest purchasers) now being disposed of in order to close up the business of the concern.

Will Be Placed on Sale This Week.

E. S. Jaffray & Co., whose great warerooms at Leonard street and Broadway, New York, were known to every retail merchant in America, were among the largest handlers of reliable merchandise in the world. The business is now in the hands of a receiver, and it being his aim to turn the goods into money in the shortest possible time,

Cash Absolutely Rules the Day.

and cash purchasers are given every price advantage. Our purchases for cash from the Jaffray stock contained only the most desirable and seasonable goods. We place them on sale tomorrow at Half and Three-quarter Wholesale Cost.

It is a not-to-be-missed opportunity, for a similar one may not be given again in a generation.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

CATARRH

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM.

Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

COLD IN HEAD

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.

Estate of John Jacob Lang, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1895, on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said decedent, under oath or affirmation, and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor should be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG, Executrix.
2 14 9

HOUSE and building lots for sale in Westfield, N. J., high ground, good neighborhood, convenient to depot. Address box 104 Westfield N. J.
3 24 6-3 28 4 e

DEATHS.

DENTON—Fell asleep in Jesus, Saturday evening, March 30, 1895, Louis J. Denton in his 57th year.

Funeral services from his late residence, 131 Hillside avenue, Wednesday, April 3, at 2:30 p. m. Interment private and at convenience of family. 4 2 2

SWEENY—In this city March 27, 1895, Mary E. Sweeny, aged 22 years.

Funeral services from the residence of Edward Connors, 224 West Third street, Saturday morning at 9 from the house and 9:30 from St. Mary's Church. Friends and relatives are invited to attend. 1

Prof. A. Wehner,

TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.

ALSO VOICE CULTURE.

Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.

References given and required.

Address letters to the office of this paper.
1 21 tf-c

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you,

A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.
5 9 tf

THE Kingston, N.Y., Postmaster says:

Dr. Deane's
Dyspepsia Pills

work wonders. They cured my son of Sick Headache and Indigestion. A young lady friend of my family cured herself of Sick Headache of long standing by their use. Every one recommends them highly."

N. WOLVEN, Postmaster.

This is home endorsement.

At all druggists, 25 cents. Send to us for free sample.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York

Limited Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that a limited partnership has been formed by the subscribers pursuant to an act entitled:

"An act to authorize limited partnerships," to be conducted under the firm of D. C. Ivins & Co., for the transaction of the business of merchants at Plainfield, in the county of Union, N. J., DeWitt C. Ivins and William B. [illegible] being the general partners and Edward H. Booth a special partner, and that the amount of capital contributed to the common stock by the said Edward H. Booth is two thousand dollars, ($2,000); which said partnership is to commence on the 2d day of January, 1895, and terminate on the 31st day of December, 1896. 4 4 4

Telephone Rates

IN PLAINFIELD.

$40, $50, $60, according to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distant equipment. Address The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North avenue Plainfield.
3 20 sw-c 3

HIGHLY CONCENTRATED
MANURES

ALBERT'S { Horticultural, Garden, Special Garden, Vineyard, Fruit-tree. } MANURES.

No Sand. No Dirt. No Organic Matter. Nothing but Pure, Soluble, and Immediately Available Plant Foods COMBINED with each other.

Garden Manure: Nitrogen, [illegible] per cent; Available Phos. Acid, [illegible] per cent; Potash, [illegible] per cent.

The others are equally concentrated. Prices and Booklet on request.

ROBT. L. MERWIN & CO., Gen'l Agts., United States
[illegible] Wall Street, New York.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1895. No 15

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

CHARGES ALL AROUND.

Some Are Electrical and Some Are Financial.

THE LATTER FINALLY PREVAILS.

By the Aid of a Jury in Justice Newcorn's Court the Street Railway Company Are Mulcted for Seventy-Five Dollars in Favor of Balentine Swody—A Funny Action Brought About By a Funny Accident.

Last June a horse owned and driven by Balentine Swody stepped into a puddle of water on Somerset street opposite James Arnold's grocery store. This is a very common occurrence, and naturally causes no comment. But near this pool of water set one of the iron poles supporting the wires of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, which had become charged with electricity. The pole charged the water with current, and water shocked the horse so that he was disabled for work for some time. Then the owner of the horse wanted to charge the railway company with money for the injuries his animal had received.

The company thought that as long as hey had charged the water, and the water had charged the equine, that ought to end it. But Swody thought that as long as the veterinary doctor had charged him with good money for relieving the horse from the company's charge, he n turn ought to charge the company something for all the charges he had to ettle for.

So when they had disagreed on all hese diver charges, Swody brought suit hrough Judge W. A. Coddington, in ustice Newcorn's court, for damages to he amount of $119.

The case was brought up before the ustice yesterday afternoon, after numerous adjournments, and tried with the following jury, who were selected by Constable George B. Rockafellow: James B artin, James B Totten, Robert Walker, ohn Beerbower, George Voehl, George chelein, John H Oursey, Matthew Kennedy, J S Jones, David VanBuskirk, enry Haurand and John Brown.

After several witnesses had been sworn nd testified, among them Joseph Sohl on xpert electrical knowledge, as to the different phases of the charges, electrical, nancial and other wise, the jury was iven the case. After some deliberation hey returned a verdict of $75 for the laintiff.

The railway company was represented y Depew & Parker of Newark.

JUST WHAT IS NEEDED.

t Last Plainfield Is to Have a Hospital Ambulance.

It is expected that an ambulance will e added to the equipment of Muhlenberg ospital about May 1. The vehicle is eing built in New York, and will possess ll the latest improvements for hospital ervice. The cost of construction will be 00, which is to be paid by the Ladies' uxiliary of the hospital. The wagon ill be kept in a livery stable ready to respond at a moment's notice.

Lobee—Dunham.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph unham on Madison avenue was yesterday the scene of a very pretty wedding, hen their daughter, Miss Lilliette, was d to hymen's altar by Theodore A. Lobee f Carteret. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Lewis, amid a large umber of floral decorations and in the resence of a large number of relatives f the bride and groom. A large number f costly and appropriate presents were eceived. The couple left in the evening n a trip to Washington. On their return hey will take up their residence in Carteret.

—The members of the Saenger and urn Verein are making arrangements or their annual May walk.

RHEUMATISM PREVALENT.

hould Be Arrested in Its Early Stages

Probably there is no disease that inflicts o much continuous pain as rheumatism. hen it becomes chronic, there are few so ard to cure. The disease is caused by an mpure state of the blood The impurity onsists of an excess of lithic acid, and to rive this acid from the blood is the object f all rational treatment.

The medical faculty have found in Dr. avid Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, a certain and positive cure for this terrible complaint. Mrs. M. Hill, of Galeton, Pa., in thing of her experience with Dr. David ennedy's Favorite Remedy, says: "One ar ago I was taken with muscular rheumatism. My limbs were so painful that I ould scarcely walk. I determined to try . Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and before I had used the third bottle the pain was gone."

avorite Remedy cures chronic, acute or flammatory rheumatism; and in all diseases brought about by impure blood, or an cess of acid in the blood, such as urinary ubles, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney or er complaints, it is a well-known specific.

NABBED McCLURG.

SERGEANT KIELY ARRESTS THE PAINTER FOR ROBBERY.

It Is Said that He Is Implicated in the Theft of Silver from Mrs. Robinson's Boarding-House — Remanded for Examination.

The details of the robbery which was committed at Mrs. Robinson's boarding-house, West Second street, Sunday morning, are slowly but surely coming to light. It appears that Harry McClurg, a boarder at the house, invited his friend, who is one of the suspicioned ones, to the house to stay all night, and that instead of going to bed they had planned to steal the silver.

As reported yesterday the friend got away, but previous to this the two men were both met and stopped by Policeman Flanagan after leaving the boarding-house. They prevailed on the policeman, however, that nothing was wrong, and thus escaped for the time.

McClurg did not leave town, and yesterday he played innocent of having anything to do with the robbery and even suggested that he would help search for the thief.

Suspicion was aroused and last night Sergeant Kiely, after a little detective work, went to the boarding house and arrested him.

McClurg has been employed as a painter for some time in Plainfield, and has heretofore borne a good character.

During this time Chief Grant was in Elizabethport and had succeeded in locating some of the silverware, which was in Fisher's saloon on Second street. The police were notified and they took charge of the goods which were taken to police headquarters. As yet they have been unable to find McClurg's partner.

McClurg was taken before Justice Nash this morning and remanded for examination at 2 tomorrow afternoon.

LUCETTA COUNCIL.

Daughters of Liberty Organized in Plainfield.

Those interested in the organization of the Daughters of Liberty met in Red Men's Hall last Tuesday and were instituted by National Associate Councilor Mrs. E. B. Bush and State Secretary C. A. Bush of Mott Haven, New York.

The new lodge started with a membership of 26.

The name given them was Lucetta Council, No. 28, Daughters of Liberty.

Officers were elected as follows:

Councilor—W W Stratton.

Associate Councilor—Miss Bertha Clum.

Jr. Ex-Councilor—Mrs. C. L. Stratton.

Jr. Ex-Associate Councilor—N. H. Guttman.

Vice-Councilor—Gilbert Sutphen Martin.

Associate Vice-Councilor—Mrs. A. E. Angleman.

Guide—A. E. Voorhis

Inside Guard—J. W. Robinson.

Outside Guard—W. E. Koyes.

Trustees—W. Franze, 18 months; Mrs. J. H. Huntington, 12 month; N. H. Guttman, 6 months.

After the business was concluded all enjoyed a dance, N. H. Guttman, W. Franze and Mrs. Schorb furnishing the music.

Later in the evening a substantial collation was served.

Ex-Councilor L. Hopkins of Martha Washington Council, No. 1, of Jersey City, was present at the meeting and spoke a few words in relation to the order.

Another Big Deal.

The Field farm, situated on Central avenue and lately owned by the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, is reported to have been purchased by F. A. Barnaby The purchase price asked was from $75,000 to $100,000. The property will be developed for building sites and thirty or forty first-class houses will probably be erected, which will be an improvement to the neighborhood.

Easter Anniversary.

The Sunday-schools of the First Baptist Church, East Third Street Mission and Mt. Olive Church will hold their Easter and anniversary exercises in the First Baptist Church Sunday afternoon at 3. There will be special vocal and instrumental music, an address by Mayor Gilbert, and Miss Addie Parker Jackson will render Phillips Brooks beautiful poem "God's Garden on Easter Day".

—Sebring, tailor of Park avenue, is having a big sale of fine trousers to order, at $5, $6 and $7.

I recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. There is no better liniment made. I have sold over 100 bottles of it this year and all were pleased who used it. J. F. Pierson, druggist, South Chicago, Ill. It is for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

NO LONGER CHAMPIONS.

Park Club Four Lose at Whist to the Albanians.

The Albany Whist Club was successful in wresting the whist championship from the Park Club four Saturday evening, and thereby carried with them the silver trophy of the American Whist League.

The game was won by six points, the smallest margin that it has ever been won by any team except the Parks, who gained it by by one point from the Hamiltons of Philadelphia, and four points from the Philadelphians a week later. Heretofore the trophy has been secured with scores varying from eight to twenty-one. This fact gives evidence that the Park Club four are whisters who play a close and scientific game all the way through, and can only be beaten with a few points.

In this connection Captain G. L. Smith of the Albanians said: "The Park Club play as strong a game as any team I ever played against, and I have been playing ever since the league was organized.' Captain Smith is a director in the league. The Albany players were all greatly pleased with their treatment while here

The Park Club did not file an immediate challenge, but eventually will do so.

The score:

PARK.		ALBANY.
Rogers and Townsend McCutchen and Howell	3	Lodge and Snow Smith and Muhlfelder	5
Howell and Townsend McCutchen and Rogers	1	Muhlfelder and Lodge Smith and Snow	2
Howell and Rogers McCutchen and Townsend	0	Muhlfelder and Snow Smith and Lodge	3
	4		10

TOTALS.

Park Club.......... 4
Albany.......... 10

An Atomizer that Economizes.

A wonderful little piece of machinery is being exhibited in the rooms formerly occupied by Judge Coddington. It is the Automatic Gas Atomizer, and by its use gas consumers can practice great economy as well as secure a more brilliant light from the gas burned. With the atomizer is an improved meter, which accurately registers the amount of gas burned from minute to minute. The meter has nothing to do with the atomizer, and is only used to demonstrate to the spectator the advantage to be derived from permitting gas to pass through the cylinder before entering the jet. A Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon witnessed a practical test of its efficiency in saving the amount of gas burned, when in one minute, without the atomizer, 6 4-10 feet were burned, and in another minute, with the gas flowing through the atomizer, only 1 7-10 feet were consumed—the latter generating a far better light. By this method the gas is reduced to the smallest atoms, thus destroying the unhealthy portions escaping from other burners. A representative of the Automatic Gas Atomizer Company of New York has charge of the exhibition, and is ready to dispose of the right to sell in any section in New Jersey.

A Small Fire Arouses the Borough.

The residence of D. C. Allen, 39 Harrison street, North Plainfield, was discovered to be on fire this morning at 1, and an alarm was sent in from box 156, corner of Harrison and Cedar streets. The firemen were delayed in responding to the call, but the flames were soon extinguished. The irregular blowing of the fire-gong bewildered most people as to the location of the fire, and many thought that the alarm was sounded by the disarrangement of the clock mechanism or some other cause, and therefore paid no attention to it. Chief Doane of the city fire department went to the scene of the fire.

To Honor the Veterans.

The Joint Committee from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73; Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R.; Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10; and John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans. will meet this evening in the rooms of Post 73, to complete arrangements for Decoration Day.

Our better halves say they could not keep house without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is used in more than half the homes in Leeds. Sims Bros., Leeds, Iowa. This shows the esteem in which that remedy is held where it has been sold for years and is well known. Mothers have learned that there is nothing so good for colds, croup and whooping cough, that it cures those ailments quickly and permanently, and that it is pleasant and safe for children to take. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TROLLEY'S TOUGH TIME.

Madison Avenue Drives It Into Retreat.

NETHERWOOD ALSO FIGHTS HARD.

And Even in Richmond Street All Is Not Clear Sailing—The Common Council Asks the Railway Company to Show Its Hand of Consents.

From The Press of April 8.

A score of substantial citizens braved the downpour of rain last night to attend the street-railway session of the Plainfield Common Council. The regular order of business was suspended to accommodate those who had aught to say on the matter of granting the extension franchises.

Samuel B. Collins, for himself, his mother and his sister, protested against the running of the road through Fourth street, because he held that it would be an annoyance to himself and family and an injury to his property. He asked if a majority of the frontages had signed. President See said that the consents would have to be submitted to the Corporation Counsel for his decision as to their technical accuracy.

Chas C Burke said that he spoke for a majority of the residents of Woodland avenue, against the building of the road through that highway. The others whom he represented were Messrs Vandeventer, Hermance, Dyatt and Callahan. It was, he said, possible that the company had the right of way of a majority of the frontage on the street, but even if they had that did not necessarily impose on the Council the duty to grant the application. The citizens were to be looked to, not the land. The men living there, having their homes there, were the ones to hear. He contended that it was all wrong for the Council to grant rights to a railway on an avenue a majority of whose residents were opposed to the tracks. He trusted that the matter would be laid over so that the people of Netherwood could speak on this question. It had been represented that the road was wanted by the Netherwood people and was in great demand, but he had kept watch and had heard nothing of such a want among his neighbors. He renewed his protest in the strongest terms.

J. B. Coward, appearing for Mr. Hermance, asked if the Council intended to pass the ordinance that night. Mr. Fisk of the Committee on Streets said that the ordinance was not going to be railroaded through, and that the procedure would be no faster than was consistent with good faith with the company. The map had been sent to the company in Newark for correction, and was to be on inspection at the office of the City Clerk after being again filed. Frank Bushnell protested against any street railway on Madison avenue between Fourth and Sixth streets. Mr. Fisk explained that the application for that route would be withdrawn.

F. E. Kinsman made extended criticism of the proposed ordinance. He pointed out the danger of the company's avoiding the building of the local branches and and building only the line from Fanwood to Dunellen, thus giving the through line the last link it lacked in the chain from Philadelphia to New York. He urged that the company be obliged to build local branches to accommodate the home traffic before being given the privilege of opening up Plainfield streets to the expresses of the through lines. He held that the proposed ordinance conflicted with ordinances already granted. He advised that the rate of income to the city from the company be fixed on the gross earnings, instead of at so much a mile, and said that the rate named per mile in the ordinance would operate as a premium to prevent the company from building the desired local routes to the outskirts. He urged the use of the grooved T-rail, the same as was used on Broadway New York, claiming it was better for carriage wheels than the Plainfield rail that had wrecked so many vehicles. The company should also, he thought, be obliged to give more substantial paving than macadam along their tracks. Concerning fenders he felt that the city should not assume the responsibility of selecting them, but that the company should have the entire responsibility.

Clinton Randolph asked what was to become of the alleged Madison avenue consents if the application for the Madison avenue branch was to be withdrawn. Mr. See said he supposed the company could make renewed application on them if they saw fit. Mr. Fisk added that the consents were not yet filed with the city, and did not have to be, under the law, till just before the final passage of the ordinance. The council had no control over them till after they were filed.

Mr. Kinsman said he did not consider the ordinance in its present shape sufficiently binding on a company of the character of the sort now being dealt with; it was too easy of manipulation afterwards.

A petition was presented from E. L. Burnett, W. F. Hobbie, D. C. Ivins, A. Kayser, and Frank S. Martin, urging the Council to insist on the completion of the branches for local traffic before permitting the through line to be constructed, or before consenting to junction with any line not chartered by Plainfield. The petitioners showed that the proposed ordinance was weak in giving the company a chance to build the through line first and then leaving unbuilt perhaps forever the local branches. If the company was acting in good faith it would readily consent to the amendment the petitioners asked for.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets.

On motion of Mr. Dumont, amended by Mr. Fisk, the company was instructed to file with the Corporation Counsel within two weeks the alleged consents for the routes asked for, Counsel to report on their validity at the next regular meeting.

Thomas Callahan and John Mair petitioned the Council not to grant right for a trolley line through Richmond street at East Third street and North avenue, because of the hindrance to traffic and business and because of the danger to school children of the district. This too was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Mr. Fisk presented the revised street railway map, and it was filed with the City Clerk. The Street Committee reported back for filing various petitions and documents in the street railway matter.

Mr. Fisk gave notice that the street railway ordinance would come up for action at the next meeting of the Council.

The firearms and snow-and-ice ordinances were adopted on final passage.

Licenses were granted as follows: Jacob Berman, peddler; P. M. French, sprinklers; Wm. S. Woods, peddler with horse and wagon; S. Soolinsky, peddler; F. B. Randolph, truck.

Council adjourned for two weeks, to meet Monday, April 22, at 8 p. m.

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Mrs. A. N. Randolph entertained friends from Jersey City yesterday.

Mrs. S. W. Hall is slowly improving from her recent illness.

Arthur Giddis is visiting friends in Staten Island.

Mrs. Charles Jennings is slowly improving from her recent illness.

The Independent Gun Club held their regular monthly meeting last evening at A. Dealaman's store.

Miss Grace Brochlin of Brooklyn is visiting Mrs. Pyatt.

Miss Cora Rigbe has returned to her home in Boston after spending several weeks with Mrs. A. A. Anthony of High street.

Edwin Lewis has received notice of the death of his sister, Mrs. Stroubie of High Bridge.

Miss Gothschalk returned yesterday to her home in Newark after a very pleasant visit with her cousin, Miss Emma Liebe.

Mrs. J. Logan is entertaining company from Bound Brook.

W. E. Henry, Jr., who has been visiting at the home of B. J. Swackhamer, returned to his home in the West today.

Invitations are out for a calico variety social to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dodwell at their residence on High street Thursday evening, April 18. The invitations are of calico, and the orders for dancing will be of a very pretty calico design.

Mrs. Fred Nelson is entertaining company from Brooklyn.

A Satisfactory Test.

Chief Doane gave a test of the city water hydrants located near the Pond Machine Tool Works this morning between 11 and 12, for the benefit of representatives from the Factory Mutual Insurance Company. Four lines of hose were attached to as many different hydrants, and the normal pressure of 74 pounds was only reduced to 70 pounds during the time the test was being made. The insurance representatives went away satisfied.

Those who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Kenison, of Bolan, Worth Co., who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Fort Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine, and to use his own words: "It cured me right up." He also says: A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me, he procured a bottle of it and it cured them up in a week. 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

STOLE A HORSE.

Terrill & Cole Rent a Rig to John Vechte Who Fails to Return.

John Vechte, a man well known in this city, called at Terrill & Cole's livery stable Friday afternoon and hired a horse and buggy, stating that he wished to drive to Westfield. The rig was rented him, and he was expected to return that night. He did not return during the night or morning, and Saturday afternoon the owners of the rig began to surmise that something was wrong. It was finally concluded that Vechte did not intend to return, and Chief Grant was notified of the facts. He immediately had a number of postal cards printed, offering a reward of $50 for the capture of the thief and the return of the horse and wagon, which were sent to police officials throughout the State.

Vechte is described as a man of about 40 years old, 5 feet 9 inches in height, and weighing 265 pounds. He wore a blue overcoat, striped pants and black derby. A distinguishing mark is a brown mustache. The horse was a light gray one, 15 hands high, 6 years old, with a black scar on front shoulder. The buggy was a light side-bar, red running gear, with plate of J. P. Hoagan on body. Vechte is familiarly known as "Big Jack" and is acquainted in Somerville and Easton, where he was employed as a bartender. He is wanted at Allentown, Pa., for forgery. Chief Grant and George Cole journeyed to Bethlehem yesterday, where he has resided, but could get no trace of him.

RECOVERED THE RIG.

But the Man Who Took It Has Not Been Found, Though Wanted for Forgery Besides.

After a long and tedious search, the horse and wagon belonging to Terrill & Cole which was taken away by John Veghte last Friday, has been found.

E. S. Tonell & Son of Madison read a notice in one of the New York papers Tuesday morning telling about the loss of the rig, and the description given was exactly that of one which they had at their livery stable in Madison. They at once sent word to Moses Terrill, and he answered immediately, saying that it was in all probability the missing rig.

Mr. Terrill took a horse and wagon from his stable and started for Madison about 12:30 yesterday noon. As soon as he reached his destination and saw the horse and wagon, he recognized them, and after paying for the keeping brought them back home with him.

The missing property had been left at the Madison stables late last Friday afternoon, by Veghte. Nothing more has been heard of him.

The offer of reward for his arrest still stands, as the owners are anxious to punish him.

It was learned that he had succeeded in getting a forged check cashed in Morristown, and that a charge would be pressed against him for that as soon as he was caught.

Terrill & Cole's rig was not injured in the least, and they are very thankful to regain their property.

BAPTISTS ELECT.

Flourishing Reports Made at Their Annual Parish Meeting.

The annual parish meeting of the First Baptist Church was held in the lecture room of the church last evening. Deacon Rufus K. Case was chosen chairman, and Parish Clerk O. B. Leonard acted in his official capacity.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Treasurer Alexander Gilbert read his annual report, which showed that the church was in an excellent condition, and that there was a balance of $500 in the treasury. The collections during the year were good, and the expenditures wisely made.

The election of trustees followed. The terms of E. J. Waring, S. St. John McCutchen and U. B. Crane expired, and there was one unexpired term to fill, that of the late Morgan S. Taylor. The result of the vote was as follows: E. J. Waring, S. St. John McCutchen and George H. Chapman, full term, five years; Harold Serrell to fill unexpired term.

The meeting then adjourned.

—Look out for improvements on Johnston Drive. There will be erected a few Summer cottages alongside of that thoroughfare before the warm weather arrives.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ETHICAL CULTURE SOCIETY.

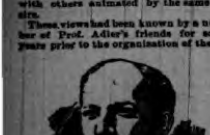
Something of the New Cult Which Is Gaining Prominence.

The movement of ethical culture now so prominent in all sections of the United States and portions of Europe had its origin in New York city, where the first ethical society was founded in 1876. The attitude of the New York society has been from the first neither irreligious nor anti-religious.

In the opening address which Prof. Felix Adler delivered on May 15, 1876, the watchword which he suggested for the new movement was: "Diversity in the creed, unanimity in the deed." He also emphasized in those remarks that belief in any of the received doctrines of religion should not hinder any one from joining the new organization. Neither should a negative attitude toward the current religious teachings be a hindrance.

Those who aspire to become good men should be welcomed to the new fellowship, no matter what their opinions might be on questions of theology or philosophy, Prof. Adler stated at that time. All that was expected was a sincere interest in the moral improvement of the individual and of society, and a willingness to waive points of difference and to come into fundamental agreement with others animated by the same desire.

These views had been known by a number of Prof. Adler's friends for some years prior to the organization of the society. Prof. Adler was at that time Professor of Oriental Literature at the Cornell University, and when a number of friends of the cause of ethical culture were prepared to form a society he resigned from the Faculty of the university and entered the field in which he had long been desirous to labor. It was a labor of love for him from the beginning and still is such.



FELIX ADLER.

At first the new society was the target for much hostile criticism and even bitter persecution. Like all new movements it required time to be correctly appreciated, and in the beginning it was misinterpreted.

The fact that the Ethical Society did not affirm any religious belief was regarded as positive proof that its members and its leaders were at heart hostile to religion. But this was a mistake, and as time went on it was perceived to be such. The prejudice which the society at first excited has abated from year to year.

Some of those who were its most pronounced antagonists have become its well wishers and supporters. The change of attitude against the society is shown by the fact that the Legislature of the State of New York has conferred upon Prof. Adler legal authority to perform the marriage ceremony.

PAGES IN CONGRESS.

The Boys Have Light Duties and Receive Good Pay.

One of the best places under the Government—in salary at least—which a boy can fill is that of a page in either the Senate or House of Representatives at Washington. The salary is $75 a month, and during the early part of the Congressional sessions the page has very little work to do.

His duties do not begin until 11:30 o'clock and they generally end somewhere between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening. From the fact that there is so little to do and so much to get—for a boy—the place is much sought for by fathers and mothers who have youngsters whom they wish to put to work.

A place as page is obtained through a Congressman, and it requires the signatures of the majority of a State delegation to get it for a boy. In the House of Representatives one page is appointed from each State, though in the Senate there's but twelve boys altogether.

C. S. Sherwood, of New York.

Two New York men who registered at the Great Northern yesterday afternoon will have occasion to remember for some time the strange coincidence of their meeting and of their trip. Strangers to each other they soon made an acquaintance on the train. Yesterday morning one asked the other his destination. "Chicago," the one addressed replied. The one who had asked the question was also coming here. When they arrived at the station it was agreed they should go to the Great Northern together. As they stepped up to the desk in the hotel office one of them took the pen and wrote the name "C. S. Sherwood, New York." Then he laid the pen on the counter and stepped aside for his friend to register. The latter glanced at the book, and, bowing slightly, thanked him.

"Will you register?" asked the clerk.

"My friend has saved me the trouble," the man replied.

"That's my name, not yours, that I have written," the first gentleman said.

"Well, that's queer," was the response, and the second man, taking the pen, wrote "C. S. Sherwood, New York." "That's my name, too, and here is my card. I thought you were registering for me."—Chicago Tribune.

In the Ball Room.

Tanglefoot—Oh, isn't this waltz divine?

Miss Smilax—Well, perhaps it is divine; but it happens to be a polka instead of a waltz, and the sooner your feet are acquainted with the fact the better we are likely to get along.—Tid Bits.

Anent a Certain Poster.

"What a little thing turns a man's earthly life," mused the spirit of the great Corsican. "If I ever had really owned a horse that looked like that I would have been an humble showman."—Cincinnati Tribune.

Nothing Like It.

There's nothing equals in this world
Your subtle sense of sweet repose,
When you have found a dollar bill
Tucked snugly in last Summer's clothes.
—Exchange.

THE BEN DAVIS APPLE.

How a Man from Old Steuben Was Set Back When He Found It.

"Bet a hen you don't know what a Ben Davis apple is!" said a confident Steuben county man. "Bet two hens! We people here in York State think we know a heap, but I'll make it three hens that you can take in all the country between the Hudson and the lakes and you can't find a man, woman or child that knows what a Ben Davis apple is. Leaving out me, of course. And I never knew what a Ben Davis apple was myself until I went to Egypt. That's the only country they grow the Ben Davis in—Egypt, Illinois.

"Say, we use up a good deal of wind talking about our apple orchards along the Hudson and out in western New York, as if there hadn't been any apples anywhere else since the crop Adam and Eve gathered, but I want to tell you that we ain't in it with Egypt. No, sir! Why, that part of Egypt known as Clay county has got more than 50,000 acres of apple orchard alone, and Wayne county has almost as many, with Richland and Marion counties crowding Wayne's heels pretty close. Was I set back when I went down into Egypt? Was I? Well, it takes something to set a man from old Steuben back, and Egypt had it. I don't mind telling you that I was set back. Clear back!

"You see I was traveling out that way swelled up with the feeling that I was from the garden spot of all creation, if there was any garden spot, and I felt sorry for folks I met on the way that they were so far from old Steuben and I s'pose I showed it. When I struck the prairies of Illinois a man who sat in front of me turned and said to me:

"'Right smart tern of farmin' land, stranger?'

"'Yes,' I said, almost inclined to tell the man I'd pay his fare if he'd go back with me and take a look at some real country, 'but there don't seem to be much else but farming land. Now, where I live we bud and blossom! We bloom! You don't have any fruit out this way! You seem to be only of the earth earthy! Where I live we are of the fruit fruity! Ill fares the land,' I said, 'to hastening ills a prey, where wealth accumulates from corn and hay! It used to be the caper,' I said, 'but it don't go now! Fruit! Fruit is what you want, and you ain't got any!'

"'Would apples come under that headin'?' asked the man.

"'Would they?' said I. 'Would apples come under that heading? Well, they'd only stand first under it, that's all! Apples! Well, I should say so! There is no fruit on earth like apples! Red, green, yellow or streaky, what so luscious as apples? What so fragrant as apples? What so beauteous as apples? And what can you get applejack from but apples! My friend, it'd be worth your while to go with me to old Steuben and gaze once on apples!'

"'I'm goin' down into Egypt, now, to see some,' said the man. 'That's a few down there.'

"I said I'd go, too, for I wanted to see what they called apples there. I found out. I hadn't got far into Egypt before I heaved a sigh for old Steuben. Apples! I tell you right now that I'd never seen apples before. It was in October and they were gathering the crop. You could go for miles and see nothing but apple orchards and apples. And when they told me that they didn't look on a man who only owned a ten acre orchard as any account in the business, I didn't say a word about that four acre orchard of mine back on the hills of old Steuben.

"And there's where I got acquainted with the Ben Davis apple. It is big, and red, and solid, and pretty as a picture. But there's no more taste to it than a door knob, no more flavor than a chunk of clay, and no more smell than a piece of ice! And yet they raise more Ben Davises than any other kind and they've got as high as $9 a barrel for 'em!

"Sounds funny to a man who loves the truth, doesn't it? Does, for a fact! But it's straight. I'll tell you why. The Ben Davis ain't an eater. It's a cooker. And its crop never fails. And the Ben Davis never rots. Bruise any conventional apple and that settles it. The bruise turns to rot and the rot takes hold of all the rest of the apple. The Ben Davis doesn't put up with any such nonsense. Bruise it if you want to, but that bruise will simply dry up and that's the end of it. The rest of the apple will stay just as sound as ever. And the Ben Davis never freezes. Or if it should freeze it don't mind it. Freezing doesn't affect it in the least. These are all strong points of this freak apple, but there are others. It is just as solid after it is cooked as it was before. It never falls to pieces under cooking, whether whole, halved or quartered.

"Then, having no trace of flavor of its own, it readily takes any other flavor and becomes a novelty to the housewife and the fruit canner. Imagine having a big, whole, cooked apple placed before you, and, when you taste it, finding that its flavor is that of the most luscious peach, or juicy pear, or apricot, or orange, or anything else the hostess has seen fit to make it! That's where this queer Ben Davis apple comes out strong and metaphorically knocks the socks out of all other apples on the Egypt apple belt. Chicago and the South and West are dead stuck on this apple and its genus and buy it at any price. It will keep sound from one picking season to the next.

"That is, if it grew in either Clay, Wayne, Richland or Marion county. This is another thing about that apple that ought to get it a star place in a dime museum. If it is grown off that belt of counties it objects to keeping any longer than the middle of January and frequently decays before the holidays. And it will freeze just the same as any other apple. Don't know why it is. Don't ask me. But that's the Ben Davis apple, and I'll bet a hen you never heard of it before!"

The Low Level of the Distance.

That part of Brooklyn called Greenpoint presents a curious aspect on a bright morning as seen from Lexington avenue at Thirtieth or Thirty-first street. First comes a strip of dimpled, sunlit water, and then the dim mass of the city lying low, bathed in a faint, warm mist and showing bright broad flecks where the sunlight is reflected from the almost flat roofs of buildings near the water front. The effect is panoramic, and noting it one realizes how low is the level of the dim-seen city compared with the observer's point of view.—N. Y. Sun.

A large right whale, about seventy-five feet in length, was killed off Nahant, Mass., recently. Deeply imbedded in the back of the whale was an ancient harpoon, badly rusted, but with the inscription "Horace N. Swain, Nantucket, 18[illegible]," still legible on it.

HUMORIST ON HUMORIST.

L. V. F. Randolph Talks of the Works of Douglas Jerrold.

A large and representative audience was present in All Souls Church, last night, when ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph delivered the third lecture of the series on humorists, taking for his subject, "Douglas Jerrold". Mr. Randolph possessed a wonderfully expressive manner in marking the points in his subject's character which he wished to bring out, and with true mimicry in reciting the selections of Jerrold's work to illustrate his points, he kept his hearers in almost constant laughter.

In introducing Mr. Randolph to the audience Rev. Hobart Clark referred to him as a humorist who was about to talk of another humorist, the difference being that one was dead while the other was alive.

Mr. Randolph said that judging from a great deal of Jerrold's writing, one would think that he had tasted much of the bitterness of the world from the clean cut and incisive wit which he gave vent to. But instead he was of a very cheerful mind. When but 15 years old he wrote a comedy entitled "More Frightened Than Hurt", which was received with considerable appropriation by those who witnessed it.

He had small business ability, but seemed possessed of wonderful luck. One thing that contended largely against his continued prosperity was his excessive generosity. The simplicity of his life was evidenced in his love for rural nature. He was logical in all his puns—adopting them to practical circumstances. He was not a reformer, and when occasion arose he cast ridicule upon the purists and the assumed philanthropists.

Humorist, as he was, he condemned all attempts at drollery on sacred things. "Happiness arises at our own fireside, and not is picked from strangers beds", was a piece of humor which displayed great depth of thought on his part. "If I was a grave digger or hangman, I could work for some people with pleasure", was a sample of his sarcasm.

He hated all sorts of insincerity, and was a conscientious student. His first thought in writing was to capture the eye of the reader, and then get him interested in his works.

His thoughts were genial, but not one of seriousness. Those who knew him, knew him as one of tender nature, never to turn his back on an unfortunate friend.

The paper was followed by an informal discussion.

BRIGHTEN UP.

The New Firm of E. E. Marshall & Co. Are Ready to Assist You.

The store on North avenue recently occupied by Alexander Titsworth, has been remodeled and arranged to accommodate the new wall paper and paint firm of E. E. Marshall & Co. Along the side of the store 200 racks have been built which will hold 100 rolls of wall paper, and a complete stock of the choicest designs has been placed therein, ranging in quality from white blanks at 8 cents per roll, to embossed golds at 40 cents per roll. Two new display racks, situated in the window where there is excellent light, afford an opportunity to customers to inspect and select without mistake any design or style desired. In addition to the extensive stock which is carried, orders from samples are received and filled for any of the costly decorative papers. They also carry a full line of samples of mouldings to match any design or color of paper, as well as a varied assortment of oils, varnishes, and Harrison's ready mixed paints.

A special feature of the new firm's business is the fact that they will trim, free of cost, all paper sold to paper-hangers, a saving of one-sixth in time.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS A SUFFERER.

Complete Recovery—A Simple Remedy.

From Advance Argus, Greenville, Mercer Co., Pa.

With feelings of uncertainty Mrs. Witt began the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, but today it has no better friend than she. Mrs. Witt is well known here, for she has lived for years within a few miles of Greenville. The following letter, addressed to Dr. Kennedy, will be interesting reading for many a sick person.

"Dear Sir: For 25 years I have been troubled with sick and nervous headaches, so bad that much of the time I was utterly prostrated. I tried many medicines, but they failed to do me any good. Last spring my son was using Favorite Remedy, and he insisted on my trying it. I did so, and used less than a bottle, and found it was just the medicine I needed, for I have not had a headache since.

"It also benefited me in other ways, for my health was poor, and it acted as a tonic. I hope this letter will reach the eye of some poor sufferer, for I know if they will only try Favorite Remedy they will be thankful for it. Yours truly, Mrs. Lizzie C. Witt, Greenville, Penn."

Such a mark of commendation proves the great value of this medicine.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is pronounced by physicians as the superior of all blood medicines and nerve restorers. It cures rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous and bilious headaches and nervous prostration. It is a specific for scrofula, erysipelas, dyspepsia, and for the troubles peculiar to the female system.

Fortune Gone, Family Abandoned.

(From The New York World.)

Ernest Marx, an artist, 36 years old, of 43 St. Mark's place, Brooklyn, and formerly of this city, at one time the possessor of an independent fortune, was arraigned in Yorkville Police Court on a charge of abandonment and non-support preferred by his wife, Elizabeth, who with their four children is living at 34 Station place, New York. The hearing was adjourned till Saturday.

—The bowling season for the Plainfield Club has closed.

ARBOR DAY IN NEW JERSEY.

Fourteen Counties Adopt John Terhune's Plan of Celebration.

Arbor Day in New Jersey is celebrated with a vim that might well be emulated by other States. A very elaborate programme for this season's celebration, which takes place Friday, April 26, has been prepared by John Terhune, the School Superintendent for Bergen County, and has been adopted by the following counties also as their plan of the day: Atlantic, Camden, Gloucester, Hudson, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Passaic, Salem, Somerset, Union, and Warren.

The morning is to be devoted to the planting of trees, vines, flowers, shrubs, and the afternoon to visiting the woods and fields for instruction, with notebooks to make record of the plants and trees discovered, for future consultation. In the evening literary exercises will be the order.

It has been suggested that nut trees should be planted, since New Jersey is in no special need of timber, and nut trees are fully as valuable for shade, shelter and ornament as ordinary forest trees, besides being remunerative.

RACING BOARD SANCTION.

Crescent Bicycle Club Sure of the Decoration Day Meet.

C. E. Teel, chairman of the racing committee of the Crescent Wheelmen, yesterday received official sanction from G. D. Gideon of Philadelphia, chairman of the racing board of the L. A. W., for the meet, which has been arranged to take place on the club's oval Decoration Day. This action has been expected a long time by the Plainfield wheelmen notwithstanding the rebellious and unsportsmanlike actions of the Rahway Bicycle Club, who have felt very disgruntled over the prospect of having one of the National circuit meets come to the Crescent club instead of to them.

For several years Rahway has had the Decoration Day meet, but this year Chairman Teel filed an application for the event a week ahead of the Rahway people, and naturally enough his application was first considered, and with a favorable result.

The Rahway club set up a great howl that the track of the Crescent Wheelmen was not conveniently located, and various other equally silly and false arguments, and as a final resort attempted to coerce the racing board into giving their sanction by threatening to withdraw from the league, and arrange a Decoration Day meet, under any circumstances, if the circuit meet should come to Plainfield.

The racing board, however, recognized the precedence of the Crescent's application and their right to this great sporting event, and the sanction, of course, followed.

Immediately upon the receipt of the official sanction Chairman Gideon sent out 500 circulars to bicycle clubs and manufacturers throughout the country, notifying them of the approval and inviting them to be present.

THEIR FIRST ANNIVERSARY.

The Long-Named Tribe of Red Men to Celebrate Wednesday.

The first anniversary of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 103, Improved Order of Red Men, will be held next Wednesday evening in K. of P. Hall, Elkwood Building, on West Second street. The following programme has been arranged:

PART I.

Overture..........Mrs. Schoob and Mr. Guttman
Short talk on the order..........V. W. Nash
Ballad..........C. H. Roberts
Comicalities..........F. W. Splann
Banjo solo..........Master Albert Wagner
Duet—"Mr. and Mrs. Trubbs",
Asa Pope and Eli Odam

PART II.

Piano and Violin solo..........Higham Bros
Song..........A. D. Pope
Recitation—"Our Brave Foreman",
Miss Beulah Waters
Tenor solo..........Louis S. Bond
Comic song—Parody on "The Sidewalks of New York"..........G. R. Bedford
Sketch—Just from Home—Miss Ella Sebring
E. M. Odam and J. W. Klein
Short talks by the Great Chiefs of the Reservation of New Jersey.

The entertainment will be followed by a collation and dance.

The Committee of Arrangements are: General Manager, George R. Bedford; Entertainment Committee, E. M. Odam; Refreshment Committee, John H. Ellmus; Printing Committee, Chas. R. Conover; Reception Committee, Thomas Connant; assisted by members of the Tribe.

Holy Week in the Church of the Redeemer.

Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone will give a series of sermons on the "Seven words from the Cross", beginning tomorrow afternoon, with the first word, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do", and continuing daily through the week, closing Good Friday evening with the last word, "It is finished."

The hours of services will be at 10 a.m., with the exception of Good Friday, on which day they will be held respectively at 11:15 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Fights Fire as Well as Legislation.

Councilman Bird, who was in the fire department headquarters last night when the still alarm came in, rode on Alert hose wagon to the scene of the flames, and assisted in extinguishing the fire.

Samuel Terry, Jr., is able to be out after a severe illness.

$20,000 FOR BENEVOLENCE.

This Plainfield Church Gave in Good Causes Nearly Double Its Annual Running Expenses.

At the congregational meeting of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church held last night, presided over by Rev. W. R. Richards, the following nominating committee was selected, who will report a list of officers for election next Wednesday evening: Session, L. N. Lovell, H. O. Squires; trustees, Charles Place, J. K. Myers; deacons, S. H. Whitney; congregation, J. W. DeGraff, H. B. Newhall, C. F. Abbott.

The following report of the standing of the church was presented.

REPORT OF THE CRESCENT AVE. PRES. CHURCH FOR THE YEAR ENDING APRIL 1, 1895.

Contributions for benevolence outside of Plainfield—
Home missions..........	$[illegible]
Foreign missions..........	[illegible]
Education..........	[illegible]
Aid to colleges and academies..........	[illegible]
Sunday-school work..........	430
Mission work in N. J..........	[illegible]
Church erection..........	[illegible]
Care of disabled and old ministers	[illegible]
Work among colored people..........	[illegible]
Miscellaneous..........	[illegible]
		$ [illegible]
In Plainfield—
Children's Home..........	$ [illegible]
Relief Association..........	[illegible]
Muhlenberg Hospital..........	[illegible]
Temperance work..........	[illegible]
Bethel, Hope & Warren Chapels..........	7,[illegible]
Miscellaneous..........	1,[illegible]
		[illegible]
Total benevolence..........		$[illegible]

The trustees reported total expenses for the year ending Jan. 1, $11,015.

MEMBERSHIP APRIL 1, 1895.

	Membership.	Gain for yr.
Crescent Avenue Church..........	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bethel Chapel..........	54	4
Hope Chapel..........	[illegible]	44
Warren Chapel..........	[illegible]	[illegible]
Total..........	1179	[illegible]

SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEMBERSHIP.

Crescent Avenue..........	[illegible]
Bethel Chapel..........	[illegible]
Hope Chapel..........	[illegible]
Warren Chapel..........	[illegible]
Total..........	[illegible]

The New Game Law.

The five game bills which the Fish and Game Commission wanted passed by the Legislature have all become laws, but two of them had to be radically amended to get them through. The bill consolidating all the game laws on the statute books, in relation to the hunting and fishing season, has been the most amended. A new section has been added which divides the State into two game districts to be known as the northern and southern districts. The northern district is to comprise the counties of Sussex, Warren, Hunterdon, Somerset, Morris, Passaic, Bergen, Hudson, Essex, Union, Middlesex and Mercer; the southern district comprises all the other counties.

It is made unlawful to kill hare, rabbit, quail, pheasant, gray, black, or fox squirrel, or woodcock in the northern district, except between October 26 and December 10 inclusive. In the southern district the open season for this game is between November 15 and January 1. The open season for gray snipe is made during the months of March and April, and between August 31 and December 15, and for reed birds, or marsh hens, between August 25 and December 15 inclusive. The season for grass or upland plover or doves is between November 1 and December 15.

There were no changes made in the bill from the original one in relation to the fishing season, except that pike and perch are stricken from the section relating to pickerel, for which the open season is from February 20 to May 1.

The greatest trouble was with Assembly bill 242, which changes the manner of appointing game wardens. The original bill provided that twenty of these wardens should be appointed by the fish and game commissioners, but the number has been increased to twenty-five. Otherwise the bill has not been changed. These wardens shall hold office for a year and shall be paid $50 a month. A fish and game protector is selected from the wardens, who shall receive $100 a month.

One of the bills introduced limits the time for fishing in tide waters of the State with net, fyke, seine, etc., from Dec. 10 to June 10. It stopped pound fishing along the shore. This bill was never reported by the committee. Another of the bills which passed prohibits fishing with fyke nets or similar nets above Trenton Falls in the Delaware, under penalty of $100 fine or six-months imprisonment.

UNCLE PETER'S WILL.

Caveat Filed Against It by His Niece.

Ann Dickinson, niece of the late Uncle Peter Wooden, has filed a caveat against the will of testator, and the matter will soon come before the Union County Courts.

It is understood that if the effort to break this will is successful, a previously executed will will be presented for probate.

Undue influence is alleged, as ground for breaking the will.

Birthday, and Surprised.

A surprise and birthday party was given to Fred Haberle, of West Front street, last night, the occasion of his twenty-seventh birthday. The following were present: Mr and Mrs Thomas Hovell, Mr and Mrs Haberle, Mr and Mrs Horace Huff, Mr and Mrs Freeman, Mrs Annie Lamberger, Mr and Mrs E V Lorine, the Misses Lottie Raymond, Christine Clark, Ida Clark, Ida Gates, Fallis, Grace, Hattie [illegible], Edith DuBois, Willie Hovell, Rena Freeman, Grace Mosher. Messrs. E Collins, J S Mosher, Charles [illegible], A Marsh, E H Guttman and John Haberle.

Bull Durham

BRIAR PIPE
GIVEN AWAY
WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF DUKES MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE or ATC
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

Space	Weeks 1	Weeks 2	Weeks 3	Months 1	Months 2	Months 3	Months 6	Months 12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	32.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 50 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

L. B. WOOLSTON. J. P. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES, [illegible] NORTH AV

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Leads a Storming Party and Captures Toulon.

RAISED TO GENERAL OF BRIGADE.

Chief of Artillery In the Army of Italy. Sent to Negotiate With the Genoese. Falls Under Suspicion and Is Arrested. Again Deposed From Rank.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

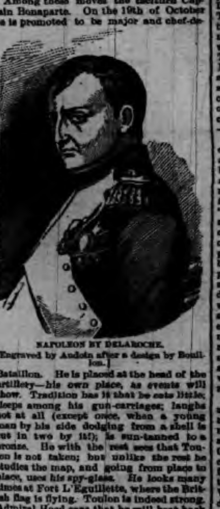
VIII.—EMERGENCE.

For Napoleon, Toulon was the open gate to greatness. His "destiny," for which he sought so diligently, came to him unawares among the guns of his battery there. Those guns were trained first on Fort L'Eguillette, and then on the British ships of Admiral Hood. Our ships, including the good ship Orient, in which, after four years and seven months, we shall embark for Egypt, are pent up in a nook of the harbor. Over the town, through October and November, floats the banner of St. George. The Lily flag of the Bourbons has given place, not to the new Tricolor of the Revolution, but to the foreign ensign of a hated foe; under that are rallied the Royalists of Toulon. It is to be noted that the first and the last of Napoleon's guns are directed against the flag of England. From Toulon to Waterloo! There lies the space of twenty-one years and six months—filled with the wreck and transformation of the world!

Here, on the beautiful Mediterranean shore, the great act begins. A division of the French National army has been sent to retake the traitorous town. The commanders are General Doppet, who from being a doctor has taken to this fighting form of patriotism, and General Dugommier, an officer who, fourteen years ago, was with Lafayette in our American army of Independence. Others of military experience hold subordinate commands; and here also are several representatives from the National Convention.

The latter, under orders of that body, are darting hither and yon like arrows, to sting whoever shall be unfaithful to the Revolution. Some fly to the field of Valmy, where, in the wood of Argonne, they dart about with eyes sharper than swords. Others are on the track of Dumouriez, toward Belgium and the Netherlands, where he struggles to drive back the Germans; and does it. Others are with Custine's army, and still others here at Toulon, watching everything, and making fatal report of any blunder. Hither have come Barras himself, and Freron, and Salicetti, the Corsican representative in the assembly, and in particular Augustin Robespierre, called the Younger, destined in the day of doom to leap ingloriously from the window of the Convention hall, into a horrid cesspool in the alley!

Among these moves the taciturn Captain Bonaparte. On the 19th of October he is promoted to be major and chef-de-Bataillon. He is placed at the head of the artillery—his own place, as events will show. Tradition has it that he eats little; sleeps among his gun-carriages; laughs not at all (except once, when a young man by his side dodging from a shell is cut in two by it!); is sun-tanned to a bronze. He with the rest sees that Toulon is not taken; but unlike the rest he studies the map, and going from place to place, uses his spy-glass. He looks many times at Fort L'Eguillette, where the British flag is flying. Toulon is indeed strong. Admiral Hood says that he will beat back this French army and make the place still stronger. He will make it a second Gibraltar—if the unforeseen do not prevent him.



NAPOLEON BY DELAROCHE.

[Engraved by Audoin after a design by Bouillon.]

But the unforeseen prevents. For more than two months the siege pounds itself away in vain. Then there is a council of war. The older officers, thoroughly imbued with military "science," suggest this method and that method of taking the town. The National representatives look on. Toulon must be taken; and the Convention has sent an impossible plan of doing it. It comes Napoleon's time to speak. "Yonder," says he, "is Fort L'Eguillette. Take that; it is the key to all. Here into that ravine is a line of approach—to a certain point. Let us send thither a storming column, under protection of my guns. I will pound the fort with shells, till the point is reached. Then there shall be a pause. Out of the hollow shall spring my column. One bound, like the leap of a cat-o'-mountain, and the fort is ours. We will turn the guns on the town, and on Hood's ships. Everything shall be inside-out in an hour!"

Here, then, is audacity. Dugommier and Doppet and the rest purse up their mouths and look wise. This is dangerous; but Major Bonaparte may try it! So on the 19th of December, 1793, he tried it; and the thing was done. Fort L'Eguillette was bombarded, and carried by storm. The Royalists fled to the British ships, and Hood took wing by sea. Toulon was not made into "another English Gibraltar." The Revolution has Toulon, and will keep it forever. The National representatives see who it is that has done this. Only three days afterwards Napoleon is nominated general of Brigade. He is now twenty four years four months old. His appointment is approved—after a little delay; and on the 16th of February, 1794, he receives his commission.

Similar scenes were witnessed in many places. Marseilles had a like insurrection and overthrow. Lyons was held by the Royalists until, under the assaults of the Revolutionary forces, the powder-magazines—four of them together—were set on fire, and buried skyward with a hundred and seventeen houses, all settling back in hideous ruin and combustion. The hospital was demolished by the infuriated assailants, and the town virtually destroyed. Mons was taken in like manner. So also Montpellier and Bourdeaux and Nantes and Caen. Everywhere royalism was stamped into the earth—exterminated. Throughout the valley of the Rhone, along the eastern frontier, and in the coast-towns of the Mediterranean, noise of furious bombardment was heard, and columns of significant smoke were seen rising here and there. The Revolution was triumphant; and thousands of stone-masons were set to work demolishing the walls of rebellious cities. Not an inch of French soil in all those borders remained to the adherents of the ancient order and their foreign allies.

After Toulon, the name of Bonaparte was heard in Paris. The younger Robespierre informed the Convention that he was "of transcendent merit." The report of Dugommier said, "Among those who distinguished themselves most and who most aided me to rally the troops and push them forward are citizens Buona Parte [do you not know how to spell him yet, General?] commanding the artillery; also Arena and Cervoni, adjutants-general." The success of the chef-de-Bataillon in the siege and capture, and the favorable reports of it produced a sensation in the National Convention; but the impression on that body and on the public was as yet only transient. At this epoch, when all quarters of France were shaken with commotions and local revolutions, the brilliant capture of a single fort and town on the Mediterranean was not enough to create a permanent military fame. The Convention contented itself with making General Bonaparte "Inspector" of the coast-country, between the Rhone and the Var. His duty was to maintain order in that region, and to complete the Revolution. The appointment was made on the 26th of December, only a few days after the fall of Toulon. The duty imposed made it necessary for him to traverse the district extending from Marseilles to Cannes—a maritime region which had been mortally infected with royalism.

By the close of the year, however, the old spirit was virtually extinguished in Southeastern France; and Napoleon found little to satisfy his restless spirit. His tours of inspection and duties connected therewith occupied his time until February of 1794, when he was recalled to Paris. That city was now a seething cauldron. The Reign of Terror was at its acme. That period, unparalleled in human annals, extended from March of 1793, when the Revolutionary tribunal was organized, to July 28th of the following year, when Robespierre and his colleagues were sent to the guillotine. Strange that in the midst of all the horror rising on horrors accumulated in the French capital there was still an outstretched arm of strength bearing a sword of sharpness for foreign nations! The military organization was completed as follows:

The Army of the North was created and put under command of Generals Jourdan, Leclerc, Vandamme, Brune, and Mortier. The Army of the Rhine was commanded by Generals Pichegru, Scherer and Berthier. The Army of the West was organized with Marceau and Kleber as commanders. The Army of Italy was commanded by Dumerbion and Massena; and to this General Bonaparte was assigned as chief of the artillery and assistant in the preparation of plans for the campaign. He was thus occupied in Paris at the time when it became the saying, La guillotine va toujours—the guillotine goes always!

It was the duty of the Army of Italy to occupy that country as a vantage ground against the coalitions that were forming beyond the Rhine. The Italian towns and States were wavering according to race prejudice and interest between affiliation with the French Republic and the "protection" of Germany. By the sickness of Dumerbion, General Massena came to the chief command of this division of the French National forces. A campaign was undertaken in July of 1794, but the general of artillery did not, for the present, leave Paris. He was soon despatched, however, as an agent under orders of the Convention, to Genoa. He was to protest to the Genoese authorities against the permission which seemed to be extended to the coalition to occupy the neutral territory. It was a delicate business; for the other officers did not understand the true nature of the instructions; and the delegates Salicetti and Albitte were themselves ignorant of what was really intended.

The result was that Bonaparte was first misunderstood and then distrusted in his negotiations with the Genoese government. He was openly directed to protest against the occupation of the territory of Genoa by the enemies of France; but secretly he was authorized to examine the fortresses of the city and make notes on the general topography of that region. While engaged in this work, he was suddenly suspended from office, put under arrest, and declared to be suspected! For the nonce, the sword of Damocles was hung above him by a single thread.

Just at this juncture, however, ere Napoleon could be hauled before the Revolutionary tribunal, that body itself was blown into death-blackness by a counter revolution. Robespierre and his bloody clique were seized, after a day or two of horrid broil in the city, and were sent maimed, dazed, jaw-broken, bone-broken, headlong to the guillotine. In that case, the other saying of the hour, namely, "the guillotine goes not badly," was graciously verified!

The destruction of the tribunal had a paradoxical effect on the interest of Napoleon. It was from that body that his secret instructions had emanated. Therefore his friends were dead; also, his witnesses. But their plunge into oblivion left behind a lurid trail that scorched him. It was now said that Augustin Robespierre had been too much the friend of General Bonaparte! Like Caesar in the matter of his intrigue with Catiline, the hero of Toulon was seriously compromised with the members of the Terror. Left to his own resources, however, he wrote a powerful and audacious protest to the Representatives Albitte and Salicetti; convinced them of his innocence; won them over to his cause; obtained from them a report of exculpation; and after thirteen days of mortal peril was set at liberty! On his return to Paris, in August of 1794, his defence was accepted by the ministry of war, and he was offered the command of a brigade of infantry in the Army of the West, with orders to operate against the Royalists of La Vendee. He refused to accept either the field of operations or the infantry arm of service; and for this the Committee of Public Safety—intolerant of all refusals—struck his name from the list of general officers, and he was once more turned adrift in Paris.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

Explained.

Edna—What do you suppose makes Tom write such awfully gushing letters?

Kate—Oh, I suppose he uses a fountain pen.—Pearson's Weekly.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 15,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, [illegible] with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave 177 [illegible]
[illegible] Grove and Front sts
G W V Moy 5th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville
J B Gulick[illegible], [illegible]
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 5th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackermann, Mrs. J. E.	[illegible] West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove st
Adams H C	113 E 6th st
Addis & Son	132 North av
Andrews F S	515 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and [illegible] st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	5th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, F W Dr	Dunellen
Boone C W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bunnell, John	Central ave. and 5th st
Beerbower, J R	Park av and 3d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	133 E 5th st
Blair A C	[illegible] North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	[illegible] Park av
Board of Education	6th st and Arlington av
Booth, E E	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	[illegible] Central av
Central Times	[illegible] E Front st
Clark, E B	[illegible] Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	[illegible] North av
Chapman, James T	Richmond and Front sts
[illegible] Office	[illegible] North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	[illegible] W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	36 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, E F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
DAILY PRESS	[illegible] North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, E M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	[illegible] W 5th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	[illegible] E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	2d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	27 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	[illegible]
Fisk, Chas. J	221 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	[illegible] Park av
Fleming, Howard	[illegible] Park av
French, C Frank	49 Somerset st
do do	[illegible] Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	[illegible] W 4th st
Griffen, A M	[illegible] E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 6th st
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	[illegible] Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	[illegible] North av
Howell E C	[illegible] North av
Holmes E E	[illegible] Madison av
Hogan Chas W	[illegible] Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	[illegible] Park av
Ivins D C	[illegible] Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. C. L.	[illegible] W Front st
Kaufman W T	[illegible] W 7th st
Kenly & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W N	[illegible] Jackson av
Lowrie E H, Dr	[illegible] Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 7th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	[illegible] W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
[illegible] A D	[illegible] North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	[illegible] E Front st
Marsh Craig A	[illegible] E Front st
Mathewson W R Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	27 Rockview av
McQuaide James R	[illegible] W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W V	Park av and 5th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	[illegible] W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	[illegible] Watchung av
Murray J W	[illegible] W 4th st
Music Hall	[illegible]
Myers, J K	[illegible] E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Paxton T B Jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	254 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E [illegible] st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	3 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	[illegible] Park av
Potter, C Jr	[illegible] W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	[illegible] South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	[illegible] Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	37 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	[illegible] Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	[illegible] W 5th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockafellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, D W	[illegible] W 2d st
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	[illegible] Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	[illegible] Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	[illegible] Park av near Fifth st
Runkle, H. G	[illegible] 5th st
Runyon, Chas W	[illegible] North av
Rice, E. W. & Co	Cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	[illegible] Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	[illegible] W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, E J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
[illegible] F M	37 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
[illegible], H A	[illegible] Hillside av
Stevens F R	[illegible] South av
Stevens Geo C	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	[illegible] North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	10 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
[illegible]	[illegible] W 2d st
Thompson, A D	[illegible]
Thompson, A D	[illegible] road
[illegible], Jas A	[illegible] Madison av
[illegible], Jas H	[illegible] W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	[illegible] La Grande av
[illegible] Geo J	[illegible]
Tracy, J Evarts	[illegible] 6th st
[illegible] W J	[illegible] Watchung av
Tweedy, O. B.	[illegible] Crescent av
[illegible] & [illegible]	[illegible] W Front st
Union Beef Co	[illegible] E 3rd st
United States Express Co	[illegible] North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van [illegible] J W	[illegible] North av
Wadsworth, W B	[illegible] 6th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
[illegible], Clifford Jr	[illegible] 3rd Place
[illegible], B	[illegible] West Seventh st
[illegible], J F	W 5th st., near Grant ave
[illegible] Bros	[illegible] W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	30c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	30c
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	50c
Bayville N Y	60c	Kingston N J	35c
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
Blissville N Y	45c	Leonia N J	40c
Bloomfield N J	30c	Little Neck N Y	50c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	60c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	55c
Brooklyn N Y	30c	Madison N J	40c
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	50c
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	35c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	35c
Chatham N J	30c	Morristown N J	45c
Chester N J	45c	Newark N J	25c
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	30c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	35c
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	35c
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	40c
Eatontown N J	40c	Passaic N J	35c
Elizabeth N J	25c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	35c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	25c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	50c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	50c
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	35c
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	35c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	35c
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	35c
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	15c
German Settlem't N J	50c	Woodbridge N J	30c
Glen Cove N Y	60c	Yonkers N Y	60c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	60c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

The Name Is Everything.

The many tricks of trade that are practiced in these times are justified by a prominent soap manufacturer of Philadelphia as being positively necessary to influence a stupid public to buy what is for their benefit. The article in which he takes the most pride is a pure Castile soap, purer and better than that made in Castile. He stamped it as American Castile and was unable to sell any quantity. The people would not buy what little was taken by retail dealers. Under these circumstances the manufacturer changed the stamp on his soap to one abounding in Spanish words which meant the same thing. Since the change in stamp the sales have been remarkable and the soap is ever gaining in popularity.—Philadelphia Record.

A Robin Dined With the Captain.

Touching instances of the recent stress of weather comes from the mountainous districts of Wales. At Ffestiniog a sheep actually walked into a house and placed its forelegs on a lady's lap to beg a bit of bread which she held in her hand. At Barmouth a robin took up its quarters on board a steamship (the Telephone), accompanied it on its voyage to Liverpool and back again, and at dinner hours hopped on to the table and dined with the captain.

A Compliment.

"That boy of yours, madam," remarked the conductor as he punched the half fare ticket, "looks remarkably well developed for a child under 12."

"Thank you," replied the lady very calmly. "It's so gratifying for me to have any one notice Tommy's remarkable precocity."—Chicago Record.

According to Dean Hole there are fifty silly young men for one silly young woman.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master [illegible] Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business [illegible] all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood!
Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

FOR MALARIA.
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, [illegible]
[illegible], Treasurer.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box [illegible], or left at Whitney's shoe store, [illegible] Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence [illegible] E. Front street, corner [illegible] street. [illegible]

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Offie cor. Front St. and Park Av.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. [illegible] SOMERSET ST.

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
[illegible] EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. [illegible] East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to.

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at [illegible] residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. [illegible] performed.

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.

[illegible] and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware needing to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.

Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. C[illegible],
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, [illegible] Notary Public. Office corner of Park avenue and [illegible] street.

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer,
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box [illegible], Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of [illegible]. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES R. T[illegible],
Dentist,
[illegible] Somerset street. A new local [illegible] application for extracting teeth without pain. [illegible] a specialty.

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Casey.]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—[illegible] W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box [illegible]. Furniture moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from [illegible] W. Front street, to [illegible] Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Yeas experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 2 doors above [illegible]

Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, [illegible] and Interfering Horses. Speedy [illegible] stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month.
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
[illegible]te Piping. Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning.
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6.

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS, COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? [illegible]

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

NEW BRUNSWICK REPUBLICAN.

G. O. P. Elects a Mayor for the First Time in Twelve Years.

New Brunswick, April 9—The Republicans elected Dr. Nicholas Williamson Mayor over P. S. Atkinson, Democrat, by between 300 and 400 majority. Dr. Williamson was endorsed by the City Club, and is the first Republican Mayor in New Brunswick in twelve years. There will be a tie politically in the Board of Aldermen, with the City Club holding the balance of power. The Board of Freeholders will stand 11 Republicans to 9 Democrats.

Of the Aldermen the Republicans and Democrats each elected three, as follows: First ward, William Richardson, Rep.; Second ward, John Banker, Rep.; Third ward, A T Landmesser, Dem.; Fourth ward, John H Becker, Dem.; Fifth ward, William Heim, Rep.; Sixth ward, T G Phinney, Dem. The City Club endorsed four of the Aldermen elected.

The Republicans elected three Freeholders, Democrats two, and City Club one, as follows: First ward, Michael Stafford, Dem; Second ward, Cornelius Buckalew, Rep; Third ward, Abraham Wetbie, Rep; Fourth ward, J B Powelson, Rep, and the City Club; Fifth ward, Frederick Miller, Rep; Sixth war', Michael McFadden, Dem. The City Club endorsed three of the successful Freeholders. The Republicans won the majority of the minor offices.

There is a probability of a contest in the Fourth war', where Becker, Democrat, was elected Alderman by one majority, and Powelson, Republican Freeholder, by four majority.

ARRESTED FOR BRIBING NEGROES.

A New Brunswick Republican to Be Prosecuted by the Local Goo Goos.

New Brunswick, April 9—Freeholder David McCloskey appeared at Police Headquarters this afternoon with City Treasurer James Neilson to prefer a complaint of bribery at the polls against Henry Banker, a wholesale grocer, whose cousin is running for Alderman in the Second Ward. Messrs. Neilson and McCloskey are Democrats. Mr. Banker is a Republican.

Mr. McCloskey said he was trying to earn the reward of $500 offered by the City Club for evidence that would lead to a conviction for bribery.

He was prepared, he added, to make affidavit that Michael Daly, a grocer, had told him that he saw Henry Banker offer money to several colored men. Daly's grocery is at Remsen avenue and Seaman street. It is alleged that several bribes were given and taken in the immediate vicinity of his store.

Recorder Harkins took Mr. McCloskey's complaint, and a warrant for Henry Banker's arrest was placed in the hands of Policeman VanDeursen. Mr. Banker was found in the Second ward and gave bail in $400 before Recorder Harkins. He became his own bondsman. It is said that the City Club will prosecute the case.

—George Bullman will be the next Freeholder from North Plainfield township. He was turned down by the Republican residents of the borough because he voted for a Democratic county collector when the borough residents voted for township officials, notwithstanding he was one the best Freeholders North Plainfield ever had. He's a Republican.

—Every Plainfielder who has any idea of building a house for himself should attend the public meeting to be held in the Board of Trade rooms, 119. East Second street, Thursday evening at 8, to consider, discuss and take action on the building ordinance now before the City Council. A large meeting is expected, since the matter is of vital importance to the growth of our city.

A Chill

is serious at any season of the year. At the first symptom of stiffness in any part of the body apply an

Allcock's

Porous Plaster

and thus ward off what may prove a very dangerous cold, resulting in bronchitis, pneumonia or consumption.

Every One of the so-called porous plasters is an imitation of ALLCOCK'S. Accept no other.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

overcome that most prevalent of all diseases, constipation.

THE EGOTISM OF PROFESSIONALS.

A Famous Poet Meets His Match in Two Harvard Students.

A story which, if it be not absolutely true, is at any rate sufficiently characteristic to be considered ben trovato, is now going the round of the clubs at the expense of a well known poet and critic, who is not so hypercritical as to be unable to appreciate his own distinguished services to literature. It appears that the poet, in the company of Mr. H. C. Bunner, Mr. Laurence Hutton and Mr. Frank Stockton, having visited the play, dropped in at Delmonico's for a light repast. The only tables left unoccupied in the cafe were those intended for two persons; but the poet observed that two young men were seated at one of the tables meant for four, and going up to them he asked whether they would be willing to take one of the smaller tables and let him and his friends have theirs, a request to which they very politely acceded.

From the casual remarks dropped by the two young men during the next half hour and overheard by the parte carree it was discovered that they were Harvard undergraduates down from Cambridge for a day or two. Coffee and cigars having now been reached, the poet in the goodness of his heart, and having in mind the courtesy of the young men, thought to himself what a kindly act it would be to let them know how distinguished a group they had accommodated. It would be an experience memorable in their life history, something to tell their grandchildren about in after years. So going over to the contiguous table he invited the amiable youths to join his party and finish their coffee in his company.

"And it gives me great pleasure to introduce ourselves," he remarked in his most genial manner. "I am Mr. So-and-So, and this is my friend, Mr. Bunner, the editor of 'Puck.' This is Mr. Laurence Hutton, and this is Mr. Frank Stockton."

A faint and inscrutable smile stole over the faces of the ingenuous youths. Then one of them slapped the poet on the back.

"My dear fellow," he said, "so glad to know you all. And it gives me great pleasure to make ourselves known to you. I myself am Kaiser Wilhelm; and this," touching his companion lightly with a cheese stick—"this is my friend, Fuerst Bismarck!"—New York Mail and Express.

STAGE FRIGHT IN SPEAKERS.

A Vermont Governor Who Was Always More at Ease Outside His Own State.

There are some speakers who never experience the least bit of trepidation before an audience, but from what I can learn this is the exception rather than the rule. A gentleman who has charmed many a Vermont audience by his mellifluous words informed me that he was frightened for the first time in his life while speaking after the witty and brilliant Depew at the recent banquet in Burlington. This is not to be wondered at, and I noticed that even the ready and self-possessed toastmaster appeared at his best after the chief orator had left the hall.

One of the best known governors that the Green Mountain State has had in late years told me recently that it bothered him somewhat to think that he could never get over being embarrassed when he addressed an audience. When he went out of the State to speak he said that he was more at ease, being in the presence of strangers, but when he appeared before an assemblage of Vermonters, many of whom he knew and who knew him, he spoke not without considerable trepidation.

His experience in this direction led him at one time to congratulate ex-Senator George F. Edmunds on the fact that the latter had appeared in public so much that he was perfectly at home when addressing an audience, but the congratulator was astonished to hear Mr. Edmund's reply: "You are mistaken. I never rise to my feet to speak without feeling more or less uncomfortable."—Burlington (Vt.) Free Press.

THEY CHEERED WELLINGTON.

He Whipped the French, but Did It Like a Gentleman.

While Wellington was still a marquis he went to Paris from Toulouse, where he had fought and won the last battle of the Peninsula war.

He went to the opera the same evening, and though he wore plain clothes and sat in the back of the box he was almost immediately recognized by some one in the pit, who cried out, "Vellington!"

The name was taken up by others, and at last the entire pit rose, turned to the box and called, "Vive Vellington!"

Nor would the people be satisfied until he had stood up and bowed to them, when he was cheered and applauded again. At the end of the performance the passage from the box was found to be crowded with people. The ladies of the party drew back nervously, but the duke said, "Come a ong!" in his brusque way, and conducted them on. While they were still in the corridor a man in the crowd was heard to say to his companions:

"But why are you applauding so much? He has always beaten us!"

This was very true, and the question seemed a natural one; but the answer was charming:

"Yes, but he has always beaten us like a gentleman!"—Harrison's Monthly.

Practical Dog Training.

A way of training a dog to answer its master's call has been adopted by Head Keeper Manley, of the Zoological Gardens, which, while it may not be entirely new, is certainly effective. He possesses a valuable dog whose only fault was that of independence, and, whistle and call as much as he might, the dog refused to take the slightest notice. One day Mr. Manley caught the dog in his cellar and tied a clothesline about its body just behind its forelegs. The line was several yards long, and, with a tight hold on his end, Manley took the dog out for a walk. Every once in a while he would whistle, and when the dog failed to respond he drew in the rope hand over hand with the startled animal turning a succession of somersaults in the dirt. A few such lessons were enough, and the dog is now a model of obedience.—Philadelphia Record.

Carefulness About Little Things.

"I think it's all right for a bank President with a salary of $40,000 a year to spend half a day looking for a lost penny," said Mr. Billtops. "It wouldn't do for a man in his place to set the bad example of being careless about little things, but when Mrs. Billtops spoils a two dollar pair of gloves trying to pick up a penny, it always kind of irritates me."

A BABY

CONTRADICTS THE DOCTORS.

All Are Happy, Glad, and Well.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

The theories of physicians in regard to female complaints suffer a "Waterloo" very frequently, when sensible and thinking women take matters into their own hands.

Women are sometimes compelled to act for themselves, because of the suffering forced upon them by incompetent doctors, who are baffled by very simple complaints, because they are not the right sex to comprehend them.

Lydia E. Pinkham, when she gave to the world her Vegetable Compound, lifted women from the darkness into light. She placed within their reach a guaranty, not only of health, but of delicacy and self-respect.

The following letter is a little story where a "dear little boy" was the "Waterloo."

"I have taken three bottles of your Vegetable Compound, one package of Sanative Wash, one box of Liver Pills; and now I have a dear little babe four weeks old, and I am well. I have to thank you for this.

"I have spent $200.00 for doctors' bills without a cure. For my cure I only spent $5.00.

"I was once a victim of female troubles in their worst form. I have suffered untold agonies every month; had to stay in bed, and have poultices applied, and then could not stand the pain.

"My physician told me if I became pregnant I would die. I had bladder trouble, itching, backache, catarrh of the stomach, hysteria, and heart trouble, fainting spells and leucorrhœa. Can you wonder that I sing the praises of a medicine that has cured me of all these ills?" Mrs. Geo. C. Kirchner, 351 Snediker Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

BY THE WAY.

—Easter cards and booklets at Harper's, 411 Park avenue.

Mr. Jeaggers of Emily street remains very ill at his residence.

—The April term of the Somerset County Court meets at Somerville next Tuesday.

—Marshal Zachariah Wilson intends going to work at his trade, that of carpentering.

—Lester Leggett will again address young men in the Y. M. C. A. Building, next Sunday afternoon at 4:15.

—After the 15th of the present month John W. VanHorn will take the position now held by Marshal Pangborn.

—Wm. B. Buckley, Norman Dunn and Thomas Lee are the Fanwood men drawn on the panel of jurors for the May term.

—Laundered shirts with two detached collars, for 35 cents, is one of the specials at U. B. Crane's, 120 West Front street.

—Webb Littell now holds the highest score on the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys, 196. Nathan Lane, Jr., is a close second.

—J. H. Manning, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will conduct the meeting in the East Third Street Mission Thursday evening.

—Spencer, the seedsman, is now making an outdoor display of his wares, much to the comfort of the members of the Cracker Barrel Club.

—Albert Naylor of East Front street has received the contract for the painting of several cottages in Sewaren. Mr. Naylor leaves Monday to start the work.

—See what you can get: 1 lb 50 cent tea, 3½ lbs sugar, and a can of condensed milk, all for 50 cents, at Scheuer & Sons' opening, and a free souvenir besides.

—A beautiful novelty will be given away Saturday as a souvenir to all customers at the Plainfield opening of Scheuer & Sons, the Newark cash grocers.

—There is absolutely no truth in the report that the Borough Council were considering the advisability of appointing Jacob Snyder and Caspar Ebner as marshals.

—George Kirch, groceryman at the corner of Somerset street and Grandview avenue, will build an addition 20x46 to his store, to accommodate his increasing business.

—Judge Brown has been presented with a copy of Honeyman's Practices and Precedents, a justices of the peace law book, and the Judge is giving the same a critical perusal.

—Mark Dowd, son of Thomas Dowd the contractor, who resides with his parents on Duer street, is booked for the vacancy caused by the resignation of Marshal Zachariah Wilson.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. John Force is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Hall of Rockview avenue is seriously ill with paralysis.

F. M. Bosco passed a restless night and is still in a serious condition.

Mrs. T. H. May of Somerset street is visiting friends in New York city.

Julius Williams of Elmwood place is improving slowly from his recent injuries.

The North Plainfield Whist Club will meet next Monday evening with Mrs. E. H. Bird.

Theodore B. March of March, Ayers & Co. was out today for the first after his long illness.

Contractor John D. Smith is confined to his home on Greenbrook road with intermittent fever.

Mrs. G. M. Foote of Detroit is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. U. T. Hungerford of Rahway road.

Mrs. J. S. Darby and daughter of Alton is spending a few days with her parents on Vine street.

Mrs. J. Wesley Johnston of La Grande avenue expects to leave on a tour for California tomorrow.

Mrs. Henry Hamming of Newark is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. O'Brien of West Fourth street.

Mrs. G. Dantz of New Market spent Sunday and Monday with Mr. and Mrs. G. Bolliseline of Greenbrook road.

Miss Kate Way of SanFrancisco is visiting her brother, M. E. Beach, and sister Mrs. C. C. Howard, of Carleton avenue.

Ex-Street Commissioner Benjamin E. Gavin is expected home from the South. Mr. Gavin spent the Winter at Thomasville, Ga.

Mrs. Walter Walker, who has been seriously ill at her home on Chatham street, for the past few days, is rapidly improving.

A. Windham, brother of Henry Windham of this city, was visiting friends yesterday at the Arlington Hotel, North Plainfield.

Dr. Henry Wilson, assistant pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle in New York, will address the Christian Alliance next Tuesday evening.

George Thatcher has been spending several days with his family on West Seventh street. His company are laying off during Holy Week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. McMillen of Jersey City are occupying the house of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Lord on Belvidere avenue during the European trip of the Lords.

Miss Annie Wolf, who has been spending the past ten days with Mrs. Henry Wiedemeyer at the Arlington Hotel, returned yesterday to her home in New York city.

Margaret Moran, daughter of James Moran of Grove street, who has been seriously ill with diphtheria for the past week, is now out of danger, and the quarantine will soon be removed from the house.

A. B. Johnson, for many years an employe of Martin Bros., grocers, corner of Park avenue and Second street, has secured a position with Simon Scheuer & Sons at their new store on West Front street. He will commence work Saturday, their opening day.

Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes was reappointed to the pastorate of the Plainfield M. E. Church by the Conference yesterday, and the following other local appointments were made: Grace—H. F. Randolph; Monroe Avenue—W. C. O'Donnell; Scotch Plains—George Angleman; Dunellen—S. F. Oustard; Westfield—W. H. Ruth.

M. E. Beach and daughter Miss Edith, who have been living in one of Charles Hand's flats on Watchung avenue, have given up housekeeping, and yesterday took up their residence with Mr. Beach's sister, Mrs. C. C. Howard, on Carleton avenue. This is done on account of the poor health of Mr. Beach, who has been obliged to retire from business.

C. C. Pearson, Sr., for the past two years paying inspector of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, received the appointment a few days ago, for three years, to the same position in the Boston Navy Yard. Mr. Pearson left New York last night by the Fall River Line for Boston, where he will enter on his duties immediately. Mr. Pearson is the father of C.C. Pearson, Jr., the well-known bicycle rider.

Miss Henrietta Howland passed away at Orange yesterday noon at 12:30, after a six-months illness. She was in her twenty-fifth year, and warmly beloved by a large circle of acquaintances and friends in Plainfield. She was daughter of Henry M. Howland, formerly of Grove street, and sister of Frank Howland who lives on Watchung avenue. The funeral will be private, tomorrow morning, and the body will be laid to rest beside that of her mother in Cypress Hills, Brooklyn.

—Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., meets Friday evening.

Don't Diet.

If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, habitual constipation or sick headache, don't diet. You need the strength that good food gives. Eat whatever you want, but take one of

Dr. Deane's

Dyspepsia Pills

after meals until cured. If you are constipated get bottle with white label, otherwise with yellow. At all druggists, 25 cents. Send to us for free sample.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

COME EVERY DAY.

Whenever you come you find fresh features in Furniture and Household Wares to greet you. Just now nothing seems impossible in the line of economy in this store. Whatever you want maybe you can fill it here at a third—often half—the price you'll pay elsewhere. For instance:

PARLOR SUITS.

$30—Whoever thought to see such a splendid suit as this for such a little price? You'll wonder how the material can be bought for so small a figure and not count the making. Not many, only enough to keep the sale going this week, so you'd best be quick. Mahogany finished frame, five pieces.

MATTINGS.

15c. the yard and made in Japan. You know what that means. Quaint patterns, woven carelessly on a bright colored background. Some of the very prettiest patterns of the season. Brand new styles and the kinds that will win your approval.

DINING CHAIRS.

Fragile and delicate, stout and sturdy, and every one of them serviceable as can be. You needn't spend much time; close your eyes and choose, you can't go wrong. They are the most cheerful looking chair you ever saw, and the prices $1.25 to $3.00, with twenty-five cent go-betweens.

CARPETS.

High priced or low priced, the lining and the making and the laying free. That's what brings business to our carpet room. And you pay less here for the carpet than you're likely to pay elsewhere. Scores of fresh rolls added weekly, among them new patterns in the 65c. Tapestry Brussels and Super Ingrains.

An Unequaled Offering. Buy a bedroom suit here. You'll save the cost of spring and mattress. We give a strongly woven wire spring and mixed mattress with each bedroom set sold. A bouncing big offer, but it's away we have for making new acquaintances. Goods delivered free of charge to all parts of the State.

The Portland Range. You who have never heard about it, come to the store; you who have one, aren't you tickled?

The Storage House is making friends daily; such a well-lighted, well-ventilated place as it is, explains why. Satisfactory terms and satisfactory people to deal with. A 'phone call or postal will bring our vans to you door.

"Hello" Number 580

—The following Plainfielders participated yesterday in the shooting tournament of the Boston Shooting Association: T. H. Keller, Noel Apgar and Charles Smith. In all of the twelve events their scores were as good as or better than the average.

KABO
LONG WAIST

ASK FOR KABO No. 353

Perfect fitting. Sure to give satisfaction.
Price only $1.00
I Lederer.

There is one DRESS STAY that
Won't melt apart,
Can't cut through the dress,
Don't stay bent.
It is BALL'S PEERLESS.
All lengths; all colors.
Putnam & DeGraw, Seely Edsall, I. Lederer.

Telephone Rates

IN PLAINFIELD.

$40, $50, $60, according to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distance equipment. Address The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North avenue, Plainfield.

3 22 sw-c 3

Prof. A. Wehner,

TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.

ALSO VOICE CULTURE.

Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.

References given and required. Address letters to the office of this paper.

1 22 tf-e

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30.) Steam heat; [illegible]

A. E. WHITE, Manager, [illegible]

The Constitutionalist
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
PUBLISHED AT
Plainfield, New Jersey.
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.
A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.
Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

NEW BRUNSWICK REPUBLICAN.

G. O. P. Elects a Mayor for the First Time in Twelve Years.

New Brunswick, April 9—The Republicans elected Dr. Nicholas Williamson Mayor over P. S. Atkinson, Democrat, by between 300 and 400 majority. Dr. Williamson was endorsed by the City Club, and is the first Republican Mayor in New Brunswick in twelve years. There will be a tie politically in the Board of Aldermen, with the City Club holding the balance of power. The Board of Freeholders will stand 11 Republicans to 9 Democrats.

Of the Aldermen the Republicans and Democrats each elected three, as follows: First ward, William Richardson, Rep.; Second ward, John Banker, Rep.; Third ward, A T Landmesser, Dem.; Fourth ward, John H Becker, Dem.; Fifth ward, William Helm, Rep.; Sixth ward, T G Phinney, Dem. The City Club endorsed four of the Aldermen elected.

The Republicans elected three Freeholders, Democrats two, and City Club one, as follows: First ward, Michael Stafford, Dem; Second ward, Cornelius Suydam, Rep; Third ward, Abraham Feible, Rep; Fourth ward, J B Powelson, Rep. and the City Club; Fifth ward, Frederick Miller, Rep; Sixth war', Michael McFadden, Dem. The City Club endorsed three of the successful Freeholders. The Republicans won the majority of the minor offices.

There is a probability of a contest in the Fourth ward, where Becker, Democrat, was elected Alderman by one majority, and Powelson, Republican Freeholder, by four majority.

ARRESTED FOR BRIBING NEGROES.

A New Brunswick Republican to Be Prosecuted by the Local Goo Goos.

New Brunswick, April 9—Freeholder David McCloskey appeared at Police Headquarters this afternoon with City Treasurer James Neilson to prefer a complaint of bribery at the polls against Henry Banker, a wholesale grocer, whose cousin is running for Alderman in the Second Ward. Messrs. Neilson and McCloskey are Democrats, Mr. Banker is a Republican.

Mr. McCloskey said he was trying to earn the reward of $500 offered by the City Club for evidence that would lead to a conviction for bribery.

He was prepared, he added, to make affidavit that Michael Daly, a grocer, had told him that he saw Henry Banker offer money to several colored men. Daly's grocery is at Remsen avenue and Seaman street. It is alleged that several bribes were given and taken in the immediate vicinity of his store.

Recorder Harkins took Mr. McCloskey's complaint, and a warrant for Henry Banker's arrest was placed in the hands of Policeman VanDeursen. Mr. Banker was found in the Second ward and gave bail in $400 before Recorder Harkins. He became his own bondsman. It is said that the City Club will prosecute the case.

—George Bullman will be the next Freeholder from North Plainfield township. He was turned down by the Republican residents of the borough because he voted for a Democratic county collector when the borough residents voted for township officials, notwithstanding he was one the best Freeholders North Plainfield ever had. He's a Republican.

—Every Plainfielder who has any idea of building a home for himself should attend the public meeting to be held in the Board of Trade rooms, 319 East Second street, Thursday evening at 8, to consider, discuss and take action on the building ordinance now before the City Council. A large meeting is expected, since the matter is of vital importance to the growth of our city.

A Chill
is serious at any season of the year. At the first symptom of stiffness in any part of the body apply an Allcock's
Porous Plaster
and thus ward off what may prove a very dangerous cold, resulting in bronchitis, pneumonia or consumption.
Every time of the so-called porous plasters is an imitation of Allcock's. Accept no other.
Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.
Brandreth's Pills
overcome that most prevalent of all diseases, constipation.

THE EGOTISM OF PROFESSIONALS.

A Nameless Poet Meets His Match in Two Harvard Students.

A story which, if it be not absolutely true, is at any rate sufficiently characteristic to be considered ben trovato, is now going the round of the clubs at the expense of a well known poet and critic, who is not so hypercritical as to be unable to appreciate his own distinguished services to literature. It appears that the poet, in the company of Mr. H. C. Bunner, Mr. Laurence Hutton and Mr. Frank Stockton, having visited the play, dropped in at Delmonico's for a light repast. The only tables left unoccupied in the cafe were those intended for two persons; but the poet observed that two young men were seated at one of the tables meant for four, and going up to them he asked whether they would be willing to take one of the smaller tables and let him and his friends have theirs, a request to which they very politely acceded.

From the casual remarks dropped by the two young men during the next half hour and overheard by the parte carree it was discovered that they were Harvard undergraduates down from Cambridge for a day or two. Coffee and cigars having now been reached, the poet in the goodness of his heart, and having in mind the courtesy of the young men, thought to himself what a kindly act it would be to let them know how distinguished a group they had accommodated. It would be an experience memorable in their life history, something to tell their grandchildren about in after years. So going over to the contiguous table he invited the amiable youths to join his party and finish their coffee in his company.

"And it gives me great pleasure to introduce ourselves," he remarked in his most genial manner. "I am Mr. So-and-So, and this is my friend, Mr. Bunner, the editor of 'Puck.' This is Mr. Laurence Hutton, and this is Mr. Frank Stockton."

A faint and inscrutable smile stole over the faces of the ingenuous youths. Then one of them slapped the poet on the back.

"My dear fellow," he said, "so glad to know you all. And it gives me great pleasure to make ourselves known to you. I myself am Kaiser Wilhelm; and this," touching his companion lightly with a cheese stick—"this is my friend, Fuerst Bismarck!"—New York Mail and Express.

STAGE FRIGHT IN SPEAKERS.

A Vermont Governor Who Was Always More at Ease Outside His Own State.

There are some speakers who never experience the least bit of trepidation before an audience, but from what I can learn this is the exception rather than the rule. A gentleman who has charmed many a Vermont audience by his mellifluous words informed me that he was frightened for the first time in his life while speaking after the witty and brilliant Depew at the recent banquet in Burlington. This is not to be wondered at, and I noticed that even the ready and self-possessed toastmaster appeared at his best after the chief orator had left the hall.

One of the best known governors that the Green Mountain State has had in late years told me recently that it bothered him somewhat to think that he could never get over being embarrassed when he addressed an audience. When he went out of the State to speak he said that he was more at ease, being in the presence of strangers, but when he appeared before an assemblage of Vermonters, many of whom he knew and who knew him, he spoke not without considerable trepidation.

His experience in this direction led him at one time to congratulate ex-Senator George F. Edmunds on the fact that the latter had appeared in public so much that he was perfectly at home when addressing an audience, but the congratulator was astonished to hear Mr. Edmund's reply: "You are mistaken. I never rise to my feet to speak without feeling more or less uncomfortable."—Burlington (Vt.) Free Press.

THEY CHEERED WELLINGTON.

He Whipped the French, but Did It Like a Gentleman.

While Wellington was still a marquis he went to Paris from Toulouse, where he had fought and won the last battle of the Peninsula war.

He went to the opera the same evening, and though he wore plain clothes and sat in the back of the box he was almost immediately recognized by some one in the pit, who cried out, "Vellington!"

The name was taken up by others, and at last the entire pit rose, turned to the box and called, "Vive Vellington!"

Nor would the people be satisfied until he had stood up and bowed to them, when he was cheered and applauded again. At the end of the performance the passage from the box was found to be crowded with people. The ladies of the party drew back nervously, but the duke said, "Come along!" in his brusque way, and conducted them on. While they were still in the corridor a man in the crowd was heard to say to his companions:

"But why are you applauding so much? He has always beaten us!"

This was very true, and the question seemed a natural one; but the answer was charming:

"Yes, but he has always beaten us like a gentleman!"—Harrison's Monthly.

Practical Dog Training.

A way of training a dog to answer its master's call has been adopted by Head Keeper Manley, of the Zoological Gardens, which, while it may not be entirely new, is certainly effective. He possesses a valuable dog whose only fault was that of independence, and, whistle and call as much as he might, the dog refused to take the slightest notice. One day Mr. Manley caught the dog in his cellar and tied a clothesline about its body just behind its forelegs. The line was several yards long, and, with a tight hold on his end, Manley took the dog out for a walk. Every once in a while he would whistle, and when the dog failed to respond he drew in the rope hand over hand with the startled animal turning a succession of somersaults in the dirt. A few such lessons were enough, and the dog is now a model of obedience.—Philadelphia Record.

Carefulness About Little Things.

"I think it's all right for a bank President with a salary of $40,000 a year to spend half a day looking for a lost penny," said Mr. Billtops. "It wouldn't do for a man in his place to set the bad example of being careless about little things, but when Mrs. Billtops spoils a two dollar pair of gloves trying to pick up a penny, it always kind of irritates me."

A BABY
CONTRADICTS THE DOCTORS.
All Are Happy, Glad, and Well.
[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]
The theories of physicians in regard to female complaints suffer a "Waterloo" very frequently, when sensible and thinking women take matters into their own hands.

Women are sometimes compelled to act for themselves, because of the suffering forced upon them by incompetent doctors, who are baffled by very simple complaints, because they are not the right sex to comprehend them.
Lydia E. Pinkham, when she gave to the world her Vegetable Compound, lifted women from the darkness into light. She placed within their reach a guaranty, not only of health, but of delicacy and self-respect.
The following letter is a little story where a "dear little boy" was the "Waterloo."
"I have taken three bottles of your Vegetable Compound, one package of Sanative Wash, one box of Liver Pills; and now I have a dear little babe four weeks old, and I am well. I have to thank you for this.

"I have spent $200.00 for doctors' bills without a cure. For my cure I only spent $5.00.
"I was once a victim of female troubles in their worst form. I have suffered untold agonies every month; had to stay in bed, and have poultices applied, and then could not stand the pain.
"My physician told me if I became pregnant I would die. I had bladder trouble, itching, backache, catarrh of the stomach, hysteria, and heart trouble, fainting spells and leucorrhœa. Can you wonder that I sing the praises of a medicine that has cured me of all these ills?" Mrs. Geo. C. Kirchner, 351 Snediker Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

BY THE WAY.

—Easter cards and booklets at Harper's, 411 Park avenue.

Mr. Jeaggers of Emily street remains very ill at his residence.

—The April term of the Somerset County Court meets at Somerville next Tuesday.

—Marshal Zachariah Wilson intends going to work at his trade, that of carpentering.

—Lester Leggett will again address young men in the Y. M. C. A. Building, next Sunday afternoon at 4:15.

—After the 15th of the present month John W. VanHorn will take the position now held by Marshal Pangborn.

—Wm. B. Buckley, Norman Dunn and Thomas Lee are the Fanwood men drawn on the panel of jurors for the May term.

—Laundered shirts with two detached collars, for 35 cents, is one of the specials at U. B. Crane's, 120 West Front street.

—Webb Littell now holds the highest score on the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys, 195. Nathan Lane, Jr., is a close second.

—J. H. Manning, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will conduct the meeting in the East Third Street Mission Thursday evening.

—Spencer, the seedsman, is now making an outdoor display of his wares, much to the comfort of the members of the Cracker Barrel Club.

—Albert Naylor of East Front street has received the contract for the painting of several cottages in Sewaren. Mr. Naylor leaves Monday to start the work.

—See what you can get: 1 lb 50 cent tea, 3½ lbs sugar, and a can of condensed milk, all for 50 cents, at Scheuer & Sons' opening, and a free souvenir besides.

—A beautiful novelty will be given away Saturday as a souvenir to all customers at the Plainfield opening of Scheuer & Sons, the Newark cash grocers.

—There is absolutely no truth in the report that the Borough Council were considering the advisability of appointing Jacob Snyder and Caspar Ebener as marshals.

—George Kirch, groceryman at the corner of Somerset street and Grandview avenue, will build an addition 20x16 to his store, to accommodate his increasing business.

—Judge Brown has been presented with a copy of Honeyman's Practices and Precedents, a justices of the peace law book, and the Judge is giving the same a critical perusal.

—Mark Dowd, son of Thomas Dowd the contractor, who resides with his parents on Duer street, is booked for the vacancy caused by the resignation of Marshal Zachariah Wilson.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. John Force is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Hall of Rockview avenue is seriously ill with paralysis.

F. M. Bacon passed a restless night and is still in a serious condition.

Mrs. T. H. May of Somerset street is visiting friends in New York city.

Julius Williams of Elmwood place is improving slowly from his recent injuries.

The North Plainfield Whist Club will meet next Monday evening with Mrs. E. H. Bird.

Theodore B. Marsh of Marsh, Ayers & Co. was out today for the first after his long illness.

Contractor John D. Smith is confined to his home on Greenbrook road with intermittent fever.

Mrs. G. M. Foote of Detroit is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. U. T. Hungerford of Rahway road.

Mrs. J. S. Derby and daughter of Alton is spending a few days with her parents on Vine street.

Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson of La Grande avenue expects to leave on a tour for California tomorrow.

Mrs. Henry Haussling of Newark is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. O'Brien of West Fourth street.

Mrs. C. Dants of New Market spent Sunday and Monday with Mr. and Mrs. G. Satterline of Greenbrook road.

Miss Kate Way of SanFrancisco is visiting her brother, M. E. Beach, and sister Mrs. C. C. Howard, of Carleton avenue.

Ex-Street Commissioner Benjamin E. Gavin is expected home from the South. Mr. Gavin spent the Winter at Thomasville, Ga.

Mrs. Walter Walker, who has been seriously ill at her home on Chatham street, for the past few days, is rapidly improving.

A. Windham, brother of Henry Windham of this city, was visiting friends yesterday at the Arlington Hotel, North Plainfield.

Dr. Henry Wilson, assistant pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle in New York, will address the Christian Alliance next Tuesday evening.

George Thatcher has been spending several days with his family on West Seventh street. His company are laying off during Holy Week.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. McMillen of Jersey City are occupying the house of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Lord on Belvidere avenue during the European trip of the Lords.

Miss Annie Wolf, who has been spending the past ten days with Mrs. Henry Wiedemeyer at the Arlington Hotel, returned yesterday to her home in New York city.

Margaret Moran, daughter of James Moran of Grove street, who has been seriously ill with diphtheria for the past week, is now out of danger, and the quarantine will soon be removed from the house.

A. R. Johnson, for many years an employe of Martin Bros., grocers, corner of Park avenue and Second street, has secured a position with Simon Scheuer & Sons at their new store on West Front street. He will commence work Saturday, their opening day.

Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes was reappointed to the pastorate of the Plainfield M. E. Church by the Conference yesterday, and the following other local appointments were made: Grace—H. F. Randolph; Monroe Avenue—W. C. O'Donnell; Scotch Plains—George Angleman; Dunellen—S. F. Ovstard; Westfield—W. H. Ruth.

M. E. Beach and daughter Miss Edith, who have been living in one of Charles Hand's flats on Watchung avenue, have given up housekeeping, and yesterday took up their residence with Mr. Beach's sister, Mrs. C. C. Howard, on Carleton avenue. This is done on account of the poor health of Mr. Beach, who has been obliged to retire from business.

C. C. Pearson, Sr., for the past two years paying inspector of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, received the appointment a few days ago, for three years, to the same position in the Boston Navy Yard. Mr. Pearson left New York last night by the Fall River Line for Boston, where he will enter on his duties immediately. Mr. Pearson is the father of C.C. Pearson, Jr., the well-known bicycle rider.

Miss Henrietta Howland passed away at Orange yesterday noon at 12:30, after a six-months illness. She was in her twenty-fifth year, and warmly beloved by a large circle of acquaintances and friends in Plainfield. She was daughter of Henry M. Howland, formerly of Grove street, and sister of Frank Howland who lives on Watchung avenue. The funeral will be private, tomorrow morning, and the body will be laid to rest beside that of her mother in Cypress Hills, Brooklyn.

—Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., meets Friday evening.

Don't Diet.
If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, habitual constipation or sick headache, don't diet. You need the strength that good food gives. Eat whatever you want, but take one of
Dr. Deane's
Dyspepsia Pills
after meals until cured. If you are constipated get bottle with white label, otherwise with yellow. At all druggists, 25 cents. Send to us for free sample.
DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.
MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?
Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?
Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?
Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?
Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?
Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?
Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?
Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?
Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?
Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?
Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.
The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.
Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,
73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.
Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.
COME EVERY DAY.
Whenever you come you find fresh features in Furniture and Household Wares to greet you. Just now nothing seems impossible in the line of economy in this store. Whatever you want maybe you can fill it here at a third—often half—the price you'll pay elsewhere. For instance:
PARLOR SUITS.
$20—Whoever thought to see such a splendid suit as this for such a little price? You'll wonder how the material can be bought for so small a figure and not count the making. Not many, only enough to keep the sale going this week, so you'd best be quick. Mahogany finished frame, five pieces.
MATTINGS.
15c. the yard and made in Japan. You know what that means. Quaint patterns, woven carelessly on a bright colored background. Some of the very prettiest patterns of the season. Brand new styles and the kinds that will win your approval.
DINING CHAIRS.
Fragile and delicate, stout and sturdy, and every one of them serviceable as can be. You needn't spend much time; close your eyes and choose, you can't go wrong. They are the most cheerful looking chair you ever saw, and the prices $1.25 to $3.00, with twenty-five cent go-betweens.
CARPETS.
High priced or low priced, the lining and the making and the laying free. That's what brings business to our carpet room. And you pay less here for the carpet than you're likely to pay elsewhere. Scores of fresh rolls added weekly, among them new patterns in the 65c. Tapestry Brussels and Super Ingrains.
An Unequaled Offering. Buy a bedroom suit here. You'll save the cost of spring and mattress. We give a strongly woven wire spring and mixed mattress with each bedroom set sold. A bouncing big offer, but it's a way we have for making new acquaintances. Goods delivered free of charge to all parts of the State.
The Portland Range. You who have never heard about it, come to the store; you who have one, aren't you tickled?
The Storage House is making friends daily; such a well-lighted, well-ventilated place as it is, explains why. Satisfactory terms and satisfactory people to deal with. A 'phone call or postal will bring our vans to you door.
"Hello" Number 580

—The following Plainfielders participated yesterday in the shooting tournament of the Boston Shooting Association: T. H. Keller, Neaf Apgar and Charles Smith. In all of the twelve events their scores were as good as or better than the average.

ASK FOR KABO No. 353
Perfect fitting. Sure to give satisfaction.
Price only $1.00
I Lederer.

There is one DRESS STAY that
Won't melt apart,
Can't cut through the dress,
Don't stay bent.
It is
BALL'S PEERLESS.
All lengths; all colors.
Putnam & DeGraw, Seely Edsall, I. Lederer.

Telephone Rates
IN PLAINFIELD.
$40, $50, $60, according to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distance equipment. Address The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North avenue, Plainfield.
3 22 sw-c 3

Prof. A. Wehner,
TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.
ALSO VOICE CULTURE.
Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.
References given and required.
Address letters to the office of this paper.
1 31 tf-c

The Finderne,
FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.
Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.
HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.
(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything [illegible]. When out driving let us entertain you.
A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.
2 9 tf

THE CHRONICLES OF MARTIN HEWITT

BY ARTHUR MORRISON

THE CASE OF [illegible]

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

CHAPTER I.

I think I have recorded in another place Hewitt's frequent aphorism that "there is nothing in this world that is at all possible that has not happened or is happening in London." But there are many strange happenings in this matter-of-fact country, and in these matter-of-fact times, that occur far enough from London. Fantastic crimes, savage revenges, medieval superstitions, hellish cruelty, though less in sight, have been no more extinguished by the advent of the nineteenth century than have the ancient races who practiced them in the dark ages. Some of the races have become civilized and none of the savageries are heard of no more. But there are survivals in both cases. I say these things, having in my mind a particular case that came under the personal notice of both Hewitt and myself—an affair that brought one up standing with a gasp and a doubt of one's era.

My good uncle, the colonel, was not in the habit of gathering great house parties at his place at Ratherby, partly because the place was not a great one and partly because the colonel's gout was. But there was an excellent bit of shooting for two or three guns, and even when he was unable to leave the house himself my uncle was always pleased if some good friend was enjoying a good day's sport in his territory. As to myself, the good old soul was in a perpetual state of offense because I visited him so seldom, though whenever my scant holidays fell in a convenient time of the year I was never insensible to the attractions of the Ratherby stubble. More than once had I sat by the old gentleman when his foot was exceptionally troublesome, amusing him with accounts of some of the doings of Martin Hewitt, and more than once had my uncle expressed his desire to meet Hewitt himself, and commissioned me with an invitation to be presented to Hewitt at the first likely opportunity for a joint excursion to Ratherby. At length I persuaded Hewitt to take a fortnight's rest, coincident with a little vacation of my own, and we got down to Ratherby within a few days past September 1, and before a gun had been fired on the colonel's bit of shooting. The colonel himself we found confined to the house, with his foot on the familiar rest, and though ourselves were the only guests we managed to do pretty well together. It was during this short holiday that the case I have mentioned arose.

WHEREUPON THE MAN'S NATURE SHOWED ITSELF.

When first I began to record some of the more interesting of Hewitt's operations, I think I explained that such cases as I myself had not witnessed I should set down in impersonal narrative form, without intruding myself. The present case, so far as Hewitt's work was concerned, I saw, but there were circumstances which led up to it that we only fully learned afterwards. These circumstances, however, I shall put in their proper place—at the beginning.

The Fosters were a fairly old Ratherby family, of whom Mr. John Foster had died by an accident at the age of about forty, leaving a wife twelve years younger than himself and three children, two boys and one girl, who was the youngest. The boys grew up strong, healthy, out-of-doors young ruffians, with all the tastes of sportsmen and all the qualities, good and bad, natural to lads of fairly well-disposed characters allowed a great deal too much of their own way from the beginning. Their only real bad quality was an unfortunate knack of bearing malice, and a certain savage vindictiveness toward such persons as they chose to consider their enemies. With the louts of the village they were at unceasing war, and indeed once got into serious trouble for peppering the butcher's son (who certainly was a great blackguard) with sparrow shot. At the usual time they went to Oxford together and were fraternally sent down together in their second year, after enjoying a spell of rustication in their first. The offense was never specifically mentioned about Ratherby, but was mourned of as something particularly outrageous.

It was at this time, sixteen years or thereabout, after the death of their father, that Henry and Robert Foster first saw and disliked Mr Jonas Sneathy, a director of penny banks and small insurance offices. He visited Ranworth (the Fosters' house) a great deal more than the brothers thought necessary, and, indeed, it was not for lack of rudeness on their part that Mr. Sneathy failed to understand, as far as they were concerned, his room was preferred to his company. But their mother welcomed him, and in the end it was announced that Mrs. Foster was to marry again and that after that her name would be Mrs. Sneathy.

Hereupon there were violent scenes at Ranworth. Henry and Robert denounced their prospective stepfather as a fortune-hunter, a snuffler, a hypocrite. They did not stop at broad hints as to the honesty of his penny banks and insurance offices, and the house straightway became a house of bitter strife. The marriage took place, and it was not long before Mr. Sneathy's real character became generally obvious. For months he was a model, if somewhat sanctimonious, husband, and his influence over his wife was complete. Then he discovered that her property had been strictly secured by her first husband's will, and that, willing as she might be, she was unable to raise money for her new husband's benefit, and was quite powerless to pass to him any of her property by deed of gift. Hereupon the man's nature showed itself. Foolish woman as Mrs. Sneathy might be, she was a loving, indeed an infatuated wife, but Sneathy repaid her devotion by vulgar derision, never hesitating to state plainly that he had married her for his own profit, and that he considered himself swindled in the result. More, he even proceeded to blows and other practical brutality of a sort only devisable by a mean and ugly nature. This treatment, at first secret, became open, and in the midst of it Mr. Sneathy's penny banks and insurance offices came to a grievous smash all at once, and everybody wondered why Mr. Sneathy kept out of gaol.

Keep out of gaol he did, however, for he had taken care to remain on the safe side of the law, though some of his co-directors learnt the taste of penal servitude. But he was beggared and lived, as it were, a mere pensioner in his wife's house. Here his brutality increased to a frightful extent, till his wife, already broken in health in consequence, went in constant fear of her life, and Miss Foster passed a life of weeping misery. All her friends' entreaties, however, could not persuade Mrs. Sneathy to obtain a legal separation from her husband. She clung to him, with the excuse—for it was no more—that she hoped to win him to kindness by submission, and with a pathetic infatuation that seemed to increase as her bodily strength diminished.

Henry and Robert, as may be supposed, were anything but silent in these circumstances. Indeed they broke out violently again and again and more than once went near permanently injuring their worthy stepfather. Once especially, when Sneathy, absolutely without provocation, made a motion to strike his wife in their presence, there was a fearful scene. The two sprang at him like wild beasts, knocked him down and dragged him to the balcony with the intention of throwing him out of the window. But Mrs. Sneathy impeded them, hysterically imploring them to desist.

"If you lift your hand to my mother," roared Henry, gripping Sneathy by the throat till his fat face turned blue and banging his head against the wall, "if you lift your hand to my mother again I'll chop it off—I will! I'll chop it off and drive it down your throat!"

"We'll do worse," said Robert, white and frantic with passion. "We'll hang you—hang you to the door! You're a proved liar and thief, and you're worse than a common murderer. I'd hang you to the front door for two pence!"

For a few days Sneathy was comparatively quiet, cowed by their violence. Then he took to venting redoubled spite on his unfortunate wife, always in the absence of her sons, well aware that she would never inform them. On their part, finding him apparently better behaved, in consequence of their attack, they thought to maintain his wholesome terror, and scarcely passed him without a menace, taking a fiendish delight in repeating the threats they had used during the scene, by way of keeping it present to his mind.

"Take care of your hands, sir," they would say. "Keep them to yourself, or by George we'll take 'em off with a bill hook!"

But his revenge for all this Sneathy took, unobserved, on their mother. Truly a miserable household.

Soon, however, the brothers left home, and went to London by way of looking for a profession. Henry began a belated study of medicine, and Robert made a pretense of reading for the bar. Indeed, their departure was as much as anything a consequence of the earnest entreaty of their sister, who saw that their presence at home was an exasperation to Sneathy and aggravated her mother's secret sufferings. They went, therefore, but at Ranworth things became worse. Little was allowed to be known outside the house, but it was broadly said that Mr. Sneathy's behavior had become outrageous beyond description. Servants left faster than new ones could be found, and gave their late employer the character of a raving maniac. Once, indeed, he committed himself in the village, attacking with his walking-stick an inoffensive tradesman who had accidentally brushed against him, and immediately running home. This assault had to be compounded for by a payment of fifty pounds. And then Henry and Robert Foster received a most urgent letter from their sister, requesting their immediate presence at home.

They went at once, of course, and the servants' account of what occurred was this: When the brothers arrived Mr. Sneathy had just left the house. The brothers were shut up with their mother and sister for about a quarter of an hour and then left them and came out to the stable yard together. The coachman (he was a new man, who had only arrived the day before) overheard a little of their talk as they stood by the door. Mr. Henry said that "the thing must be done, and at once. There are two of us, so that it ought to be easy enough." And afterwards Mr. Robert said: "You'll know best how to go about it, as a doctor." After which Mr. Henry came toward the coachman and asked in what direction Mr. Sneathy had gone. The coachman replied that it was in the direction of Ratherby wood, by the winding footpath that led through it. But as he spoke he distinctly, with the corner of his eye, saw the other brother take a halter from a hook by the stable door and put it into his coat pocket.

THE COACHMAN REPLIED THAT IT WAS IN THE DIRECTION OF THE RATHERBY WOODS.

So far for the earlier events, whereof I learned later bit by bit. It was on the day of the arrival of the brothers Foster at their old home, and, indeed little more than two hours after the incident last set down, that news of Mr. Sneathy came to Col. Brett's place, where Hewitt and I were sitting and chatting with the colonel. The news was that Mr. Sneathy had committed suicide—had been found hanging, in fact, to a tree in Ratherby wood, just by the side of the footpath.

CHAPTER II.

Hewitt and I had of course at this time never heard of Mr. Sneathy, and the colonel told us what little he knew. He had never spoken to the man, he said—indeed nobody in the place outside Ranworth would have anything to do with him. "He's certainly been an unholy scoundrel over those poor people's banks," said my uncle, "and if what they say's true he's been about as bad as possible to his wretched wife. He must have been pretty miserable, too, with all his scoundrelism, for he was a completely ruined man, without a chance of retrieving his position, and detested by everybody. Indeed, some of his recent doings, if what I have heard is to be relied on, have been very much those of a madman. So that on the whole I'm not much surprised. Suicide's about the only crime I suppose that he never experimented with till now, and, indeed, it's rather a service to the world at large—his only service, I expect."

The colonel sent a man to make further inquiries, and presently this man returned with the news that now it was said that Mr. Sneathy had not committed suicide, but had been murdered. And hard on the man's heels came Mr. Hardwick, a neighbor of my uncle's and a fellow J. P. He had had the case reported to him, it seemed, as soon as the body had been found and had at once gone to the spot. He found the body hanging—and with the right hand cut off.

HE FOUND THE BODY HANGING.

"It's a murder, Brett," he said, "without doubt a most horrible case of murder and mutilation. The hand is cut off and taken away, but whether the atrocity was committed before or after the hanging, of course, I can't say. But the missing hand makes it plainly a case of murder, and not suicide. I've come to consult you about issuing a warrant, for I think there's no doubt as to the identity of the murderers."

"That's a good job," said the colonel, "else we should have had some work for Mr. Martin Hewitt here, which wouldn't be fair, as he's taking a rest. Who do you think of having arrested?"

"The two young Fosters. It's as plain as it can be—and a most revolting crime, too, bad as Sneathy may have been. They came down from London to-day and went out deliberately to do it, it's clear. They were heard talking of it, asked as to the direction in which he had gone and followed him—and with a rope."

"Isn't that rather an unusual form of murder—hanging?" Hewitt remarked.

"Perhaps it is," Mr. Hardwick replied, "but it's the case here, plain enough. It seems, in fact, that they had a way of threatening to hang him and even to cut off his hand if he used it to strike their mother. So that they appear to have carried out what might have seemed mere idle threats in a diabolically savage way. Of course they may have strangled him first and hanged him after, by way of carrying out their threat and venting their spite on the mutilated body. But that they did it is plain enough to see. I've spent an hour or two over it and feel I am certainly more than justified in ordering their apprehension. Indeed they were with him at the time, as I've found by their tracks on the footpath through the wood."

The colonel turned to Martin Hewitt. "Mr. Hardwick, you must know," he said, "is by way of being an amateur in your particular line—and a very good amateur, too, I should say, judging by a case or two I have known of in this county."

Hewitt bowed and laughingly expressed a fear lest Mr. Hardwick should come to London and supplant him altogether. "This seems a curious case," he added. "If you don't mind I think I should like to take a glance at the tracks and whatever other traces there may be, just by way of keeping my hand in."

"Certainly," Mr. Hardwick replied, brightening. "I should of all things like to have Mr. Hewitt's opinion on the observations I have made—just for my own gratification. As to his opinion there can be no room for doubt. The thing is plain."

With many promises not to be late for dinner we left my uncle and walked with Mr. Hardwick in the direction of Ratherby wood. It was an unfrequented part, he told us, and by particular care he had managed, he hoped, to prevent the rumor spreading to the village yet, so that we might hope to find the tracks not yet overlaid. It was a man of his own, he said, who, making a short cut through the wood, had come upon the body hanging, and had run immediately to inform him. With this man he had gone back, cut down the body and made his observations. He had followed the trail backwards to Ranworth and there had found the new coachman, who had once been in his own service. From him he had learned the doings of the brothers Foster as they left the place, and from him he had ascertained that they had not yet returned. Then leaving his man by the body he had come straight to my uncle's.

Presently we came on the footpath leading from Ranworth across the fields to Ratherby wood. It was a mere trail of bare earth worn by successive feet amid the grass. It was damp, and we all stooped and examined the footmarks that were to be seen on it. They all pointed one way—toward the wood in the distance.

"Fortunately it's not a greatly frequented path," Mr. Hardwick said. "You see, there are the marks of three pairs of feet only, and as first Sneathy and then both of the brothers came this way the footmarks must be theirs. Which are Sneathy's is plain—they are these large, flat ones. If you notice, they are all distinctly visible in the center of the track, showing plainly that they belong to the man who walked alone, which was Sneathy. Of the others, the marks of the outside feet—the left on the left side and the right on the right—are often not visible. Clearly they belong to the two men walking side by side and, more often than not, treading with their outer feet on the grass at the side. And where these happen to drop on the same spot as the marks in the middle, they cover them. Plainly, they are the footmarks of Henry and Robert Foster, made as they followed Sneathy. Don't you agree with me, Mr. Hewitt?"

"Oh, yes, that's very plain. You have a better pair of eyes than most people, Mr. Hardwick, and a good idea of using them to. We will go on to the wood now. As a matter of fact, I can pretty clearly distinguish most of the other footmarks—those on the grass, but that's a matter of much training."

We followed the footpath, keeping on the grass at its side, in case it should be desirable to refer again to the foottracks. For some little distance into the wood the tracks continued as before, those of the brothers overlaying those of Sneathy. Then there was a difference. The path here was broader, and muddy, because of the proximity of trees, and suddenly the outer footprints separated, and no more overlay the longer ones in the center, but proceeded at an equal distance on either side of them.

"See there," cried Mr. Hardwick, pointing triumphantly to the spot, "this is where they overtook him, and walked on either side. The body was found only a little further on—you could see the place now if the path didn't zig-zag about so."

Hewitt said nothing, but stooped and examined the tracks at the sides with great care and evident thought, spanning the distances between them comparatively with his arms. Then he rose and stepped lightly from one mark to another, taking care not to tread on the mark itself. "Very good," he said, shortly, on finishing his examination. "We'll go on."

We went on, and presently came to the place where the body lay. Here the ground sloped from the left down toward the right and a tiny streamlet, a mere trickle of a foot or two wide, ran across the path. In rainy seasons it was probably wider, for all the earth and clay had been washed away for some feet on each side, leaving flat, bare and very coarse gravel, on which the trail was lost. Just beyond this, and to the left, the body lay on a grassy knoll under the limb of a tree from which still depended a part of the cut rope. It was not a pleasant sight. The man was a soft, fleshy creature, probably rather under than over the medium height, and he lay there, with his stretched neck and protruding tongue, a revolting object. His right arm lay by his side, and the stump of the wrist was clotted with black blood. Mr. Hardwick's man was still in charge, seemingly little pleased with his job, and a few yards off stood a couple of countrymen, looking on.

Hewitt asked from which direction these men had come, and, having ascertained and noted their footmarks, he asked them to stay exactly where they were to avoid confusing such other tracks as might be seen. Then

Continued on page 5.

Ferris' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists.

SENSIBLE WOMEN WEAR THEM

BECAUSE THEY ARE
RIGHT Shape to fit properly and feel comfortable
Material to give the best service.
RIGHT Finish because of skilled labor.
Buttons and Button Holes won't pull off.
RIGHT Support from the shoulders.
Fastenings for Hose Supporters.

Why Buy an Imitation when the GENUINE Costs so Little and Wears so Long?
CHILDREN'S, 25c. to 75c. MISSES, 50c. to $1. LADIES, $1 to $2.

—The present Law Judge, John D. Bartine, and ex-Prosecutor Wm. V. Steele, both of Somerville, are announced as candidates for the office of Law Judge of Somerset County.

—There is no sidewalk on the easterly side of Chatham street for several hundred feet towards Brook avenue, and there never has been and never will be, unless the Council or Street Committee take hold firmly.

—A gymnastic contest will be given in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 29 and 30. It is open to all members of the gymnasium, and entries must be in by April 15, and handsome prizes will be given.

—A marriage will shortly take place in the borough, and the contracting parties will be a charming young lady of the eastern end of the borough to a well-known young man of the city.

—Charles Bullman will give a talk on the great gold and silver mines of South America, in the Y. M. C. A. Building, April 18, at 8 p. m. He will tell how five thousand million dollars was obtained, and what became of it.

ELY'S
Cream Balm

CATARRH

Is quickly absorbed.
Cleanses the Nasal Passages,
Allays Pain and Inflammation.
Heals the Sores,
Protects the Membrane from Additional Cold.
Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell.

COLD IN HEAD

IT WILL CURE. A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS
56 Warren st., New York.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.
The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 35 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

4.57 p. m. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

8.36 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 48 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

Sundays, [illegible]

For Baltimore only [illegible] p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, [illegible] a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

[illegible]

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] p. m. week-days.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible] week-days.

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible] week-days.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]

For Boston—[illegible] daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.
J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)
Station in New York foot of Liberty street.
Time Table in effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield, [illegible]

Leave New York, foot Liberty Street at [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible]

Leave Newark, at [illegible]

Passengers for Newark please change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible]

Leave Somerville at [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible]

Leave Easton at [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield at 9 54 a. m.; 5 05 p. m.

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

[illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

How the Brigadier held the King.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

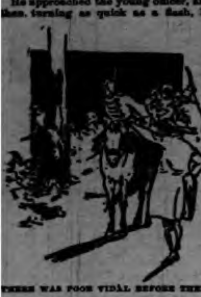
(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson and Bacheller.)

"But my prisoner?" said the brigand, in his suave voice.

"He shall come with us to Lord Wellington's camp."

"Just a word in your ear before you take him."

He approached the young officer, and then, turning as quick as a flash, he fired his pistol in my face. The bullet scored its way through my hair and burst a hole on each side of my busby. Seeing that he had missed me, he raised the pistol and was about to hurl it at me, when the English sergeant, with a single backhanded cut, nearly severed his head from his body. His blood had not reached the ground, nor the last curse died on his lips, before the whole horde were upon us, but with a dozen bounds and as many slashes we were all safely out of the glade, and galloping down the winding track which led to valley.



THERE WAS POOR VIDAL BEFORE THEM.

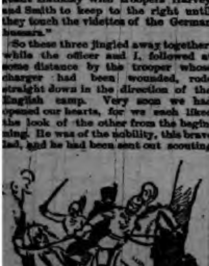
It was not until we had left the ravine far behind us and were right out in the open fields that we ventured to halt and to see what injuries we had sustained. For me, weary and wounded as I was, my heart was beating proudly and my chest was nearly bursting my tunic to think that I, Etienne Gerard, had left this gang of murderers so much by which to remember me. My faith, they would think twice before they ventured again to lay hands upon one of the Third hussars. So carried away was I that I made a small oration to these brave Englishmen and told them who it was that they had helped to rescue. I would have spoken of glory also and of the sympathies of brave men, but the officer cut me short.

"That's all right," said he, "any injuries, sergeant?"

"Trooper Jones' horse hit with a pistol bullet on the fetlock."

"Trooper Jones to go with us. Sergeant Halliday with troopers Harvey and Smith to keep to the right until they touch the videttes of the German hussars."

So these three jingled away together, while the officer and I, followed at some distance by the trooper whose charger had been wounded, rode straight down in the direction of the English camp. Very soon we had opened our hearts, for we each liked the look of the other from the beginning. He was of the nobility, this brave lad, and he had been sent out scouting by Lord Wellington to see if there were any signs of our advancing through the mountains. It is one advantage of a wandering life like mine, that you learn to pick up those bits of knowledge which distinguish the man of the world. I have, for example, hardly ever met a Frenchman who could repeat an English title correctly. If I had not traveled I should not be able to say with confidence that this young man's real name was Milor Hon. Sir Russell Bart, this last being an honorable distinction, so that it was as the Bart that I usually addressed him, just as in Spanish one might say "the Don."



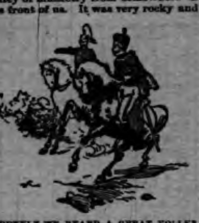
HE NEARLY SEVERED HIS HEAD FROM HIS SHOULDERS.

As we rode beneath the moonlight in the lovely Spanish night we spoke our minds to each other, as if we were brothers. We were both of an age, you see, both of the light cavalry also (the Sixteenth light dragoons was his regiment) and both with the same hopes and ambitions. Never have I learned to know a man so quickly as I did the Bart. He gave me the name of a girl whom he had loved at a garden called Vauxhall and for my part I spoke to him of little Caralie of the opera. He took a lock of hair from his bosom, and I a garter. Then we nearly quarreled over hussar and dragoon, for he was absurdly proud of his regiment, and you should have seen him curl his lip and clap his hand to his hilt when I said that I hoped it might never be his misfortune to come in the [illegible]

CHAPTER V.

Finally he began to speak of what the English call sport, and he told such stories of the money which he had lost over which of two cocks could kill the other, or which of two men could strike the other the most in a fight for a prize, that I was filled with astonishment. He was ready to bet upon anything in the most wonderful manner, and when I chanced to see a shooting star he was anxious to bet that he would see more than me, twenty-five francs a star, and it was only when I explained that my purse was in the hands of the brigands that he would give over the idea.

Well, we chatted away in this very amiable fashion until the day began to break, when suddenly we heard a great volley of musketry from somewhere in the front of us. It was very rocky and broken ground, and I thought, although I could see nothing, that a general engagement had broken out. The Bart laughed at my idea, however, and explained that the sound came from the English camp, where every man emptied his piece each morning so as to make sure of having a dry priming.



SUDDENLY WE HEARD A GREAT VOLLEY OF MUSKETRY.

"In another mile we shall be up with the outposts," said he.

I glanced around at this and I perceived that we had trotted along at so good a pace during the time that we were keeping up our pleasant chat that the dragoon with the lame horse was altogether out of sight. I looked on every side, but in the whole of that vast rocky valley there was no one save only the Bart and I—both of us armed you understand, and both of us well mounted. I, began to ask myself whether after all it was quite necessary that I should ride that mile which would bring me to the British outposts.

Now I wish to be very clear with you on this point, my friends, for I would not have you think that I was acting dishonorably or ungratefully to the man who had helped me away from the brigands. You must remember that of all duties the strongest is that which a commanding officer owes to his men. You must also bear in mind that war is a game which is played under fixed rules, and when these rules are broken one must at once claim the forfeit. If, for example, I had given a parole, then I should have been an infamous wretch had I dreamed of escaping. But no parole had been asked of me. Out of overconfidence and the chance of the lame horse dropping behind, the Bart had permitted me to get upon equal terms with him. Had it been I who had taken him I should have used him as courteously as he had me, but at the same time I should have respected his enterprise so far as to have deprived him of his sword, and seen that I had at least one guard besides myself. I reined up my horse and explained this to him, asking him at the same whether he saw any breach of honor in my leaving him.

He thought about it, and several times repeated that which the English say when they mean "Mon Dieu." "You would give me the slip, would you?" said he.

"If you can give no reason against it."

"The only reason that I can think of," said the Bart, "is that I should instantly cut your head off if you should attempt it."

"Two can play at that game, my dear Bart," said I.

"Then we'll see who can play it best," he cried, pulling out his sword.

I had drawn mine also, but I was quite determined not to hurt this admirable young man who had been my benefactor.

"Consider!" said I. "You say that I am your prisoner. I might with equal reason say that you are mine. We are alone here, and though I have no doubt that you are an excellent swordsman, you would hardly hope to hold your own against the best blade in the six light cavalry brigades."

His answer was a cut at my head. I parried and shore off half of his white plume. He thrust at my breast. I turned his point and cut away the other half of his cockade.

"Curse your monkey tricks!" he cried, as I wheeled my horse away from him.

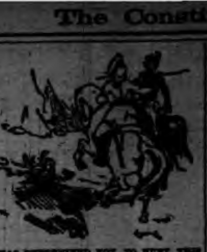
"Why should you strike at me," said I. "You see that I will not strike back."

"That's all very well," said he. "But you've got to come along with me to the camp."

"I shall never see the camp," said I.

"I'll lay you nine to four you do," he cried, as he made at me, sword in hand.

But those words of his put something new into my head. Could we not decide the matter in some better way than by fighting? The Bart was placing me in such a position that I should have to hurt him, or he would certainly hurt me. I avoided his rush, though his sword point was within an inch of my neck.



I WAS DETERMINED NOT TO HURT THIS YOUNG MAN.

"I have a proposal," I cried. "We shall throw dice as to which is the prisoner of the other."

He smiled at this. It appealed to his love of sport.

"Where are your dice?" he cried.

"I have none."

"Nor I, but I have cards."

"Cards let it be," said I.

"And the game?"

"I leave it to you."

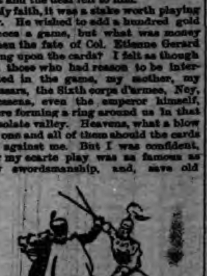
"Ecarte, then—the best of three."

I could not help smiling as I agreed, for I do not suppose that there were three men in France who were my masters at the game. I told the Bart as much as we dismounted. He smiled also as he listened.

"I was counted the best player at Watier's," said he. "With even luck you deserve to get off if you beat me."

So we tethered our two horses and sat down, one on either side of the great flat rock. The Bart took a pack of cards out of his tunic and I had only to see him shuffle them to convince me that I had no novice to deal with. We cut and the deal fell to him.

My faith, it was a stake worth playing for. He wished to add a hundred gold pieces a game, but what was money when the fate of Col. Etienne Gerard hung upon the cards? I felt as though all those who had reason to be interested in the game, my mother, my hussars, the Sixth corps d'armee, Ney, Messena, even the emperor himself, were forming a ring around us in that desolate valley. Heavens, what a blow to one and all of them should the cards go against me. But I was confident, for my ecarte play was as famous as my swordsmanship, and, save old Bouvet, of the hussars, who won seventy-six out of one hundred and fifty games off me, I have always had the best of a series.



"I HAVE A PROPOSAL," I CRIED.

CHAPTER VI.

The first game I won right off, though I must confess that the cards were with me, and that my adversary could have done no more. In the second I never played better and saved a trick by a finesse, but the Bart voled me once, marked the king, and ran out in the second hand. My faith, we were so excited that he laid his helmet down beside him, and I my busby.

"I'll lay my roan mare against your black horse," said he.

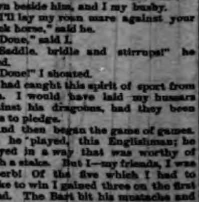
"Done," said I.

"Saddle, bridle and stirrups!" he cried.

"Done!" I shouted.

I had caught this spirit of sport from him. I would have laid my hussars against his dragoons, had they been ours to pledge.

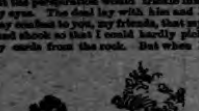
And then began the game of games. Oh, he played, this Englishman; he played in a way that was worthy of such a stake. But I—my friends, I was superb! Of the five which I had to make to win I gained three on the first hand. The Bart bit his mustache and drummed his hands, while I already felt myself at the head of my dear little rascals. On the second I turned the king, but lost two tricks, and my score was four to his two. When I saw my next hand I could not but give a cry of delight. If I cannot gain my freedom on this, thought I, I deserve to remain forever in chains.



THE CARDS WERE WITH ME.

Give me the the cards, landlord, and I will lay them on the table for you. Here was my hand—knave and ace of clubs, queen and knave of diamonds and king of hearts. Clubs are trumps, mark you, and I had but one point between me and freedom. As you may think, I declined his proposal. He knew that it was the crisis, and he undid his tunic. I threw my dolman on ground. He led the ten of spades. I took it with my ace of trumps. One point in my favor. The correct play was to clear the trumps, and I led the knave. Down came the queen upon it, and the game was equal. He led the eight of spades, and I could only discard my ace of diamonds. Then came the seven of spades, and the hair fairly stood straight up on my head. We each threw down a king at the finish. He had won two points, and my beautiful hand had been mastered by his inferior one. I could have rolled on the ground as I thought of it. They used to play very good ecarte at Watier's in the year '15. I say it—I, Brigadier Gerard.

The last game was now for all. This next hand must settle it one way or the other. He undid his sash and I put away my sword belt. He was cool, this Englishman, and I tried to be also, but the perspiration would trickle into my eyes. The deal lay with him and I may confess to you, my friends, that my hand shook so that I could hardly pick my cards from the rock. But when I raised them what was the first thing that my eyes rested upon? It was the king, the king, the glorious king of trumps. My mouth was open to declare it when the words were frozen to my lips by the appearance of my comrade.



MY BEAUTIFUL HAND HAD BEEN MASTERED.

He held his cards in his hand, but his jaw had fallen and his eyes were staring over my shoulder with the most dreadful expression of consternation and surprise. I whisked round, and I myself was amazed at what I saw.

Three men were standing quite close to us—fifteen meters at the farthest. The middle one was of a good height, and yet not too tall—about the same height in fact that I am myself. He was clad in a dark uniform with a small cocked hat and some sort of white plume upon the side. But I had little thought for his dress. It was his face, his gaunt cheeks, his beak of a nose, his masterful blue eyes, his thin firm slit of a mouth which made one feel that this was a wonderful man, a man of a million. His brows were tied into a knot, and he cast such a glance at my poor Bart from under them that one by one the cards came fluttering down from his nerveless fingers. Of the two other men, one, who had a face as brown and as hard as though it had been carved out of old oak, wore a bright red coat, while the other, a fine portly man with bushy side whiskers, was in a blue jacket with gold facings. Some little distance behind three orderlies were holding as many horses, while an escort of lancers were waiting in the rear.

"Heh, Crawford, what the devil's this?" asked the thin man.

"D' you hear, sir," cried the man with the red coat. "Lord Wellington wants to know what this means."

My poor Bart broke into an account of all that had occurred, but that rockface never softened for an instant.

"Pretty fine, 'pon my word, Gen. Crawford," he broke in. "The discipline of this force must be maintained, sir! Report yourself at headquarters as a prisoner."

It was dreadful to me to see the Bart mount his horse and ride off with hanging head. I could not endure it. I threw myself before this English general. I pleaded with him for my friend. I told him how I, Col. Gerard, would witness what a dashing young officer he was. Ah, my eloquence might have melted the hardest heart; I brought tears to my own eyes, but none to his. My voice broke and I could say no more.

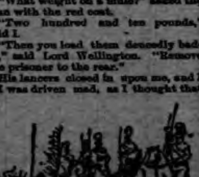
"What weight do you put on your mules, sir, in the French service?" he asked. Yes, that was all this phlegmatic Englishman had to answer to these burning words of mine. That was his reply to what would have made a Frenchman weep upon my shoulder.

"What weight on a mule?" asked the man with the red coat.

"Two hundred and ten pounds," said I.

"Then you load them deucedly badly," said Lord Wellington. "Remove the prisoner to the rear."

His lancers closed in upon me, and I—I was driven mad, as I thought that the game had been in my hands and I ought at that moment to be a free man. I held the cards up in front of the general.



"REMOVE THE PRISONER TO THE REAR."

"See, my lord!" I cried, "I played for my freedom and I won, for, as you perceive, I hold the king."

For the first time a slight smile softened his gaunt face.

"On the contrary," said he, as he mounted his horse, "it was I who won, for, as you perceive, my king holds you."

[THE END.]

—On account of the rush to the assignee's sale and to permit all to take advantage of the bargains offered, the store of [illegible] & Co. will be kept open until [illegible]

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Lena [illegible] of Somerville has been visiting friends in town.

Miss Hattie Bell of Brooklyn is visiting Miss Alice Barker on Grove street.

Samuel Wallace of Grove street left town today for Baltimore, to be gone a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Vanderbeek left this morning for a two-weeks stay at Asheville, N. C.

Miss Marie L. Powers left yesterday afternoon on a trip to Pittsburg, to visit her aunt, Mrs. Albert H. Chamberlain.

BY THE WAY.

—Miss Grace E. Overton and Fred Overton are the possessors of new Crescent bicycles from F. L. C. Martin.

—The Victor Wheelmen will elect officers Thursday, May 2, at the home of Israel Jones on Washington avenue.

—The hour of the children's Easter-Day service in Grace P. E. Church has been changed from 4 p. m. to 7:45 p. m.

—Those having bills against the Borough are well pleased with their expeditious payment through Clerk Arnold's extra work.

—The G. A. R. committees having in charge the arrangement of the Memorial Day programme, will meet next Wednesday evening.

—The famous Ball's peerless corsets and dress stays, including the Kabo, are for sale by Lederer. They are the favorite of the sex.

—Mrs. H. W. Brower has moved the front fence from her property on East Fifth street. The change greatly improves the place.

—Mrs. L. P. Bullock is painting and thoroughly renovating her property, 326 Kensington avenue. Marsh, Ayers & Co. are doing the painting.

—The Climax Gun Club of this city go Tuesday, April 16, to Philadelphia, where they will shoot a return match with the Keystone Shooting League.

—Spicer & Hubbard have contracted for the same system of fire protection sprayers for their planing mill that the Babcock Building is being equipped with.

—Newton Spencer's dog Vic miraculously escaped death from the gun of a neighbor who has been shooting dogs promiscuously, through the bullet striking the metal on his collar.

—Postmaster Hetfield has purchased of J. E. Townsend, of the Somerset Street marble yard, a very handsome monument to be erected to the memory of his father, the late Levi Hetfield.

—Everyone like kids on hand, and the best fit and the most stylish lookers are those sold by Callman. Everybody says his gloves are just too lovely for anything, and the price is phenomenally low.

—Patrick Powers, assistant engineer of the electric light station, has received by mail a razor with a blade a foot and a half long, with a note asking him to keep his face in view of his admiring friends.

—It is probable that the drill class of the riding academy will be changed from Thursday to Tuesday night, in order to accommodate Captain Holly, who is to drill a class in New York Thursday evenings.

—The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company made arrangements last night with the Country Club to use the Casino as a training school, every morning from 9 to 12, owing to the large demand for such a place, especially for beginners of the gentler sex.

—G. H. Goddard caught his foot in the space between rail and plank at the North Avenue station this morning, while running for a train, and was thrown heavily. It was thought his leg was fractured, but though he suffered much pain he boarded the train.

—A rather curious accident occurred to a horse in Vogeler's barn in the rear of his meat market on West Front street the other night. In backing out of the stall the animal caught one of his feet in between the spokes of a wagon wheel and it was necessary to remove the wheel before the horse could be extricated.

King's Daughters Meetings.

The Board of Managers of the City Union of King's Daughters met yesterday afternoon in the directors room of the Y. M. C. A. Building. The presidents and secretaries of nearly all the circles in Plainfield were present, and read interesting reports showing the amount of work accomplished during the Winter. The city nurse, who is supported by the circles of King's Daughters in Plainfield, is doing an admirable work, caring for the sick and ministering to their wants.

The social meeting of the City Union will be held May 9. To this meeting all King's Daughters are cordially invited.

The Truth of a Rumor.

A reporter of The Daily Press asked Garret Q. Pucker this morning what truth there was in the rumor that he was planning to take the entire first floor of an elegant new brick building to be erected by ex-Judge W. R. Codington on his recently purchased property at Park avenue and Second street, diagonally opposite Mr. Pucker's present location. Mr. Pucker said he had not adopted any such plan, though he was considering the advisability of getting quarters where he could have all his business on the ground floor. His present building he felt to be admirably adapted for his business, except that there was perhaps too much [illegible] about it.

DIVORCE FREAK

ODD LAWS IN ALL COUNTRIES UNDOING THE TIES OF MARRI

Queer Burmese and Chinese C Distinguished Romans Who Cas Their Wives. England Grants F Divorces. Switzerland Most of All.

The question of divorce seems to agitating pretty nearly every civil country in the world just now.

From the history of divorce it app that the proportion of unhappy mar riages increases from the day divorce legalized in a country. It appears am people of the highest civilization at t period of their decadence; from that ti can be dated a retrograde movement i morals.

The Bible says that if a man after mar rying a woman and living with her con ceives a disgust of her, for some sham ful fault, he shall draw out a decree of divorce, and, putting it into the woman hands, shall send her out of his house. This was not always easily accomplished because the majority of people did no know how to write, and the Levite or priest whom they consulted could re fuse to grant their application if th saw fit.

In Egypt the laws authorized no divo except in certain cases. Infidelity wa punished severely; the man receiv 1,000 stripes and the woman's nose wa cut. In Babylon a public auction of t the girls of a marriageable age was he once a year. The untying of these kno was even more simple.

Confucius, writing on Chinese law established seven cases of repudiation among which it appears that the wi could be put aside for excessive gossip for not getting along with her father mother-in-law. But there was this pr viso: "The husband is advised to ma her if she will wear mourning for hi mother-in-law for three years." As a matter of fact the Chinese resort to t divorce courts very little, and they hol a widow marrying a second time in the utmost contempt. This custom is some what similar to that of the Hindoos in former years, when the widows flung themselves on the burning woodpile upon which their husbands' bodies were being consumed.

In Burmah the women when marrying do not take their husband's names, but retain their own, with the addendum of "wife of So and So." This makes it con venient for them to assume their previous status in public knowledge when they come to be divorced, as they are very likely to be, for divorce is easy in that country.

If a Burmese wife and husband quarrel and determine to separate, the wife, who always does all the marketing, goes out and buys two little candles of equal length, which are made especially for this use. She brings them home. She and her husband sit down on the floor, place the candles between them, and light them simultaneously. One candle stands for him, the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, with noth ing but what he or she may have on. The other takes all the property.

This looks fair enough on the face of it, but it often happens that the wife on her way home with the candles takes a tiny scraping from the bottom of one of them. A very little will be enough. If the husband and the house are empty of pretty much everything but children she takes the shortened candle and walks out free and content. But if the house is well furnished, and the husband's posses sions are considerable, he gets the short candle and does the walking.

At Athens divorce could be obtained by demand of one of the parties or by mutual consent. The case was argued before a tribunal. The parties on being freed were expressly forbidden to marry with a person younger than themselves. Grecian wives convicted of breaking the Seventh Commandment were put to death, after having their hair cut off and their heads covered with hot ashes.

This barbarous custom was also adopted in Rome after the conquest of Carthage and Corinth. The Romans, being masters of the world, only thought of reveling in their riches, and cut themselves adrift from the austere rules of virtue, which had been theirs for cen turies. Civil marriages and religious marriages were little by little cut loose by divorce, which spread to such an ex tent as to almost suppress marriage. Nearly every cause was admitted—infi delity, sickness, old age, drunkenness, poison (which was very prevalent), going into the church, the army, and, lastly, mutual consent. The husband had the right to demand a divorce if the wife obtained false keys to the cellar, or if she went "gadding" to the theater or circus to the neglect of her household duties.

All these reasons were but pretexts after all. The virtuous Cato obtained a divorce in order to marry Marcia, Scilla remarried with a woman whom he met at the circus; Cicero repudiated his wife to take Publilia, whose riches would en able him to pay off all his creditors; Cæsar and Antony, contracted four suc cessive marriages; Pompey went as far as five.

The law of Mahomet admits of divorce—though it is very little resorted to by the Mahometans—but exacts four months' reflection on the part of the husband before sending the letter of repudiation, which in this case is call tetolk boin—a temporary repudiation called tetolk rid jee, which is used as a forewarning.

The nation which grants fewest di vorces is England. A special court—the court for divorce and matrimonial caus—copes with all matrimonial difficulties. Divorce can be obtained for "criminal conversation," and is denied for personal injuries and neglect. A rupture of the marriage tie is granted only for infidel ity, and this is known to the court as the "specific remedy."

Switzerland grants more divorces than any other country. Since the federal law of 1874 was passed the proportion has risen from forty-seven to a thousand. In Sweden since 1881, in Holland since and in Saxony since the federal law 1875 the proportion has doubled and e tripled. In Belgium it has multipl sixfold.

A Great Moral Lesson.

A little girl was being coaxed to own up to her aunt that she had done some thing which she ought not and wh she stoutly denied. Finally such un mistakable proof of her guilt was put be her that she could no longer keep up denial. She turned to her aunty said:

"Well, Aunt Kittie, you can't

BUSY BOROUGH.

Mayor and Council Do Much Genuine Work.

ALL IN THE LINE OF PROGRESS.

Special Sewerage Committee Appointed—New Building Ordinance Wanted—Officers Appointed for the Year—Damages Asked for on Account of a Broken Walk—Provision for Better Fire-Gong Service—To Codify the Ordinances—Again After the Plainfield Co's Electric-Light Poles.

Judging from the manner in which the North Plainfield Council started their business last evening the coming year will be a fruitful one for that body. Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., called the members together at 8:15, and Messrs. Lounsbury, Vallant, Smith and Schutt answered to the roll call of Clerk Arnold, Messrs. Peck and Howell being absent. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Dr. W. E. Mattison, under the head of petitions, offered his services to the borough for $100 a year. It was referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health. Elston S. Elliott asked for permission to erect a one-story frame building at 58 and 60 Somerset street. This was referred to the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps.

William McGrady in a communication stated that on the night of March 26 he was walking along Manning avenue and was violently thrown to the ground, dislocating his shoulder. The accident was caused, he said, through the wretched condition of a board walk. He had not been able to work since that time. He asked that damages be granted him. The matter was referred to the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections.

Marshal Zachariah Wilson offered his resignation to the Council, and it was referred to the Committee on Licenses and Marshals.

Chief Marshal Pangborn reported that 26 lights had been found not burning during the month of March.

The Clerk read his financial report, ending March 1, 1895, as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough		$1,188 29
Fire Department	$1,128 15
Light	1,621 02
Roads	239 52
	$2,988 70
Total balance		$1,804 80

The Clerk's report showed that T. R. Crosley had paid over to him $36 for fines, and $11 had been received from other sources, making $47 in all. Both reports were received and filed.

Mr. Vallant for the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee recommended that better care be taken of the fire-alarm system. The matter came up later on, when an additional $60 was appropriated to the $100 already set aside, for the purpose of keeping the system in first-class condition.

The Collector's report showed the following amounts of taxes collected for 1894:

Borough	$ 25 22
Lights	121 61
Roads	38 13
Fire Department	70 02
	$ 304 00
Previously reported	10,812 57
Total	$11,116 57

The report was received and filed.

The usual budget of monthly bills was read, and after examination by the Auditing and Finance Committees warrants were ordered drawn for them.

J. W. VanHorn, chief marshal, filed his bond for $500 with Dr. D. C. Adams and Thomas Doud as sureties, and it was referred to the Laws, Ordinance and Election Committee.

At this time the Mayor took occasion to thank The Daily Press for the complimentary cards presented giving a list of the borough officers and standing committees.

Mr. Smith offered a resolution that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to negotiate a loan of $1,500 for road funds, which was carried.

Mr. Schutt also offered a resolution that the salary of the chief engineer of the fire department be $100, the engineer $75, and janitor $50, a year, which was carried.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution, which was carried, that the salary of the overseer of the poor be $150 a year. He offered another that a loan of $1,500 be negotiated for the borough account, and that marshals when in actual service receive 25 cents an hour, and assistant night marshals receive $50 a month. All this was adopted.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution, which was carried, that the Committee on Streets and Public Health be authorized to secure bids for crushed stone in different sizes and to be delivered to suit convenience, also for crosswalks and sidewalks complete.

Mr. Vallant recommended that F. M. Lenger and Frank Kesselring be confirmed as members of Warren Engine Company, which was done.

Mr. Vallant offered a resolution, which prevailed, that the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Election prepare all ordinances now in force for publication in pamphlet form. Mayor Hegeman suggested that they be revised carefully.

Mr. Smith offered a resolution that a warrant be drawn in favor of H. N. Spencer for $519.99 to meet the note of $500 with interest due April 14, 1895, and charge the same to the road account. It was carried.

On motion of Mr. Schutt the crosswalk asked for at Somerset and Emily streets was granted.

Mr. Vallant moved that a warrant for $512 99 be drawn in favor of H. N. Spencer to pay a second note of $500, with interest, due April 14, 1895, and charge the same to the light account, which prevailed. Also one for $1,009.15 to meet the note of $1,000, with interest, due April 11, 1895, the same to be charged to the fire department account.

On motion of Mr. Lounsbury the Clerk was authorized to have published in the two daily papers a notice to the effect that the licenses in the borough are about to expire. Mr. Lounsbury also made a motion to the effect that the fees of the dogcatcher be 50 cents for the dogs captured and redeemed, and 75 cents for those captured, killed and buried. So ordered.

Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that the Committee on Streets and Public Health be permitted to expend $50 a month on the streets when they really thought it necessary. It was so decided.

Mr. Lounsbury moved that the Committee on Licenses and Marshals secure numbers and plates, the same as are in use on the fire alarm boxes, to be used for wagons, trucks and carts for which licenses are taken out, the cost not to exceed $22, which was carried.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Smith and was adopted that a warrant for $515 57 be drawn in favor of H. N. Spencer to meet the note of $500, with interest, due April 11, 1895, the same to be charged to the light account.

Mr. Lounsbury introduced a resolution to the effect that the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company be given 60 days notice after May 6, to remove their poles, wires, etc., from the borough. He stated that the company had placed them there illegally, and that they had promised, if allowed to leave them there for one year, and were then given 60 days notice to remove them.

Mr. Vallant said if the removal would take away competition he would not favor it.

Mr. Lounsbury thought, however, that the company should have asked the Council for permission to erect the poles; as they had not, the poles ought to be taken down.

Borough Counsel Reed was asked to tell what he knew of the matter. He said that the company had placed their poles and wires in the borough years ago to give an exhibition of electric lighting, and had never asked for the privilege to leave them there.

Mr. Lounsbury said that the company was not in the business for their health, but for the dollars there were in it.

Mr. Vallant stated that if Mr. Lounsbury was the only man in the United States in one kind of business he would have received a larger income than he has had for the past three years. The remarks caused a general laugh.

The resolution was carried, Mr. Vallant voting No.

The Mayor brought up the matter of uniforms for the marshals, and said that he noticed that last year the borough paid half and the marshals the other half. He thought the borough should pay the entire bill, and in the case of Marshal Pangborn the $18.40 which he paid for his suit was returned to him by vote of Council on the recommendation of Mr. Lounsbury.

The Mayor then appointed the following officers:

Chief of Fire Department—G. H. Fairchild.

Engineer—P. Kelligher.

Janitor—W. Kreweson.

Night Marshals—J. Lines, Mark Doud.

Specials—Israel Jones, John Stine, Samuel Moore, B. MacDonald, Fred Emmons, Israel Compton, Samuel Traynor, Charles Debele, Francis Whitely, John Goodwin, Peter Strann, John Coley.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the marshals be confirmed and that the officers appointed hold their positions till the Monday following the next borough election. Mr. Vallant moved that the three appointments for fire department take the same course, which was carried.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that suits for two marshals be secured, which was adopted.

Borough Counsel Reed made a statement in regard to the separation of the borough and township by the new law, and said that a time should be set when a division of the money belonging to both should be made. He said there was about $3,000 to be divided. Mr. Schutt moved that the Auditing and Finance Committees arrange for a meeting with the Township Committee to settle the matter. It was carried.

Mr. Lounsbury moved that when the Council adjourn it be to meet Friday evening, April 12. It was carried.

The Mayor appointed as a special sewerage committee Messrs. Peck, Lounsbury and Vallant. Mr. Vallant made a motion, which was carried, that the borough collector furnish the necessary bond of $15,000 for the faithful performance of his duty.

Mr. Lounsbury said that he thought there should be some borough ordinance governing the erection of buildings, and cited the case of the building now in course of erection on Somerset street. He did not think anyone should be allowed to build so close to the sidewalk. The Clerk said there was an ordinance at one time, but whether it would cover the case was a question.

Mr. Vallant stated that the Wooden property on Somerset street should be looked after in the same line.

The Council adjourned at 9:45, after which the Mayor gave the oath of office to Marshals John Goodwin, David Weaver, Mark Doud and Francis Whitely.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

AN AWFUL FALL.

A Decayed Gutter Causes a Serious Accident to a Painter.

John Hensey and Charles Trotter, two painters who have for three weeks been engaged at their trade about Edgewood, the country home of E. F. M. Chase in the Notch, fell yesterday afternoon from a ladder from the third story of his house, Hensey sustaining serious injuries.

The two men had a portion of the structure already painted, and yesterday afternoon started to paint the west side. They work on a ladder suspended in the air by ropes tied into hooks which are hung over into the gutters for security, and as they finish a portion of the painting let themselves gradually down by the aid of tackle and pulley, until the ground is finally reached.

They had just arranged the ladders, and had been painting only a few minutes yesterday afternoon at 2, when one of the hooks tore out the gutter which had rotted away, and let one end of the ladder fall to a perpendicular position, hanging on end by the other rope. Hensey and Trotter fell with great force, the former landing on a set of stone steps leading to the basement, and breaking the thigh and two lower bones in one of his legs. Trotter was more lucky and struck on the ground, from which he received injuries that were not serious enough but what he was able to be about in a little while.

Hensey was carried into the kitchen and made as comfortable as possible, while a telephone message was sent to Captain Grant. The accident occurred out of his territory, but he hunted up Chief Marshal Pangborn and the two officers went to the Chase residence; they, as soon as they saw the condition of Hensey, sent for Dr. Carmen.

Shortly after the arrival of the physician it was decided to convey the unfortunate man to the hospital, and a wagon from Terrill & Cole's was called for that purpose. Upon his arrival there his fractures were reduced and the bruises dressed so that he rests as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. It will be several weeks before he will be able to be out again.

ANOTHER BAD FALL.

Painter Moore Lands on His Head After a Frightful Tumble.

Frank Moore, of 29 Chatham street, a painter employed by Marsh, Ayers & Co., fell a distance of 25 feet from a ladder this morning at 9, while painting the house of Mrs. Bullock, corner of Putnam and Kensington avenues, and sustained severe injuries. The ladder was a narrow one and in attempting to move, Moore slipped and fell, striking on his head and shoulders, and making an indenture in the earth several inches deep.

R. C. Marshall passed the place shortly after, and was called to by the other painters. He quickly saw that Moore was severely injured, and hailing a man driving by in a buggy, had the injured man taken to his home.

Dr. Hedges was called and found that no bones were broken, though he had received a severe shock, from which it will take him some time to recover.

Happy Surprise.

A surprise is sometimes a happy event, and such Miss Mary Leckey of East Fifth street found the little surprise party given by her mother last evening.

After the excitement of the surprise had subsided, games of an amusing and exciting character were played. Miss Grace E. Overton and Miss Mary Leckey gave recitations, while Miss Mary Collier and Miss Mary Leckey each favored their friends with a piano solo.

Refreshments, followed by a dance, brought to an end a most enjoyable evening.

Among those present were the Misses Grace E Overton, Lucie P Davis, G Florence Barnes, Agnes Langhorne, Mary Collier, and Messrs. George A. Horne, Alvah Davis, Charles B Moore, and George Rose.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Frank French of 67 Somerset street are receiving the congratulations of their friends. It's because of a darling little boy who was born Thursday morning.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Reinstated In the Army and Promoted to a Captaincy.

VICTORY FOR THE MAN OF DESTINY

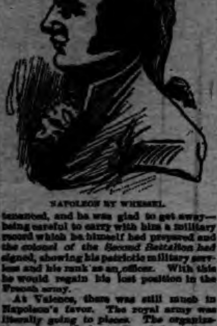
His First Gun at the Siege of Toulon. Emerges From Obscurity and His Extraordinary Character Revealed—The Reign of Terror In France.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

VII.—JACOBIN AND CAPTAIN OF ARTILLERY.

Bonaparte was cashiered; but his case was not hopeless. He was able to leave Corsica with such a record as gave him a fighting chance for recovery. Throughout his life a fighting chance was all that he demanded. By his misconduct as an officer he had brought the disaster on himself. He had overstaid his leave of absence. He had refused to return when summoned to his command. His disobedience was rank.

Busy among the Jacobins of the Corsican towns, Napoleon had heeded not the repeated orders to return to Valence. Getting himself chosen, first major, and then lieutenant-colonel in the alleged National Guards, he had undertaken to get possession of the citadel of Ajaccio, and had failed. His leadership, like a rod of glass, broke to fragments in his hands. He and the whole Bonaparte family were discountenanced, and he was glad to get away—being careful to carry with him a military record which he himself had prepared and the colonel of the Second Battalion had signed, showing his patriotic military services and his rank as an officer. With this he would regain his lost position in the French army.



NAPOLEON BY WHEELER.

At Valence, there was still much in Napoleon's favor. The royal army was literally going to pieces. The organization of the National Guard in various parts of the kingdom had drawn off many of the officers and infected many more with the disease of patriotism. The colonel of the Fourth Regiment was an old royalist who had gladly cut off the Jacobin Bonaparte from his command. It was useless for the latter to return to Valence, hoping to be reinstated at such a court. He therefore made all speed for Paris, where he would have a hearing before the minister of war.

By the summer of 1792 the roaring winds of revolution were shaking not only the pinnacles, but the very foundations, of French civilization. The old order was already in ruins. Paris was in an uproar. The King and court had been obliged in the preceding autumn to leave Versailles and come, in the most remarkable procession of history, to Paris. The starving populace had gone out to the royal palace, invaded it, hooted around it, drawn forth the King and Queen and their ill fated scion, and had hurried them off into the city, dancing about them en route and shouting in wild jocularity that now they had the baker and the bakeress and the baker's little boy! All this wreck of royalty and nobility heaped itself up in the Tuileries, out of which the ancient monarchy of the Bourbons looked with wan face at the weltering world. The National Convention went on and on, demolishing and reforming, destroying and remorselessly casting out the old institutions of France, and in lieu thereof making a new Constitution out of philosophy and paper!

It was to this Paris that Napoleon came, with a billet of dismissal and a petition for reinstatement. One war minister after another, to the number of six, had now filled the important office before which Bonaparte stood a petitioner for rehearing. The new minister was a Nationalist and favorably disposed towards the Corsican adventurer; for the latter came with a haggard revolutionary face and long hair hanging to his shoulders. There was delay in the office; and Bonaparte, with his former schoolfellow and future secretary, Bourrienne, was well nigh starving in the streets.

To add to his distress, the Royal School for Girls at Saint Cyr, under the immediate patronage of Marie Antoinette, went to pieces, like other existing things; and Elise Bonaparte was turned adrift with no friend in France except her sullen brother. To the credit of the latter, he clung to his sister, and presently took advantage of her presence to get another leave of absence, "in order to conduct her home." But he did not do so until his cause in the war-office had, on the 30th of August, been decided in his favor. He was exonerated, restored to rank, promoted to a captaincy, and to crown all the new commission was dated back to the preceding February.

This was a great victory for the man of destiny. He was Captain Bonaparte. Taking Elise by the hand, he sped away to Lyons and Valence—where he paused to be seen in his new regimentals—and then to Marseilles and Corsica. His return brought together at Ajaccio all the members of the family of Bonaparte. He left behind in Paris the Countess Josephine de Beauharnais, aged twenty-nine. And yonder at Vienna, in her Hapsburg cradle, nine months old, lies the girl-babe Marie Louise. These two shall have relations with history in the next two decades! As for King Louis, he goes down the steps, with ever-accelerated pace, from the Temple prison to the guillotine.

France had now become an ocean of molten brass, seething, bubbling, breaking along the billows into flames of lurid light. The Revolution was coming to its crisis. Hunger and despair in the hearts of men had done their perfect work. War was on with Prussia and Austria and England. The emigrant nobility across the borders was in league with the enemies of the French nation. Then sedition had sprung up, an infuriated tigress, and was in henceforth to unloose! There was intrigue between the dying court and the Emigres beyond the Rhine. It was now or never. The Terror came on; tholeons were flashing; the streets were slippery with red; the axe went always up and down in the Place de la Revolution; the day of death and extermination was at hand.

This condition of affairs in the ancient kingdom of the Bourbons brought the revolutionists of France and those of Corsica into closest sympathy; for Jacobinism is universal. It is simply insanity in incarnation. Whether it be in France, in Germany, in Italy, in the Mediterranean islands, in England, or the party-cursed cities of the United States, it is all the same. The only question with Bonaparte now was whether his destiny might be better attained by the leadership of the Corsican revolutionists or by allying himself with the Jacobins of Paris.

With skillful duplicity he did both. Corsica, on his return, was in a ferment. The popular party was at one with the French democrats. The National Convention passed a decree that the exiled Corsican patriots might return. Paoli went home by way of Paris, where he was recognized as a hero and made lieutenant-general and military governor of his native island. France was divided into departments, and Corsica was declared to be one of them.

Meanwhile, the world was turned upside down. The Convention had taken the autumnal equinox of 1792 as the date of a new era for mankind. It was an epoch of universal abolition. The marvelous thing was that while the old expired under the stroke of the destroyer's wand, the new did not spring up in its place. The King was brought to trial and death. The proud daughter of Theresa went swiftly after her lord.

Moderate patriots throughout France and the world were alarmed and angered. Washington would follow Liberty no further. Paoli, establishing himself at Corte, stood for moderation. He was too old and conservative to be rebaptized in the muddy waters of Jacobinism. But Captain Bonaparte at Ajaccio was not of such mind and kind. He found himself at this juncture on two military steeds, both going in the same direction, but at different rates of speed. He had never resigned his commission as colonel in the Corsican National Guards; but he now held a commission as captain in the French army, and was receiving pay from the national treasury. His captaincy and his colonelcy did not consist. He temporized and intrigued with the revolutionists during the winter of 1792-93; had an interview with Paoli at Corte; departed without satisfaction; broke with the governor, who ceased to be a hero in his eyes; made a conspiracy to invade Sardinia; tried to obtain an independent command; fell under condemnation of the Paolists, and in June of 1793, was obliged to leave Corsica with all the family of Bonaparte.

Napoleon arrived at Nice on the 13th of June, and there rejoined his company. The Fourth Regiment, to which he belonged, had been transferred to the extreme southeast, as a protection against the menaces of the world along that threatened coast. The whole valley of the Rhone was aflame with the Revolution. Horror on horror had been heaped throughout France. In Paris the royal family had been done to death; but on the frontier the French republican armies of Custine and Kellerman, the one at Frankfort and the other at Valmy, after brave battles, had been pressed back from the border. Only that of Dumouriez had triumphed over the Austrians, on the bloody field of Jemmapes, establishing a line of defenses as far as Liege in Belgium and the river Scheldt.

Meanwhile, after the execution of the King, the allied powers of Europe pledged themselves to exterminate the new French Republic—Terror and all—from the face of the earth. It was a thing easily promised, but difficult to accomplish! The duke of Brunswick, notwithstanding his famous proclamation against the French and the liberties of mankind, found it so to his sorrow. England having joined the coalition against the enraged Republic, the latter virtually declared war against the world! Into the midst of all this confusion, uproar and insurrection of an infuriated people against kingdoms and principalities, the hair-line of the solitary Corsican captain's life was now drawn—a black mark almost undiscoverable among the sketches and etchings which history was cutting for the future civilization of Europe.

Napoleon became a French Republican soldier. He was a soldier of fortune in a sense more profound than that phrase had ever before conveyed. It must be confessed that the hardships and merciless conditions through which he had passed, bearing with relentless pressure on his tremendous mind—inflamed as it was with unquenchable ambitions—are better calculated to excite the compassion and sympathy of after times to kindle against him that anger and censoriousness which a merely logical consideration of his shortcomings, failures and unprincipled schemes would suggest. The judgment is mitigated in contemplating such a character emerging from obscurity, under the play of complex forces, into the foreground of light and action.

The regiment of Captain Bonaparte constituted a part of the Army of the South, under command of General Carteaux. It was the business of this division of the French national forces to operate for the recovery of Marseilles and Toulon; for these cities were held by the enemies of France. They had fallen into the power of the English fleets, assisted by the local loyalists. The situation was striking. Patriotism was aflame in both the cities; but the representatives of the late monarchy, protected by a foreign power, were not yet down. It was out of Marseilles that, in July of the preceding year, a band of patriots, most unique and strong, had marched to Paris, singing on the way and to the very porches of the Tuileries, that famous war-song which Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle had given to the French nation and to all free men.

So against Marseilles and Toulon, for wresting them from the English and loyalists, the forces of General Carteaux are, on the 9th of October, 1793, divided and sent. Captain Bonaparte's regiment, with others, is directed against Toulon. He is given command of a section of the artillery, and is at last in his element. Now for the first time he is able to direct a battery against the enemy, and to utter that tremendous word, "Fire!" Here and now the cloud of obscurity lifts from the life of this extraordinary character, revealing him to the world as one of the greatest in the annals of mankind.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

A Cage of Lions.

Mrs. Kiddies—Why, children, what's all this noise about?

Little Jamie—We've had gran'pa and Uncle Henry locked in the cupboard for an hour, and when they get a little angrier I'm going to play "going into the lions' den."—Philadelphia Times.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 9, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 200 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a R variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and whatnot. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets looks more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years I ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was P extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by A saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with N the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions S as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice · through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. T Since the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making A them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention B of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by U name outside the medical profession. As patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet L manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the E doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard S medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

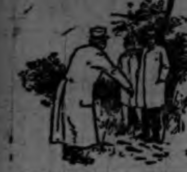
The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have · been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 Spruce St., New York.

MEN WANTED [illegible]

he addressed himself to his examination. "First," he said, glancing up at the branch that was above a yard above his head, "this rope has been here for some time."

"Yes," Mr. Hardwick replied, "it's an old swing rope. Some children used it in the summer, but it got partly cut away, and the odd couple of yards has been hanging since."



"SEE HERE!" CRIED MR. HARDWICK.

"Ah!" said Hewitt, "then if the Fosters did this they were saved some trouble by the chance and were able to take their halter back with them—and so avoid one chance of detection." He very closely scrutinized the top of a tree stump, probably the relic of a tree that had been cut down long before, and then addressed himself to the body. "When you cut it down," he said, "did it fall in a heap?"

"No, my man eased it down to some extent."

"Not on to its face?"

"Oh, no. On to its back, just as it is now." Mr. Hardwick saw that Hewitt was looking at muddy marks on each of the corpse's knees, to one of which a small leaf clung, and at one or two other marks of the same sort on the fore part of the dress. "That seems to show pretty plainly," he said, "that he must have struggled with them and was thrown forward, doesn't it?"

Hewitt did not reply, but gingerly lifted the right arm by its sleeve. "Is either of the brothers Foster left-handed?" he asked.

"No, I think not. Here, Barrett, you have seen plenty of their doings—cricket, shooting and so on—do you remember if either is left-handed?"

"Nayther, sir," Mr. Hardwick's man answered. "Both on 'em's right-handed."

Hewitt lifted the lapel of the coat and attentively regarded a small rent in it. The dead man's hat lay near, and after a few glances at that Hewitt dropped it and turned his attention to the hair. This was coarse and dark and long, and brushed straight back with no parting.

"This doesn't look very symmetrical, does it?" Hewitt remarked, pointing to the locks over the right ear. They were shorter just there than on the other side, and apparently very clumsily cut, whereas in every other part the hair appeared to be rather well and carefully trimmed. Mr. Hardwick said nothing, but fidgeted a little as though he considered that valuable time was being wasted over irrelevant trivialities.

Presently, however, he spoke. "There is very little to be learned from the body, is there?" he said. "I think I'm quite justified in ordering their arrest, eh? Indeed I've wasted too much time already."

Hewitt was groping about among some bushes behind the tree from which the corpse had been taken. When he answered he said: "I don't think I should do anything of the sort just now, Mr. Harwick. As a matter of fact, I fancy,"—this word with an emphasis—"that the brothers Foster may not have seen this man Sneathy at all to-day."

CHAPTER III.

"Not seen him? Why my dear sir, there's no question of it. It's certain absolutely. The evidence is positive. The fact of the threats and of the body being found treated so is pretty well enough, I should think. But that's nothing — look at those footmarks. They've walked along with him, one each side, without a possible doubt; plainly they were the last people with him in any case. And you don't mean to ask anybody to believe that the dead man, even if he hanged himself, cut off his own hand first. Even if you do, where's the hand? And even putting aside all these considerations, such a complete case in itself, the Fosters must at least have seen the body as they came past, and yet nothing has been heard of them yet. Why didn't they spread the alarm? They went straight away in the opposite direction from home—there are their footmarks, which you've not seen yet, beyond the gravel."

Hewitt stepped over to where the patch of clean gravel ceased, at the opposite side to that from which we had approached the brook, and there, sure enough, were the now familiar footmarks of the brothers leading away from the scene of Sneathy's end.

"Yes," Hewitt said; "I see them. Of course, Mr. Hardwick, you'll do what seems right in your own eyes, and in any case not much harm will be done by the arrest beyond a terrible fright for that unfortunate family. Nevertheless, if you care for my impression it is, as I have said, that the Fosters have not seen Sneathy to-day."

"But what about the hand?"

"As to that I have a conjecture, but as yet it is only a conjecture, and if I told it you would probably call it absurd—certainly you'd disregard it, and perhaps quite excusably. The case is a complicated one, and if there is anything at all in my conjecture, one of the most remarkable I have ever had to do with. It interests me intensely, and I shall devote a little time to following up the theory I have formed. You have, I suppose, already communicated with the police?"

"I wired to Shopperton at once as soon as I heard of the matter. It's a twelve-mile drive, but I wonder the police have not arrived yet. They can't be long. I don't know where the village constable has got to, but in any case he wouldn't be much good. But as to your idea that the Fosters can't be suspected—well, nobody could respect your opinion, Mr. Hewitt, more than myself, but, really—just think. The notion's impossible—fifty-fold impossible. As soon as the police arrive I shall have that trail followed and the Fosters apprehended. I should be a fool if I didn't."

"Very well, Mr. Hardwick," Hewitt replied, "you'll do what you consider your duty of course, and quite properly. Though I would recommend you to take another look at those three trails in the path. I shall take a look in this direction." And he turned up by the side of the streamlet, keeping on the gravel at its side.

I followed. We climbed the rising ground and presently among the trees came to the place where the little rill emerged from the broken ground in the highest part of the wood. Here the clean gravel ceased and there was a large patch of wet clayey ground. Several marks left by the feet of cattle were there, and one or two human footmarks. Two of these (a pair), the newest and the most distinct, Hewitt studied carefully, and measured in each direction.

"Notice these marks," he said. "They may be of importance or they may not—that we shall see. Fortunately they are very distinctive—the right foot is a badly worn one, and a small tag of leather, where the sole is damaged, is doubled over and trodden into the soft earth. Nothing could be luckier. Clearly they are the most recent footsteps in this direction—from the main road, which lies right ahead, through the rest of the wood."

"Then you think somebody else has been on the scene of the tragedy, beside the victim and the brothers?" I said.

"Yes, I do. But hark; there is a vehicle in the road. Can you see between the trees? Yes, it is the police cart. We shall be able to report its arrival to Mr. Hardwick as we go down."

We turned and walked rapidly down the incline to where we came from. Mr. Hardwick and his man were still there, and another rustic had arrived to gape. We told Mr. Hardwick that he might expect the police presently, and proceeded along the gravel skirting the stream, toward the lower part of the wood.

Here Hewitt proceeded very cautiously, keeping a sharp lookout on either side for footprints on the neighboring soft ground. There were none, however, for the gravel margin of the stream made a sort of footpath of itself, and the trees and undergrowth were close and thick on each side. At the bottom we emerged from the wood on a small piece of open ground skirting a lane, and here, just by the side of the lane where the stream fell into a trench, Hewitt suddenly pounced on another footmark. He was unusually excited.

"See," he said, "here it is—the right foot with its broken leather, and the corresponding left foot on the damp edge of the lane itself. He—the man with the broken shoe—has walked on the hard gravel all the way down from the source of the stream, and his is the only trail unaccounted for near the body. Come, Brett, we've an adventure on foot. Do you care to let your uncle's dinner go by the board, and follow?"

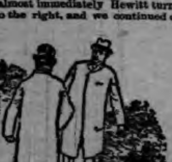
"Can't we go back and tell him?"

"No—there's no time to lose, we must follow up this man—or at least I must. You go or stay, of course, as you think best."

I hesitated a moment, picturing to myself the excellent colonel as he would appear after waiting dinner an hour or two for us, and decided to go. "At any rate," I said, "if the way lies along the roads we shall probably meet somebody going in the direction of Ratherby. But what is your theory? I don't understand at all. I must say everything Hardwick said seemed to me to be beyond question. There were the tracks to prove that the three had walked together to the spot and that the brothers had gone on alone, and every other circumstance pointed the same way. Then, what possible motive could anybody else about here have for such a crime, unless, indeed, it were one of the people defrauded by Sneathy's late companies."

"The motive," said Hewitt, "is, I fancy, almost extraordinary—indeed a weird one; a thing as of centuries ago. Ask me no questions; I think you will be a little surprised before very long. But come, we must move." And we wended our pace along the lane.

The lane, by the bye, was hard and firm, with scarcely a spot where a track might be left except in places at the sides, and at these places Hewitt never gave a glance. At the end the lane turned into a by-road, and at the turning Hewitt stopped and scrutinized the ground closely. There was nothing like a recognizable footmark to be seen, but almost immediately Hewitt turned off to the right, and we continued our brisk march without a glance at the road.



"SEE," HE SAID, "HERE IT IS."

"How did you judge which way to turn then?" I asked.

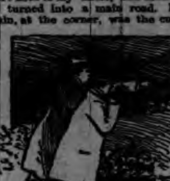
"Didn't you see?" replied Hewitt. "I'll show you at the next turning."

Half a mile further on the road forked, and here Hewitt stopped and pointed silently to a couple of small twigs, placed crosswise, with the longer twig of the two pointing down the branch of the road to the left. We took the branch to the left and went on.

"Our man's making a mistake," Hewitt observed. "He leaves his friends' messages lying about for his enemies to read."

We hurried forward with scarcely a word. I was almost too bewildered by what Hewitt had said and done to formulate anything like a reasonable guess as to what our expedition tended, or even to make an effective inquiry—though after what Hewitt had said I knew that would be useless. Who was this mysterious man with the broken shoe, what had he to do with the murder of Sneathy, what did the mutilation mean, and who were his friends who left him signs and messages by means of crossed twigs?

We met a man, by whom I sent a short note to my uncle, and soon after we turned into a main road. Here, again, at the corner, was the curious message of twigs. A cart wheel had passed over and crushed them, but it had not so far displaced them as to cause any doubt that the direction to take was to the right. At an inn a little further along we entered and Hewitt bought a pint of Irish whisky and a flat bottle to hold it in, as well as a loaf of bread and some cheese, which we carried away wrapped in paper.



HE POINTED AHEAD.

"This will have to do for our dinner," Hewitt said, as we emerged.

"But we're not going to drink a pint of common whisky between us?" I asked, in some astonishment.

"Never mind," Hewitt answered, with a smile. "Perhaps we'll find somebody to help us—somebody not so fastidious as yourself as to quality."

Now we hurried—hurried more than ever, for it was beginning to get dusk and Hewitt feared a difficulty in finding and reading the twig signs in the dusk. Two more turnings we made each with its silent direction — the crossed twigs. To me there was something almost weird and creepy in this curious hunt for the invisible and incomprehensible, guided faithfully and persistently at every turn by this now unmistakable signal. After the second turning we broke into a trot along a long, winding lane, but presently Hewitt's hand fell on my shoulder and we stopped. He pointed ahead, where some large object, round a bend of the hedge, was illuminated as though by a light from below.

"We will walk now," Hewitt said. "Remember that we are on a walking tour, and have come along here entirely by accident."

We proceeded at a swinging walk, Hewitt whistling gayly. Soon we turned the bend and I saw that the large object was a traveling van, drawn up with two others on a space of grass by the side of the lane. It was a gypsy encampment, the caravan having apparently only lately stopped, for a man was still engaged in tugging at the rope of a tent that stood near the vans. Two or three sullen-looking ruffians lay about a fire which burned in the space left in the middle of the encampment. A woman stood at the door of one van with a large kettle in her hand, and at the foot of the steps below her a more pleasant-looking old man sat on an inverted pail. Hewitt swung toward the fire from the road, and with an indescribable mixture of slouch, bow and smile addressed the company generally with "Kooshto bock, pals!"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

—The annual meeting and election of the Monday Afternoon Club will take place May 6.

—A new borough dog-catcher will soon go on duty. The former official, Jacob Bergen, is now a resident of Coombs's Alley, Newark.

—Daily Press readers will be pleased with the display of cards, booklets and pictures suitable for Easter to be found at [illegible], East Front street. Never have the designs been more artistic, or more reasonable in price.

PAINT cracks.—It often costs more to prepare a house for repainting that has been painted in the first place with cheap ready-mixed paints, than it would to have painted it twice with strictly pure white lead, ground in pure linseed oil.

Strictly Pure

White Lead

forms a permanent base for repainting and never has to be burned or scraped off on account of scaling or cracking. It is always smooth and clean. To be sure of getting strictly pure white lead, purchase any of the following brands:

"Atlantic," "Jewett,"

"Brooklyn."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free; it will probably save you a good many dollars.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

MET A 'GATOR GOING TO A PARTY.

An Un-expected Use for a Florida Negro's Razor and Revolver.

It is impossible to know just what feeling the alligator entertains toward the negro, but the feeling of the negro toward the alligator is not akin to love. When a colored man sees an alligator his blood boils and the alligator must look out for himself. At certain seasons, when the alligators are mating, the males go across country from one body of water to another, and it is not uncommon to come across them during such migrations. When alligators are near water and are surprised by the approach of a man they will run for the water, and run fast, too; but when surprised inland they simply play 'possum and many are killed at such times.

A colored man takes particular delight when he has a chance to make away with an alligator, and will leave his work or stop on his way to a camp meeting for the purpose. In the recent cold snap, when the water in the pond was covered with about an inch of ice, an alligator was unfortunate enough to be caught at an unusual disadvantage. It was a very large alligator, with moss on his chin for whiskers, and he had been lying in a deep part of a wide shallow stream just where a road crossed. Persons traveling the road with horses forded the stream, and for those afoot trees had been felled and made into a kind of foot bridge. The alligator was not less than twelve feet long. When the cold came, and with it the ice, the alligator became benumbed. He was in full view when a colored man walked across the fallen trees.

The man was dressed up in his best. He had on a white shirt, a high collar, shiny shoes and everything to match, and was in a hurry to get to a neighbor's where there was to be a dance. He had taken the precaution of bringing along a pistol and a razor.

It was about 2 o'clock P. M. when he saw the alligator lying under the ice just a few yards from the crossing place. The party was for the time forgotten. He knew the alligator would be benumbed and at a disadvantage. With a stick he broke the ice over the alligator's head and fired a couple of shots, both of which were effective. The big alligator warmed up and made a move toward the darky, who by this time was wading in the shallow water, shiny shoes and all. The revolver was emptied, every shot taking effect, and with five 32-calibre bullets in his head the alligator did not cut much of a figure in the fight, and became quiet as if dying.

The man had his fighting blood up and he knew that it was hard to kill an alligator. He threw off his coat and began pounding the alligator's head with a big club. After pounding like a wild man for a few minutes the man took a rest. The alligator showing no signs of fighting, or, in fact, of life, the colored man dragged him out of the water and by means of the razor almost severed the head from the body. He then jammed a big stick into the alligator's mouth. Then the darky with wet feet, his natty appearance ruined by dirt and water, gathered up his coat and hat and continued his journey to the party. The writer witnessed the whole performance, and never saw a man work harder and with more determination. The darky had met an enemy, it seemed, and he certainly got away with him.

Cooks Who Won't Eat Their Own Dishes.

The fact that cooks rarely have much appetite for the food of their own preparing is illustrated nightly at a well known New York uptown chop house. There may be found the chef and several of the assistant chefs of one of the first hotels in New York. These men can have anything they want from the kitchens in which they are employed free of cost. The greatest luxuries of the market are at their disposal, and furthermore they know that everything is beyond reproach. The kitchens are supplied with all the latest improvements, and are so clean and appetizing that visitors are taken through them. As for the cooking, the fact that many of the best known gourmets of the city have forsaken their old resorts for this one is ample recommendation. Yet the men who are responsible for all this go nightly to a simple chop house where they have to pay the same as other customers for their suppers. The chef gave this explanation:

"When one is constantly surrounded by food stuffs he gets tired of the sight of them. It is so with any other business. It is all right while you are at it, but when your work is done you want to get away from it. We come here to forget our work and to eat things we have not seen or handled."

A Narrow Escape.

The reverend doctor is a "little round, fat, oily man of God," but he is blessed with a brain and a laugh far greater than most men, and he never hesitates to tell a joke, even though it "be one on him." The last time he met the Saunterer he had been having trouble with the steam boiler of his house, and had sent for a plumber to locate the difficulty.

"The plumber came," said the doctor, "and proved to be a burly Irishman, twinkling all over from the sole of his feet to the top of his carrot pate. I sent him downstairs and in my study, just over the boiler, by the way, awaited the result of his investigations. In about ten minutes he reappeared, looking somewhat disturbed.

"'Is this the place where ye sits and wroites?' said he.

"'It is,' said I.

"'Then,' said he, 'ye may thank God ye wasn't blown to hell.'

"And," concluded the doctor, "I told him I agreed with him in more ways than one."—Boston Budget.

Located.

Mrs. Mulrooney's two hopefuls returning after a day's absence.

Mrs. Mulrooney—Mikie, fwhere bin you?

Mikie—I was nowhere, ma.

Mrs. Mulrooney—And fwhere was you, Jamesey?

Jamesey—I was along wid um.—Judge.

Up With The Times.

Old Hen—No more domestic drudgery for me! I'd have you know that I'm an emancipated hen, I am.

Old Rooster—You still lay eggs.

Old Hen—Yes; but they are hatched in an incubator.—N. Y. Weekly.

He Was Mean to Tell of It.

"I came up behind her and kissed her on the cheek, and what do you think she did?"

"Slapped your face."

"Oh, dear, no. But she said it was not right; so she gave me her right cheek to kiss."—Boston Transcript.

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

NEWARK, N. J.

—THE—

JAFFRAY STOCK,

(From which we were among the earliest purchasers) now being disposed of in order to close up the business of the concern.

Will Be Placed on Sale This Week.

E. S. Jaffray & Co., whose great warerooms at Leonard street and Broadway, New York, were known to every retail merchant in America, were among the largest [illegible] in the world. The business is now in the hands of a receiver, and it being his aim to turn the goods into money by the shortest possible time,

Cash Absolutely Rules the Day,

and cash purchasers are given every price advantage. Our purchases for cash from the Jaffray stock contained only the most desirable and seasonable goods. We place them on sale tomorrow at Half and Three-quarter Wholesale Cost.

It is a not-to-be-missed opportunity, for a similar one may not be given again in a generation.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,

147 and 149 Market Street,

Near Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

DECLARED TO BE A FRAUD.

So Called Newspaper Laws That Have No Existence.

Judge Thomas, Assistant Attorney-General for the Post Office Department, has received inquiries from persons all over the country in regard to the so-called "newspaper laws," which he recently declared had no existence in fact. He has rendered two opinions relative to them and forwarded them in the form of letters, one to an editor of a Boston journal and the other to an attorney of a so called collection agency. In the first letter he summarizes the alleged "newspaper laws" as follows:

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to renew their subscription.
2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until all the arrearages have been paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the post office to which they are directed, they are responsible until they have settled their bills and ordered them discontinued.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publishers and the papers are sent to the former address they are held responsible.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Commenting upon these alleged provisions of law, Judge Thomas says:

"There are no such laws as these enacted by Congress or established by the Postmaster-General, and I hold that when a publisher duns a party for the price of his paper, accompanied by a threat to enforce the law if his demand is not met, he is guilty of an attempt to obtain money under false pretenses, if he knows these laws have no existence as laws, and if he knows the sum demanded is not due. The only Federal statute on this subject is section 3,885, Revised Statutes, which reads as follows. ☛

Postmasters shall notify the publishers of any newspaper or any other periodical when any subscriber shall refuse to take the same from the office, or neglect to call for it for the period of one month.

"I doubt not that the publishers of newspapers lose a great deal of money that is legally and equitably due them from subscribers, but I cannot believe that they will threaten to enforce against delinquent subscribers what purport to be laws of the most stringent kind, when they are informed that there are no such laws. The relation between the publisher of a newspaper and a subscriber is that of a contract, and the same rules of law apply in that case as apply in other business transactions between man and man."

He Was Not Guilty.

In connection with the theft of goods from Mrs. Robinson's, it was stated that Oscar Allen took a grip and overcoat from Mrs. Neighbour's. Arch Allen says he is the Allen referred to, that the grip he took was his, and that he returned the overcoat, which he had borrowed from Phil Daly.

—The case of James E Totten against F. W. Rand, on contract, has been settled. Harry C. Runyon represented the plaintiff and H. H. Swackhamer the defendant.

My Baby

was a living skeleton; the doctor said he was dying of Marasmus and Indigestion. At 13 months he weighed only seven pounds. Nothing strengthened or fattened him. I began using Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, feeding it to him and rubbing it into his body. He began to fatten and is now a beautiful dimpled boy. The Emulsion seemed to supply the one thing needful.

MRS. KENYON WILLIAMS,

May 21, 1894. Cave Springs, Ga.

Similar letters from other mothers.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

Scott & Bowne, N.Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

—Bound to keep his pharmacy equipped with all the latest improvements, H. P. Reynolds has put an elegant new ice-cream preserver in his soda-water department. It is an ornament as well as a convenience in dispensing his famous ice-cream soda.

—Meat grows dearer every day. The prices are higher now than in twenty-three years. The Chicago packers say it is all owing to a short corn crop and that no relief can come until July 1. The jobbers, however, say it is the result of a combination of the big houses.

—George J. Tobin of North avenue has secured the control for Plainfield of the Adamantine porcelain-lined bath tub, which is one of the best in the market. The tub has been tested to 17 pounds, thrown at a distance of from 10 to 15 feet, and is absolutely unbreakable. Those thinking of putting in enamel bath tubs should examine this one, which is on exhibition at the store, and a test will be made to satisfy anyone.

DEATHS.

COVERT—In this city, April 9, 1895, Maria, widow of Albert Covert.
Funeral from the residence of her son-in-law, George W. [illegible], [illegible] Somerset street, Thursday April 11, 1895 at 2:30 p. m. Interment in Methodist cemetery.

HOWLAND—Passed away at Orange, N. J., Tuesday, April 9, Miss Henrietta Howland, in her 26th year, formerly of Plainfield.

HANFORD—Suddenly, April 10 1895, at the residence of her brother-in-law, Robert [illegible] Miller, Sarah C., daughter of the late Philander and Elizabeth Hoyt Hanford of New York city.

CADMUS—In this city, Tuesday, April 2, Mrs Christiana, widow of the late Jasper Cadmus in he 83rd year.
Funeral in Grace Episcopal Church, Friday, April 5, 1895, at 2 p. m. 4 3 2

VANZANDT—Suddenly in this city, Tuesday, April 2, 1895, Mrs. Elizabeth Van Zandt in her 78th year.
Funeral services from the residence of her son-in-law M. M. Dunham, 319 Arlington avenue, Friday, April 5, at 11:30 a. m. Interment at Somerville. 4 3 2

LONG—In this city Saturday, April 6 1895, Frederick G. Long aged 84 years.
Funeral services from the German Lutheran Church on Grove street and Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, Tuesday, April 9, at 2:30 p. m.

MOTLEY—In this city April 5, 1895, Margaret Motley, aged 3 months.
Funeral from her parents residence 511 Plainfield avenue, Sunday afternoon, April 7, at .
Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

FINNEY—In North Plainfield, Saturday, April 7, 1895, Harry B., eldest son of Thomas H. and Sarah M. Finney, in his 19th year.
Funeral services from Warren Chapel, Chatham street, North Plainfield, Wednesday, April 10, at 2:30 p. m.

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.

Estate of John Jacob Lang, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1895, on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said decedent, under oath or affirmation, and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor should be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG,
Executrix.

2 14 9

HOUSE and building lots for sale in Westfield, N. J., high ground, good neighborhood, convenient to depot. Address box 104 Westfield N. J.

3 24 6-3 28 4 o

Limited Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that a limited partnership has been formed by the subscribers pursuant to an act entitled:

"An act to authorize limited partnership," to be conducted under the firm of D. C. Ivins & Co., for the transaction of the business of merchants at Plainfield, in the county of Union, N. J., DeWitt C. Ivins and William B. Ostrom being the general partners and Edward H. Booth a special partner, and that the amount of capital contributed to the common stock by the said Edward H. Booth is two thousand dollars, ($2,000); which said partnership is to commence on the 2d day of January, 1895 and terminate on the 31st day of December, 1895. 4 4 6

HIGHLY CONCENTRATED

MANURES

ALBERT'S

Horticultural,
Garden,
Special Garden,
Vineyard,
Fruit-tree,

MANURES.

No Sand. No Dirt. No Coprolite Matter. Nothing but Pure, soluble, and immediately Assimilable Plant-foods COMBINED with each other.

Garden Manure: Nitrogen, [illegible] per cent; Available Phos. Acid, [illegible] per cent; Potash, [illegible] per cent.

The others are equally concentrated. Prices and Booklets on request.

ROBT. L. MERWIN & CO., Gen'l Agts., United States

85 Wall Street, New York.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 18, 1895. No 16

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

OBITUARY.

Charles E. Bush.

The death occurred Sunday evening, April 14, in Oneonta, N. Y., of Charles E. Bush, formerly of this city. He was a young man of more than ordinary worth. When a boy he engaged with Professor Mapes of New York in the chemical and fertilizing business. From a moderate salary he saved money to establish himself in the coal business in Plainfield, which he put in charge of his father, who years ago lost all his property. He continued with Mapes & Co. until about two years ago, when he became the manager and proprietor of the Oneonta Chemical and Fertilizer Co., New York, with fair prospects. During this time he assisted, supported, and at their death buried a sister, his invalid mother, and his father. About four weeks ago he was taken with a severe attack of grip. He recovered, was at his office, and even to the factory. About a week ago he had a relapse, pneumonia developed, and he died Sunday evening.

He married the daughter of D. F. Randolph of 501 West Seventh street, whom he leaves with one child.

His body will be taken to Bound Brook for burial Wednesday afternoon at 2:30; there will be a short burial service.

Going Out Into the Highways.

The Salvation Army held their second Sunday open-air meeting near Justice Nash's office on Park avenue yesterday afternoon, and attracted quite an audience by their earnest efforts. A gang of hoodlums stood on the Central tracks and endeavored to cause a disturbance by yelling profane and indecent remarks at them, but with their unostentatious ways the Salvationists paid little attention to the toughs.

In the Casino Monday Night.

When someone in conversation with Thackeray was praising the courtly grace and dignity of "Col. Newcome", the creator of that much-admired character replied: "I love the dear old Colonel, and I am glad the public seems to, but after all 'Dan'l Peggotty' is the finer gentleman."

Making no pretense to gentility, the sterling character of the rough, tender-hearted old fisherman in "David Copperfield" gives him a higher rank than courtiers have. This is the character Mr. Underhill most admires in the story, and he invests him with an almost living personality.

Complaints of High Prices.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Hearing so much about the low prices for coal, lumber and mason materials at Metuchen, I drove over and investigated. I was amazed at what I learned. Hard Lehigh coal is delivered anywhere in the town for $4.50 a ton; lumber from two to six dollars a thousand feet cheaper than here; and other things in proportion.

How can we buy at home when we are so greatly overcharged? The combine is killing the goose that laid the golden egg.

MECHANIC.

Surprised.

A surprise party arranged by Mrs. A. B. Moore was given to Peter Van Fleet at his home on East Third street last evening. The company met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Rugg on East Second street. The affair was a complete surprise in every respect. The evening was pleasantly passed with games and music, after which refreshments were served. There were about fifteen present.

7½c

a pound for bread is four times as dear
as 15 cents a package for

H-O Hornby's Oatmeal

Steam
Cooked
That's Why

H-O [Hornby's Oatmeal] Company, N. Y.

THE MERRY DANCE.

The Season of Spring Festivities Ushered in by Plainfield Society.

The lenten mantle was thrown aside last night, and the social season was ushered in with balls, parties, entertainments and other events that give evidence that the time of penance is past.

In T. A. B. Hall on West Fourth street a jolly party of young people attended the dance of the Emerald Beneficial Association, a society of young men who conduct their affairs with a dash and completeness that always affords their guests a pleasant time. About two hundred were present, and they danced to the music of O'Rielly's orchestra until the small hours of this morning. The officers of the association are: President—W O White; treasurer—D J McNamee; secretary—J C Carney. The committee of arrangements for the ball consisted of W O White, P O'Keeffe, E Kelly, P Cullen and D J McNamee. The floor manager was P O'Keeffe.

Another social event that provided an evening of pleasure for those who attended was the dance of the Rescue Circle in Red Men's Hall. About 60 were present. The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Carty. The reception committee was composed of G. T. Schoelein and P C Plimm. The floor manager was J. T. Carty, with W. A. Boe as assistant. During intermission supper was served by the Circle.

Much amusement was provided those who attended the entertainment given in the Saengerbund hall last night, by listening to the following programme: Overture, orchestra; song, Gesang section choir, under the direction of R. Schroeder; zither and violin duet, M. Schoettlin and R. Schroeder; baritone solo, Charles Dresselt; gymnastic exercise, Turn section, under direction of Charles Meyer; zither and violin duet, R. Schroeder and M. Schoettlin; song, Gesang section; sketch, Charles Dresselt, H. Meyer and P. Postier. At the conclusion of the programme dancing was enjoyed.

Loan Association Officers.

The annual election of the Home Building and Loan Association last night resulted as follows:

President—Isaac W Rushmore; vice-president—Warren F Bartlett; secretary—S R Struthers; treasurer—W F Arnold; attorney—W M Stillman; directors—S B Joseph, G E Stillman, F A Dunham, H E Gayle, all for three years. auditor—D M Runyon.

The fifteenth series was inaugurated and started with a subscription of 325 shares.

The directors holding over are: W H Sampson, L M Finch, W A Freeman and C H Rugg to serve one year longer; H C Nomer, C E Apgar, George Griffin and W T Kirk to serve two years.

The fifteenth series met with more liberal subscriptions than any other series for two years past. The taking of 322 shares is within 15 shares of the first month's subscription to the series commenced April, 1893.

$6,000 was sold on two loans at low premiums. The income of the association from dues and interest is nearly $4,000 monthly, thus offering ample accommodation to those desiring to use their money.

Their Second Birthday.

The Ladies Orchestra, which includes members from Bound Brook, Dunellen, New Market, and Plainfield, were entertained last evening by Miss Emma Nelson at her home in New Market, in celebration of the second anniversary of the organization. The rooms were beautified by a choice arrangement of potted plants and cut flowers, and the club's colors, white and yellow, were prominent. A feature of the evening was a pleasing programme of music, which was followed by dancing. A very fine collation was served, after which all joined in singing familiar songs.

Thursday evening, May 9, the club will give an entertainment in Friendship Hall, New Market.

Train Trespassers.

James Emerson and Charles Leonard were arrested at Fanwood yesterday by Jersey Central detectives for stealing a ride on the the cars. When arraigned before Justice Nash sentence was suspended on Leonard, while Emerson, who was one of the gang of tramps sent to the county jail by City Judge Codington March 8, was sent there for another 30 days.

Our better halves say they could not keep house without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is used in more than half the homes in Leeds. Sims Bros., Leeds, Iowa. This shows the esteem in which that remedy is held where it has been sold for years and is well known. Mothers have learned that there is nothing so good for colds, croup and whooping cough, that it cures these ailments quickly and permanently, and that it is pleasant and safe for children to take. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

EASTER ELECTIONS.

Church of the Redeemer.

The first annual parish meeting of the Church of the Redeemer was held last night. It was presided over by Rev. Jocelyn Johnson as chairman and A. E. Faber, Jr., as secretary. The following were the officers elected: Wardens—George P. Dupee, J. A. Alexander; Vestrymen—A. E. Faber, Jr., H. B. Philips, G. T. Rhoads, F. A. Audsley, Thomas Loyd; Delegates to the convention—Geo. P. Dupee, J. A. Alexander, H. B. Philips; Alternates—A. E. Faber, Jr., G. T. Rhoads, F. S. Brown.

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand over the current expenses and a contingent fund of $600. For charitable purposes $500 was expended, which is an excellent showing, considering the fact that the society has only been organized nine months. Starting with 61 communicants, it now has 109.

At the close of the meeting votes of thanks were extended to the women for their work about the altar; for the ecclesiastical and symbolical work of the Messrs. Audsley, and to the rector for his constant and efficient work in building the society to greater strength and success.

Holy Cross Church.

At the annual parish meeting of Holy Cross Church last night the following church officers were elected: Wardens—J. H. Carman, M. D., and Benjamin R. Western; Vestrymen—Robert S. Miller, Harry Bartling, Horsley Barker, Arthur T. Gallup, and William A. Westphal; Delegates to Diocesan Convention—Benjamin R. Western, Joseph R. Hall, and Clarence L. Murphy; Alternates—William L. Saunders, Thomas E. Warman, and J. Edward Turrill. Appropriate resolutions were passed concerning the death of Joseph B. Platt, and a copy of the same was sent to the family of the decedent and ordered placed on the minutes of the Parish record.

Grace Church.

At the parish meeting held in Grace Church, the following elections were made: Wardens—C P Bull, William E Lowe. Vestrymen — John B Dumont, Howard Fleming, E N Erickson, George M Randall, E L Finch, W B Cook, S A Cruikshank. Deputies to Convention—Messrs Dumont, Lowe and Bull. Alternates—Messrs Fleming, Randall and Cruikshank.

Wouldn't Let Him In.

John Lacey, a machinist employed in the Scott Printing Machine Works, was arrested this morning on a warrant issued by Justice Nash charging him with breaking in and entering the house of Mrs. Jewett Scott on Richmond street. Lacey formerly boarded with Mrs. Scott, but owing to his having been on a drunk she refused him admittance this morning. Then he broke open the door, and, Mrs. Scott claims, assaulted her by striking her a blow in the face. The woman screamed and John Maier who owns a meat market next door, and a man by the name of Hoffman, rushed to the scene. A gentleman passing on the opposite side of the street says that the two men grabbed Lacey and threw him out of the house, and they fell upon him in the yard and brutally beat and kicked him. After he had been almost knocked into insensibility the pair threw him into Maier's delivery wagon, and while one held him down the other drove to the police station, where the arrest was made. City Physician Simpson was obliged to go to the police station this noon and dress the injuries Lacey had received from the pummeling he had undergone. Justice Nash held him in $100 bail for appearance before the grand jury.

Plainfield Knights at the Head.

A preliminary meeting to organize a K. of P. lodge will be held in Westfield Thursday evening, April 18. Grand Chancellor Donath and Deputy Grand Chancellor Stevens have the matter in charge. Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, of this city, will attend in command of Capt. Flannery. A parade of the principal streets will take place before the meeting. The Westfield Fife and Drum Corps will head the procession.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞Sold by druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.

AWOKE IN SMOKE.

Narrow Escape of E. P. Thorn and Wife from Death.

THEIR CELLAR CEILING WAS AFIRE.

Had Only Time to Seize Their Clothes and Run—Firemen Made a Quick Response to the Midnight Call, and Saved the House.

Mrs. George Thatcher and her daughter Mamie called on Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Thorn at their home, 132 East Front street, yesterday afternoon, and towards evening Mrs. Thatcher went home leaving her daughter at Mr. and Mrs. Thorn's house. They promised to take her home early in the evening, and did so. They returned to their home about 9:30, and after Mr. Thorn had looked about the place to see that everything was all right, he and his wife retired, about 10 o'clock.

It was nearly 12 when Mr. Thorn was awakened with a choking sensation, and at once realized that there was fire in the house. He called Mrs. Thorn, who was naturally greatly frightened.

The house was filled with suffocating smoke, and they had barely time to seize their clothes and run to the back stoop, where they dressed.

Their cries for help aroused William Rockwell, Jr., who went to Mr. Bond's house, secured a fire-alarm key, and sent in a call from Box 16, about 12:15.

Hose wagons 1 and 2, No. 2 engine, and the truck. responded very quickly. The firemen found that the floor beams in the cellar were afire, and that the flames were under good headway, but the careful and excellent work of the department kept the fire below the first floor.

Mr. Thorn does not know how to account for the fire, but is inclined to believe it was caused by a leakage in gas. He says there was very little fire in the furnace. When Mr. and Mrs. Thorn awoke, they were almost suffocated with gas and smoke, and Mr. Thorn says that if they had not detected the fire as quickly as they did, both he and his wife would probably have choked to death.

The loss, Mr. Thorn was unable to determine, this morning. He has $2,500 insurance on the house and $3,000 on the furniture, issued by several companies of which J. C. Pope is the agent.

Plainfield's Dandy Fire Department.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: It was my good fortune to be very near the ground on the occasion of the sudden alarm of fire on East Front street late Sunday night. Besides myself, I doubt if there was an individual on the street within 1,500 feet of E. P. Thorn's premises. A young man in very scant attire vigorously manipulated the fire-alarm box on Richmond street, corner of Front, and, observing no evidences of fire, I wondered the cause of his action. In less than four or five minutes one or two hose wagons, steamer, and a truck, came rushing up Second street, up Richmond, and down Front to the house.

The moment they sized up the situation bang went the glass out of the cellar windows, and instantly two heavy streams poured from the opposite hydrant on the rafters and floors. Dense black smoke seemed to pour from every aperture above, and it was with great difficulty the firemen could determine just where was the fire. Finally the upper windows were broken into, and thick columns of black smoke poured out. The moment the house could be entered, streams were directed where they were thoroughly effective.

In conclusion, I desire to bear willing testimony to the remarkable skill and efficiency displayed by those in charge. No set of men ever got to a fire quicker, nor was water thrown to destroy furniture or property needlessly.

There was no boisterous yelling, foul language or disorder, but instead rapid, intelligent and good work, and the men acted like a lot of well bred gentlemen. Such a department is a credit to the city, and the people need not wish for better men. There were lots of axes, but the firemen did not rush around terrifying the owners, chopping, mutilating and wantonly destroying, as is too often the case by swash-bucklers who think they are firemen. Plainfield, with its fine water supply, perfect appointments for fire, and first-rate men can well be proud

A VISITOR.

—Isaac B. Giles of 121 East Fourth street has purchased a Herring safe.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

EASTER RECEPTION.

This Social Gathering a Veritable Tennysonian "Rosebud Garden of Girls".

Easter Monday, with its wealth of budding blossoms and springtime gladness, was a fitting day for a reception like that given by Mrs. E. B. Clark yesterday at her home, 131 Crescent avenue, to introduce her two daughters, Miss Clark and Miss Bertha McCullough Clark. The Easter time was suggested by the effective decoration of massed Easter lilies on the mantle opposite the parlor entrance; and roses, tulips, white lilacs and smilax added their beauty to the scene. Mrs. Clark, the two debutantes, and Mrs. Lokins, the married daughter from Elizabeth, received the guests, assisted by Miss Clark from Germantown, a sister of the host, Mrs Huntington, Mrs Knowland, Miss Williams from Hartford, Miss Hurd from Dover, Miss Middleditch, Miss Vail, Miss Annie Stewart, Miss Shreve, Miss May Shreve, Miss Haviland, Miss Gertrude Haviland, Miss May Bushnell, and Miss Marion Henderson.

The lights, flowers, music, the daintily-gowned girls, moving in and out among the kaleidoscopic groups of women and men, made a beautiful scene; and the gracious hospitality dispensed by the genial host, Mr. Clark, and all interested, made the whole reception one of the most delightful Plainfield society has known.

The dining room was decorated with pink roses, pink-shaded lights, and smilax; the menu was delicious, and the service excellent. Miss Bette and Miss Carrie Betts presided at the table. From 5 till 7 the rooms were crowded with guests, and at 8 the house filled again with young people invited for the dance, with which the brilliant occasion ended

Whist.

Mrs. E. H. Bird of Elm place entertained the whist club of which she is a member, at her home yesterday afternoon. This event, as all previous ones, was most enjoyable, proving a source of much pleasure for those who attended. Mrs. Thiers won first prize, Miss Pelletier second, and Miss Blisch third. Mrs. Sheppard of Elizabeth and Mrs. Drake of Newark were guests of the club yesterday, and assisted in the playing.

Those present were Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. O. M. Ulrich, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Thiers, Mrs. Edward VanWinkle, Mrs. S. W. Clark, Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, Mrs. Albert Demarest, Mrs. J. P. Homan, Mrs. E. H. Bird, Miss Minnie French, Miss Pelletier, Miss Blish, Miss Etta Blish, Mrs. Sheppard of Elizabeth, and Mrs. Drake of Newark.

Mrs. J. P. Homan of East Fifth street will entertain the club at her home April 29.

Post-Lenten Society Event.

A delightful post-lenten social event was the tea given by Miss Nancy Lawson yesterday afternoon from 4 to 7 at her home, corner West Eighth street and Central avenue. The dining room presented a pretty view with two tables, one decorated with pink and one in yellow.

The flowers were dainty and fragrant jonquils, while the parlor wore an aspect of springtide with these flowers displayed about the room. Miss Whiton poured chocolate and Miss Middleditch tea. They were assisted by the Misses Mary Whiton, Gertrude Andrews, Mary Bushnell, Emma Schoonmaker, Emma and Gertrude Haviland. About 75 were present.

The Chamois-Skin Factory.

Two of the capitalists interested in the erection of the chamois-skin factory near Evona avenue, exclusively announced in The Daily Press, were in town this morning, making arrangements for starting the work on the necessary buildings. The plans have been completed, though the contracts have not yet been awarded. One of the buildings will be 400 feet long.

The Whist Trophy.

The Albany Whist Club lost the silver championship trophy of the American Whist League to the Continental Club of New York by six points on Saturday. The Hamilton Club of Philadelphia, from whom the Park Club four won the trophy, will endeavor to regain it again Saturday from the latest winners.

—It is expected that several new members will be voted in by the Board of Governors of the Crescent Wheelmen this evening.

LIQUIDS can't cure Dyspepsia, neither will drastic griping pills of mercury.

Dr. Deane's

Dyspepsia Pills

will and do. You can get a sample sent you, free for the asking, to prove it. They contain no mercury nor opium. If you have dyspepsia, better send for them.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

DUNELLEN.

The Easter service in St. John's Church was simple but appropriate. The singing was unusually fine. "Praise ye the Lord" was sung by Miss Louise Hunt and choir. "Today He's Risen" and "Hail Holy Day of Days" were sung by the choir. The altar was beautifully decorated with choice lilies and roses. The sermon on the Resurrection was well rendered by Rev. Von Bogard.

Miss Laura Quackle is slowly improving from her recent illness.

Joseph Benton spent yesterday with his daughter, Mrs. George Homan, in Elizabeth.

Miss Louisa Zann of New York spent yesterday very pleasantly with Mrs. Elias Milliken.

Miss Humble of Plainfield spent yesterday with her aunt, Mrs. S. Richardson.

Miss Ethel Homan has returned to her home in Elizabeth after spending several days with her aunt, Miss Maud Benton.

Charles Boice, Jr., who left some time ago for Palm Beach, Fla., is now in St. Augustine.

Samuel Dennick is visiting relatives in New York.

Miss Lillian Staats spent Monday with her aunt, Mrs. Charles Staats of Park avenue, Plainfield.

Arthur Giddis has returned from his Staten Island visit.

Mrs. F. J. Chichester of Poughkeepsie is the guest of Mrs. James Craig.

Miss Annie Trimmer has returned to her home after spending a few weeks with her grandma in Califon.

H. H. Webb found a black snake, Sunday, on the mountain back of the town, which measured five feet. He had quite a fight with the reptile before he killed it.

The Board of Education hold their regular monthly meeting tonight.

William G. Helton Council, J. O. U. A. M., visited Friendship Council last night.

Mrs. George Homan of Elizabeth is visiting her sister, Miss Maud Benton.

Miss M. Wade and daughter of Alpine are guests of Mrs. Alfred Nelson.

The pocket-book containing $21 which was lost in Dunellen last Wednesday evening by a young man from Fanwood has been found and returned.

Mrs. S. Buckley of Brooklyn is visiting Mrs. Brakley.

Mrs. A. N. Randolph is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. B. Sproul of Jersey City.

Miss Anna Ludiviei of West Dunellen is visiting friends in Plainfield.

New Jersey's Naval Militia.

Plainfield boys interested in military life will be pleased to know that Wm. C. Boyd of the provisional Battalion of the East, Naval Reserve, is now a member of the recruiting committee. A new division is now forming in Hoboken, and there are a few vacancies in the Second Division at Newark.

The U. S. Government has particularly favored New Jersey in that it loans the State a full-rigged and well-equipped ship.

Captain Green.

Capt. Edwards will hereafter drill the High School Cadet Corps every Thursday morning when the weather permits. The cadets have elected the following: Captain—Volney F Green; first lieutenant—Wilbur F Cornwell; second lieutenant—Edward O Clark; first sergeant—Thomas D Blair; second sergeant—John V Beekman; third sergeant—Carlos C Gallup.

Curiosities of Vision.

A cultured audience of women was present in the Casino yesterday afternoon, when Prof. J. H. Hyslop of Columbia College delivered a lecture on "The Curiosities of Vision". The sense of sight, he said, was early found to be the subject of illusion. His talk was illustrated by chalk drawing in order that his hearers could better understand the technical and scientific ideas and points he made.

A Sewer Trench Cavein.

Joe Joreski, an Italian employed in digging trenches for the sewer contractors, was the victim of a cavein on West Seventh street near Grant avenue this morning at 10. The dirt slid with such force as to make an arch of the protecting side boards, from which the Italian was squeezed about the chest so as to necessitate his removal to the Muhlenberg Hospital. Though no bones were broken, he was injured internally, but just how bad the physicians have not yet determined.

Those who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Koniscn, of Bolan, Worth Co., who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Fort Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine, and to use his own words: "It cured me right up." He also says: A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me, he procured a bottle of it and it cured them up in a week. 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE CHRONICLES OF MARTIN HEWITT

BY ARTHUR MORRISON

THE CASE OF THE MISSING HAND

(Copyright, [illegible], by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

CHAPTER IV.

The men on the ground took no notice, but continued to stare doggedly before them. The man working at the tent looked round quickly for a moment, and the old man on the bucket looked up and nodded.

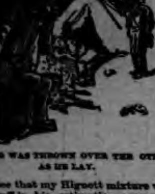
Quick to see the most likely friend, Hewitt at once went up to the old man, extending his hand. "Sarshin doddo," (Good luck, brothers!) he said: "dell mandy tooty's vast." (How do you do, father? Give me your hand.)

The old man smiled and shook hands, though without speaking. Then Hewitt proceeded, producing the flat bottle of whisky: "Tatty for pawny, chals. Dell mandy the pawny and lell pash the tatty." (Spirits for water, lads. Give me the water and take your share of the spirits.)

The whisky did it. We were Romany ryes in twenty minutes or less, and had already been taking tea with the gypsies for half the time. The two or three we had found about the fire were still reserved, but these, I found, were only half gypsies and understood very little Romany. One or two others, however, including the old man, were of purer breed, and talked freely, as did one of the women. They were Lees, they said, and expected to be on Wirksby race course in three days' time. We, too, were pirimengroes or travelers, Hewitt explained, and might look to see them on the course. Then he fell to telling gypsy stories, and they to telling others back, to my intense mystification. Hewitt explained afterwards that they were mostly stories of poaching, with now and again a horse-coping anecdote thrown in. Since then I have learned enough of Romany to take my part in such a conversation, but at the time a word or two here and there was all I could understand. In all this talk the man we had first noticed stretching the tent rope took very little interest, but lay with his head away from the fire, smoking his pipe. He was a much darker man than any other present—had, in fact, the appearance of a man of even a swarthier race than that of the others about us. Presently in the middle of a long and, of course, to me unintelligible story by the old man, I caught Hewitt's eye. He lifted one eyebrow almost imperceptibly, and glanced for a single moment at his walking stick. Then I saw that it was pointed towards the feet of the very dark man who had not yet spoken. One leg was thrown over the other as he lay, with the soles of his shoes presented towardthe fire, and in its glare I saw—that the right sole was worn and broken and that a small triangular tag of leather was doubled over beneath in just the place we knew of from the prints in Ratherby wood.

I could not take my eyes off that man with his broken shoe. There lay the secret. The whole mystery of the fantastic crime in Ratherby wood centered in that shabby ruffian. What was it?

But Hewitt went on, talking and joking furiously. The men who were not speaking mostly smoked gloomily, but whenever one spoke he became animated and lively. I had attempted, once or twice, to join in, though my efforts were not particularly successful, except in inducing one man to offer me tobacco from his box—tobacco that almost made me giddy in the smell. He tried some of mine in exchange, and though he praised it with native politeness, and smoked the pipe through, I could see that my Hignett mixture was poor stuff in his estimation, compared with the awful stuff in his own box.



ONE LEG WAS THROWN OVER THE OTHER AS HE LAY.

Presently the man with the broken shoe got up, slouched over to his tent and disappeared. Then said Hewitt (I translate): "You're not all Lees here, I see?"

"Yes pal, all Lees."

"But he's not a Lee," and Hewitt jerked his head toward the tent.

"Why not a Lee, pal? We be Lees and he is with us. Thus he is a Lee."

"Oh yes, of course. But I know he is from over the pawny. Come, I'll guess the tem (country) he comes from—it's Roumania, eh? Perhaps the Wallachian part."

The men looked at one another, then old Lee said: "You're right, pal—you're cleverer than we took you for. That is what they calls his tem. He is a petalengro (smith), and he comes with us to shoe the grias (horses) and mend the wardos (vans). But he is with us and so is a Lee."

The talk and the smoke went on, and presently the man with the broken shoe returned and lay down again. Then, when the whisky had all gone, and Hewitt, with some excuse that I did not understand, had begged a piece of cord from one of the men, we left in a chorus of kooshto raties (good night).

By this time it was nearly ten o'clock. We walked briskly till we came back again to the inn where we had bought the whisky. Here Hewitt, after some little trouble, succeeded in hiring a village cart, and while the driver was harnessing the horse cut a couple of short sticks from the hedge. These, being each divided into two, made four short, stout pieces of something less than six inches long each. Then Hewitt joined them together in pairs, each pair being connected from center to center by about nine or ten inches of the cord he had brought from the gypsies' camp. This done, he handed one pair to me. "Handcuffs," he explained, "and no bad ones, either. See—you use them so," and he passed the cord round my wrist, gripping the two handles and giving them a slight twist that sufficiently convinced me of the excruciating pain that might be inflicted by a vigorous turn, and the utter helplessness of a prisoner thus secured in the hands of captors prepared to use their instruments.

"Whom are these for?" I asked. "The man with the broken shoe?"

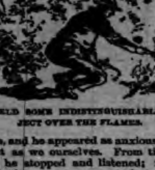
Hewitt nodded. "Yes," he said. "I expect we shall find him out alone about midnight. You know how to use these now."

It fully eleven before the cart was ready and we started. A quarter of a mile or so from the gypsy encampment Hewitt stopped the cart, and gave the driver instructions to wait. We got through the hedge and made our way on the soft ground behind it, in the direction of the vans and the tent.

"Roll up your handkerchief," Hewitt whispered, "into a tight pad. The moment I grab him, ram it into his mouth—well in, mind, so that it doesn't easily fall out. Probably he will be stooping—that will make it easier; we can pull him suddenly backward. Now be quiet."

We kept on till nothing but the hedge divided us from the space whereon stood the encampment. It was now nearer twelve o'clock than eleven, but the time we waited seemed endless. But time is not eternity, after all, and at last we heard a noise in the tent. A minute after the man we sought was standing before us. He made straight for a gap in the hedge which we had passed on our way, and we crouched low and waited. He emerged on our side of the hedge, with his back toward us, and began walking as we had walked, behind the hedge, but in the opposite direction. We followed.

He carried something in his hand that looked like a large bundle of sticks and twigs, and he appeared as anxious to be secret as we ourselves. From time to time he stopped and listened; fortunately there was no moon, or in turning about as he did once or twice he would have observed us. The field sloped downward just before us and there was another hedge at right angles, leading down to a slight hollow. To this hollow the man made his way, and in the shade of the new hedge we followed. Presently he stopped suddenly, stooped, and deposited his bundle on the ground before him. Crouching before it he produced matches from his pocket, struck one, and in a moment had a fire of twigs and small branches that sent up a heavy white smoke. What all this portended I could not imagine, but a sense of the weirdness of the whole adventure came upon me unchecked. The horrible corpse in the wood with its severed wrist, Hewitt's enigmatical forebodings, the mysterious tracking of the man with the broken shoe, the scene around the gypsies' fire, and now the strange behavior of this man, whose connection with the tragedy was so intimate, and yet so inexplicable—all these things contributed to make up a tale of but a few hours' duration, but of an inscrutable impressiveness that I began to feel in my nerves.



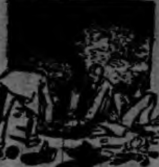
HE HELD SOME INDISTINGUISHABLE OBJECT OVER THE FLAMES.

The man bent a thin stick double, and, using it as a pair of tongs, held some indistinguishable object over the flames before him. Excited as I was I could not help noticing that he bent and held the stick with his left hand. We crept stealthily nearer, and as I stood scarcely three yards behind him and looked over his shoulder the form of the object stood out clear and black against the dull red of the flame. It was a human hand.

CHAPTER V.

I suppose I may have somehow betrayed my amazement and horror to my companion's sharp eyes, for, suddenly, I felt his hand tightly grip my arm just above the elbow. I turned and found his face close by mine and his finger raised warningly. Then I saw him produce his wrist-grip and make a motion with his palm towards his mouth, which I understood to be intended to remind me of the gag. We stepped forward.

The man turned his horrible cooking over and over above the crackling sticks, as though to smoke and dry it in every part. I saw Hewitt's hand reach out toward him, and in a flash we had pulled him back over his heels and I had driven the gag between his teeth as he opened his mouth. We seized his wrists in the cords at once, and I shall never forget the man's look of ghastly, frantic terror as he lay on the ground. When I knew more I understood the reason of this.



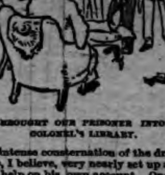
I HAD DRIVEN THE GAG BETWEEN HIS TEETH.

Hewitt took both wrist holds in one hand and drove the gag entirely into the man's mouth, so that he almost choked. A piece of sacking lay near the fire, and by Hewitt's request I dropped that awful hand from the wooden tongs upon it and rolled it up in a parcel—it was, no doubt, what the sacking had been brought for. Then we lifted the man to his feet and hurried him in the direction of the cart. The whole capture could not have occupied thirty seconds, and, as I stumbled over the rough field at the man's left elbow, I could only think of the thing as one thinks of a dream that one knows all the time is a dream.

But presently the man, who had been walking quietly, though gasping, sniffing and choking because of the tightly rolled handkerchief in his mouth—presently he made a sudden dive, thinking doubtless to get his wrists free by surprise. But Hewitt was alert, and gave his wrists a twist that made him roll his head with a dismal, stifled yell, and with the opening of his mouth, by some chance, the gag fell away. Immediately the man roared aloud for help.

"Quick," said Hewitt, "drag him along—they'll hear in the vans. Bring the hand!"

I seized the fallen handkerchief and crammed it over the man's mouth as well as I might, and together we made as much of a trot as we could, dragging the man between us, while Hewitt checked any reluctance on his part by a timely wrench of the wrist-holds. It was a hard two hundred and fifty yards to the lane, even for us—for the gypsy it must have been a bad minute and a half indeed. Once more as we went over the uneven ground he managed to get out a shout, and we thought we heard a distant reply from somewhere in the direction of the encampment. We pulled him over a stile in a tangle and dragged and pushed him through a small hedge gap in a heap. Here we were but twenty yards from the cart, and into that we flung him without wasting time or tenderness, to the intense consternation of the driver, who, I believe, very nearly set up a cry for help on his own account. Once in the cart, however, I seized the reins and the whip myself, and, leaving Hewitt to take care of the prisoner, put the turnout along toward Ratherby at as near two miles an hour as it could go. We made first for Mr. Hardwick's, but he, we found, was with my uncle, so we followed him. The arrest of the Fosters had been effected, we learned, not very long after we had left the wood, as they returned, by another route to Ranworth.



WE BROUGHT OUR PRISONER INTO THE COLONEL'S LIBRARY.

We brought our prisoner into the colonel's library, where he and Mr. Hardwick were sitting.

"I'm not quite sure what we can charge him with, unless it's anatomical robbery," Hewitt remarked, "but here's the criminal."

The man only looked down with a sulkily impenetrable countenance. Hewitt spoke to him once or twice, and at last he said, in a strange accent, something that sounded like "Kekie jinnessy."

"Kek jin?" (not understand) asked Hewitt, in the loud clear tone one instinctively adopts in talking to a foreigner. Kekauvo jinny.

The man understood and shook his head, but not another word would he say or another question answer.

"He's a foreign gypsy," Hewitt explained, "just as I thought—a Wallachian, in fact. Theirs is an older and purer dialect than that of the English gypsies, and only some of the root words are alike. But I think we can make him explain to-morrow that the Fosters, at least, had nothing to do with, at any rate, cutting off Sneathy's hand. Here it is, I think," and he gingerly lifted the folds of sacking from the ghastly object as it lay on the table, and then covered it again.

"But what—what does it all mean?" Mr. Hardwick said, in bewildered astonishment. "Do you mean this man is an accomplice?"

"Not at all—the case was one of suicide, as I think you'll agree when I've explained. This man simply found the body hanging and stole the hand."

"But what in the world for?"

"For the Hand of Glory. Eh?" He turned to the gypsy and pointed to the hand on the table. "Yag-vast (fire hand) eh?"

There was a quick gleam of intelligence in the man's eye, but he said nothing. As for myself, I was more than astounded. Could it be possible that the old superstition of the Hand of Glory remained alive in a practical shape at this day?

"You know the superstition, of course," Hewitt said. "It did exist in this country in the last century, when there were plenty of dead men hanging at cross roads, and so on. On the continent, in some places, it has survived later. Among the Wallachian gypsies it has always been a great article of belief, and the superstition is even said to be active still. The belief is that the right hand of a dead man, cut off and dried over the smoke of certain wood and herbs, and then provided with wicks at each finger made of the dead man's hair, becomes, when lighted at each wick (the wicks are greased, of course,) a charm whereby a thief may walk without hindrance where he pleases in a strange house, push open all doors and take what he likes. Nobody can stop him, for everybody the Hand of Glory approaches is made helpless, and can neither move nor speak. You may remember there was some talk of thieves' candles in connection with the horrible series of Whitechapel murders not long ago. That is only one form of the cult of the Hand of Glory."

"Yes," my uncle said, "I remember reading so. There is a story about it in the 'Ingoldsby Legends,' too, I believe."

"There is—it is called 'The Hand of Glory,' in fact. You remember the spell 'Open lock to the dead man's knock' and so on. But I think you'd better have the constable up and get this man into safe quarters for the night. He should be searched, of course. I expect they will find on him the hair I noticed to have been cut from Sneathy's head."

The village constable arrived with his iron handcuffs in substitution for those of cord which had so sorely vexed the wrists of our prisoner, and marched him away to the little lockup on the [illegible]

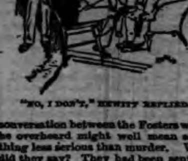
CHAPTER VI.

Then my uncle and Mr. Hardwick turned on Martin Hewitt with doubts and many questions. "Why do you call it suicide?" Mr. Hardwick asked. "It is plain the Fosters were with him at the time, from the tracks. Do you mean to say that they stood there and watched Sneathy hang himself without interfering?"

"No, I don't," Hewitt replied, lighting a cigar. "I think I told you that they never saw Sneathy."

"Yes, you did; and, of course, that's what they said themselves when they were arrested. But the thing's impossible. Look at the tracks!"

"The tracks are exactly what revealed to me that it was not impossible," Hewitt returned. "I'll tell you how the case unfolded itself to me, from the beginning. As to the information you gathered from the Ranworth coachman, to begin with, the conversation between the Fosters which he overheard might well mean something less serious than murder. What did they say? They had been sent for in a hurry and had just had a short consultation with their mother and sister. Henry said that 'the thing must be done, and at once;' also, that as there were two of them it would be easy. Robert said that Henry, as a doctor, would know best what to do. Now you, Col. Brett, had been saying—before we learned these things from Mr. Hardwick—that Sneathy's behavior of late had become so bad as to seem that of a madman. Then there was the story of his sudden attack on a tradesman in the village and equally sudden running away—exactly the sort of impulsive, wild thing that madmen do. Why then might it not be reasonable to suppose that Sneathy had become mad—more especially considering all the circumstances of the case, his commercial ruin and disgrace and his horrible life with his wife and her family? Had become suddenly much worse and quite uncontrollable, so that the two wretched women, left alone with him, were driven to send in haste for Henry and Robert to help them. That would account for all. The brothers arrive just after Sneathy had gone out. They are told in a hurried interview how affairs stand, and it is decided that Sneathy must be at once secured and confined in an asylum before something serious happens. He has just gone out—something terrible may be happening at that moment. The brothers determine to follow together at once and secure him wherever he may be. Then the meaning of their conversation is plain. The thing that must be done, and done at once, is the capture of Sneathy and his confinement in an asylum. Henry, as a doctor, would know what to do—in regard to the necessary formalities. And they took a halter in case a struggle should ensue, and it were found necessary to bind him. Very likely, wasn't it?"



"NO, I DON'T," HEWITT REPLIED.

"Well, yes," Mr. Hardwick replied. "It certainly is. It never struck me in that light at all."

"That was because you believed to begin with that a murder had been committed, and looked at the preliminary circumstances, which you learned after, in the light of your conviction. But now to come to my actual observations. I saw the footmarks across the fields and agreed with you (it was indeed obvious) that Sneathy had gone that way first, and that the brothers had followed, walking over his tracks. This state of the tracks continued until well into the wood, when suddenly the tracks of the brothers opened out and proceeded on each side of Sneathy's. The simple inference would seem to be, of course, the one you made—that the Fosters had here overtaken Sneathy and walked one at each side of him; but of this I felt by no means certain. Another very simple explanation was available, which might chance to be the true one. It was just at the spot where the brothers' tracks separated that the path became suddenly much muddier, because of the closer overhanging of the trees at the spot. The path was, as was to be expected, wettest in the middle. It would be the most natural thing in the world for two well-dressed young men on arriving here to separate so as to walk one on each side of the mud in the middle. On the other hand, a man in Sneathy's state (assuming him, for the moment, to be mad and contemplating suicide) would walk straight along the center of the path, taking no note of mud or anything else. I examined all the tracks very carefully, and my theory was confirmed. The feet of the brothers had everywhere alighted in the driest spots, and the steps were of irregular lengths—which meant, of course, that they were picking their way; while Sneathy's footmarks had never turned aside, even for the dirtiest puddle. Here, then, were the rudiments of a theory.

"At the watercourse, of course, the footmarks ceased, because of the hard gravel. The body lay on a knoll at the left—a knoll covered with grass. On this the signs of footmarks were almost undiscoverable, although I am often able to discover tracks in grass that are invisible to others. Here, however, it was almost useless to spend much time in examination, for you and your man had been there, and what slight marks there might be would be indistinguishable one from another. Under the branch from which the man had hung there was an old tree stump, with a flat top, where the tree had been sawn off. I examined this, and it became fairly apparent that Sneathy had stood on it when the rope was about his neck—his muddy footprint was plain to see; the mud was not smeared about, you see, as it probably would have been if he had been stood there forcibly and pushed off. It was a simple clear footprint—another hint at suicide.

"But then arose the objection that you mentioned yourself. Plainly the brothers Foster were following Sneathy and came this way. Therefore, if he hanged himself before they arrived, it would seem that they must have come across the body. But now I examined the body itself. There was mud on the knees, and clinging to one knee was a small leaf. It was a leaf corresponding to those on the bush behind the tree, and it was not a dead leaf, so must have been just detached. After my examination of the body I went to the bush, and there, in the thick of it, were, for me, sufficiently distinct knee marks, in one of which the knee had crushed a spray of the bush against the ground—and from that spray a leaf was missing. Behind the knee marks were the indentations of boot toes in the soft, bare earth under the bush, and thus the thing was plain. The poor lunatic had come in sight of the dangling rope, and the temptation to suicide was irresistible. But at that moment he must have heard the steps—probably the voices—of the brothers behind him on the winding path. He immediately hid in the bush till they had passed. It is probable that seeing who the men were and conjecturing that they were following him—thinking also, perhaps, of things that had occurred between them and himself—his inclination to self-destruction became completely ungovernable, with the result that you saw.

"But before I inspected the bush I noticed one or two more things about the body. You remember I inquired if either of the brothers Foster were left-handed, and was assured that neither was. But clearly the hand had been cut off by a left-handed man with a large, sharply pointed knife. For well away to the right of where the wrist had hung the knife-point had made a tiny triangular rent in the coat. So that the hand must have been held in the mutilator's right hand while he used the knife with his left—clearly a left-handed man.

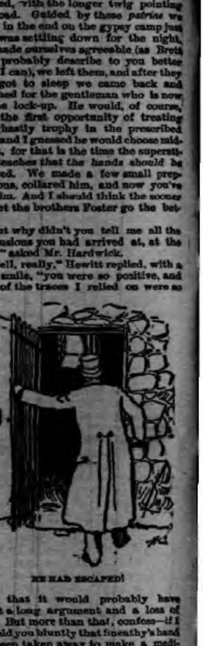
"But most important of all about the body was the jagged hair over the right ear. Everywhere else the hair was well cut and orderly—here it seemed as though a good piece had been, so to speak, sawn off. What could anybody want with a dead man's right hand and certain locks of his hair? Then it struck me suddenly—the man was hanged; it was the Hand of Glory!

"Then, you will remember, I went at your request to see the footprints of the Fosters on the part of the path past the watercourse. Here, again, it was muddy in the middle, and the two brothers had walked as far apart as before, although nobody had walked between them. A final proof, if one were needed, of my theory as to the three lines of footprints.

"Now I was to consider how to get at the man who had taken the hand. He should be punished for the mutilation, but beyond that he would be required as a witness. Now all the foot-tracks in the vicinity had been accounted for. There were those of the brothers and of Sneathy, which we have been speaking of; those of the rustics looking on, which, however, stopped a little way off, and did not interfere with our sphere of observation; those of your man who had cut straight through the wood when he first saw the body and had come back the same way with you; and our own, which we had been careful to keep away from the others. Consequently there was no track of the man who had cut off the hand; therefore it was certain that he must have come along the hard gravel by the watercourse, for that was the only possible path which would not tell the tale. Indeed, it seems quite a likely path through the wood for a passenger to take, coming from the high ground by the Shepperton road. Brett and I left you and traversed the watercourse, both up and down. We found a foot print at the top left lately by a man with a broken shoe. Right down to the bottom of the watercourse where it emerged from the wood there was no sign on either side of this man having left the gravel. (Where the body was, as you will remember, he would simply have stepped off the gravel on to the grass, which I thought it useless to examine as I have explained.) But at the bottom, by the lane, the footprint appeared again. This then was the direction in which I was to search for a left-handed man with a broken-soled shoe, probably a gypsy, and most probably a foreign gypsy—because a foreign gypsy would be the most likely to hold still the belief in the Hand of Glory. I conjectured the man to be a straggler from a band of gypsies—one who probably had got behind the caravan and had made a short cut across the wood after it, so at the end of the lane I look for a patrin. This is a sign that gypsies leave to guide stragglers following up. Sometimes it is a heap of dead leaves, sometimes a few stones, sometimes a mark on the ground, but more usually a couple of twigs crossed, with the longer twig pointing the road. Guided by these patrins we came in the end on the gypsy camp just as it was settling down for the night. We made ourselves agreeable (as Brett will probably describe to you better than I can), we left them, and after they had got to sleep we came back and watched for the gentleman who is now in the lock-up. He would, of course, seize the first opportunity of treating his ghastly trophy in the prescribed way, and I guessed he would choose midnight, for that is the time the superstition teaches that the hands should be repared. We made a few small preparations, collared him, and now you've got him. And I should think the sooner you let the brothers Foster go the better."

"But why didn't you tell me all the conclusions you had arrived at, at the time?" asked Mr. Hardwick.

"Well, really," Hewitt replied, with a quiet smile, "you were so positive, and some of the traces I relied on were so small that it would probably have meant a long argument and a loss of time. But more than that, confess—if I had told you bluntly that Sneathy's hand had been taken away to make a medieval charm to enable a thief to pass through a locked door and steal plate calmly under the owner's nose what would you have said?"



HE HAD ESCAPED!

"Well, well, perhaps I should have been a little skeptical. Appearances combined so completely to point to the Fosters as murderers that any other explanation, almost, would have seemed unlikely to me, and that—well no, I confess, I shouldn't have believed in it. But it is a startling thing to find such superstitions alive nowadays."

"Yes, perhaps it is. Yet we find survivals of the sort very frequently. The Wallachians, however, are horribly superstitious still — the gypsies among them are of course worse. Don't you remember the case reported a few months ago in which a child was drowned as a sacrifice in Wallachia in order to bring rain? And that was not done by gypsies, either. Even in England, as late as 1865, a poor paralyzed Frenchman was killed by being 'swum' for witchcraft—that was in Essex. And less atrocious cases of belief in wizardry occur again and again even now."

Then Mr. Hardwick and my uncle fell into a discussion as to how the gypsy in the lock-up could be legally punished. Mr. Hardwick thought it should be treated as a theft of a portion of a dead body, but my uncle fancied there was a penalty for mutilation of a dead body per se, though he could not point to the statute. As it happened, however, they were saved the trouble of arriving at a decision, for in the morning he was discovered to have escaped. He had been left, of course, with free hands, and had occupied the night in wrenching out the bars at the top of the back wall of the little prison-shed (it had stood on the green for a hundred and fifty years) and climbed out. He was not found again, and a month or two later the Foster family left the district entirely.

[THE END.]

Take Heed.

"Thou wilt lament hereafter when the evil shall be done and shall admit no cure". If your eyes trouble you heed this [illegible] warning, and that you may have no occasion to lament their carelessness go to Collier's, [illegible] Park avenue, and have them examined, and be reliably advised as to the preservation of your sight.

OPENING BIDS.

That the Borough Council's Chief Occupation.

CRUSHED STONE AND FLAGGING.

The Bids Referred to Committee for Investigation—Dr. Carman Appointed Borough Physician—Memorial Day Fund Undecided.

An adjourned meeting of the North Plainfield Borough Council held Friday evening, all the members being present except Mr. Lounsbury.

A short private conference was held previous to the meeting, to talk about salaries.

The minutes were not read. Clerk Arnold presented a communication from Secretary Asa Collier of the Memorial Detail, asking the Council for $50 as an appropriation to help observe Decoration Day. It was received and filed, and brought up later in the evening, when Mr Valiant said that last year the appropriation was not made because the borough counsel had informed them that it was illegal thus to use borough funds.

The Mayor stated that last Winter a law was passed which would give them that privilege, and he thought it would be well to take advantage of it. The matter was laid over till the May meeting.

A. M. Grant and others asked for a crosswalk on Summit avenue, and L. L. Randolph and others asked for a crosswalk on Duer street at the intersection of Duer street and Linden avenue. These were referred to Committee on Streets and Public Health.

A small batch of claims was presented and audited, and warrants were ordered drawn for payments.

Mr. Valiant of the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections stated that the borough counsel had told him that the borough was not liable for the accident which happened to Mr. McCready on Manning avenue, but that the owner of the property in front of which he fell was liable. The report was received and filed.

Progress was reported by Mr. Schutt on the matter of settling the borough and township division.

An ordinance was introduced on first reading which fixes for three years the salary of the Assessor at $600 a year, and that of the Collector at $1,000. Mr. Valiant moved that it pass to its second reading, and be laid over one month, subject to amendment. This was carried.

The bond of Collector H. N. Spencer for $15,000 was presented, with Jacob Voehl, A. I. Smalley and Justus H. Cooley as sureties; and also the bond of Overseer of the Poor D. R. Weaver for $500, with J. P. Humble and A. J. Winckler as sureties. They were both referred to the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections, who later recommended that the bonds be accepted, which was agreed to.

Bids for crushed stone, crosswalks and sidewalks were then presented, as follows: A. I. Smalley—Crushed stone, all sizes, 2½, 1½ and 1, with dust, 75 cents a ton; delivered 93 cents a ton, with dust. J. H. Wilson—Crushed stone, top dressing, 90 cents a ton; No. 1, 89½ cents; No. 2, 80 cents; tailings, 75 cents; delivered, at the crusher, 10 per cent. less. A. Lenzie—Crosswalks, 3 or 4 inches thick, and 2 feet wide, for 39 cents a lineal foot; flagging, 60 cents a lineal foot. J. A. Thickstun—Crosswalks, 2 feet, 5 inches thick, 80 cents; 6 inches thick, $1; flagging, 4 feet, 2 inches thick, 64 cents; crossings, 3 inches thick, 50 cents; all lineal feet, to be laid in sand. M. Powers—crosswalks, 2 feet wide, 25 cents a square foot, sidewalks, 4 feet wide, 1½ to 2 inches thick, 13½ cents a square foot. P. Kiely—all walks 39 cents a running foot, the borough to furnish the sand.

The bids were referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health.

The Mayor stated that Overseer of the Poor Weaver had brought to his attention the fact that one of the borough's poor subject had died, and they had no burial place. He had told the overseer to arrange with the township for burial in their plot. He advised that the borough secure a portion of the township plot, and that the matter be attended to at once.

Mr. Smith said that the borough and township had jointly purchased the plot and both were entitled to its use.

Mr. Howell moved that it be referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Health, which was carried.

Mr. Valiant said that as soon as an affadavit accompanied J. W. VanHorn's bond, he would recommend its acceptance, and the clerk was given the bond to have this done.

Mr. Schutt moved that Dr. J. H. Carman be appointed Borough Physician, which was carried. Mr. Smith said the Committee on Streets and Public Health had decided it was not advisable to contract the work, as Dr. Mattison had asked for at the previous meeting.

The Council adjourned.

—Robert Mattox has become the representative of L. Sternberg & Co., of Newark, for Plainfield.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

WORDS OF THE CROSS.

Plainfield Congregations Unite in a Devotional Service.

A beautiful expression of the liberality and unity which pervade the evangelical churches in Plainfield was evident last evening, when all denominations gathered under one roof and joined in meditation on words from the cross where Jesus was crucified for sinners 1863 years ago.

The union services were held in the First M. E. Church, in which a large congregation had gathered.

The services were opened by Rev. Dr. C. E. Barnes, who spoke a few words appropriate to the occasion. He said that to think rightly is to live, and it is therefore better to turn our mind and eyes from the daily pursuits of the world on the observance of this holy day and enter the Gethsemane of life.

Rev. Dr. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue Church, read the Scriptural lesson from the twenty-third chapter of Luke, after which he offered prayer. The fifty-first and fifty-second Psalms were then read responsively by the congregation.

The first word from the cross was taken by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell of Hope Chapel. It was "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do". These words, he said, showed His love for His persecutors, and evinced that forgiving spirit which characterized the life of Him throughout. For the joy set before Him in preparing a way that all might be saved, He was willing to suffer.

Owing to illness (an attack of the grip), Rev. C. E. Herring of the First Presbyterian Church was unable to be present, and in his place Rev. Dr. Barnes spoke of the second word, "Verily, I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in paradise". He said that no matter how one has sinned, how memory scars one's heart, how we weep or wail, how grevious our sins of past torture may be so long as we recognize in Him some other form than ourselves, and cast our burden on Him, then we are home.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck of Trinity Reformed Church took up the third word, "Behold thy son, behold thy mother". He thought this was a beautiful expression of the filial love of Jesus. As the mother stood at the cross and saw the crucifixion and heard these words, she must have understood Simeon's words of 33 years before, when he said that a sword should pierce her soul.

Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman of Grace P. E. Church talked on the fourth word, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken Me!" These words conveyed the desolation and solitude which the Lord was undergoing, and yet His first thought was the saving of others. It is impossible to compare the sufferings of Jesus when He gave voice to "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken Me", with those of any other man.

The fifth word, "I thirst", was considered by Rev. J. W. Richardson. He said that not until the last redemption price had been paid and the pearly gates opened for all, did Christ give expression to His sufferings. In these words we find an exhibition of the Master-man which only belongs to the divine and which comes in touch with our nature.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes talked on the sixth word, "It is finished". This finished work was not the work of the crucifiers who had accomplished their desire in getting Him out of the way; it was not the feeble cry of a man whose death ended all on earth; but it was a death to accomplish something committed to His hands—a way for salvation.

The seventh and last word, "Father, into Thy hands, I commend My spirit", was dwelt on by Rev. C. L. Goodrich. The first and last word of Christ on the cross was "Father". Men that live in conscious fellowship with God know that death cannot end all. Mr. Goodrich spoke more of Him as a man than as a divinity.

The meeting was brought to an end by Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone of the Church of the Redeemer offering prayer.

BY THE WAY.

—The Star Bicycle Club is the name of an organization which the young wheelmen are organizing in the vicinity of West Fifth street.

—The Sunday-school of the Methodist Episcopal Church will hold its Easter exercises tomorrow evening at 7:30, instead of in the afternoon as first announced.

—Don't forget to leave your valuables in Doane's safe-deposit vault, or rent a deposit box by the year. He provides an absolutely fireproof vault, and Yale lock boxes.

—The next meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen will be held Wednesday evening. At that time a list of the coming events of the season will be made, and the Decoration Day meet arranged for.

—The Crescent Oval is being worked into condition for the coming events of the season. It is expected that in course of a week the track will be in shape for the use of those who desire to go into training.

—Eddie Hagan, Patrick O'Connor, Geo. Durilla and John Daly were sentenced to pay fines of $2 apiece, or go to jail for 20 days, this morning in City Court. They were charged with trespassing on the railroad. Durilla was the only one who paid the money.

—An evening of pure enjoyment and delight can be secured by attending the entertainment in Bethel Chapel Tuesday, April 23, when Glover's phonograph will reproduce some of the most celebrated pieces of music of American and foreign artists. The admission will be [illegible] cents.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

David Pangborn Shoots Himself in the Head.

FOUND DYING IN AN OUTHOUSE.

Removed in an Unconscious Condition to Muhlenberg Hospital—He Was an Old Soldier, and a Notable Plainfield Character.

From The Press of April 13.

Tired and weary of life, despondent and homeless, David Pangborn endeavored to take his life last night by putting a bullet into his brain. But he was unsuccessful in bringing to an end his career instantaneously, though word comes from the Muhlenberg hospital that he will probably not survive the attempt at ending his existence.

About 7 last night Lewis Bartholomew, who resides on Richmond street near Putnam avenue, was working about his yard when a sudden gust of wind carried a piece of clothing into the adjoining yard, which is in the rear of the vacant house standing on the corner of Richmond street and Putnam avenue. Bartholomew climbed over the fence to recover the missing article, and as he neared the outhouse, which stood at the end of the lot, he thought he heard a grunting sound. Going to the structure he saw through the half opened door the body of a man curled up as if in a drunken slumber. In fact that was what he thought the condition of the man was.

Calling Robert A. Prince, who resides in the same house, the two endeavored to open the door and find out who it was. But the body lay in such a position that the door would only swing a few inches in. Deciding that whoever it was he must be drunk, they asked Mr. Lay, who was coming down town, to notify the police of the circumstance and ask them to come and remove the man.

Policeman Hartpence and Mattox went to the scene about 8. On their arrival there they saw at a glance, without investigation, that he was in no condition to be removed without a wagon. One of them went to Dr. Murray's office on Watchung avenue and sent a telephone message to Chief Grant asking that a carriage be sent to remove him. In the meantime the other officer and Bartholomew and Prince had broken open the door to the outhouse. As they went to lift the individual up they found a small 22-calibre revolver lying on the floor, under his body, and the right side of the face and body covered with blood, which had oozed forth from a wound in the ear.

Quickly recognizing him as Pangborn and discovering that he had attempted suicide, Policeman Hartpence started down town at once to notify Chief Grant of the fact and the need of something more than a buggy to convey him to the hospital. The two officers met on the way, and as soon as the Chief learned of the condition of Pangborn, he immediately notified Dr. Simpson, who, in company with Dr. Murray, soon came to the scene of the attempted suicide. After examining the wound the physicians ordered that he be taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. The platform wagon of Harry Krymer was secured and Pangborn carried to that institution, where his injuries were dressed. He has been unconscious ever since, and is not expected to live the day through.

How much time had elapsed after Pangborn had shot himself before he was discovered is not known. The blood which was on him when found was dry so that he must have lain there for some time. No one in the neighborhood heard any shots or saw anything that would indicate that anything was wrong until he was discovered. Mrs. Nevius, who resides next door on Putnam avenue to where the suicide occurred, knew nothing of the affair until this morning when a Daily Press reporter called there in search of the facts, and told her of the case. Very few other people in that section were aware of anything being wrong.

Pangborn has always been a man of a roving nature and unsatisfied disposition, and especially so since the death of his wife three years ago, when his home in North Plainfield on Steiner place was broken up.

Through ill health he was never able to hold a position any length of time, and this condition of affairs served to keep him in a constant state of despondency and discouragement. His last job was as a teamster for the city, which he gave up two years ago on account of illness. After that he entered the soldiers' home, but only remained there four days, leaving, without any particular reason, except that he was dissatisfied.

He came back to Plainfield and was finally compelled to become a city charge, living on the poor farm kept by Noah Terry. Previous to this during the intervals that he was out of work he usually made his home with his niece, Mrs Chas. W. Smith, on Richmond street. Since he has been on the poor farm he frequently came to the city and remained with Mrs. Smith two or three days at a time. Last Saturday he came down from the farm and asked Mrs. Smith if he could stay with her for a few days, stating that he did not like it there, and he was anxious to secure work again.

He came in and out every day, and up to Wednesday evening seemed to be in a pleasant frame of mind, more so than usual. Thursday he appeared to have that despondent feeling again, going about in a dejected manner, and acting very reticent. That evening a little after 6 he came in and went out immediately. That was the last the family saw or heard of him, until they were notified last night of the attempt to kill himself.

Mrs. Smith told The Daily Press man this morning that Pangborn had frequently threatened to take his life. Only a few days ago he said that if he didn't get a job pretty soon he would take some arsenic. However, he had talked that way so often that little attention was paid to his remarks. In his pockets was found a pawn ticket for a watch, on which he received $1, and with which he probably bought the revolver.

He is about 70 years of age. He leaves no immediate relatives.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

TROLLEY EXTENSION.

An Injury to None, a Benefit to All.

It has been stated that the trolley is an annoyance in Plainfield homes, and an injury to property. Let us see if this be so. It is not so in Detroit, the finest city in the West. Its fashionable residence street, Woodward avenue, contains very busy trolley lines, on which cars are run with a headway not exceeding two or three minutes.

Plainfield has the population of a single Detroit ward, and Plainfield's trolley cars have a headway of twelve minutes, and are not in a hurry at that.

Now, if our trolleys are an annoyance and an injury, there are plenty of people who can tell us the sad story. Call witnesses. Bring from the homes in Somerset street, or West Front street, or Grant avenue, or Seventh street, people that have experienced month in and month out our type of trolley. Let their statements go along with the statements of people from West Fourth street and Woodland avenue.

If property on Somerset street, or West Front street, or Grant avenue, or Seventh street, has become less valuable, name at least one lot or one house and lot that has been sold for less, or assessed on a lower valuation, or that is offered at a lower price. We do not ask for much proof—just something more than the phantoms of the brain with which we of late have been oversupplied.

Who in the streets named has become more nervous because of the trolley—who is annoyed by it—who in those streets ever minds the occasional car as it goes by? Wanted, in other words, one Plainfield witness of actual Plainfield experience, who will say that the trolley in his street is a personal annoyance, and an injury to his property.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

R. M. Stover is very low.

Wm. Swaim of Plainfield avenue and Front street is considerably improved.

Miss Agnes Baughart of Newport, Cumberland County, is visiting John H. Rowland of East Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Cadmus of Brooklyn are rejoicing over the advent of a little Palm Sunday daughter.

Frank Vermeule has accepted a position with L. Sternberg & Co., and will commence his duties next Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Tams, and their lovely boy James Elmore, of Trenton, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Tams's parents, Deputy County Collector Elmore D. Moffett, Orchard place.

"The Curiosities of Vision" will be talked of by Prof. J. H. Hyslop of Columbia College in the Casino Monday afternoon at 3, under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon Club.

Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, State Superintendent of the Missionary Department, spoke yesterday at the annual convention of the Hunterdon County Christian Endeavor Union, held in Lambertville.

A lad by the name of Sicurale living on McDowell street was bitten by a vicious dog yesterday afternoon. The brute is owned by Thomas Sheppard. The boy was taken to the hospital, and the wound was cauterized.

Fifteen friends gathered at the home of Charles Kelderling, 223 East Front street, last night, and merrily celebrated his thirty-second birthday anniversary. All had a delightful time with games, music and refreshments.

Rev. James Leggett, pastor of the M. E. Church of East Hampton, L. I., is his brother, J. H. Leggett of West Front street. He is so well liked by the Methodists of East Hampton that he was reappointed at the Conference held this week.

A Good Thing.

Hereafter the Y. M. C. A. Building will be open Sundays from 9 to 12:30 a. m., and from 1 to 6 p. m.

DEAD AGIN FITTIN'.

For one long minute Matsy Delihanty hung by her elbows on the top of the high board fence closing in the yard back of O'Flaherty's saloon—a minute of great bodily agony to her, but of fully as great mental pleasure.

"Hit him agin, Pete," she called in her wild shrill tones, and the boys around the sluggers cheered her gayly; then her elbows gave out and she dropped back to the ash heap in the alley. As she turned reluctantly toward the backyard of her own tenement she was amazed to find herself confronting Mr. Ephraim Brown, the theological student who had charge of the Presbyterian mission around the corner.

"Blessed if it ain't you!" she gasped.

Mr. Brown looked at her sadly, and his voice was very plaintive as he said:

"And you, Matsy! Isn't that a fight over there?"

"Yep, they are fittin'," she said, defiantly, "and it's long fittin' Pete O'Brien is doin', too!" She warmed to her subject as the memory of Pete's strong right arm came back vividly and she added: "I tell yer, the way Pete ken sling is jis' grand! You'd orter seen that last round, Mr. Brown—no fancy tricks fur Pete, but jis' old timey licks that 'ud knock out any feller in Chicago in no time 't all."

"And you," said young Mr. Brown, dolefully, "you, Matsy Delihanty, the oldest girl in my Bible class, are spending the Sabbath afternoon watching rough men fight like brutes in the back yard of a saloon."

Matsy hung her head and twisted her thin fingers together nervously, or at least with the appearance of nervousness.

"Yep," she said, "that 'un you are mentioning is me straight enough—and the worst of the bis, Mr. Brown, is jis' this, that I don't know as I'd have grace enough to keep off the fence when there was fittin' on 't other side if I went to a Bible class twenty million years—not even if 'twas yore'n!"

She raised her great gray eyes humbly as she confessed her weakness, and in spite of himself Mr. Ephraim Brown blushed as he met the appealing glance from under the black lashes. Of late being confessed to by Matsy Delihanty had often embarrassed him, and he went into the kitchen with her hurriedly, with no further comment on her sinful way of passing the Sabbath.

"I dropped in to see how your rheumatism was," he said to the old man who sat over the stove in spite of the warmth of the early spring day.

Matsy's father growled a little in reply. To be sure he was done with priests, but that was no reason for taking up with Presbyterian ministers. He had decided that he and Matsy were to be free thinkers—"not afeard of no divil nor nobody, me and my gurrie," was his creed nowadays—and Matsy's sudden "shine" toward orthodoxy was very annoying to him. He, therefore, made no pretense of being glad to see his girl's pastor, and even denied himself the keen pleasure of telling how bad his rheumatism was, so after a few awkward moments the young fellow rose to go. Matsy walked down the long hall of the tenement with him, after giving one indignant glance back at her father as they left the room. They paused for a moment on the front steps, and Brown looked down almost shyly at the slim little figure by him.

"Matsy," he said, "I wish you wouldn't go to fights or have anything to do with such coarse, rough fellows as that Pete O'Brien."

"Cut Pete!" said Matsy, her meekness vanishing at once. "Not if this is Matsy Delihanty a talkin'! Pete's all right, and if bein' a Presbyterian means goin' back on old friends then I'm out of the church and back with dad, though he ain't deservin' to have me stick to him that can't be decint to his gurrl's comp'ny! I'm goin' to the dance with Pete to-morrer night, anyhow, so cuttin' ain't in order jis' now."

She flung out her words boldly, but her eyes showed that she was not altogether at ease.

"Going to the dance with him?" said Brown. "Oh, don't, Matsy."

Matsy looked down, her long lashes concealing the expression in her eyes. "I've told you all along, Mr. Brown," she said, "that I wasn't in religion any too deep."

The boy flushed even a brighter red. He stepped back in the doorway and laid his hand on her shoulder.

"Matsy," he said, hurriedly, "if you won't stay away from that ball for the sake of the church, won't you to—to please a friend?"

Matsy caught her breath.

"But, Pete—" she began tremulously.

"Send Pete to me if he makes a row," Brown cried, fiercely. He touched her cheek with his other hand and made her look up at him. "You'd never care for a fellow like that," he said positively.

Steps on the stair above them made Matsy pull away and give him a little push toward the door. "Yes," she said, as the woman from the rooms above came tramping down the stairway, surveying the slender young man with marked curiosity, "yes, I'll be at the Bible class sure next Sunday, Mr. Brown."

He did not move, and she turned unconcernedly toward her own quarters. When the woman had gone out on the street she added, softly, "and mebbe I won't be at—other concerns." Then she scudded away to give dad the richly deserved scolding.

Ephraim Brown walked down the street with his heart beating racingly. "It's my place to look out for my flock," he said to himself, but when he was in his room above the mission hall he flung up both his windows and then tramped the little room fiercely.

"If a fellow is going to spend his life in the slums—working to save souls—what better help could he have than a wife right from the people, one who is in touch with them? Why, it would double, triple, quadruple his influence and power for good!"

Over and over he said such words as these, saying them defiantly as if the father and mother, who perhaps would have to hear them some day, were at hand now. Then his fierce mood died away and he sat down by his table and took up his Bible, dropping from it slips of paper on one side of which references to texts were written and on the other "Matsy."

"She's my first convert," he said, tenderly. "The 'profs.' are right—there is no joy like saving souls. Matsy, Matsy, and she does not care for religion, wild as she talks, and she does not care for"—he broke off, but sat with a half smile on his face, marking him on the papers, below Matsy's name, "love," "love."

Suddenly he gave a little start. "I must not decide such a matter without long hours of prayer and much consulting with others," he said in the hours which were usually reserved for his Wednesday night prayer meeting. On the slip of paper he wrote, in front of the word love, two other words—"God is," and then he took down a volume of sermons and began at the very beginning—and ended there, too, for that matter.

The next afternoon he was again alone in his room when suddenly there came a thundering knock at his door and in marched Pete O'Brien with his face red and his eyes blazing.

Brown sprang to his feet and pushed his Bible away. His eyes, too, were blazing, and he did not wait for Pete to announce the reason for his visit.

"I suppose you've come," he began, fiercely, but the burly fellow interrupted him.

"And you s'pose right," he said. "I've kem to break that blasted head of yore'n."

"You mayn't find that as easy a job as you expect," said Brown, jerking off his coat. Preacher or no preacher he was not going to let a half drunken Irishman insult him.

"It's the gurrl I've kem to talk about," said Pete. "She ain't fur sayin' why she won't keep her wurrd fur to-night, but the ould chap sez it's you an' your tarnation Bible class as is at the bottom of the whole mess. I ain't set on lickin' yer, but that's what I'm after doin' if you don't git it in your noddle pretty quick that Matsy's the gurrl I'm going to marry!"

Brown threw the table out of the way and went at the big fellow. "You old idiot," he thundered, "Matsy's the girl I'm going to marry!"

They fell upon each other with full as much vim as if they had been in O'Flaherty's back yard on a Sunday afternoon—but meanwhile the door had opened and Matsy had walked in.

"And I tell yer," she called in her shrillest tones, "that the chap that lets fly the first lick ain't the boy that Matsy's goin' to take."

With the modesty of the girl who does not refuse before she is definitely asked, she added: "And that's not sayin', of course, that she's goin' to take the other."

The men—or rather boys—looked at her dazedly. She walked a little nearer to them and said, with a sarcastic uplifting of her nostrils: "Of course, you gents are at liberty to carry on jis' as you choose, but there's one thing Matsy Delihanty has got to say, and that is that she's dead agin fittin', and she's goin' to have no more to do with them as stick to such coarse pursoots."

She turned toward the door and Pete followed her. Brown looked after her almost piteously, and at the door she turned her head toward him.

"I'm too deep in—religion to stand such goin's on," she remarked, with an airy wave of her thin little hand.

Brown was 20 that spring.—The Chap-Book.

NEW HAMPSHIRE FORESTS.

They Cover Sixty Per Cent. of the State, but Are Not Conserved Property.

The second annual report of the New Hampshire Forestry Commission says that the forest area comprises practically 60 per cent. of the entire area of the State, and has not greatly changed since the publication of the report of the first temporary forestry commission in 1885. The amount of virgin spruce forest in New Hampshire is 525,000 acres, about 300,000 acres of this being in the White Mountain district. The annual product from its acreage is about 280,000 feet board measure, and the amount used for pulp is increasing about 15 per cent. each year. The lumberman, as a rule, continue to cut their lands "clean," thereby destroying all opportunity for reproduction of spruce by growth of small trees, while the large pulp mills, which own vast tracts of virgin forests, cut none less than twelve inches in diameter at the stump, and are already reaping the benefits of such a course.

The methods of lumbering are discussed, and the conclusion is arrived at that a change is necessary, and that the State must soon face the question how it will stay the ruthless waste and protect its forests. It is suggested that by the exercise of the right of eminent domain for the erection of a series of public forest preserves the State could effectually secure this object and make the White Mountain range a source of constant income, unfailing water supply and perpetual scenic pleasure.

Trancemogrification.

Now that hypnotism is in the air our conversation books will have to be remodelled as thus:

Good morning. Have you hibernated well?

Yes, I have had a most successful trance this winter. Have you laid up at all?

Only for a few days at Christmas, just to escape the bills.

Well, you take my advice, old man, and rent a private catacomb on the three years' system. It comes much cheaper in the end, and you save your coal and gas, to say nothing of clothes.

We've started a Nirvana Club in our neighborhood on the tontine principle. The last person who wakes get the prize, unless the first who comes to makes off with it.

It is capital, anyway, when you are taking a tour. Saves all the trouble of sightseeing. You are just packed up and forwarded from place to place, with an automatic kodak, which records everything you visited. Try it!

Will, some day. By Jove, I must be off! I've got to attend an anaesthetic concert, absolutely painless.

And I've got a mesmeric dinner party on to-night. All the bores will be put in glass cases and fed mechanically.

Good by, then. Sleep well!—Punch.

Domestic Economy in the Orient.

"Sirrah," remarked the Sultan, "my first wife and I are one."

The court mathematically bowed low in affirmation.

"Well," proceeded his majesty, "how about me and my second wife?"

"You are another," promptly rejoined the man of science.

Whereat divers high functionaries made shift to leave the apartment, not deeming it good politics to give their puissant sovereign the lie to his face.—Detroit Tribune.

California prunes worth five cents a pound fetch 18 cents a pound as real French importations when sold in San Francisco.

A philologist of high repute is authority for the statement that there are [illegible] languages spoken in Russia.

A sample order of [illegible] tons of coal has come from Mexico to the coal operators of the Fairmont, W. Va., [illegible]

The Constitutionalist
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
PUBLISHED AT
Plainfield, New Jersey.
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.
A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.
Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

CARRIAGES FOR ALL.

The Trolley Needed by Everybody Who Doesn't Keep a Horse.

When the phantasms of certain scattered individuals are dissipated by the testimony of Plainfield experiences, and it is seen that the trolley as conducted here is not a source of annoyance, nor a source of danger to life or limb, and is not therefore a source of injury to property—when all this is clearly seen and appreciated, does not a common humanity, a sense of real charity, demand that no more obstacle be conjured up to deprive those who are not able to keep a private conveyance of the customary convenience of communication?

When a man on West Fourth street or East Fifth street, for example, says that no trolley line shall be extended from the railroad station by way of his street, what does he say in plain terms to his fellow creatures?

He says to scores of little children, "you shall sit through school hours or church hours in wet shoes or wet clothes, or both, after your tramp through storm, or perhaps slush. You have, I know, no carriage to ride in, but you shall not have the benefit of public conveyances that children use in almost every other city in the land. No matter if pneumonia or other disease be the result, I say you shall go afoot in this town."

He says to the weary business man returning home, "go afoot regardless of distance or the state of the weather. If you do not like it, go elsewhere to live."

He says to the women who do not own carriages, "go you also afoot if you have shopping or marketing to do, or if you go to and from the great city daily. If it rain, tramp a mile if need be, and don't expect to ride in this town, because I dislike the trolley, and do not happen to need it."

So through the list. The man who has located himself near the North avenue or Netherwood station cherishes the atmosphere of Self, and binds ninety-nine out of every one hundred to discomfort, perhaps to disease, certainly to loss of valuable time.

Gentlemen of the Council, shall a few men who hasten to forget humanity and the general good, control communication in this town?

AS TO PUBLIC ROADS.

Some Facts From the First Annual Report of the New Jersey Commissioner.

Edward Burroughs, the New Jersey Commissioner of Public Roads, has, in this, his first report, supplied a mass of useful information and valuable data as to the working of the new law under which it is expected that New Jersey will become "a State of highways". He traces graphily and concisely how the roads developed from the old Indian trails, and summarizes the laws and improvements which have marked the revived public interest in the subject during the last few years.

Much of the report refers more to the southern and south central counties of the State than to that portion in the immediate vicinity of New York, so that the practical benefits to be derived by the farmers and truckmen by an increase in the transport facilities are not touched on with that fullness which is desirable, but on the other hand the report abounds with statistics which will be found of great value to the practical road maker, and will serve as a guide to the various township and borough authorities which have road matters under their supervision.

The work can be had by application to Mr. Burroughs at Trenton, and will be found of great value to those who contemplate making roads, either public or private.

A Stitch
in time saves nine. A stitch in the side often results in something far more serious, unless treated at once.
Allcock's
Porous Plaster
has saved many from lung diseases. It is invaluable for rheumatism, and pains in the back, chest or limbs.
When Purchasing do not only ask for "Allcock's," but make sure that you get it."
Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.
Brandreth's Pills
[illegible]

THE NEW CARPET.

Clever Local Verse by a Young Woman of 83 Years.

The following verse has just been issued in graceful booklet form from the pen of Mrs. Esther Kempster Miller. The poetess is 83 years of age, and her brightness of spirits and intellect is well reflected in her poems:

THE NEW CARPET.

THE INVITATION OF THE ENTERTAINMENT REQUESTED EACH ATTENDANT TO CONTRIBUTE AS MANY PENNIES AS HE HAD LIVED BIRTHDAYS.

Come one and all, both old and young,
Open your purse, and use your tongue;
The purse that all of us may know
By coins that each one will bestow,
How many years of life you've passed;
For well we know all have been asked
To donate thus for Carpet.

Your tongues, of course, tonight you'll use,]
With words and songs that will amuse;
Also of Birthdays you will tell,
And such you've had, we know full well,
For if you had not, we declare
That you tonight would not be here
To say we need a Carpet.

We've met to celebrate Birthdays,
And hope that every one will praise
The Giver of all good, that we
Recurring Birthdays live to see;
Some count but few, others count many
And for each one we give a penny
To swell the fund for Carpet.

Our boys and girls, who are so bright,
We welcome here with joy tonight;
Our young folks, too, we gladly greet
And always with them love to meet;
The middle aged we pass not by,
But welcome them as they draw nigh
To help us buy the Carpet.

The aged we will not omit,
For well you know they'll not permit
The wind or weather, cold or heat,
To keep them from their usual seat
In God's own house; though past four score,
And one is really five years more,
They ought to have New Carpet.

Then there's our Pastor, who, we know,
The Gospel light to us doth show;
Long, long, may he our leader be
And many birthdays live to see,
With his good wife to aid and cheer
Him in his work for many's year;
And both enjoy the Carpet.

Of Deacons also we must speak,
For they the Church's good do seek;
Deaconesses, too, whose constant care
It is the Pastor's work to share;
Trustees likewise have honors won,
For faithfully they've duties done.
All these deserve New Carpet.

Our Organist we must applaud,
For she much pleasure doth afford;
By skillful touch on Organ's keys
She doth the audience always please,
And the Precentor, whom we need
In sacred song doth us well lead,
May both long use our Carpet.

Of Ushers now we'll speak a word,
All of their courtesy have heard;
How strangers cheerfully they greet
And kindly lead them to a seat;
We thank them for their constant care,
And hope the time is very near
When they will tread New Carpet.

Leader and Teachers of Sunday-school
With scholars also as a rule;
And likewise Ladies' aid, whose plan
Is to do good where'er they can;
These join Endeavorers to procure
This comfort and success assure
By purchasing Church Carpet.

The Church, we say, for surely all
Should listen to its winning call,
Extend its influence on the earth
And keep in view its priceless worth;
Full fifteen years its course has run
And all its work has been well done.
It merits a New Carpet.

And now dear friends we'll close this rhyme,
Full well we know you'll say 'tis time;
Though you requested us to write,
It may be, what you've heard tonight
Has taught yourself not to renew
Such a request, so now Adieu.
But not unto the Carpet.

EASTER-TIDE.

Celebration and Election in All Saints Church, Scotch Plains.

The Easter-tide services in this parish were more than usually interesting and impressive. The beautiful church was very tastefully decorated with lilies and palms on Easter-day, and filled with people at the mid-day celebration of the Holy Communion. The choir was augmented for the occasion, Mrs. Force of Fanwood singing a very pleasing contralto solo at the offertory. The rector took pleasure in acknowledging his indebtedness to Frank W. Quereau the organist, and Miss Quereau, for their long-continued services in the music of the church. The young ladies of the Guild had charge of all the decorations, Misses Quereau and Bartlett being the special committee for the day.

In the evening, the Easter festival of the Sunday-school took place, with a large congregation present. Harry Robinson assisted the rector in the choral service and the general conduct of the festival, together with Charles H Kyte and Miss Kish, the organist of the Sunday-school.

Carols were sung; a beautiful floral cross made up with bouquets from the children; and the missionary "pyramids" opened, which brought in over $15 for missions of the Episcopal church, a very generous offering for the scholars who only number thirty-eight, and it certainly showed their interest in this important matter. On every side there was heard expressed the conviction, that it was the brightest Easter that All Saints Church ever enjoyed.

At the annual election on Monday night the following were chosen vestrymen for the ensuing year: Senior Warden—Frank W Quereau. Junior Warden—William H Carter. Vestrymen — August Frentz, Charles H Best, Edwin L Walworth, Louis E Kennedy, Thomas G Reynolds.

—Jedediah and Marjorie Bassett of "Ye Olden Tyme", with their village choir, will sing at Y. M. C. A. Hall the evening of [illegible]

WORKING GIRLS.

WILLING, ABLE, AND AMBITIOUS,

But Often Held Back by an Illness They do not Understand.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

A young and intelligent working-girl of Brooklyn, N. Y., graphically pictures the working-girl's life.

Day in and day out, month after month, she toils. She is the bread-winner of the family, and must work that others may live. Rain or shine, warm or cold, she must get to her place of employment sharp on time. With the sunshine and gladness all crushed out of her life, she goes on until she falls.

Oh! this pictures only one of thousands. Some work in cramped positions, but the great majority of working girls, so to speak, live on their feet.

Among the latter the symptoms of female diseases are early manifested by weak and aching backs, pains in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach. The "monthly period" is irregular; with some profuse, with others a cessation. The sure symptom, leucorrhœa, is present, and with faintness, weakness, loss of appetite and sleep. She may be sure that a womb trouble assails her. She knows not where to go for aid.

Miss Mary Smylie, of 2078 Susquehanna Avenue, Kensington, Philadelphia, Pa., urges her fellow working-girls to have faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

She says: "I am a working-girl, and must stand eleven hours every day. I have suffered terribly from painful menstruation and kidney trouble; and my head was so dizzy I could hardly see. I began to take your Lydia Pinkham's Compound some time ago. It was highly recommended to me by a friend. Now I feel like a different girl: no more aches and pains. I am praising it to every one. Our Druggist sells lots of it.

WAITE'S GREAT TROUPE.

Large Houses Attend the Production of His Splendid Plays at Popular Prices.

The presentation of the play "Beacon Lights" by the Waite Comedy Company in Music Hall last night was enjoyed by an audience that filled nearly every seat, a fact that testifies to the merit and continued popularity of these amusement-makers. The play last night was of the frontier style, though the tone of roughness was smoothed over by the comedy and pathos elements, combined together with dramatic skill so as to make an enjoyable and indeed instructive performance.

The principal characters were impersonated by David R. Woods and Carrie Louis. As the Western bully, Will Dawson, Mr. Woods, who off the stage is the energetic and brainy manager of the company, seemed to possess all the necessary requisites of roughness, toughness and repulsiveness of a "killer" who had a voice like a foghorn, but whose braveness depended on the number of firearms he carried about his person. Mr. Woods put his whole heart and efforts into the piece, and though the character was anything but a popular one with the audience, it was a necessary part, and his impersonation was realistic enough to win encomiums and bring success to the presentation. Mr. Woods is a finished actor as well as a genius of a manager.

Miss Louis was a bright, rollicking, sprightly and vivacious little piece of humanity, as Carrie Calhoun, the niece of Col. Clay Calhoun (Lee Sterett) who antedated before the late unpleasantness, but who was a gentleman still. In this character she was here, there and everywhere, and doing everything from stealing peaches to striking Dawson with a hatchet to keep him from abducting a child. Miss Louis plays with an enthusiasm that wins her way into the hearts of the audience from the start. Her singing specialties are a feature of each performance.

The parts played by Eugene Ellsworth, Walter Woods, Marguerite Crofton, T. J. Shearer, George A. Kimball, and Capitola Marshall were all well acted, and added much to the finish of the piece. The acting, singing and dancing of Little Ethel May were a continual delight to the audience.

The musical programme of the famous Waite premium orchestra is a feature that is well worth going miles to hear. The descriptive overture, "An Afternoon on Midway Plaisance", was beautifully rendered.

Waite's great company is in Plainfield for the week, and will give a performance every afternoon and evening. Splendid business is assured, and immense patronage is just what every show of Waite's deserves.

—Chinamen have leased the store on [illegible]

HOW SHE DROVE THE HACK.

Entertaining Method in Which an Enterprising Woman Gives Her Experience at Earning a Dollar for the Library.

The recent entertainment for the benefit of the Scotch Plains Public Library proved to be very enjoyable. The women having the matter in charge, by a deft arrangement of the chairs in the chapel of the Baptist church, gave a cosy and homelike look to the surroundings of the "experience meeting", at which those who had earned a dollar each in some unusual and and if possible extraordinary way were announced to confess by what exercise of ingenuity this had been done, either verbally or in writing, in prose or in verse. Music and recitations (the latter by Miss Lewis of Plainfield and others) varied the disclosure of experiences, ranging from aiding a husband to put up a stove, to driving a hack from Fanwood station to the old village of Scotch Plains in active competition with the sufficiently wide-awake hackmen in normal charge of this route. The latter invention was conceived and carried into effect by a woman who described her experiences in verse as follows:

In an unguarded moment I pledged my word
And my pledge a number of ladies heard,
That I'd earn a dollar in some odd way
And relate my experience here today.
I thought of the things I might possibly sell,
And also of things I could do fairly well;
But this thought came to me again and again
Why not bring a few friends up from the train.

So I hastened up stairs for my gloves and my hat,
Then ran to the window to look out for Pat,
And I called, be quick Patrick, harness up Dan,
I must get to the station as fast as I can.
And now in my wagon behind my fleet steed,
I thought of the Library, and oft of its need,
Which gave me the courage I needed full sore,
And soon I arrived at the station door.

But when the passengers began to come in
I had not the courage to help swell the din,
And the clamor the orthodox hackdriver makes
When his stand on the front of the platform he takes,
But to gain of the patronage what was my share
I offered a chromo to each then and there,
And to all who would take their passage with me,
And it worked like a charm as plainly you'll see.

My friend Mr. N——II it pleased to a dot,
And he being first had his choice of the lot.
Mr. C——r came next. Then I took up the reins
And we started in fine style for old Scotch Plains.
I had ridden in hacks and knew just wha to do,
So I made a great picture of putting Dan through,
While I said in an undertone, Don't go too fast,
Strike a nice gentle gait, you will get there at last.

Then I wrote to a friend who was staying in town,
That when she returned home, I'd carry her down,
And on the day set at about half-past three
Found my friend and her baggage awaiting for me,
Herself and her daughter, a bag and umbrella
A guitar and a camera, her friend and a fellow,
And surely, I thought, I shall make money fast,
The committee will wish that my business could last!

But I've earned my dollar and what man can say
That indeed I did not earn it in an odd way?
And I've but one regret now my mission is done
That it were not a thousand instead of but one!

—It is indeed gratifying to see such deserved and unanimous good will expressed for the retiring Borough Chief Marshal, Wm N. Pangborn. His record is without a flaw, and commands encomiums from Democrats and Republicans alike. Mayor Hegeman has had occasion both as citizen and councilman to keep an eye on Marshal Pangborn's actions, and highly praises his personal worth and official career. Mr. Pangborn has brought North Plainfield into a splendid condition, so far as public order is considered, and has done much good work as a peace-maker in settling disputes and ending personal quarrels without arrest.

Framing Their Objections.

The committee appointed at the Board of Trade meeting Thursday night, consisting of Messrs. J. D. Runyon, J. B. Coward and L. B. Woolston, held a conference last night to formulate objections to the undesirable portions of the proposed building ordinance. Among those who were at the conference and argued against the ordinance was James E. Martine.

Talking About Great Mines.

The Comstock Lode of Nevada has been the greatest producer of gold and silver in the United States, but its output after all has been only about one-third that of the Cerro de Pasco of Peru. Thursday night a talk will be given in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on the great gold and silver mines of South America.

Death of an Octogenarian.

The death of Mrs. Jane Hall occurred Sunday at her home, corner of Rock and West End avenues, in her 81st year, from paralysis. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 11 from her late home, and from the Second Reformed Church, Somerville, at 2:30.

Needs Attention.

The condition of Liberty street is a constant menace to the safety of horses traveling over it. In numerous places [illegible]

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.
THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.
Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour-Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.
Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.
The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.
Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,
73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.
Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.
COME EVERY DAY.
Whenever you come you find fresh features in Furniture and Household Wares to greet you. Just now nothing seems impossible in the line of economy in this store. Whatever you want maybe you can fill it here at a third—often half—the price you'll pay elsewhere. For instance:
PARLOR SUITS.
$20—Whoever thought to see such a splendid suit as this for such a little price? You'll wonder how the material can be bought for so small a figure and not count the making. Not many, only enough to keep the sale going this week, so you'd best be quick. Mahogany finished frame, five pieces.
MATTINGS.
15c. the yard and made in Japan. You know what that means. Quaint patterns, woven carelessly on a bright colored background. Some of the very prettiest patterns of the season. Brand new styles and the kinds that will win your approval.
DINING CHAIRS.
Fragile and delicate, stout and sturdy, and every one of them serviceable as can be. You needn't spend much time; close your eyes and choose, you can't go wrong. They are the most cheerful looking chair you ever saw, and the prices $1.25 to $3.00, with twenty-five cent go-betweens.
CARPETS.
High priced or low priced, the lining and the making and the laying free. That's what brings business to our carpet room. And you pay less here for the carpet than you're likely to pay elsewhere. Scores of fresh rolls added weekly, among them new patterns in the 65c. Tapestry Brussels and Super Ingrains.
An Unequaled Offering. Buy a bedroom suit here. You'll save the cost of spring and mattress. We give a strongly woven wire spring and mixed mattress with each bedroom set sold. A bouncing big offer, but it's away we have for making new acquaintances. Goods delivered free of charge to all parts of the State.
The Portland Range. You who have never heard about it, come to the store; you who have one, aren't you tickled?
The Storage House is making friends daily; such a well-lighted, well-ventilated place as it is, explains why. Satisfactory terms and satisfactory people to deal with. A 'phone call or postal will bring our vans to you door.
"Hello" Number 580

Planning to Celebrate.

There was a good attendance of members at the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., last night.

The Committee on Camp fire, which will be given by the Plainfield and Somerville Camps, reported that Monday evening, April 29, was decided on, and that it will be held in Somerville.

Plans for Decoration Day services were talked over, and the Camp decided to make the service in the morning at Scotch Plains a special feature.

An invitation was received and accepted from the Women's Relief Corps to attend the sociable to be given by them Friday evening. Wm. F. Barry Camp of Rahway also extended an invitation to the Camp to be present on the same evening, but on account of the Camp fire it could not be accepted.

David Copperfield, Casino, April 23.

The crowded condition of the Casino at the last Hospital Benefit was in the minds of many when the Underhill series was announced, and some stayed away from the first recital fearing the house would be "over-sold". Groundless fear! Such a deluge of patronage is like a Spring flood, and happens but once a year. The King's Daughters of Washington Park are not soliciting funds, but are inviting the public to enjoy a series of high-class entertainments, and to come in such numbers that their treasury shall feel it after all the expenses have been met. The house ought to be full, but not too full.

The Building Ordinance.

The committee appointed at the meeting of citizens held by the Board of Trade last Thursday, to examine building ordinance now before the Common Council, have had a meeting of the builders and architects, and have formulated several important changes which they will present to the public meeting to be held Thursday in the Board of Trade Building. [illegible]

Let Them Organize.

The Baseball Committee of the Y. M. C. A. who are endeavoring to organize a a team will have a meeting at 9:15 tomorrow night to consider the project. All lovers of this national sports are anxious to see a crack Plainfield team in the field this season, and if one is organized it would doubtless receive substantial support.

The Finderne,
FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.
Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.
HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.
(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you,
A. E. WHITE, Manager, Finderne, N. J.
1 9 tf

Prof. A. Wehner,
TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.
ALSO VOICE CULTURE.
Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipsic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.
References given and required.
Address letters to the office of this paper.
1 21 tf-e'4

CHESHIRE PIGS
For sale. Also fine thoroughbred Cheshire Boar.
APPLY
C. Ackerman.

A DARK NIGHT

SARAH ORNE JEWETT

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

CHAPTER I.

Many years ago two men were talking together one morning in the private room of a bank in the west of England. The senior partner of the house, a white-haired, sage-looking financier, was cautioning his companion, who evidently had their business enterprise very much at heart. There was something eager and adventurous in the younger man's appearance, in spite of the look that betrayed the country squire and lawyer that he was. The bank, personified by the elder man, was making an investment quite apart from its usual steady customs, to join the squire who was putting a good bit of money into a venture by sea. This money was to be forwarded to the port of Bristol to be shipped, and the two capitalists had received news from the captain of the vessel that he was sailing much sooner than had been his first intention. The difficulty was to find a proper messenger at such short notice, and the squire, who was something of a sportsman, had come to say that he had fallen in unexpectedly with a horse dealer, a very honest man, fearless and a good rider, whom he had known for many years, and who, fortunately, was on his way to Bristol the next day but one.

"The only defect he has is in being a stranger to the roads hereabouts; I mean between here and Bristol," said the squire. "But Rogers, you say, can go with him, and knows the way well. Weymouth has an English tongue in his head, but with so much gold to carry a man is sometimes glad to take a short cut, or a different turn, especially in these days where there is so much tramping and thievery. You never know whom you fall in with on the road. I must say I never liked the looks of Rogers—"

The squire turned quickly from the window where he stood with hands deep in his pockets, looking out in the street, and saw Rogers himself, who had come, soft-footed as a cat, from the outer room to stand behind the senior partner. The squire stared at him angrily.

"I knocked, sir," said Rogers, deferentially.

"I should hope so," answered the squire with coldness. But the clerk seemed to take no offense, and departed on tiptoe after handing some checks to his chief. The old man flushed a little and was disturbed. Rogers was his daily companion and made himself quite indispensable. To the squire he was only a subordinate, and apt to be presuming and curious.

"I don't like him, in spite of all you say," the squire grumbled to the senior partner a moment after the door was softly closed.

"Well, perhaps not as a companion," agreed the old gentleman with a smile. "I thought he looked crafty and sneakish myself at first sight, but he has been perfectly faithful and steady these six or eight years now, and I long ago gave up suspecting Rogers. He is curious, perhaps, but harmless, harmless."

"He'll wait forever for his chance, but he'll take it when he gets it," said the squire. "That is, if I know anything of human nature. I wish we had our money all in notes instead of so much gold, but we cannot risk the chance of our changing the notes in Bristol before the Mary and Bell sets sail. And my man Weymouth can hold his own, I'll warrant him. I hope he'll be prompt about starting. He as much as told me that it was not all business that keeps him here; he is paying attention to a young woman whom he hopes to marry. But he's a man of his word. 'Tis a good bit of work for him and money easily earned, as you may say, since he was going to Bristol a day later, at any rate."

The squire took his riding stick and gloves from the table and bade his old friend good morning. They shook hands heartily and had a cheerful word or two about their business and its probable success.

"See that they start at six o'clock Sunday morning, or even earlier," the younger man turned back to say. "The roads are heavy already with so much rain, and if I don't mistake the signs there's more coming. They can't get to Bristol at best before night. I don't know what sort of a mount Rogers will get. He'll soon worry a good horse out of his wits, I should think. Tell him that Fenderson is set upon sailing early."

"He'll wait a tide for his money," said the senior partner with assurance, tapping the arm of his chair. "He's a prompt man, is Fenderson, and an excellent shipmaster, but eighteen hundred pounds is a good sum to miss; his luck depends on getting it, you know. Still, I'll tell Rogers. Take a glass of Madeira before you go; will you join me, sir, 'tis toward noon!"

As night was falling two mounted messengers, spattered with mud from cap to stirrup, were riding wearily along a deep, worn country lane. They were in the north part of the county of Somerset, near the waters of the Severn. The lane itself, deserted enough that night, was a great thoroughfare for those who came from the south and west to cross over into Wales. By this immemorial stream of travel and the wearing of the weather it had been worn like a swift stream's channel, deep below the level of the country. One of the riders kept glancing fearfully at the bushy banks above him, as if he expected to see a head in the rode straight and stern in his saddle, and took no notice of anything but his horse and the slippery road.

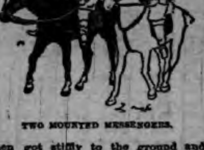
As they came, riding northward side by side, to the top of a little hill, Rogers, who wore a strangely pale and craven look, gave a sigh of relief, and his horse, which limped and bore the marks of having been on his knees, whinnied as if in sympathy. The wide, gray Severn spread before them; the high headlands sloped gently away on the right, and fell off like a cliff on the left; below the land was edged by a long line of dyke which fenced the sea from marsh and meadows that stretched away from the coast. Over the wide water drifted low clouds of fog and rain, and in the southwest a dull red gleam of fading winter sunset lightened but little the cold and stormy color of the sky. High above the Severn, at the road's end, stood a group of low buildings perched on the headland together, like a convent or a place of military defense.

As the travelers rode into the yard of the old Black Eagle inn in the twilight, the inn itself and all its stables and outhouses seemed deserted. There was a bare and empty look everywhere. The sunset just struck a last whip of rain at the two tired men, and Weymouth called impatiently to the hostler, and then got stiffly to the ground and stamped his feet and stretched himself as he stood holding his horse's bridle. The creature dropped his head low and steamed in the cool air.



TWO MOUNTED MESSENGERS.

There were two windows in the inn itself, dimly lighted, as if by firelight, and in another window in the landward corner a candle flickered faintly. The whole place seemed dull and unfriendly with its stony walls and roofs. Rogers grumbled with a plaintive whine, his companion shouted again with a strong, honest voice, and presently a stable door was flung open and two men came out. Inside, the light of an early lantern beamed comfortably, and the horses turned their heads that way, as if eager for their supper and warm bedding. There was no sound from within of stamping hoofs or cry of crowded and biting horses. The business was evidently at lowest ebb.

"Rub them down well and give them good feed as soon as you dare; full oats and scant hay. We must be on our way again two hours from this at least; we lost the road and were in haste at any rate," said Weymouth. "I'll come out and look after them in an hour. Mind they're not in the wind," he added. "Come, get down," he said in a colder tone to his fellow-traveler, who, through weariness or uncertainty, still sat his horse like a drooping statue. "Strike the mud off you; here, I'll help you, then," as the man gave a groan and tried to dismount. "After the first wrench you're all right. Come! you're none the worse for your cropper into clay and mud! Queer inn they keep here," he said angrily as they crossed the yard toward the door whither one of the hostlers had pointed them. They could hear a woman's scolding voice inside before it was opened.

As the mistress flung it open wide and stood on the threshold, she bade her guests good evening in a civil tone, but insisted somewhat ostentatiously that she desired no guests that night. She had ceased to keep the tavern since the travel had all gone, or been stolen away to the lower ferry. She had some people already whom she must make a shift to care for, old Welsh folk who had been put into the only room that could be used. She was giving up her lease to leave the place—

"We only ask for supper and a fire, 'tis but to rest our horses," said Weymouth, boldly making his way into the inner kitchen where the firelight looked cheerful. Rogers followed ruefully, limping and holding his shoulder as if he were badly hurt. When he sank into the corner of the settee his head dropped back as if he were ill, and his eyes shut as if their sight swam with giddiness. Such distress of weariness and squalor of mud and wet could not but appeal to the beholder.

Weymouth stood before the fire steaming like the horse he had just left and regarded his companion with pity and surprise. Then he gave himself another stretch, and yawned comfortably, and taking off his short cloak spread it carefully upon a bench. There was a stout leather wallet at his side which he unslung and put by the cloak at the fireside, handling it as lightly as he could, but not concealing the fact of its weight, or that such a broad-shouldered man as himself was glad to get rid of it. As he turned again he saw that the landlady had stopped her work among pans and crocks at the table and was watching him sharply. [illegible] his contempt and harsh words on the way. His fellow-messenger had been officious in his pretense of knowing every turn of road that would bring them quick and safe to Bristol, but he had taken the worst of his mistake with so bad a fall, if the color of his face were any sign, and it grew plain that Weymouth must somehow or other find the rest of the way to Bristol alone. In his heart he flinched for a moment, knowing what he carried and that he was a stranger; yet for some reason he had all that day distrusted the smiling clerk and his bland and double manner, and wished more than once that he were riding with a better man.

WITH A SINGLE CLUMSY LOOKING GLASS ON A TRAY.

"Get me some brandy," said Weymouth to the landlady, "and a glass for him when he wakes, a good stiff glass. When he wakes, you know, he'll need all that he can drink, 'twas a hard ride for so poor a horseman. I'll leave him here to-night; neither he nor his horse can go further. I must be on my way by ten or as soon as my horse is fit and has had his feed."

"Oh, no, poor lad!" exclaimed the woman, but there was something disturbed and dissatisfied in her tone. "He'll get to no Bristol to-night," she added, as she trotted off with more willingness than she had shown before and came back with a single clumsy-looking glass on a tray. Weymouth thanked her and took it in his hand and offered it again with much gallantry; but she shook her head, not displeased, and went back to her work.

Then the guest cast another glance at his fellow-traveler, who just at that moment stirred and groaned again, uneasily. Weymouth bent toward him, and shook him gently, holding the glass to his lips. The drowsy man was quick to know the welcome odor, and drank the brandy down with eagerness, opening his eyes wide and making a queer face as he finished.

"What's this?" said he.

"'Tis brandy," said Weymouth, laughing boyishly. "So you've forgotten how it tastes since noon!"

"'Twas not for him!" exclaimed the woman coming back from her cupboard angrily. "You might have choked a sleeping man!" she railed at Weymouth, and clenched her fist like a fury.

"Sleep, then," she said to Rogers, who laughed a little and gazed at her stupidly but much startled. "What's the odds, Betsy?" he faltered, as, if he knew her well.

"Betsy me none of your Betsys," said the rough-mannered mistress of the house, sharply; then, controlling herself, she caught up the empty glass, and her tone changed. "Some other drink would have done for him just as well," she said, in a wheedling whisper, and, returning to her shelf, she filled a second glass. Weymouth observed that it was fuller than the first, and accepted it amiably. The cross-grained creature had meant to pay him a pretty compliment in pouring him her best grog, and he thanked her civilly, with a proper toast to her good fortune, as he raised the glass to his lips.

He was still standing before the fire; something crossed his mind at that moment. The woman was by her table where she could see him, and with his hand covering the glass he tossed his head back gayly and pretended to drink. She turned away with a queer sigh. Rogers had shut his eyes again, and quick as a flash Weymouth threw the brandy behind him into the ashes.

CHAPTER II.

Weymouth did not leave his place by the fire, but stood there innocently drying his muddy clothes. The fire had caught a fagot and was cracking and snapping bravely; suddenly it shot up a strange gleam at the side which nobody appeared to notice, though it shone full in the face of the landlady and showed her to be more serene and less excited, and presently she became unexpectedly talkative.

"I do feel proper disgraced to be found so shiftless by you gentlemen," she apologized to Weymouth, whose face was in a shadow. "Custom is so poor that there was no counting on anybody from week's end to week's end. We're giving up our lease to go to America and said that on Monday we'd harbor strangers no more, and since then I've had five companies of traveling folk lighting down, all crying for the best, and being thankful for the worst before they got away.

"You'll wait an hour for your suppers at best," she added; "I'd no eggs by me, but I've sent up the road a bit; I cooked the last I had for the folks that was just before ye. An' I ain't got but the one room to show ye; the chimney fell an belongs to the t'other side the house. He'd ought to get t' bed," nodding at the poor crooked-necked figure on the settee. "I make bold to say I want my kitchen to myself. [illegible] stone deaf and crippled; an' the woman's body as was left wi' me by her son an' darter. They'll be getting a boat across 'arly, and I promised to mind her while they stepped along the dike to see friends they've got above. She's fast asleep, ye'll hear her snore from here, poor thing, and will neither trouble nor be troubled. I've drawed her curtains tight an' I've stocked the fire. You an' him can take a bit of rest" (persuasively) —"an' I'll do what I can for ye here."

INNOCENTLY DRYING HIS MUDDY CLOTHES.

The landlady's tone was peremptory as well as persuasive; she kept casting uneasy glances at Rogers, who seemed to be falling together in a heap in the settee corner. Weymouth hesitated but when the woman crossed the room and opened a door, he got his companion to his feet and managed to shuffle and drag him to the inner room and put him on the nearest bed. Rogers waked only enough to protest in a weak, strange way, and then fell off to sleep again, while his face grew very red as if the drink and hot fire had put him in a fever. Here there was a most depressing chill and dreariness. Weymouth hastened back to the kitchen for his cloak and wallet, declaring himself to need the better fire without and ready to insist upon the rights of a guest.

"'Tis newly lighted within, it burnt out and 'twas just made up now; 'twill soon be too much for you an' I'll hear complaints the other way!" the landlady answered him, good-humoredly. "You're not in a Lunnon inn, whatever you may think. Leave me your cloak an' I'll dry an' clean it. My own folks is coming in to their supper. Mind that poor soul ye brought, an' I'll do my best here."

At this moment there were loud voices in the yard and Weymouth stepped quickly toward the door full of a traveler's curiosity. "Stop!" said the woman in an insolent tone that made him confront her with wrath and amazement.

"'Tis but some teamsters, sir," she said, her eyes falling before his unspoken reproach of her manners, and going back to the wheedling tone she had taken earlier. "You're too heated, sir," she explained humbly, "an' 'tis wet without and blowing again. You'd best stay under cover while you may."

The inner room to which Weymouth returned was long and narrow with but one narrow window at each end. That toward the courtyard was shuttered and fastened on the outside and some of the glass was broken while there were cobwebs and dust that had long been gathering. The other window was high above the steep slope of the cliff and looked down at the dyke and the meadows and far over the gloomy water beyond.

The moon was rising behind the heavy mist and, though daylight was now completely gone, there was a strange dim light in its place so that Weymouth could presently see where he was, and he scanned the shadowy country with a growing belief in his heart that he was a prisoner and that he might be glad to escape from this not reassuring house of entertainment. Once or twice it had seemed from some look or gesture that they had been expected. Rogers and the landlady had undoubtedly betrayed the fact that they were not strangers to each other. If he had been a free man bound on one of his own journeys, nothing that had happened would have made him uneasy, but as the guardian of other men's gold he was more and more on the alert. Clearly the best thing now was to stay quiet for a brief time, for his horse's sake, and then to plead haste and push on. He would risk himself in a bit of fighting, even without his pistols which had been left in the saddle. For another half hour at least he would possess his soul in patience, then find his way to another inn less solitary and alarming. With a fresh horse and the night before him he could find Bristol himself. He clenched his fist and shook it at the man on the bed; their coming so far out of the way might perhaps be an accident, but Weymouth doubted more than ever the honesty of the man whom he had distrusted at first sight, and the drugged liquor was the surest proof of mischief. He found himself in a tight place.

As he looked down from the window into the misty night the great dismal plain of the Severn stretched away into the shadows of the distance. A fishing smack or small packet boat had crept up toward the headland and cast anchor under its lee. There was a lantern in the rigging and another dim light being brought upon the hill toward the inn. The wind was still blowing as if it had gone down with the sun, and risen less wild than before.

Weymouth left the window, uneasy enough in his mind; he could not see his way to escape in that direction; it was evidently too high [illegible] is not a secret remedy. It is simply the purest Norway Cod-liver Oil, the finest Hypophosphites, and chemically pure Glycerine, all combined into a perfect Emulsion so that it will never change or lose its integrity. This is the secret of Scott's Emulsion's great success.

Scott's Emulsion

It is the happy combination of these most valuable ingredients, materially increasing their potency; hence the great value of Scott's Emulsion in wasting diseases. We think people should know what they are taking into their stomachs.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!
Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1

Euterpe's Maiden Programme.

Following is the programme of the first grand musical entertainment by the Euterpe Literary and Musical Society of Plainfield in the Casino, Thursday evening, April 25, at 8:

PART I.

Overture—"Le Caleif de Bagdade", (Piano, six hands)..........Boildieu
Mrs. Korff, the Misses Vordermeier.
Soprano Solo—"Non Destarai"—(Romeo and Juliet)..........Ch. Gounod
Miss F. May Grant, Accompanied by
Miss Lillian A. Force
"Violinisms"—Solo, Variations, Trick Playing.
Emmett
Hugh J. Emmett.
Humorous and Artistic Mimicry and Impersonations..........Martyne
"Martyne."
Instrumental Solos and Duets—
Ocarina, Xylophone, Mandolin, Guitar,
The Musical Russells.
Humorous Musical Monologue..........Original
Hugh J. Emmett.

PART II.

Selection—"Twittering Sparrows"—(Piano, six hands)..........Bemberg
Mrs. Korff, the Misses Vordermeier.
Soprano Solo—"Nymphes et Sylvains" (Valse Song)..........Bemberg
Miss F. May Grant, Accompanied by
Miss Lillian A. Force
Diversified Melodious Selections, Tumbleronicon, Sleigh Bells and Piano,
The Musical Russells.
Ten Minutes With "Martyne".
"Sleep Little Darling"—(Violin Solo).
Wm. H. Rieger
Masters George and Oscar Smith.
Unconventional Ventriloquial Funnyisms,
Hugh J. Emmett. [Emmett

Sewer Work.

A section of the new 15 inch sewers was started on Plainfield avenue yesterday afternoon between Seventh and Eighth streets, under the supervision of Civil Engineer Harry O. VanEmburgh. The soil in this section is of sand, which is particularly good for building purposes. It makes it comparatively easy for the laborers in the trenches.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 28, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 26 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

4.37 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo; Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

6.58 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

9 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

Sundays, [illegible]

For Baltimore only [illegible] p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

[illegible]

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER.

New Plainfield Youth Are Taught the Value of Books.

The following is posted up in the "Children's Alcove" of the Free Public Library:

A few things to remember about the library:

1. That a library book should be treated even more carefully than a book that belongs to you.

2. That to treat a book carefully means that it should never be handled with soiled or moist hands, nor be laid down in any but a clean, dry place.

3. That you should never moisten your fingers in turning over the leaves.

4. That you should never write in, or mark the books in any way.

5. That you should never mark the place where you have left off reading by turning down the leaf or putting in pencils or letters.

6. That you should never leave a book lying open.

7. That a book should never be placed lopsided on a shelf.

Remember, that the more carefully you treat the books, the more children's books there will be for you to read, for the less money that the Library is obliged to spend for re-binding and replacing books that have been carelessly used, just so much more money will it have to spend for new books. So as you use the books try to remember the rules which I have written down for you, and see if you cannot always bring back the book in as good condition as it was when you borrowed it.

To Carry the Mails.

James Frisbie was yesterday awarded the contract for carrying the mail between the post office and the North Avenue station. Frisbie will receive $350 for the service, and furnish a horse and wagon when necessary in inclement weather. When the bids were first filed the lowest offer was for $480, but the Government postal authorities sent in word that they would not award the contract at that price, but if any one would take it for $350 they could have the contract. Mr. Frisbie accepted the suggestion, and will continue to push the famous three-wheeled red cart.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)
Station in New York foot of Liberty street.
Time Table in effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield, [illegible] p. m. Sunday, [illegible] p. m.

Leave New York, foot Liberty Street at [illegible] (except Saturdays) [illegible] p. m., [illegible] night. Sunday, [illegible] p. m.; [illegible] night.

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible] p.m. Sunday [illegible] p. m.

Leave Newark, at [illegible] (Saturdays only) [illegible] p. m. Sunday [illegible] p. m.

Passengers for Newark please change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible] p. m.; [illegible] night. Sunday [illegible] p. m.

Leave Somerville at [illegible] p. m. Sunday [illegible] p.m.

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible] p. m. Sunday at [illegible] p. m.

Leave Easton at [illegible] p. m. Sunday at [illegible] p. m.

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield at [illegible] a. m.; [illegible] p. m.

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

[illegible]

REAL WHALING.

BOWHEAD AND SPERM THE SPECIES VALUABLE TO FISHERMEN.

A Monster's Cunning Cannot Avoid the Effects of the Combined Harpoon and Dynamite Gun. Great Excitement For the Men.

"It was in the old whaling bark, Ohio, Capt. Ellis," said the narrator, "that I made my first whaling voyage. That was back in 1866. It is Pacific and Arctic whaling that I am speaking of.

"When cruising in those waters in search of whales, a whaler keeps three men aloft during the daytime.

"There may be days and days with never a cry from aloft, and then, on a sudden, will be heard the welcome hail to the deck of 'Oh, —, b-l-o-west!' The cry electrifies a crew as does 'Sail, ho!' from a cruiser's masthead when the enemy is the quest.

"The Captain immediately goes and makes an examination of the spouter through his glass. In the Pacific and Arctic waters there are two kinds of whales that he wants, and three kinds that he will have nothing to do with. The species that he wants is the bowhead and the sperm. The ones he does not want are the finback, humpback and the sulphur bottom. These may have other names but are not known by any other to whalers.

"The Captain is enabled to tell what manner of whale it is by the nature of its spout. The sperm whale is distinguished by the full, bushy sort of fountain which it projects into the air. If the spouts are at frequent intervals and if the water is thrown high in a slender jet, the Captain says nothing that is nice, descends from his perch and the vessel plods along her way.

"But, if the stream is low and much dispersed, there is a bracing around of yards and a clearing away of whaleboats. All hands are called on deck, and four of the five boats are manned and sent in pursuit of the whale. One boat is always kept in reserve in case of emergency, but only enough men are kept on board to trim sail and work ship.

"Whales have a most acute hearing and the swish of the boat through the water, even when propelled by silent canvas, is often enough to frighten a whale, and then he is off like a locomotive. Now, as for oars and rowlocks, such as are represented in most whaleboats exploits, this is rank absurdity. The splash of an oar would send a whale to the right about before you could get within a quarter of a mile of him. They are harder to creep upon than are the wild deer of the forest.

"Therefore the noiseless sail is used if there is any breeze, and if there is not, paddles such as the North American Indian uses in propelling his canoe are got out and the boat pushed toward the leviathan by cautious dips. Care is taken never to splash water, and the men move about in the boat in their stocking feet.

"A boat is never steered near a whale's head or near his tail. A blow from his tail would smash a boat into kindling wood and his jaws are generally big enough to crush a boat as easily as a nut cracker can break a filbert. Care, therefore is take to steer clear of the dangerous extremities, and to sneak alongside the monster's vast body.

"The steerer, meanwhile, has taken his station in the bow of the boat, the officer in charge being at the steering oar. The boat nears the big hulk of flesh and when near enough to strike, the steerer hurls the missile which he has held poised in air, and aims to strike the whale just abaft the fin.

"On the end of a short wooden shaft a detachable iron harpoon is fitted. On the head of the same shaft is fitted a dynamite gun pointed at the end, but not detachable from the shaft. Harpoon and gun cut into the flesh at the same time. A sharp jerk backwards detaches the harpoon, which remains fast in the whale and at the same time explodes the dynamite cartridge.

"If the steerer's aim has been true, the crew have nothing more to do except to back water quickly and watch the dying monster's agonies. That sometimes happens, but most often the whale is only maddened by the wound, and, plunging under the surface with a maelstrom swirl which half swamps his puny enemy, starts away with the speed of an express.

"Then comes the excitement and danger. The line which is fastened to the harpoon spins out so fast that the woodwork smokes where it rushes over the side, and Heaven save any one who becomes entangled in the zipping coils! The whipping rings would cut a man in two or amputate a leg or an arm quicker than a cleaver could cut an apple in two.

"The steerer, hatchet in hand, stands ready to cut the line should the whale not stop before it is all run out. The last fathom is called 'the bitter end,' and when that is reached the hatchet falls; otherwise the whaleship would drag the boat under water.

"But the lines are so long that that does not happen often. The whale generally stops before it has run out. When he does the line slackens, and then comes the supreme moment. No one knows where he is going to come up, and he is just as apt to come up directly underneath the boat as anywhere else. That has frequently happened, and very few boats or their crews have survived the happening.

"When the whale does reach the surface his rule is always to run. The boat's crew take a turn of the line around a bit, and give the whale his head. Then they hold on to the thwarts or gunwales and try to catch their breath as the boat whizzes along. For the whale it is a pace that kills. He keeps it up as long as he can, but race as he may, the imbedded irons will not draw and release him from his enemy.

"Finally he slackens his pace and then comes to a stop. The boat's crew tail on to the line and hand over hand haul the boat close to the whale.

"The rest is comparatively easy, supposing that the whale does not attack the boat. The man who, for some strange reason is called the boat steerer, changes places with the officer who has actually been steering the boat and takes charge of the steering oar.

"The officer who has relinquished it goes to the bow of the boat, and loading the bomb gun fires dynamite bombs into the whale. Whales are amenable to that argument when the missiles are rightly placed. All excitement dies with him, and then the plodding work of towing the carcass to the ship, of 'trying out,' and the tiresome task of it commences."

SCIENCE UP TO DATE.

EXTRAORDINARY THINGS THAT ARE NEW TO EVERYONE.

Gas Made Which Costs but 10 Cents a Thousand Cubic Feet and Is Brighter than an Incandescent Electric Light. Voice Photographed While You Wait.

An exhibition was given recently under the direction of the New York Academy of Sciences to show the progress science has made within the past year or so. It was the second show of the sort. The separate booths were presided over by the respective experts in the different branches which they represented.

The exhibits were strikingly arranged. Some of the most interesting exhibits were in the photographic department. Many pictures made by the recently contrived process of color photography decorated the walls. There were prints of Turkish rugs, of book bindings, and of paintings, in which the coloring was exactly reproduced. The negatives are made on specially prepared plates corresponding to the three primal colors, red, yellow and blue. When the red plate is exposed a screen is placed before the camera to shut out the green and yellow constituents, and the same process is observed with the other two. In making the reproduction an imprint is taken mechanically from the red plate with red ink, and the blue print and yellow print are superposed in the same way. The result is a copy of the original in all its colors and shades.

The same principle was used in the construction of an exhibit called a photochromoscope, which is soon to be placed on the market, together with a camera for making the triplicate negatives. The photochromoscope is somewhat like a stereoscope, except that the views appear in their natural colors. A box of mixed candies which was shown last night was startlingly realistic. A still further application was shown in an adjoining room in the shape of colored stereopticon views which were almost perfection. A man wearing a blue shirt and a red mustache and some views of the Palisades and the surrounding woodland in gorgeous autumn hues were especially satisfactory.

Dr. T. M. Cheesman's bacteriology booth was brought clear up to date by a specimen of diphtheria anti-toxine and the corresponding toxine. There were also bacteria of every sort in abundance, and with names in inverse proportion to their sizes. One of these, the bacillus prodigiosus, was the true cause, so the scientists say, of the miracle of the bloody host. The bacillus, they assert, grew upon the wafer or altar bread after its exposure in the church during the consecration of the host.

In the electrical department the process of electrolysis, as employed in making disinfectants out of sea water, was shown in operation. The disinfectant, made on the spot, was sprayed upon a glass slide fairly alive with microbes while the observer looked through a microscope and saw them stop short and shrivel up almost as quickly as if they had been suddenly frozen in.

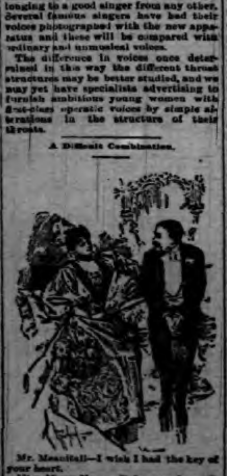
The new illuminating gas which is made from calcium carbide was also made on the spot. The process is a very simple one. The carbide is a by product of certain electrical furnace processes. It is put in a jar, water is poured on it and the gas is evolved. The cost is said to be 10 cents a thousand cubic feet, and a burner consuming a foot an hour and giving a flame of the usual size makes a light three times as bright as an ordinary incandescent electric light.

When the visitor was tired of looking at these things, and the exhibits in the departments devoted to geology, paleontology, mechanics, psychology and astronomy he could go and have his voice photographed in the department of physics. The contrivance for accomplishing this feat was exhibited by Dr. Floyd S. Muckey and Dr. W. Hallock. The victim was instructed to sing into an orifice and attune his cry to a fork which sounded the bass C. Inside the contrivance were resonance tubes set for C and for seven overtones or harmonics. Behind each of these was a drum which vibrated for the tone or a harmonic. These connected by rubber tubes with little jets of gas, so that the latter jumped up and down when the drums vibrated. The lights were photographed by a camera which was swung quickly past them, the resulting records being in the form of wavy lines. Each line represented the tone, or an overtone, and showed their relative presence in the voice tested. The stronger the tone was the wavier the line.

The object of the apparatus is to ascertain what proportion of overtones is desirable in a singing voice. Specialists have never been able to tell a throat belonging to a good singer from any other. Several famous singers have had their voices photographed with the new apparatus and these will be compared with ordinary and unmusical voices.

The difference in voices once determined in this way the different throat structures may be better studied, and we may yet have specialists advertising to furnish ambitious young women with first-class operatic voices by simple alterations in the structure of their throats.

A Difficult Combination.



Mr. Meanitall—I wish I had the key of your heart.

Miss Mercy Nares—It has no key. It works with a combination.

Mr. Meanitall—Is the combination a secret?

Miss Mercy Nares—Oh, no. It is wealth, position and a title.

—New York World.

LITTLE OPPOSITION.

Few Appear Against the Building Ordinance.

GRIEVANCE COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

A Lawyer, a Decorator and a Gas Fitter Chosen to Amend the Ordinance Which the Architects and Builders Have Drafted.

The meeting held in the Board of Trade rooms on Friday to discuss the provisions of the proposed new building ordinance was presided over by Frank W. Runyon, with Gus Smith as secretary. Between fifteen and twenty were present.

Mr. Runyon stated that some people were opposed to certain sections of the proposed ordinance and believed that they should be materially modified. Several had spoken to him concerning these things, and one of them was the portion of the ordinance which makes it necessary to build brick partitions in double houses outside the fire limits. Another section was the one which empowered the fire marshal or building inspector to prohibit the reconstruction of such a double house when more than fifty per cent. had been destroyed. Even if only fifty-five per cent. of the structure was injured the marshal could condemn the whole building and refuse to allow it to be repaired. In most cases of this sort hardships would ensue for the owner, because insurance companies would refuse to pay more than the damages to the part burned. These objections were not of his own, but were those that other persons had made to him and he offered them to the meeting simply as they had been made to him. He believed he violated no confidence when he stated that Corporation Counsel Marsh, who drew up the ordinance at the instruction of the committee, told him that if it went into effect it would be speckled with amendments before two years passed. Mr. Marsh formulated the document at the instructions and suggestions of the Councilmen, but this was his private opinion.

Secretary Smith read the third section of the ordinance from the correct publication in The Daily Press, as embodying some of the objectionable portions, at the suggestion of several present. An objection raised was the absolute power invested in the fire marshal in passing on plans submitted. It was said that it does not give the marshal any stated time within which to decide either one way or the other, and should he by any chance be a man of mercenary motives a great deal of trouble could be occasioned a property owner by holding his approval in abeyance.

Another objection raised was the one exploited in The Daily Press of last Monday by a correspondent—that of filing plans and paying fees even for the most minor of repairs. L. B. Woolston thought that such a condition would make it extremely hard on the individual of limited means. In fact, he said, the ordinance seemed to have been drafted in favor of providing plenty of work for architects. Of course this was not the intention of the councilmen, but results which it would attain in that direction were apparent.

Chairman Runyon said that he had understood the Council committee had endeavored to give all who were particularly interested in the ordinance a hearing before it was presented in an official form. However, he thought that some portions of it was too hard on the common people, by imposing restrictions that were unnecessary in a town the size of Plainfield. There was no question in his mind but what a building inspector was a needed official, but the ordinance was going too far in many respects.

J. B. Coward thought that section five in reference to cellars was very unfair, by reason of compelling a foundation of a certain size to be built for all structures, when in the majority of cases it would be totally unnecessary. The foundation, he considered, should be built somewhat in proportion to the structure it was to support, but the ordinance made it mandatory for a builder to have a cellar wall heavy enough to hold a large building, even though he was only to construct a small frame.

John D. Runyon said that a great many carpenters had called his attention to certain portions of the proposed ordinance as imposing provisions to be complied with on the part of the builder that seemed unnecessarily stringent. But carpenters as a rule, he said, were averse to making such statements in public, because they think that many would construe their utterances as being opposed to the ordinance so as to be able to put up cheaper buildings. But such was not the case.

Oscar S. Teale, the architect, stated that a very important thing was the building inspector which the ordinance would create on its adoption. It makes no qualifications for holding the office, except that the incumbent shall be a mechanic. A shoemaker was classed as a mechanic, and under the provisions of the code he could be appointed to the position. Such a thing of course was not intended, but the loophole was there to be taken advantage of some day if the appointing powers should feel so disposed. Every change and improvement must be approved by the inspector, and the incongruity of having a shoemaker or blacksmith passing on the plans of an architect who has spent years of study and experience in the business, was plainly apparent. He did not want to appear egotistical, but it seemed to cast a sad reflection on the ability of an architect. He did not believe that one man should have all the power to pass on plans and alterations. It was in conflict with the methods of most other cities. There were many things in the ordinance that were needed, but there was plenty else that should be modified. As a whole the ordinance was 50 years ahead of Plainfield.

J. D. Runyon was in a quandary as to just what the effect of section six would be—that part that relates to an approved fire cut-off at each floor.

Mr. Teale replied that that was one of the admirable sections of the ordinance. The effect was to make a slow burning building.

The discussion was finally closed, and a motion made that the chairman appoint a committee to frame objections to the undesirable portions of the ordinance, and report at an adjourned meeting next Thursday evening in the Board of Trade rooms. The chair appointed J. B. Coward, L. B. Woolston, and J. D. Runyon.

In all probability at the next meeting a committee will be appointed to present such objections as may be made to the Council, and petition them to defer its adoption until a public hearing can be had.

The committee appointed last night will confer with architects and builders during the week to seek out the objectionable features.

A STARTLING FACT.

Sixteen Per Cent. of Life Insurance Applicants Rejected on Account of Diseased Kidneys.

Dr. Lambert the General medical director of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, New York, is reported to have said: "We reject sixteen per cent. of the applications for insurance, and I have saved the entire expense of this medical department by the rejection of applicants who had diseased kidneys, and who died within two years after I rejected them."

This appalling statement should have the attention of our citizens. There is no reason today why people should allow kidney disease to get such a hold on them. Nature sends her warning in the slight pain in the back, poor circulation of blood, sediment in the urine. When any of these symptoms appear, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy should be taken in small doses at once, and thus drive the poison out of the blood and restore the kidneys to healthy action. To sure knowledge this is the only medicine that surely cures this almost universal complaint.

We note the recovery of Mr. Oscar Lambert of Jerico, Mo., whose case has been talked of in the papers the world over. Quoting from his letter to the press, Mr. Lambert says: "I neglected the first symptoms until I found myself in bed with a complicated disease of the kidneys. No mortal ever suffered more and lived. My physician failed to help me. I then used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It relieved my kidneys almost immediately, and in a few weeks I was clear of all pain, and entirely cured.

Favorite Remedy has had more free advertising in the columns of the daily papers than anything we know of, from the fact that it does as is promised—cures disease.

AT REST.

Hattie M. Christensen.

Hattie M. Christensen, daughter of John Christensen of Woodland avenue, was laid to rest in Hillside Cemetery yesterday. She was in her sixteenth year, when attacked by the disease that caused her untimely death. Last Spring she was confirmed by Bishop Scarborough, becoming a member of what is now St. Stephen's Church. Up to her last illness, she had been a devoted member of the Sunday-school and sewing class of that church, and her coffin was covered with flowers sent by her associates. She was ill nine days, and in all that time she repeated in the delirium of fever the Apostles Creed and the Commandments many, many times. The pall-bearers were Superintendent Phillips of the Sunday-school, Warden Guion, and Vestrymen Finch, Sturtevant, Leake and Beals.

DUNELLEN.

E. H. TenEyck has gone to Minneapolis on business.

Master Herbert Wyckoff is entertaining friends from out of town.

Oscar Liebe is visiting relatives in Newark.

C. A. Harrison, operator for the Tidewater Pipe Company, is entertaining friends from Bedminster.

Mrs. Rand of Plainfield returned yesterday after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Nelson of New Market.

A New Business Firm.

Curtis M. Thorpe of the former firm of Thorpe & Ivins, has bought the mantel and tile business heretofore carried on by John J. Shotwell, and has rented one of the stores in the Y. M. C. A. Building. Mr. Thorpe intends largely to increase the stock, and provide facilities to prevent all necessity of going out of town for anything in this line of goods.

Mr. Shotwell will continue with the new concern.

A Runaway Horse.

While driving in the lower part of the city yesterday afternoon about 4:30, the horse of R. C. Baker became frightened and started to run away. Mr. Baker jumped out of the wagon, and the horse ran up West Fifth to New street and then over West Front as far as Grove, where E. S. Jones was knocked down, but not injured. Arthur B. Horton and several bystanders caught the animal, and no further damage was done.

—Machinery, electric motors, bicycles, boilers, and pipes, needing repairs, are given prompt and skillful attention when orders are left with Magee & Son, Richmond and Third streets. New machinery will be made to order, or parts replaced.

—Gavett is closing out all the odd pieces of his stock, at bargain prices.

OBITUARY.

Frederick Knowland.

Frederick Knowland died Thursday at his Plainfield home, 443 East Seventh street. He was seized with a hemorrhage two months ago, and made a six-weeks trip South, and on coming home was somewhat improved. But more serious conditions developed, and in spite of medical skill and good nursing he sank steadily.

Mr. Knowland began life in Pittsburg and among his early companions were Mr. Stewart, superintendent of the freight department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Mr. McCullough, Vice-president of the P. R. R. To use Mr. Knowland's phrase, "they were barefooted boys together". Later he worked as a freight-handler on a Mississippi steamboat, and still later he spent several years on the Western plains endeavoring to build up a robust constitution. He there met with many thrilling adventures which he used to enjoy relating to his friends.

By hard work and through his own abilities he became general freight agent of the Consolidated Union Central and Pacific railroad, and had entire charge of the system of roads, in the freight department, under Jay Gould's administration. He was Jay Gould's right-hand man in this respect, and enjoyed his confidence fully. It is said that when Mr. Knowland would begin talking and bring the first two fingers of his right hand at almost a right angle, closing the others, that Mr. Gould quietly folded his arms and approved of everything he said. During the war Mr. Knowland is said to have had charge of the transportation of more troops than any other man who occupied a similar position. He did the work for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and received great credit for his executive ability.

Mr. Knowland was wont to spend his vacations on his farm on the Alleghany river near Pittsburg. A tributary of the Alleghany runs through Mr. Knowland's farm, and fine sport is enjoyed in fishing. Mr. Knowland used to say that were it not for this recreation and diversion afforded him by visiting his farm he could hardly stand the heavy strain of hard work devolving upon him. "When I returned to my office yesterday after two or three days absence" said he, after a recent vacation, "I found a stack of letters as thick as your body awaiting me. Work hard? Why I am compelled to work hard—I can't help it."

He was a generous-hearted man, and many discovered this good quality beneath his business-like demeanor, much to their own satisfaction and personal comfort. His own life had been an adventurous one and he took pleasure in giving others the advantage of his experience.

He was an active Republican, and for one term a Plainfield Councilman. He leaves a wife and two married daughters.

Mr. Knowland was a warm comrade on fishing expeditions of the late Senator Robert Livingston and Banker Alex. Taylor of New York.

THE RUSSIAN HONEYMOON.

Amateur Theatricals for the Benefit of the Relief Fund.

In Music Hall, May 9, in aid of the Relief Fund and under the patronage of the Relief Association, there will be produced "A Russian Honeymoon", a three-act comedy adapted from the French by Eugene Scribe.

The cast will include Constantine P Balli, W R Cook, Fred W Walz, Howard Huntington, Miss Grace Cooley, Mrs L W Serrell, Jr., and Miss Caroline Randolph.

The costuming and stage setting will be correct and elegant. No effort in work or expense will be spared to make the event a great success.

The chorus singing will be by members of the Choral Society. There will be 40 people on the stage at one time.

Alfred Young is coaching the rehearsals, which are already in progress.

Music Hall has been chosen as a result of the recent overcrowding of the Casino.

MUSIC HALL SOLD.

William M. Stillman the Purchaser, for $12,000.

The trustees of the Stillman Music Hall property last night met and authorized the sale of the hall to Wm. M Stillman for $12,000.

The transfer will be effected before May 1. The sale is subject to Joseph Bohl's lease, which holds till Sept. 1.

A Narrow Escape.

Mrs. Todd of East Front street accompanied Mr. Stevenson of the Riding Academy to Washingtonville a few days ago for the purpose of purchasing a horse.

When nearing their destination a small boy appeared in the road with a wheelbarrow. The horse Mr. Stevenson was driving became frightened and tried to run away. One wheel of the carriage was broken, and Mrs. Todd was thrown out, but was not injured. She was taken in a house nearby and after the excitement was over brought to Plainfield.

Mr. Stevenson was not injured and he succeeded in holding his horse.

Favors Tidewater Disposal.

Warren Hardenbergh, Jr., C. E., of New Brunswick, was a visitor in Plainfield yesterday, and was interested in the consideration of the sewers. Mr. Hardenbergh has built a great many sewer systems in the South, and is particularly well versed in the sewer question. He said that the Plainfield system would undoubtedly prove a success, provided that tidewater disposal was adopted.

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY

WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF

DUKES MIXTURE for 35 cents

Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or ATC

2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

Space	Weeks 1	Weeks 2	Weeks 3	Months 1	Months 2	Months 3	Months 6	Months 12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	13.00	24.00	30.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	65.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes (Menus)
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. —6 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
F EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Sole manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

L. B. WOOLSTON. A. P. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS SUPPLIES. 143-145 NORTH AV

ELASTIC HOTEL BILLS.

How Drummers May Beat a [illegible] on Their Employer's Bank Account.

"How much shall I make out your bill for?" inquired the country hotel clerk, as the guest was leaving.

"Make it out for what I owe," replied the man, a little surprised.

"The bill is $8," continued the clerk, with an ingratiating smile, "but I'd just as soon make it out for $9 or $10. It's all the same to us."

"Perhaps it is," the puzzled guest exclaimed, "but it isn't to me. Why should I pay $9 or $10 when my bill is $8?"

"Aren't you a drummer?" the clerk suddenly demanded.

"Certainly not." There was a pause, and then the guest suddenly demanded:

"What's all this business about fake bills, anyway?"

"We always make out bills 'to suit' for drummers," explained the clerk, "so's they can come out even on their expense accounts. A traveling man who pays us $6 can get a receipt for $10 if he likes, and when he settles with his employers he shows them the receipted bill and pockets the difference. I thought you were a drummer."

"No, I'm not," replied the guest, "but I know a good many drummers. In fact, I employ about a hundred, and I notice that when they come to this town they always stop at this hotel. I observe, also, that it's a $2 joint and that I'm always charged $3.50. Never mind, though, I'll lay for the next man who stops here."

And as he went out the clerk looked as if he thought he had put his foot right in it and the foot was held there.

The Sure Signs All Failed.

There is a young couple in this city who can never go away from home together without being taken for a newly married pair. So they decided to ask the waiter at a hotel where they stopped what the signs were. The gentleman began the conversation.

"Would you think we were just married, John?" he asked, on the second day after their arrival.

"Yes, sah," said John, with a broad grin. "I spotted you as soon as I see you. I been ten year in dis hotel, an' dere can't nobody fool me."

"Now, John," said the supposed bridegroom, as he slipped a fee into the waiter's palm, "just tell me what the symptoms are."

"Dere's a heap of 'em, sah," answered John. "I hears you ask yoh lady at breakfus if she like briled eysters, an' you tell her she mus' learn to drink her tea straight, 'cause it was bettah, an' you ask her what she want to go fus; dems all signs, certain suah, sah."

"But," said the young matron, "don't old husbands talk in the same way?"

"No, indeedy, miss—'scuse me, ma'am, they don't, indeedy. Sides, yoh gentleman hand you de mornin' papah, 'sted of readin' of it himself. An' dere ain't no gettin' aroun' the lovin' looks he's been castin' on you, miss," and John smiled with an air of superior wisdom.

"Now tell us how the old married men conduct themselves," said the lady.

"Dey's mighty short, miss, mostly, an' read the paper jes like dey was alone."

"And the lady, what does she do?"

"Jes waits, miss. Kind of looks tired, an' waits, an' look at the res of the folkses in the dining room. You see, miss, it's a heap of difference, an' taint all in the close dey wears, either, dat makes the honeymoon—no, sah, it ain't."

They did not undeceive John, and he does not yet know that for once all his signs had failed him.—Detroit Free Press.

Garfield as a Book Reviewer.

Concerning Garfield's inordinate love for books a new story is told here. When he first came to Washington his salary was not sufficient to support his family and to gratify his taste for literature, and it was his large expenditure for new books, in fact, which kept him poor and added to his difficulties. In those days Garfield devoured every new book that came from the press, and his mania in this direction led to an arrangement between himself and the proprietors of the book store here. At the time publishers were in the habit of sending two copies of all new works to dealers for the purpose of securing reviews in the newspapers, and this firm asked Garfield if he would like to have the new books turned over to him for review. "I never saw a happier man than Garfield was when this proposal was made to him," says the book dealer. "He fairly hugged me for joy. Every night thereafter for three years he would stop at the store on his way from the House and take home with him an armful of new books. Then he would sit up nearly all night, reading these and writing out notices for the newspapers, bringing us the copy the next morning. I can turn to the files of the old newspapers and show you columns of book notices written by Mr. Garfield."—Chicago Times-Herald.

He Pasted the Labels On Again.

A Chicago woman who has traveled extensively and who intends to make her annual departure for Europe in a short time sent her steamer trunk to a Randolph street establishment to be repaired.

The workman who was put in charge of the job was a willing soul and he wanted the trunk to appear as if it were new. Accordingly, he went over it with hot water and a sponge, and peeled off all the disfiguring labels placed there by the steamship companies, railways and hotels of foreign countries.

He did not know that the especial pride of a traveler is the number of labels on his trunk. These labels show that she has been in London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, Constantinople and Cairo, stopping at first class hotels and traveling by the best routes. A trunk has no dignity until it is plastered over with the colored pieces of paper.

The workman didn't know that—at least, not until the woman came in to inspect the repairs, and then there was a scene.

First, she screamed, and then she wanted to break down and cry. The proprietor told how sorry he was, and the workman made his frightened apology. He happened to remember that he had thrown the labels into a waste basket, so he searched and found most of them, although they were torn and badly crumpled.

However, he spent two hours in piecing out the labels and sticking them back on the trunk, so there was some balm for the woman's feelings.

Now there is a rule in that shop:

"Never remove a label from a trunk or valise."—Chicago Record.

GRANT AND BADEAU.

The Latter's Part in Writing the Grant Memoirs.

When the war broke out the late Gen. Badeau volunteered in the Federal army. He was appointed captain and aide-de-camp on Gen. Thomas W. Sherman's staff, and served until April, 1863, when he was transferred to the staff of Gen. Q. A. Gillmore. In the same month he again joined Gen. Sherman's staff and served until May, 1863, when he was transferred to the staff of Gen. Grant. On May 27, however, he was severely wounded in the assault on Port Hudson, and was unable to join Gen. Grant's command until March, 1864, when he recovered, and was made military secretary to Gen. Grant, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

He served with Grant in the campaign of the Wilderness and in the operations before Richmond and Petersburgh, and until 1869, when he was retired with the full rank of captain and the brevet rank of brigadier-general.

From May to December, 1869, Gen. Badeau served as secretary of the American Legation in London, and in 1870 was made the bearer of dispatches from this government to Madrid. He was consul-general to London in May, 1870, and held that post until September, 1881.

In 1877 and 1878 he accompanied Gen. Grant in his trip around the world. He was consul-general to Havanna from May, 1882, to April, 1884, but resigned because he was not permitted to substantiate charges made by him against the State department. He declined two appointments in the diplomatic service, one being that of minister to Belgium, which was offered to him by President Grant in 1875, the other that of minister to Denmark, offered in 1881.

In 1868 Gen. Badeau began his "Military History of Ulysses S. Grant," which occupied him sixteen years. His other literary works are "The Conspiracy, a Cuban Romance;" "Aristocracy in England" and "Grant in Peace."

In 1884, when Gen. Grant undertook his "Memoirs," he employed Gen. Badeau to assist him in compiling and editing material for the work, and it was in connection with that undertaking that the quarrel arose between the two which resulted in the disruption of their friendly relations, and a lawsuit brought by Gen. Badeau against the estate of Gen. Grant after the latter's death.

The suit was brought on Oct. 7, 1887. Gen. Badeau alleged in his complaint that he had been engaged for sixteen years prior to 1881 in the preparation of his "Military History of Gen. Grant," with the understanding between them that Gen. Grant himself should never write an account of his life. Gen. Badeau averred that he had spent $10,000 on the work, in addition to his time, for which he had never been reimbursed.

He alleged that in July, 1884, Gen. Grant sent for him to assist in his work on his own memoirs, and that while driving one day Gen. Grant proposed that if Gen. Badeau would help him to write the book he would give him $5,000 out of the first $20,000 derived in profits, and $5,000 more out of the next $10,000 in profits.

Gen. Badeau alleged further that there was a secret agreement entered into between Gen. Grant and himself, and intimidated that it was to the effect that the authorship of the work should be a joint one, but that he was only to share in the profits. In his affidavit Gen. Badeau said that the "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant" was the joint work of Grant and himself to the extent that he "put all his knowledge of the subject and literary experience at Grant's service, to extract from said Grant his own ideas, to revive his memories, to arouse his thoughts, to inspire his judgment and expression, and afterward to correct his statements and revise his language, so that it should be more than ever Grant's."

He alleged that Gen. Grant said to him: "Badeau, I know I could never have written this book without you; no one else could have done what you are doing for me; no one else knows me or my theme so well. I think I could have written a very passable account of what I recollect, but I know the value of your corrections of my grammar and revision of my style, and of your arrangement, and, above all, of your suggestions, and I am very grateful to you."

Gen. Badeau alleged further that when he and Gen. Grant first talked of the work they estimated the profits at $30,000, of which he was to have one-third, but he said that the profits had been more than ten times as much, or $300,000, and asked for an accounting of the money received by Mrs. Grant on account of the book and that his just share be awarded him.

The Grant family, while admitting the justice of Gen. Badeau's claim from a monetary point of view, denied that there was any secret agreement between Gen. Grant and Gen. Badeau, and alleged that the latter's only connection with the work had been that of an amanuensis.

In her answer to Gen. Badeau's complaint Mrs. Grant said that she had never been unwilling to reimburse Gen. Badeau for the assistance he had rendered her husband in the preparation of his book, but she resented the insinuation that Gen. Badeau was in any sense the joint author of the work, and demanded that Gen. Badeau retract what he had said on the subject before she would consent to a settlement of the matter.

Gen. Badeau finally signed a statement that no secret existed between Gen. Grant and himself that, if divulged, would affect Gen. Grant's honor, and the suit was settled on Oct. 30, 1888, by the payment to Gen. Badeau of $10,000.

Fate Was Kind to the Baby.

A touching story comes from Turin. In a narrow valley, near the celebrated Thermae di Vinadio, there is a little hamlet, which, every winter, is almost completely separated from the rest of the world by the snow. A few days ago an avalanche rolled into the valley, and, reaching some of the houses, carried off the roof of one and completely crushed and buried another, in which were two peasants and their child. The neighbors immediately proceeded to dig them out, making a tunnel through the snow, but found the mother and father dead. The baby, however, was found in its cradle under two tables which had fallen one against the other, forming a kind of roof. A dog was also in the cradle, with its nose against the face of the child.

Queen Victoria's Mare.

The Queen's favorite riding mare is called Jessie, and has now attained to the ripe old age of twenty-six years. It may surprise some to know that as recently as three years ago this mare carried Her Majesty upon her broad back. Jessie is first favorite among the Queen's horses, and whenever Her Majesty is at Windsor is taken up to the castle for in

TELEPHONE COMPANY

OPERATING CONNECTION WITH OVER [illegible] SUBSCRIBERS—[illegible] AND [illegible], PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—[illegible] North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett, Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Horsley Barber Grove and Front sts
G W Y [illegible] 4th and Park avenue
Frank Horsley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville.
F B Goodridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 5th street

Subscriber's Name	Address
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	[illegible] West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	66 Grove st
Adams H C	315 E 6th st
Addis & Son	122 North av
Andrews F E	213 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 5th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 3d st
Babcock, Geo H	5th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, E W Dr	Dunellen
Boone C W Dr	9th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave, and 9th st
Boughton, J B	Park av and 3d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	125 E 5th st
Blair A C	169 North av
Bates, Runyon & Co	222 Park av
Board of Education	5th st and Arlington av
Booth, E H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	412 Central av
Central Times	102 E Front st
Clark, E R	221 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	457 North av
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
CONSTITUTIONALIST Office	305 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	220 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	36 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	69 Somerset st
Chase, E F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
DAILY PRESS	105 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	429 W 6th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	3d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force S L	22 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	311 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	422 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1017 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do do	227 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	4th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 9th st
Hageman, R. A	103 Sycamore avenue
Hodges, Dr. Ellis W	908 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	103 North av
Howell R O	191 North av
Holmes E R	200 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	30 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	229 Park av
Ivins D C	221 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	219 W Front st
Kaufman W T	545 W 7th st
Kelly & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	9th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W H	130 Jackson av
Lowrie H R, Dr	512 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L H	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	227 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Mollison A D	305 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	156 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	109 E Front st
[illegible] W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	37 Rockview av
McQuaide James E	722 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
[illegible] G W Y	Park av and 4th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	628 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	227 Watchung av
Murray J W	312 W 6th st
Music Hall	498
Myers, J K	120 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Paxton T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	254 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	6 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	306 Park av
Potter, C jr	407 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	405 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	149 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, E. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	17 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	46 Belvidere av
[illegible] L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	466 W 4th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	125 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 6th st
Rogers, D W	320 W 2d st
[illegible], Mrs J	Cor. [illegible] & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	202 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	415 Madison av
Robinson, Dr Edward	426 Park av near Fifth st
Rankin, H. C	102 4th st
Runyon, Chas W	119 North av
Rice, E. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Arlington av
Saunders W L	35 Mercer av
Sorrell, Lemuel W	426 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, E J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	37 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W F	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
[illegible], E A	1303 Hillside av
Stevens F E	302 South av
Stevens Geo C	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	123 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry F	Netherwood
Taylor Miss M E	30 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Gale	309 W 3d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 [illegible]
Thompson, A D	[illegible] road
Thompson, Jas A	[illegible]
[illegible], Jas M	412 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	323 LaGrande av
[illegible]	[illegible]
Tracy, J Evarts	[illegible]
[illegible] W J	[illegible] Watchung av
Tweedy, C. B	125 Crescent av
[illegible] & Bros	178 W Front st
Union Beef Co	[illegible] E 3rd st
United States Express Co	180 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	115 North av
Wadsworth, W E	409 5th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	406 3rd Place
[illegible], E	[illegible] West Seventh st
[illegible], J F	W 5th st., near Grant ave
[illegible]	144 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	50c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	30c	Hoboken N J	25c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	[illegible]
Bath, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	20c
Bayonne N J	30c	Islip N Y	65c
Bergen Point N J	30c	Jamaica N Y	40c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	25c
Bay Shore N Y	70c	Keyport N J	30c
[illegible] N Y	60c	Kingston N J	30c
Belleville N J	20c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
[illegible] N Y	[illegible]	Leonia N J	45c
Bloomfield N J	30c	Little Neck N Y	60c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	60c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	50c
Brooklyn N Y	30c	Madison N J	40c
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	30c
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	30c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	30c
Chatham N J	30c	Morristown N J	45c
Chester N J	45c	Newark N J	15c
Cole's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	25c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newtown N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	25c
Dover N J	45c	Orange N J	25c
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	40c
Eatontown N J	50c	Passaic N J	30c
Elizabeth N J	15c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	25c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	15c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	50c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	60c
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	30c
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	35c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	30c
Franklin Park N J	20c	Staten Island N Y	35c
Freehold N J	55c	Westfield N J	15c
German [illegible]	70c	Woodbridge N J	25c
Glen Cove N Y	60c	Yonkers N Y	40c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	40c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	45c

The Name Is Everything.

The many tricks of trade that are practiced in these times are justified by a prominent soap manufacturer of Philadelphia as being positively necessary to influence a stupid public to buy what is for their benefit. The article in which he takes the most pride is a pure Castile soap, purer and better than that made in Castile. He stamped it as American Castile and was unable to sell any quantity. The people would not buy what little was taken by retail dealers. Under these circumstances the manufacturer changed the stamp on his soap to one abounding in Spanish words which meant the same thing. Since the change in stamp the sales have been remarkable and the soap is ever gaining in popularity.—Philadelphia Record.

A Robin Dined With the Captain.

Touching instances of the recent stress of weather comes from the mountainous districts of Wales. At Ffestiniog a sheep actually walked into a house and placed its forelegs on a lady's lap to beg a bit of bread which she held in her hand. At Barmouth a robin took up its quarters on board a steamship (the Telephone), accompanied it on its voyage to Liverpool and back again, and at dinner hours hopped on to the table and dined with the captain.

A Compliment.

"That boy of yours, madam," remarked the conductor as he punched the half fare ticket, "looks remarkably well developed for a child under 12."

"Thank you," replied the lady very calmly. "It's so gratifying for me to have any one notice Tommy's remarkable precocity."—Chicago Record.

According to Dean Hole there are fifty silly young men for one silly young woman.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc. Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
NEWARK, N. J.

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, [illegible], will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
J. FRANK HUBBARD, [illegible]
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. [illegible]. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. Box [illegible], or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence [illegible] E. Front street, corner [illegible] avenue. [illegible]

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place. Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Offic cor. Front St. and Park Av.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST. [illegible]

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE: CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
20 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 326 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to.

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. artistically performed.

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware needing to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.
[illegible] of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODDINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Office corner of Park avenue and Second street.

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer,
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 122, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES R. [illegible],
Dentist,
48 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
(Successor to T. J. Carey,)
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—24 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box [illegible]. Piano moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 20½ W. Front street, to [illegible] West Front, one door west of Madison Avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 3 doors above [illegible]

MR. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cures stopped in an incredibly short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month.
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
[illegible] Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning.
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6.

Estey
Pianos
and Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS,
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., [illegible] were plan was seen and nobody would with decency oppose his. He would call for his horse presently and ride away. Yet if it were known, as he suspected, that he was carrying treasure, it would still take courage to start out alone on a tired horse.

He sat down by the fire and looked about him. There was little furniture in the place except the two old beds, one with its closed curtains of thick stuff and the other, a poorly-posted makeshift of comfort on which Rogers lay. The old Welsh woman breathed loud now and then, but Rogers slept as if he were dead. "Curse him," muttered Weymouth. "He should have known his roads or let an honest man alone."

There was a loud voice in the kitchen; the landlady could be heard now and then railing fretfully at some one, who was not slow to answer back. His thoughts, like those of a tired man, went back to the past and he seemed to himself curiously indifferent to the perplexities of the present. He had just left the woman he loved, disappointed by her coldness. She was younger than he, they had not known each other long, but after a separation of some months he had joined her with the hope of marriage only to find that she had changed, that she put him off and spoke doubtfully of the future. She had confessed that it was no change in her own feelings, but that she feared to bring shame upon him, and the thought of her lonely figure as they parted returned to him like a vision. She had refused to see him again; this was two days before; and the journey to Bristol must be quickly over so that he might go back to plead with her. It was wrong to have parted angrily as he had done—if ever life was in a snarl it was now, but there were ways to conquer. He started to his feet and went quickly toward the kitchen only to discover that the door had been fastened on the outside.

He coolly let the latch fall and returned to his chair; beside it was the heavy pouch of notes and gold and he slung it over his shoulders and fastened the belt with steady fingers. The sudden wave of eagerness a brave man feels in the presence of danger and that brief space while the troubles of his own heart came uppermost both passed quickly; there was a single moment when Weymouth remembered that he was a tired and defenseless man at the mercy of his foes. Then his fears most nobly passed; he must not only escape to plead with Elizabeth Brent, but he was bound in honor to carry his wallet to Bristol to Capt. Fenderson, of the ship Mary and Bell.

He had a feeling that he was watched. What about the old Welsh woman? It was by no means uncommon for travelers to be crowded together in country inns, but the landlady had been almost too eager to forestall suspicion. And now glancing across the room he saw the curtains move. The landlady had told him to call her if the poor old creature spoke.

Weymouth left his chair again, lifted the latch of the kitchen door, and knocked boldly when it would not open. "Let me out!" he called, grumbling and growling. "Let me out! I want more brandy!" With sudden instinct he took on the behavior of a drunken man. "Let her think I am drugged if she pleases," he said to himself, and knocked again, scolding finely and asking for the brandy by turns. He could hear the voice of another woman now, as if in protest, but presently the door opened and the landlady appeared.

"You've had brandy enough now," she told him, roughly. "I locked the door because the latch is old and it flies open and keeps both fires a-smoking. Cease your noise; I'll call you for your supper." There were two rough looking men by the fireside and a woman stood behind the settee whose eyes met his as if they struck a flash of light. At the first sight of her face he stopped, for an instant he lost power of speech; then he went on with his drunken play and staggered toward the middle of the room.

The men laughed, the landlady scolded, and the slender figure behind the settee was half hidden in its shadow. Elizabeth Brent, the woman he loved and whom he had left so heavy hearted, for whose sake he was hurrying to Bristol and hurrying back, the woman he thought of by night and day, here before his astonished eyes! How in the world could she have also fallen into what looked like a den of thieves? How could he manage to get word with her?

His head dropped on his breast as Rogers might have done, he was growing faint for want of food, the old woman's supper seemed no nearer ready than at first. The two men were watching him and chuckling together by the fire.

"Get me the brandy!" he called again, and they chuckled louder. "Drinks all round, you pretty pictur'!" he commanded the mistress of the house; and this time they laughed even louder, as well they might.

TWO ROUGH LOOKING MEN BY THE FIRESIDE.

"I'll get it, aunt," said the younger woman unexpectedly, "which bottle then?" She came out into the firelight, not once looking at Weymouth, but her face was very pale and her eyes were shining. He could almost have touched her as she passed.

"'Tis there in the cupboard at the right hand, the small bottle if he must have it; my hands are fast in the dough," grumbled the old woman. "Half a glass'll be enough in all conscience," she added, in a lower tone, and Weymouth, as if with great effort and unsteadiness, got to his feet and followed to the cupboard, protesting as he went. At that moment a dog began to yelp and whine before the fire; a coal had snapped up on his poor back and burnt its way to the skin. The cupboard was at the far end of the room; there was half a minute of confusion and loud laughter while the two were standing side by side at the cupboard door.

"I'm not drunk. I must get away from this," whispered Weymouth, but she stopped his eager whisper. "The net, the net!" she cried, with strange insistence.

"Don't drink! the net and the farther window!"

"Don't waste it. You'll kill him if you give him more," said the old woman close behind them, but Weymouth held the bottle high in his hand and staggered past her to the bedroom door, muttering angrily, and shut himself in. There was a strong bolt inside which he slid, and pounded the door with his fist finely. He could hear the men laughing by the fire, and went back to his elbow chair. The wallet of money banged against the arm of it as he sat down.

"You're what they're seeking," he said under his breath as he put his hand on the leather bag. "Please Heaven we'll keep together till we get to Bristol," but the presence of the two men in the kitchen was significant enough of there being no hope of a peaceable departure on horseback. The certainty of a careful plot against him was impossible to be denied; it was in the very air; he was one against many, and a stranger in this strange and dismal harborage of thieves. Whether they looked for the ordinary purse of a traveler, or had been given news of that treasure he carried was a puzzle. In that moment a cold chill of horror stole over Weymouth's great frame; had the woman he loved much, who had suddenly repulsed him with so little reason or excuse, been the means of this danger and disaster? Had she and Rogers—no it was impossible—impossible! She might be, she was, the victim of misfortunes, but in her honest eyes and heart there was no possibility of such a fault. He whistled a gay shrill tune as he sat by the fire alone; it was a tune they had both known well the year before when they had seen each other first in Southampton. Please Heaven there were more happy days to come for Lizzie Brent and himself. He began to whistle the song again in broken snatches and the men laughed louder than before in the next room.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Faithful Little Workers.

The children of the Heavenly Rest sewing school will hold a sale in the parish house on Clinton avenue, Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings of this week. It will be their Easter offering to the mission and for it, they have worked and denied themselves all through Lent. During the Winter they have made over seventy-five garments, and they deserve the greatest credit for the faithful way in which they have gone through severe storms and bad walking every Saturday afternoon. It is to be hoped that every one will encourage them in this laudable effort, and help to make it a success. The girls themselves will all be behind the fancy and candy table, and do the waiting on the ice-cream and chocolate tables.

REMEMBER there are hundreds of brands of White Lead (so called) on the market that are not White Lead, composed largely of Barytes and other cheap materials. But the number of brands of genuine

Strictly Pure
White Lead

is limited. The following brands are standard "Old Dutch" process, and just as good as they were when you or your father were boys:

"Atlantic," "Jewett,"
"Brooklyn."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free; it will probably save you a good many dollars.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

Even Sandow

cannot break a Ball's Corset.
It is as supple as the skin,
and is guaranteed.
I Lederer.

There is one DRESS STAY that
Won't melt apart,
Can't cut through the dress,
Don't stay bent.
It is
BALL'S PEERLESS.
All lengths; all colors.
Putnam & DeGraw, Seely Edsall, I. Lederer.

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, April 4, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

Roll call showed the following members present, viz:

Director Hubbard and Freeholders Badgeley, Clark, Ehrlich, Haliday, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krause, Littell, Miller, Ogden, Roll, Swain, Tier, Westcott and Woodruff—16.

Absent—Freeholder Morrell—1.

The minutes of the previous meeting (reading of bills excepted) were on motion approved as read.

No communications, memorials, petitions, etc., were presented to the Board.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The committee on widening of Grand street bridge, Rahway, presented the following report, viz:

Elizabeth, N J, April 4, 1895.

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your committee on the widening, etc., of the Grand street bridge, at Rahway, would report that they have examined said bridge, and after careful and thorough consideration are of the opinion that the bridge should be widened to the width of the street, and that the work could be done at an expense not exceeding $1,700.

Your committee would recommend to the incoming Board the advisability of widening said bridge as above stated.

Signed, John Farrell, Chr Ehrlich, J Martin Roll, Jas C Ogden, John A Haliday, Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Haliday the report was received and ordered to be spread on the minutes.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read, and on motion ordered paid:

Court—George Kyte, Sheriff, $552 43; Wm Howard 8 82; Henry J Schoppe 27 50; Edward Newburger 150; Jas Ritchie 75; Herbert W Knight 23 90, 60; Fred C Marsh 50 35 250; Lewis S Hyer 55; J Williams Crane 55; T F McCormick 391 67; T F McCarty 20.

Public Buildings—John C Biore $2 18; Wm B Tucker, Attorney, 18 85; Dennis Long 5 50; Chas W Irwin 112 50, 90; Jos C Ogden 4 10; The Suburban Electric Co., 13 30, 5 52; Elizabethtown Gaslight Co, 76 50.

Bridges—Frank B Allen $30; Frank Murphy 38 25; Philip Feltman 16 50; David Boeche 11 46; Wm B Ogden 11 25; John W Van Pelt 66 66; The Samuel L Moore & Sons Co, 26 01.

Incidental—Wm Howard $156 98; E M Wood 7 60; Terrill & Cole 35; A M Runyon & Sons 35

Coroners—Chas B Holmes $55 24.

Stationery—The Smith Premier Typewriter Co, $12 70; John C Rankin Co, 40 95.

Committee Expenses—Noah Woodruff $10 75; J Martin Roll 26 25; L W Tatham, 4 25; W H Swain 19 20.

Members' Pay—James C Ogden $42 25; Geo W Littell 24; W H Swain 24; Fred Miller 30; Noah Woodruff 34; Martin Roll 67 10.

Lunacy—N J State Hospital $7,755 24

County Road Repairs—Wahl & Hatfield $6 45; James W Fisk 21 25; 50

Jail—Henry J Schmidt $3 95; John Klippie 7 15; J W Hildebrandt & Co 42 75; James O Brokaw 15 68; John C Biore 2; Michael Bender 62 05; Henry Sauer 15 44; E S E Newbury 40 40.

Schools—B Holmes $109 50.

Elections—S Rusling Ryno $35; Wm Howard 31 52; C A Smith & Co 35 50; C A Lehmann 58 70.

Salaries—E M Wood $125; S Rusling Ryno $25

A bill of Geo B Vanderpool, $139, for work on gutters, sidewalks, etc., which he alleged he was compelled to do, by reason of the construction of the Morris avenue county road, was presented to the board without approval of any committee.

On motion of Freeholder Roll the bill was laid on the table, with instructions to the clerk to notify Mr. Vanderpool that the board had nothing to do with sidewalks, and could not consider any part of the bill as presented.

Freeholder Littell moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, May 2, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

S RUSLING RYNO, Clerk.

AT REST.

J. B. Platt.

Owing to the sickness of Mrs. Platt, only a short funeral service was held over the remains of J. B. Platt at his late home, corner of West Front street and Waynewood place, at 10 this morning. At this service the youngest son, three weeks old, was baptized beside the casket of his father. At 11 a service was held in Holy Cross Church, Rev. T. L. Murphy officiating, which was largely attended, a number of acquaintances coming out from New York. The music was under the direction of Elmer Runyon.

The floral tributes were very liberal and beautiful, among them a large floral cross of white roses and lilies from Mr. Platt's associates in the New York office of the Berkshire Life Insurance Company. The bearers of the casket were Benjamin R. Western, Joseph R. Hall, Robert S. Miller, Dr Joseph H. Carman, and Hornsley Barker. The remains were taken to Yonkers this noon for interment.

—The new merino underwear that Peck has just received is not timid; it never shrinks.

Important Facts.

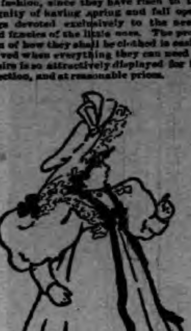
If you have dull and heavy pain across forehead and about the eyes; if the nostrils are frequently stopped up and followed by a disagreeable discharge; if soreness in the nose and bleeding from the nostrils is often experienced; if you are very sensitive to cold in the head accompanied with headaches; then you may be sure you have catarrh; and should (immediately) resort to Ely's Cream Balm for a cure. The remedy will give instant relief.

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

FASHIONS FOR ELDERS COPIED FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

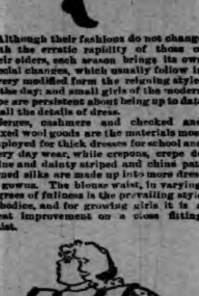
Great Variety of Styles. Fascinating Simplicity and Delicate Colors the Rule. Attractive Materials Used in Making Up Dainty Dresses.

Children's modes have become a matter of growing importance in the world of fashion, since they have risen to the dignity of having spring and fall openings devoted exclusively to the needs and fancies of the little ones. The problem of how they shall be clothed is easily solved when everything they can need or desire is so attractively displayed for inspection, and at reasonable prices.



Although their fashions do not change with the erratic rapidity of those of their elders, each season brings its own special changes, which usually follow in a very modified form the reigning styles of the day; and small girls of the modern type are persistent about being up to date in all the details of dress.

Serges, cashmere and checked and mixed wool goods are the materials most employed for thick dresses for school and every day wear, while crepons, crepe de chine and dainty striped and chine patterned silks are made up into more dressy gowns. The blouse waist, in varying degrees of fullness is the prevailing style of bodice, and for growing girls it is a great improvement on a close fitting waist.



A pretty brown dress of wool crepon for a girl of twelve years has a plain skirt, slightly gored, and a blouse waist, which opens in front over a vest of white lawn, trimmed with lengthwise rows of narrow cream lace fulled on at intervals of two inches, and a white lawn neck band and a wide double sailor collar of brown, piped on the edge with brown velvet. This material also forms the belt.

Box plaits are echoed again and again in these waists and are made very effective in dark colored serges by using bright plaid silk for the front of the bodice and the back, too, if desired, and putting on three plaits of serge, so that the plaid shows between. There are all sorts of sailor costumes in dark blue serge, colored linens and pique, and one of the novelties in trimming for the serge gowns is a wide, adjustable sailor collar and vest of dark tan linen canvas. It is a simple matter to take it off to be laundried and by making these collars of several different colors there is the effect of a new suit with each change.

Crepons in soft art shades are made up quite plain with satin ribbon and a little lace or mull embroidery for trimming at the neck. Silk gowns of china taffeta, for girls of ten or twelve years, are made without lining in the skirt, which is plainly hemmed, and with a full blouse waist either high in the neck with a wide lawn collar trimmed with insertion and narrow lace, or cut round, but not low, to show a yoke of sheer muslin finely tucked. The sleeves have full puff to the elbow, where they are finished with a frill of lace or embroidery or left quite plain, fulled with an invisible band.—New York Sun.

BAMBERGER'S
THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE
147 and 149 Market Street,
NEWARK, N. J.

Laundried Shirt Waists.

No department in our great store is better stocked, has been selected with such a discriminating taste or offers such grand values as are to be found in our Shirt Waist Department. Every new idea, every style that fickle dame fashion has smiled upon has a worthy representative in it, and an inspection of our magnificent line will prove that

Our Past Supremacy is Sustained.

Made of Percales, Chambrays, Lawns and other fashionable materials, constructed in irreproachable manner every one, from the lowest to the highest price, with collar bands, every seam finished, a wilderness of shades and patterns and greater values than you'll expect to find.

Prices from 49c to $2.98.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
Near Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

☞ FREE DELIVERY EVERYWHERE.

HONOR IN BUSINESS.

Some Remarkable Examples of Honesty When Unlooked For.

Some people pay their debts, some do not; some go in for liquidation, while others again are content to go through the process of being whitewashed, and after paying a certain sum, more or less, (generally less), never allow such a trivial matter as an unpaid balance to again trouble them.

There have been, however, striking examples of commercial honesty and integrity, instances when men have, owing to adverse circumstances, "come a cropper," but have afterwards (many years afterwards, some of them) paid their debts in full.

A notable case was recorded recently, none the less striking because the man owed but a small sum. Some six years ago a young man had a tobacconist's business in a town in the West. Things went wrong with him, and eventually he left the town suddenly. His debts, including 2 quarters' rent, amounted altogether to $500. Recently he has returned and not only paid all the money he owed with interest up to date, but he insisted on giving a supper to his creditors.

An equally noble example is furnished in the history of the firm of Messrs. Ickringill. Failing in 1878 for a large sum, the partners were released from all their obligations on payment of a composition of 50 per cent. on the dollar. Since then they have had to overcome many unlooked for difficulties, but, that notwithstanding, they have called their old creditors together, and, at an outlay of over $50 000, have paid the 50 cents owing on every dollar they were indebted.

Such an instance as this deserves to rank as honorable as that of Sir Moses Montefiore, who, it will be remembered, made up for having failed by eventually paying all his creditors, with 5 per cent. interest.

A later instance of honorable generosity is related of a certain well known gentleman. A small company in which he was interested went to the bad, and not satisfied with bearing his own loss, he felt it his duty to pay in full the balance to make up the amount invested by the shareholders.

A pleasant story is on record in connection with a West of England building society, which a few years ago came to grief. The cause of this was the defalcations of an official who had won the unlimited confidence of the whole board of directors. The culprit was taxed with the robbery, and, probably because there was no other way out of the difficulty, admitted his guilt and offered to make restitution, so far as lay in his power. The secretary and the directors, however, were not satisfied with this, and to save the credit of the society, as well as to make it impossible for the shareholders and depositors to suffer, they subscribed between them every shilling of which the society had been robbed.

Another building society official, the secretary this time, acting on a sudden impulse, departed one night with $500 of the society's money. The society's headquarters are in a town on the south coast. Recently the directors have been pleasantly surprised by the receipt of $250, inclosed in a letter. It was from the former secretary, the money being an installment toward making good his defalcations.

A delicate method of making good a failure in early life was that employed by the late Mr. Neville, the great baker. Mr. Neville's first venture in business ended in bankruptcy. Failure made him try harder to succeed, and eventually he became wealthy. Then he invited each of his former creditors to dinner, and under the cover set for each was placed a check for the balance owing, with compound interest up to date.

In 1882 a large firm of merchants failed for a considerable sum. They paid forty cents on the dollar. Recently one of the partners (the one who was perhaps least responsible for the failure) returned from America, and after considerable difficulty succeeding in tracing every creditor, to whom he has paid the balance due. This, in spite of the fact that after so doing he was left with less than £200 with which to start the world anew.

—W. H. Griffin is making extensive improvements about his house corner of Linden and Washington avenues.

I recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. There is no better liniment made. I have sold over 100 bottles of it this year and all were pleased who used it. J. F. Pierson, druggist, South Chicago, Ill. It is for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North aves., T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Salvation.

Adjt. and Mrs. Wood will conduct great meetings at Salvation Army, 118 West Second street, Thursday and Friday evenings, April 25 and 26, commencing each night at 8.

Thursday night they will be reinforced by Captain Emily March and Captain Mimms, both of whom used to be stationed at the local corps here. The corps at Elizabeth is expected also. During the service ten local officers will receive commissions and a baby will be given away. After the service a free lunch will be served to all present. Admission to this meeting by ticket 10 cents. Friday night there will be a special holiness meeting to which all are welcome.

Postmaster's Privilege.

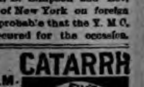
Charles W. Dayton, postmaster in New York, has extended an annual pass for admission to the main postoffice building in the city to Postmaster John M. Hetfield of this city. The pass takes the holder in company with a guide, through all the departments of Uncle Sam's wonderful building. It is transferable, and Mr. Hetfield kindly loans it to his friends who desire to take in one of the principal sights of metropolis.

Spiritual Experience.

Rev. Charles U. Kinney and wife of Sing Sing, Rev. Mr. Pierson and wife, and Miss Ella Warren of Beracahah Home in New York, addressed the Christian Alliance meeting at 317 West Front street last night. The theme was the deeper spiritual experience of Christians. Arrangements are being made by the Alliance for lectures to be given in the near future by Rev. A. B. Simpson and Rev. Stephen Merritt of New York on foreign missions. It is probable that the Y. M. C. A. hall will be secured for the occasion.

DIRECTIONS for using
CREAM BALM.
Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH



COLD IN HEAD

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

DEATHS.

HALL—In North Plainfield April 14, 1895, Mrs. Jane Hall, in her 81st year.

Funeral services from the residence of her son, Wm. W Hall, corner of Rock and West End avenues, Wednesday morning, April 17, at 11, and at Second Reformed Church, Somerville, at 2:30.

HOUSE and building lots for sale in Westfield, N. J., high ground, good neighborhood, convenient to depot. Address box 104 Westfield N. J.
3 24 6-3 25 4 6

Limited Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that a limited partnership has been formed by the subscribers pursuant to an act entitled:

"An act to authorize limited partnership," to be conducted under the firm of D. C. Ivins & Co., for the transaction of the business of merchants at Plainfield, in the county of Union, N. J., DeWitt C. Ivins and William R. Gorton being the general partners and Edward H. Booth a special partner, and that the amount of capital contributed to the common stock by the said Edward H. Booth is two thousand dollars, ($2,000); which said partnership is to commence on the 25 day of January, 1895, and terminate on the 31st day of December, 1895. 4 4 6

HIGHLY CONCENTRATED
MANURES
ALBERT'S
Horticultural,
Garden,
Special Garden,
Vineyard,
Fruit-tree.
MANURES.
No Sand, No Dirt, No Organic Matter, Nothing but Pure, Soluble, and Immediately Available Plant Foods COMBINED with each other.
Garden Manure: Nitrogen, [illegible] per cent; Available Phos. Acid, 14 per cent; Potash, [illegible] per cent.
The others are equally concentrated. Prices and Booklet on request.
ROBT. L. MERWIN & CO., Gen'l Agts., United States
88 Wall Street, New York.

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

CHAPTER I.

A supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning corporations" (Revision), approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be the duty of all corporations which may now or hereafter be authorized to transact business in this state, whether organized under general or special laws, although such corporations may not be organized under the laws of this state, and they are hereby required (unless they have already done so) to file on or before the thirtieth day of June next, and annually thereafter, within thirty days after the usual time of the annual election of directors, managers or trustees and the officers thereof, whether such election shall have been held on the day fixed by law or not, in the department of state, a complete list, duly authenticated by the signatures of the president and secretary of the names of such directors, managers, trustees and officers, with the date of the election or appointment, term of office and residence of each, and also to designate the business and the location of the principal office or place of business of the company in this state, as also in the state where organized, and for this purpose it shall be the duty of the secretary of state to furnish said corporations blanks, in proper form, and to safely keep in his office all lists as filed, and issue to the company so filing, his certificate thereof, and also to prepare an alphabetical index thereto, which lists and index shall be submitted to the inspection of persons interested at all proper hours; and it shall further be his duty, during the month of April next, to cause a notice of the requirements of this act to be published three times in each of the papers in this state authorized to publish the laws; and every such corporation which shall not, within thirty days of the time herein fixed, comply with the provisions of this act, shall forfeit the sum of two hundred dollars to the State of New Jersey, to be recovered by action of debt, to be brought by the attorney-general of this state in the name of the State of New Jersey, in a court of competent jurisdiction, together with costs of suit; provided, however, that where any corporation shall file a complete list of the officers, directors, managers or trustees, as above required, at any time prior to the entry of judgment upon any suit to be commenced in manner aforesaid by said attorney-general, and shall pay the costs of such suit up to the time of filing such list, then any and all proceedings therein shall be discontinued.

2. And be it enacted, That all forfeitures, fines and penalties incurred by reason of the failure of any corporation to file a statement as required by the act concerning corporations, approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, or any supplement thereto, be and the same are hereby remitted and released, and that all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and they are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 28, 1895.

CHAPTER II.

An Act relating and regulating the government of cities.

Of elections and selection, duties and obligations of city and ward officers.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the term of office of any mayor hereafter elected in any city of this state shall be two years, notwithstanding any clause in the charter of any city limiting the term for a period less than two years, and that his term of office shall commence on the third Tuesday in March next ensuing said election.

2. And be it enacted, That the mayor shall be the chief executive officer of such city, and shall possess the powers and privileges and shall perform the duties which are hereinafter specified, and shall be elected for the term of two years at the annual charter election on the second Tuesday in March, and shall receive such annual compensation for his services, not exceeding two thousand five hundred dollars per annum, as the common council shall by ordinance fix and determine, and he shall receive no fees or other compensation whatever.

3. And be it enacted, That the mayor shall be the head of the police department, and shall have exclusive power to appoint, suspend and remove all policemen and subordinates in such department; he shall also appoint a chief of police and such captains and sergeants of police as may be required by ordinance; these appointments, however, of chief of police, captains and sergeants of police shall not take effect until confirmed by the common council; he shall see that all such officers are prompt and faithful in the discharge of their duties, and shall, from time to time, take such measures as he may deem necessary for the preservation of the peace and good order and enforcement of the laws and ordinances of the city.

4. And be it enacted, That the common council may, by ordinance, in every city of this state, provide for and establish a board of education, to consist of seven members, to be appointed by said council or other legislative body, who shall hold office for a term not exceeding three years.

5. And be it enacted, That the common council of any city adopting this act shall be composed of three members from each ward, who shall hold office for three years; and a councilman-at-large, who shall hold office for the term of two years; there shall be elected at the annual election on the second Tuesday in March, in each of the wards of every such city, in such manner as is now provided by law, one member of council who shall hold office for the term of three years; provided, however, that existing members of council in any such city shall continue in office until the expiration of the term for which they were elected; and at the first election held after the adoption of this act, as hereinafter provided, there shall be no election of members of council if thereby the number of councilmen shall exceed three from each ward; and at the next succeeding election after the first election only such number of councilmen shall be elected from each ward as may be necessary to maintain and constitute a membership of three councilmen from each ward; and provided, further, that at that or the next succeeding election as many members of council shall be elected from each ward as may be necessary to maintain and constitute a membership of three councilmen from each ward; and if at any such election after the adoption of this act more than one councilman shall be elected from each ward, the said councilmen so elected shall draw lots, by wards, and one of such number shall serve for three years and the other member or members of council so elected from each ward shall serve for one or two years as may be necessary, to introduce a rotary system of one member of council elected each year from each ward for the term of three years; the councilman-at-large shall be elected at the first annual election held after the adoption of this act and every second year thereafter; there shall also be elected at such annual election, to be held on the second Tuesday in March, in each of the wards and election districts in every city of this state, in such manner as is now or may be provided by law, one treasurer, who shall hold his office for two years; and there shall also be elected, in and for every city in this state, at the city election in every three years, one person to be collector of taxes of said city and one overseer of the poor, who shall hold their respective offices for the term of three years; there shall be elected one assessor and one chosen freeholder from each of the respective wards in every city in this state, who shall hold their respective offices for the term of three years; there shall also be elected each year three commissioners of appeal in cases of taxation, who shall hold their office for one year, and such other city and ward officers shall be elected at such city elections as is now or may hereafter be provided by law; the office of alderman, recorder and marshal is hereby abolished in every city adopting this act, and the common council may by ordinance abolish any not created by or in virtue of the provisions of this act and end the term and authority of any officer serving therein.

6. And be it enacted, That if at any annual city election in any city of this state there shall be one or more vacancies to be supplied in any office at the same time any person is to be elected for the full term of said office, or if two or more are elected at the same time to serve for different terms, the term for which each person voted for, for said office, is intended, shall be designated on the ballot; and if any person who shall be elected to any office at the annual city election shall not qualify according to law for the space of twenty days after such election, or if any person who shall be elected or appointed to fill any vacancy in any of said offices shall not qualify according to law for the space of twenty days after such election or appointment, his office shall be deemed vacant.

7. And be it enacted, That in case of death, resignation, disability, disqualification, removal from office, neglect or refusal to act, or removal out of the city or ward of any of the officers, or any vacancy in any office except mayor, councilman or justice of the peace, it shall be lawful for the common council to appoint others in their stead until the next city election, or in case of appointed officers until the regular period for appointment, who shall, during the said term perform the like services, be entitled to the same fees and be subject to the same responsibilities as though elected at the annual election or appointed at the regular time; provided, that all resignations shall be sent to the mayor, and he shall report the same to the common council at its next meeting thereafter.

8. And be it enacted, That every person elected or appointed to any office in pursuance of this act, or of any law or ordinance of the common council, including the city solicitor, who shall be elected for the term of three years, shall, before they enter upon the duties of such office, take and subscribe before the mayor or city clerk an oath or affirmation, faithfully and impartially to execute the duties of his office to the best of his knowledge, skill and ability, and such other oaths as may be required by the laws of this state; all such oaths or affirmations shall be filed by the city clerk in his office; the city treasurer, superintendent of schools, receiver of taxes, constables, overseer of the poor and such other officers as the common council may require shall also, before entering upon their duties, each give bond to the city, in its corporate name, in such sum and with such sureties as the common council may approve, or as may be required by any act of the legislature of this state, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of their respective offices; and if at any time the common council shall deem the sureties of any officer insufficient they shall require him to give additional surety.

9. And be it enacted, That any city or ward officer, except members of the board of city assessors, may be removed from office by resolution, for disability or other good cause shown, upon complaint in writing to the common council setting forth such cause supported by one or more affidavits of the truth of the facts therein alleged: provided, however, that no such removal shall take place until the person sought to be removed has had an opportunity to be heard in his defense, nor unless two-thirds of all the members of the common council shall vote for such removal; vacancies occurring in such office shall be filled for the unexpired term by the common council.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE COMMON COUNCIL.

10. And be it enacted, That the common council shall annually elect a president from its own body, and in his absence a president pro tempore, choose officers, appoint its time and place of meeting, determine the rules of its own proceedings, be the sole judge of the election returns and qualification of its own members, keep a journal of its proceedings and may punish or expel a member for disorderly conduct or a violation of its rules; but no expulsion shall take place except by the vote of two-thirds of all the members elected, nor until the delinquent member shall have had five days' notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard in his defense; and the first meeting of the common council after the annual election shall be held on the third Tuesday in March of every year.

11. And be it enacted, That the city clerk shall be the clerk of the common council; he shall keep accurate minutes of the proceedings of the common council, and shall perform such other duties as may be required of him.

12. And be it enacted, That a majority of the whole number of members of the common council shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but a smaller number may adjourn from time to time; the president of the common council shall be authorized to call special meetings of the common council when the public good shall in his opinion render it necessary; and on the request of a majority of the common council, in writing, addressed to the president, it shall be his duty, or, in his absence, it shall be the duty of the city clerk, to call special meetings.

13. And be it enacted, That no ordinance shall be passed or repealed by the common council except with a concurrence of a majority of all the members of the common council, and no ordinance shall be altered or repealed save by ordinance to that effect; every ordinance shall be read three times before its final passage; no ordinance shall be finally passed until a subsequent meeting to that at which it may be introduced, but each and every ordinance so passed as aforesaid shall be published in one or more of the newspapers printed and published in said city, ten days before the same shall take effect; provided, that whenever the common council shall cause a revision of the ordinances of the city to be made, and shall direct the same to be published in a printed volume it shall not be necessary to publish such revised ordinance in a newspaper; every ordinance or resolution passed by the common council shall, before it takes effect, be presented, duly certified by the city clerk, to the mayor, who, if he approves the same, shall sign it; and if he do not approve it, shall return it, with his objections, to the clerk within five days after the presenting thereof and if he do not return it with such objections within the time above specified it shall take effect as if approved by him; whenever any ordinance or resolution shall have been returned with objections aforesaid to the common council, the said common council shall, at its first meeting thereafter, order the objections to be entered at length on its journal, and shall proceed to reconsider the same, and if, on reconsideration, it shall pass the council by a vote of two-thirds of all the members, it shall take effect, notwithstanding such objections; in all such cases the vote shall be taken by ayes and nays and entered in full on the journal of said council; the publication of all ordinances as herein required shall in all cases be presumed to have been made until the contrary shall be proved; the publication of private ordinances shall in all cases be procured to be done and the expense thereof borne by the person benefitted thereby or applying therefor.

14. And be it enacted, That the enacting clause of all ordinances shall be, "Be it ordained by the common council of the city of ——."

15. And be it enacted, That the councilmen of any city in the state duly elected by the several wards thereof shall constitute and be called "the common council of city of ——."

16. And be it enacted, That the common council of all cities in this state shall have power within the said city to make, establish, publish, modify, amend or repeal ordinances, rules, regulations and by-laws, for the following purposes:

I. To manage, regulate and control the finances and property of the city, real and personal; to borrow money and negotiate temporary loans, in anticipation of taxes or other revenues for the current year, and for payment for any public improvement, not exceeding the amount of the specific assessment for such improvement;

II. To prevent vice, drunkenness and immorality; to preserve public peace and good order; to prevent and quell riots, disturbances and disorderly assemblages;

III. To restrain and suppress disorderly and gaming houses and houses of ill-fame; all instruments and devices for gaming, and to prohibit all gaming and fraudulent devices;

IV. To license and regulate restaurants, victualling-houses or cellars, ale and lager beer saloons or gardens, billiard tables and bowling alleys, and to prohibit the keeping of the same, except by persons duly licensed;

V. To prohibit, restrain, regulate and license all sports, exhibitions of natural or artificial curiosities, caravans of animals, theatrical exhibitions, circuses or other public performances and exhibitions for money, and fix the sums to be paid for such licenses to the city treasurer;

VI. To ascertain and establish the boundaries of all streets, avenues, highways, lanes and alleys and public places in said city, and prevent and remove all encroachments upon said streets, avenues, highways, lanes, alleys and public places;

VII. To regulate, clean and keep in repair the streets, highways, avenues, lanes, alleys, public places, bridges, wharves, and locks in such city, and to prevent and remove obstructions and incumbrances in and upon all streets, highways, sidewalks, crosswalks, bridges, sewers, drains, aqueducts, water courses, wharves, docks and other public places in any manner whatever; to prescribe the manner in which corporations or persons shall exercise any privileges granted to them in the use of any street, avenue, highway or alley in said city, or in digging up any street, avenue, highway or alley for the purpose of laying down pipes or any other purpose whatever, and to prohibit and prevent any such use or work at such times and seasons of the year as they may designate; to direct and regulate the planting, rearing, trimming and preserving of ornamental shade trees in the streets, avenues, parks and grounds of the city, and to authorize or prohibit the removal or destruction of such shade trees, and to enforce the removal of snow, ice or dirt from the sidewalks and gutters by the owners or occupants of the premises fronting thereon;

VIII. To open streets, and to grade, pave or otherwise improve the same; to widen, level, grade, flag or reflag, curb or recurb, gutter or regutter, pave or repave, or gravel the sidewalks and gutters; to lay drains or construct sewers in any street, avenue, highway or section thereof; to prescribe the manner in which any such work shall be performed and the mode in which the costs, damages and expense thereof shall be ascertained, and to cause such costs, damages and expenses or any proportion thereof, to be assessed in just and equitable proportion on the owners of the property, whether improved or unimproved, receiving benefit from such improvement, and to determine the time and manner in which such assessments shall be collected;

IX. To direct the digging down, draining, filling up or fencing of lots, pieces or parcels of ground in said city which shall be deemed dangerous or unwholesome, or necessary to carry out any improvement authorized by this act; to prescribe the manner in which the said work shall be performed, and to cause the expense thereof to be assessed in just and equitable proportion on the lots or pieces or parcels of ground, whether improved or unimproved, benefitted thereby, to the extent of the peculiar benefits conferred, and to determine the time and manner in which such assessment shall be collected;

X. To prevent or regulate the erection or construction of any stoop, step, platform bay window, cellar door, area, descent into a cellar or basement, sign or any post or erection, or any projection or otherwise, in, over or upon any street or avenue, and to remove the same, where already erected, at the expense of the owner or occupant of the premises;

XI. To prevent and punish horse racing and immoderate driving or riding in any street, highway or public place, and to authorize the stopping and detaining any person who shall be guilty of immoderate driving or riding in any street, highway or public place, and to regulate the speed and running of locomotive engines and railroad cars, motor, electric or other cars through said city; and designate the crossing at which any railroad company shall be required by the common council to station flagmen or signals to warn travelers of the approach of locomotive engines or railroad cars;

XII. To prohibit the driving any drove or droves of cattle through any of the streets of the city on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and to regulate the same at other times;

XIII. To regulate, protect and improve the parks, public burial grounds and other public grounds in said city;

XIV. To provide lamps, gas fixtures and other means of illumination and to light the streets, parks and public places of every description in said city;

XV. To make and regulate wells, pumps, aqueducts and cisterns in the public streets;

XVI. To establish and regulate one or more pounds, and to restrain and regulate the running at large of horses, cattle, swine and other animals, geese and other poultry, and to authorize the impounding and sale of the same for the penalty incurred and the cost of keeping and impounding and sale;

XVII. To regulate and prevent the running at large of dogs, to authorize the destruction of dogs running at large and to impose taxes on the owners of dogs;

XVIII. To locate, regulate and remove slaughter-houses, establish and regulate public markets, license and regulate butchers, designate the places and manner of selling meats, fish, fruits and vegetables, and to prohibit persons from selling such articles without license; to provide for the removal and disposition of offal, garbage and all refuse matter which may become dangerous to the public health, and to authorize and empower the local board of health, established or to be established in such city, to make removal and disposition thereof, or to provide therefor, and in case such boards are given such power and authority, they are hereby authorized to accept the same and given power to remove and dispose of such refuse matter;

XIX. To prescribe and regulate the places of vending or exposing for sale wood, hay straw and other articles from wagons or other vehicles;

XX. To regulate or prohibit any practice having a tendency to frighten animals or to annoy persons passing in the streets or on the sidewalks in said city;

XXI. To restrain and punish drunkards, vagrants, mendicants and street beggars;

XXII. To establish a board of health, define its powers and duties and provide for the protection and maintenance of the health of the city;

XXIII. To prescribe the manner in which all contracts for performing work or furnishing materials for the city shall be made and executed;

XXIV. To abate and remove nuisances of every kind and to require the owner or occupant of any grocery, cellar, tallow-chandler's shop, butcher's stall, soap factory, tannery, stable, privy, hog-pen, sewer or other offensive or unwholesome house or place, lot or inclosure, to cleanse or remove or abate the same, or, in a summary manner, to cause the same to be done at the expense of the owner or occupant thereof;

XXV. To regulate the burial of the dead, prohibit interment without such limits as it may prescribe, purchase land for public burial places, direct the keeping and return of bills of mortality and to establish such regulations for conveying the dead through the streets of said city as the health, quiet and good order of the city may, in their opinion, require;

XXVI. To license and regulate cartmen, porters, hacks, cars, omnibuses, stages and all other carriages and vehicles used for the transportation of passengers, baggage, merchandise and goods and chattels of any kind and the owners and drivers of vehicles and means of transportation; also auctioneers, common criers, hawkers, peddlers, pawnbrokers, junkshop keepers, keepers of bath-houses, boarding-houses, and news-stands, sweeps, scavengers, traveling and other shows, circuses, theatrical performances, plays, exhibitions, concerts, skating rinks, itinerant venders of merchandise, medicines and remedies, and also lumber and coal yards, and stores for the sale of groceries, dry goods and merchandise, goods and chattels of any kind, and the place or places or premises in which or at which the different kinds of business or occupation mentioned herein are to be carried on or conducted; and to fix the rates of compensation to be paid therefor, and to prohibit all persons and places, and all vehicles unlicensed, from acting, using or being in said capacities, and for such uses and purposes; and to fix and prescribe penalties for the violation of such ordinance or ordinances, and that fees for such licenses may be imposed for revenue; provided, that no person or persons shall be required to take out a license in order to sell any product of his farm;

XXVII. To regulate the ringing of bells and crying of goods and other commodities for sale at auction or otherwise, and to prevent disturbing noises in the street;

XXVIII. To regulate or prohibit swimming or bathing in the waters of or bounding the city;

XXIX. To regulate weights and measures in conformity with the standard of weights and measures established by law, and to require every merchant retailer, trader and dealer in merchandise or property of any description which is sold by measure or weight to cause their weights and measures to be sealed by the city sealer and to be subject to his inspection;

XXX. To establish, regulate and control a day and night police, and to fix and determine their compensation;

XXXI. To establish, regulate and control a fire department; to regulate and define the manner of the appointment and removal of the officers and members of the fire department, their duties and their compensation; to provide fire engines and other apparatus and engine-houses and other places for keeping and preserving the same, and to provide water for extinguishing fires;

XXXII. To regulate and control the manner of building dwelling houses and other buildings, and to prohibit within certain limits, to be from time to time prescribed by ordinance, the building or erection of any dwelling house, store, stable or other building of wood or other combustible material; to regulate the construction of chimneys and to compel the sweeping thereof; to prevent the setting up or construction of furnaces, stoves, boilers, ovens, or other things in such a manner as to be dangerous; to prohibit the deposit of ashes in unsafe places, or in any of the streets or alleys of the city; to authorize any city officer, or person or persons whom they may designate for that purpose, to enter upon and inspect any place or places for the purpose of ascertaining whether the same is or are in a safe condition, and, if not, to direct or cause the same to be made so; to regulate or prohibit the carrying on of manufactories dangerous in causing or promoting fires; to regulate or prohibit the manufacture, sale or use of fireworks and the use of firearms in said city; to regulate or prohibit the keeping or conveying gunpowder, camphene, benzine, naptha, gasoline, coal oil, spirit gas, petroleum and other dangerous materials and the use of candles and lights in barns, stables and other buildings; to raze or demolish any building or erection which by reason of fire, contagion, or any cause may become dangerous to human life or health or tend to extend a conflagration; to require all such further or other acts to be done, and to regulate and prohibit the doing all such further or other acts as they may deem proper to prevent their occurrence and provide for the extinguishment of fires in said city;

XXXIII. To adopt all legal and requisite measures for levying and collecting taxes, fines, penalties and all assessments for public improvements;

XXXIV. To prescribe and define the duties of city and ward officers when not otherwise prescribed by law, and fix and determine their compensation and the penalty or penalties for failure to perform their duties, and to prescribe the bonds and sureties to be given by the officers of the city for the discharge of their duties, and the time for executing the same in cases not otherwise provided by law; to appoint from time to time such subordinate officers as may be deemed necessary to carry into effect the powers and duties hereby created or otherwise conferred or imposed;

XXXV. To fix and determine a reasonable compensation to be paid to any officer of said city or other person employed by them for any service required of him by this act or by any ordinance or resolution passed by them for which no specific fee or compensation is provided to be paid by the person or persons for whom such services shall be performed;

XXXVI. To supply the city and its inhabitants with water; to regulate the laying of water mains through the streets of the city, and to direct their extension throughout the entire city and to tax all lots on the streets where such pipes are laid in an equitable, lawful and just ratio, for the expense of laying such mains in front of such lots, whenever a majority of the owners of lots fronting on any street petition for the laying of such pipe in such street, but in no case shall the tax herein authorized to be laid exceed the cost of providing and laying a four-inch main; and to prescribe by ordinance the manner in which water bills shall be credited to the persons paying such tax, until the whole amount of tax so paid shall be refunded by such credit.

17. And be it enacted, That the common council shall have power to make and establish such other ordinances, rules, regulations and by-laws, not contrary to the laws of this state or of the United States, as they may deem necessary to carry into effect the powers and duties conferred and imposed on them by this act, or by any other laws of this state, and such also as they may deem necessary and proper for the good government, order, protection of persons and property, and for the preservation of the public health and prosperity of said city and its inhabitants, and the same to alter, amend and repeal.

18. And be it enacted, That in all cases where, by the provisions of this act, the common council have authority to pass ordinances on any subject, they may prescribe a penalty or penalties for the violation thereof, either by imprisonment in the city or county jail not exceeding thirty days, or by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars; the book of records of the ordinances and by-laws of the said common council shall be taken and received as evidence of the due passage by said common council of all ordinances and by-laws recorded therein; and further, the volume of ordinances and by-laws printed and published by authority of the common council shall in like manner be taken and received as evidence of the ordinances and by-laws of said common council, and the publication of the said ordinances and by-laws in the public newspapers, according to law, shall in all cases be presumed to have been made, until the contrary be proved.

19. And be it enacted, That the common council shall have power to build and maintain a city hall, hospital, armory for national guard and such other public buildings as they may deem necessary, and such as may be required for the accommodation of the city officers and the day and night police of the said city.

20. And be it enacted, That the common council shall have power to build, establish, keep and maintain one or more work-house or work-houses, and one or more almshouse or almshouses, and to direct or order what persons shall be placed therein, and for what length of time, and the manner of ordering, placing and keeping persons therein; and the application and expenditure of all moneys raised for the maintenance and relief of the poor of the said city shall be under the government, management and direction of said common council and of the overseer of the poor, and such other officer as they shall, for that purpose, constitute and appoint; and the overseer of the poor shall possess the powers and perform the duties of the like officers of the townships of this state, so far as such powers and duties shall be consistent with the provisions of this act.

21. And be it enacted, That the sole and exclusive power to grant licenses to persons to keep inns and taverns within said city shall be vested in the common council, on such terms and under such limitations, regulations and restrictions as the said common council shall, by their ordinance, impose.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF CITY OFFICERS AND THE ENFORCEMENT OF ORDINANCES.

22. And be it enacted, That the mayor shall have the power and it shall be his duty to recommend to the common council all such measures connected with the security, health, cleanliness and ornament of the city, and the protection and improvement of its government and finances, as he shall deem expedient; to keep the corporate seal of the city; to cause the laws and ordinances to be duly executed and enforced, and to exercise a supervision over the official acts of the subordinate officers of the city, and to report any dereliction of duty to the common council, and generally to perform all such duties as may be required of him by law or the ordinances of said city; he may, under the direction of common council, offer rewards for the detection or apprehension of the perpetrators of any offenses against the city ordinances, or of any high crime or misdemeanor committed within the city, to be paid on the conviction of the criminal.

23. And be it enacted, That the mayor is hereby invested with all the power and duties which any police justice of the city is now or may hereafter be invested with, and for the purpose of quelling any insurrection, riot, disturbance or disorderly assemblage, shall have control of the constables, watchmen or other police force of said city, and the power to call upon the citizens for aid in all such cases, and, when he shall deem it proper, to call out the militia of said city and employ the same in quelling any insurrection, riot or disturbance of the peace, and on parades or other public gatherings, when he shall deem it necessary to preserve the public peace and good order, he may appoint for the occasion such special policemen as he may deem necessary and the common council shall provide for their compensation.

24. And be it enacted, That whenever there shall be a vacancy in the office of mayor, or whenever the mayor shall be prevented by absence from the city, sickness or other cause from attending to the duties of his office, the president of the common council, or, if he be absent or disabled, the president to be elected pro tempore, shall act as mayor, and possess all the rights and powers of mayor during the vacancy in office caused by the absence or disability of the mayor.

25. And be it enacted, That the chosen freeholders, commissioners of appeal in cases of taxation, school superintendent, overseer of the poor, constables and city clerk, elected or appointed as aforesaid, shall respectively possess the powers and perform the duties of the like officers of any township of this state, so far as such powers and duties shall be consistent with the provisions of this act; and that the collector of taxes shall possess the powers and perform the duties of collectors of the several townships, so far as such powers and duties shall be consistent with the provisions of this act.

26. And be it enacted, That the collector of taxes shall have power to appoint, with the consent of the common council, one or more deputies, who shall have power to do all and every act or acts which it may be lawful for the said collector to do; and every warrant directed to him may be executed by his deputy or deputies, or either of them, in as full and complete a manner as if executed by the said collector of taxes; and the said deputy or deputies shall give such security for the faithful performance of their respective offices as the common council shall direct.

27. And be it enacted, That the office of the said collector of taxes shall be kept in the city hall of such city, and he or such deputy as he shall appoint, shall sit at such times and places in said city for the receipt of taxes as the common council shall direct; and it shall be the special duty of the said collector of taxes to receive all taxes which may be paid, and preserve in his office the duplicate assessment books which shall from time to time be delivered to him by the board of city assessors, as prescribed by this act.

28. And be it enacted, That the said collector of taxes shall enter in suitable books to be kept for that purpose, the sums received by him for taxes respectively, and the ward for which received, with the names of the persons on whose account the same shall be paid on each day, and shall, at least once in each week, furnish to the treasurer a detailed statement of such sums, designating the amount received, and from which ward, and shall also at the same time pay over to the said treasurer the amount so received, and shall also pay over to the treasurer once in each week the sums collected on any warrant to him directed; he shall thereupon receive from the said treasurer a voucher for the payment of such or sums, which he shall file in the office of the city clerk, to be presented to the common council.

29. And be it enacted, That the city treasurer shall receive all moneys belonging to the city, and shall disburse the same as directed by law, and shall keep an account of all receipts and expenditures in such manner as the common council shall direct and shall perform such other duties pertaining to his office as may be required of him by law, or by any ordinance or resolution of the common council; the said treasurer shall at the close of the fiscal year make out a true and full account of the receipts and expenditures during the year, and also state of the treasury, and within twenty days thereafter deliver said account to the city clerk, who shall pay the same before the common council at their next meeting; and if, upon examination, it shall be found correct, it shall be filed in the office of the city clerk; the fiscal year shall commence on the third Tuesday of March in each and every year.

30. And be it enacted, That the city clerk shall keep all the records, books, papers, and documents of the city, countersign all licenses signed by the mayor, and keep the record of all the proceedings of the common council; he shall engross all the ordinances of the common council in a book to be provided for that purpose, with a proper index, which book shall be deemed a public record of such ordinances, and such ordinances shall be signed in said book by the president or president pro tempore of the common council and said clerk; and copies of all papers duly filed in the office of the city clerk, and transcripts thereof, and of the records and proceedings of the common council, and copies of the laws or ordinances of the said city, certified by him under the corporate seal, shall be evidence in all courts and places; he shall also receive and pay over to the treasurer all moneys which by any law, ordinance or usage are paid to the city clerk.

31. And be it enacted, That the city engineer, surveyor, city solicitor, city sealer of weights and measures, and all other officers appointed by the common council, shall possess the powers and be subject to the obligations conferred and imposed on them by law, or by the ordinances, by-laws, rules and regulations of the common council, and on application for that purpose the secretary of state of this state shall allow and assist the said sealer of weights and measures to compare and adjust the standard of weights and measures for said city, and shall certify and seal the same in the manner required by law.

ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION OF TAXES.

32. And be it enacted, That the common council shall have power to raise by tax in each year such sum or sums of money as they shall deem expedient for the following purposes:

I. For lighting the streets of the city;

II. For the maintenance and support of the poor;

III. For regulating, cleaning and keeping in repair the streets and highways and the construction of crosswalks;

IV. For regulating, improving and protecting the public grounds and parks;

V. For the support of public schools and for erecting and maintaining public school houses;

VI. For the support of the police department, armory purposes and to support of national guard;

VII. For the support of the fire department;

VIII. For supplying the city with water for the extinguishment of fires and other purposes;

IX. For the payment of interest upon the city debt, and upon temporary loans, and such part of the principal thereof as may be due and payable, and to provide a sinking fund therefore;

X. For purchasing necessary real estate;

XI. For the contingent expenses of the city and for all other objects and purposes authorized by law, to be assessed and collected in such manner as the common council shall by ordinance direct; provided, however, that it shall not be lawful for the common council to raise by taxation in any one year, in the general assessment for city purposes, an amount of money that shall cause a greater rate than two hundred cents on one hundred dollars of the valuation of the real and personal property rated and returned for taxation therein as shown by the duplicate of assessment for the current year.

33. And be it enacted, That the board of city assessors shall meet on the second Monday in May, in each and every year, and at such meeting they shall select one of their number as chairman, who shall hold his office one year, or during the pleasure of said board of assessors; a majority of said assessors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and they shall have power to adjourn from time to time, and make such rules and regulations for their own proceedings as are not inconsistent with this act and the laws of the state relating thereto.

34. And be it enacted, That the said board of city assessors shall possess the powers of the like officers of any township of this state, and having duly organized shall proceed to make a full and fair valuation, enumeration and assessment of all the real and personal property in said city according to law; and all statements, returns and assessments shall be as of the twentieth day of May of each year, the day on which the assessment is to commence; the assessors shall tabulate and arrange such valuation, enumerations and assessments in lists which shall also exhibit, in alphabetical order, the names of all persons, firms, companies or corporations liable to be assessed to pay any tax, designating the lands, tenements and real estate, as laid down on the maps prepared for or to be prepared for that purpose, or on the city atlas, and to affix to each lot, and each subdivision thereof, as the same stands recorded or said atlas, distinguishing the same by their marks or numbers, the true value of each lot or subdivision, together with the value, enumeration and assessment of the objects liable to taxation, for which such person, firm, company or corporation is liable at the time of making these valuations, enumerations and assessments; the assessors shall also make out list, showing the name and residence of each male inhabitant of said city of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, upon whom they shall assess such poll tax as required by law, or by any ordinance of the common council passed in conformity with any statute in force at the date of the passage of this act; that when the board of assessors of said city shall have made the valuation of personal property and real estate and the improvements thereon, they shall give one week's notice in two of the daily newspapers published in said city, setting forth the time or times and place when and where they will attend to hear and consider all complaints touching such valuations, under such rules and regulations as they may prescribe, and to increase, reduce, alter or modify such valuations as to them may appear just and equitable, after hearing such complaints and making such changes as they may deem proper.

35. And be it enacted, That the said board of assessors, or such of their numbers as they may designate for that purpose, shall attend all the meetings of the county board of assessors which shall be convened according to law, and in the proceedings of said county board of assessors, shall be entitled to as many votes as there are wards in the city they represent, which votes shall be cast as said assessors, or majority of them, shall direct.

36. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the common council to cause to be made and revised, from time to time, a city map or atlas, therein delineating and describing the lots, plots and tracts of land and real estate situate within such city and the sub-divisions thereof; the said city map or atlas, and all revisions thereof, shall be deemed public records of the said city.

37. And be it enacted, That the city engineer and surveyor shall prepare, keep, renew and have the custody of the city map or atlas; he shall keep an index or register of the lots shown thereon and the several owners thereof; and it shall be his duty to make and keep in his office an abstract of each and every deed or transfer affecting lands situate in such city; each abstract shall be properly indexed and entered upon the city atlas; it shall be the duty of the common council to fix by ordinance the compensation of the city engineer or surveyor for the above and all other duties appertaining to his office.

38. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the board of assessors to prepare full lists of taxes and have them ready for examination, revision and correction before the common council on or before the third Monday in August in each year; and the common council, after such examination, revision and correction, when satisfied that the taxes have been justly and legally assessed, shall direct duplicates to be made in the shortest possible time and placed in the hands of the collector of taxes, whose duty it shall be to make out bills and serve said bills as required by law; said bills shall contain a printed notice when and where the commissioners of appeal will meet for the purpose of hearing any appeals from parties considering themselves aggrieved.

39. And be it enacted, That the assessors of the said city shall so arrange their duplicates as to specify therein, by letters and numbers as shown on the city atlas, the several lots or subdivisions of lots assessed, with the valuation thereof, as shown by the register kept by the city engineer or surveyor, to the end that each lot and subdivision, as they appear at the time upon the city atlas, shall be liable for the whole tax assessed thereon; but if any lot shall have been sold and such transfer not entered on said atlas and register as aforesaid, the person who shall have paid the tax assessed thereon shall have the right to recover from the other parties interested their proportions of said tax, in proportion to the value of the several parts thereof.

40. And be it enacted, That the assessors of every city in this state shall assess in the respective divisions and wards of such city, in one and the same duplicate, all the state, county and city taxes to be levied in such city in each year; and the assessors shall assess the said taxes, and the collector of taxes shall demand payment at such times as the taxes are now payable in the townships of this state, or in case the common council shall fix a different time, at the time so fixed, of the tax or sums assessed on each individual named in the assessment books, in person or by notice left at his or her place of residence, or if not resident in said city, by notice mailed to his or her last known post-office address, and also give notice of the time and place of the meeting of the commissioners of appeal; and the said assessors and collectors of taxes shall, for performing the duties required of them by law, and the city ordinances, be entitled to receive such compensation as the common council may by ordinance direct, in lieu of such fees as are now provided by law.

PUBLIC SCHOOL.

41. And be it enacted, That the board of education shall be a body politic in fact and in law; they and their successors forever shall and may have perpetual succession and shall be persons in law capable of suing and being sued, pleading and being impleaded, answering and being answered unto, defending and being defended in any court of law or equity; and that they and their successors may have a common seal and alter the same at their pleasure; that the said board of education shall annually elect a president from its own body and in his absence a president pro tempore, appoint its time and place of meeting and determine the rules of its own proceedings, and such board of education shall have power to choose a city superintendent, define his duties and fix his compensation, not to exceed one thousand five hundred dollars per annum, and his term of office shall not exceed three years; it shall also appoint a secretary, who shall keep a journal of its proceedings and perform such other duties as the board may prescribe; a majority of the whole number of members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and no resolution or order shall be adopted without the consent of a majority of the whole number of said members; the president of the board shall have the power to call special meetings whenever he shall deem it expedient.

42. And be it enacted, That the board of education shall prepare and transmit to the common council on or before the first day of July in each year, an estimate of the amount of the moneys necessary for the support of public schools in such city during the year, which estimate shall specify particularly, under the several heads of erection and repairs of school houses, salaries of teachers and officers of the board, school books, school furniture and school libraries, heating and fuel and incidental expenses, as nearly as may be, the several sums required for each branch of expenditure, and the said common council of any such city shall determine by ordinance or resolution the amount of moneys to be appropriated to the public schools during the year, including therein the quota of any such city of the annual appropriation made by the state for the support of public schools; and the said common council are hereby empowered to raise by tax such sum or sums of money for the support of public schools, as required by the law of the state, or such sums in addition thereto as said council may deem expedient or necessary; and all moneys so raised and appropriated shall be expended by said board of education for the support of public schools in such city or school district according to the provisions of their act of incorporation and the state law in relation to public schools.

43. And be it enacted, That the board of education shall take charge of the public school houses in any such city or school district, and shall cause all necessary repairs to be made to the same, and are also empowered to establish public schools of different grades, adapted to the age and progress of the pupils, including evening schools for apprentices, minors and adult persons; to select and employ teachers; to provide school books, school furniture and school libraries for the schools; to purchase heating apparatus and fuel, or otherwise provide for the heating and lighting of such school houses, and incur such incidental expenses for the maintenance of the schools as may be necessary, and to adopt rules and regulations for the admission of pupils, the investigation and inspection of the schools, and the government and the studies to be pursued therein.

44. And be it enacted, That the said superintendent and board of education shall, on the first day in July in each year, submit a report embracing the number of schools under their charge, specifying their grades, and the number and names of the teachers, the number of pupils on the roll and the average attendance in each school, and a full and true account of the expenditures of the board during the year, under the respective heads of repairs of school houses, salaries of teachers and officers of the board, school books, school furniture, school libraries, heating and fuel and incidental expenses, and shall transmit the said annual report to the common council and a copy thereof to the state superintendent of public schools.

45. And be it enacted, That the city treasurer shall, in each year, from time to time, pay over to the said school superintendent such sum of money as shall have been ordered to be raised by tax for the support of the public schools in such city, not required by the law of this state to be paid to the county collector, on warrants to be signed by the said superintendent and countersigned by the comptroller.

STREETS, HIGHWAYS, DRAINS, SEWERS AND ASSESSMENTS THEREFOR.

46. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the common council of any city in this state, whenever in their opinion the public good requires it, by ordinance:

I. To lay out, accept and open any street, road, highway, or alley, public park or square within said city, and to order and cause any street, road, highway or alley already laid out to be vacated, straightened, altered or widened, and to take and appropriate for any such purpose, when necessary, any lands and real estate upon making compensation to the owner or owners thereof, as is hereinafter mentioned and provided, and such power shall belong exclusively to the said common council; and they may, at their discretion, by ordinance, accept such lands as may be dedicated by the owners thereof as public streets or alleys, and thereupon shall be bound to keep up, repair and maintain the same to the same extent that they may be bound to keep up, repair and maintain streets or alleys laid out by other legal proceedings.

II. To order and cause sewers or drains to be constructed, and, if necessary, to take and appropriate, for the purpose of constructing such drains or sewers, any lands and real estate, upon making compensation to the owner or owners thereof, and to make a just and equitable assessment upon all the owners of land and real estate peculiarly benefited thereby, in proportion to the benefit each shall be deemed to acquire of the costs, damages and expenses so incurred.

III. To order and cause any street or section of a street to be graded, graveled, paved, flagged, or otherwise improved and regulated in such manner as they may deem advisable, and to assess the cost and expense of such improvement upon the owners of property benefited thereby; in no case, however, shall any assessment for benefits made under the authority of this act exceed the special and peculiar benefit which the owner or owners of said property shall receive by reason of the improvement.

47. And be it enacted, That no ordinance shall be adopted by the common council for making any improvement or performing any work under and by virtue of the provisions of the last preceding section of this act or either of the subdivisions thereof, or under and by virtue of this act, until public notice shall be given of the intention of the common council to cause such improvement to be made or such work to be done and performed, and to that end it shall be the duty of the city clerk, by direction of the common council, to give notice in two or more newspapers published and circulated in any such city, for at least ten days of the intention of the common council to cause such improvement to be made or such work to be done and performed, briefly describing such work or improvement, and requesting such persons as may object thereto, to present their objections in writing at the office of the city clerk, on or before a day to be specified in said notice, not less than ten days from the time of such direction, and at any time thereafter the common council may proceed to consider such ordinance as aforesaid.

48. And be it enacted, That whenever any ordinance shall be passed by the common council for making any improvement or performing any work under and by virtue of the provisions of this act, all further acts and proceedings which it may be necessary for the said common council to take to carry out said improvement or work to completion, and all orders relating thereto, may be by resolution and not by ordinance.

49. And be it enacted, That whenever the common council shall determine, by ordinance, to lay out and open any street, road, highway or alley, public park or square within said city, or to alter, widen or straighten any street, road, highway or alley or any part of a street, road, highway or alley, or to make any sewer or drain in any part of said city, and to take and appropriate for such purpose any lands or real estate, they are hereby authorized to treat with the owner or owners thereof, and make such compensation therefor as they shall judge reasonable, and thereupon shall receive from such owner or owners a conveyance of such lands and real estate to the city, and such compensation shall constitute a part of the whole amount of the costs, damages and expenses to be assessed under and in pursuance of the provisions contained in this act.

50. And be it enacted, That when the said common council cannot agree with the owner or owners of such required lands or other real estate for the same, or when by reason of the legal incapacity or absence of any such owner or owners no such agreement can be made, it shall be lawful for the board of city assessors, and they are hereby required upon, application in writing of the said common council signed by their presiding officer, which application shall specify the improvement and the land or other real estate, with the appurtenances intended to be taken for such purpose, to make an estimate and assessment of the damages that any such owner or owners will sustain thereby, and in estimating and assessing such damages the said board of assessors shall have due regard as well to the value of the land or other real estate, with the appurtenances, as to the injury or benefit of the owner or owners by the making thereof, and it shall be the duty of the said board of assessors, after estimating said damages, to assess the amount thereof, including the sums which may have been agreed upon as the price of any of the lands or other real estate to be taken for such purpose (where agreement has been made with the owner or owners), and also the costs and expenses incurred, upon all the owners of land and real estate in such city peculiarly benefited thereby in proportion as nearly as may be to the advantage each shall be deemed to acquire, specifying in such assessment such lots or subdivisions of lots, designating the lots and subdivisions of land so benefited by the letters and numbers by which they are distinguished on the city atlas, together with the name of the respective owner or owners thereof, and the amount assessed on each lot, which said assessment shall be embraced in the report of the said board of assessors hereinafter directed to be made; and in case where the common council shall agree with the owner or owners of such lands as to the compensation therefor, the board of city assessors shall make their estimate for the damages in accordance therewith.

51. And be it enacted, That in making every assessment required to be made by the provisions of this act when any land or real es-

Continued on Page 12.

CHAPTER LXIV.

An Act to repeal an act entitled "An act concerning nurses, attendants and other employes in any charitable or penal institution of any township, county or other municipality in this state."

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the act entitled "An act concerning nurses, attendants and other employes in any charitable or penal institution of any township, county or other municipality in this state," approved May fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1895.

CHAPTER LXV.

An Act to provide for the indenture of indigent children to the managers or governing body of any incorporated children's home in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act any indigent child residing within the state under the age of twelve years may be bound to the managers, trustees, directors or other governing body of any duly incorporated children's industrial home or home for the care, nurture and maintenance of orphans, half orphans or destitute children, willing to accept thereof, by indenture signed by the father and mother of such child, if living and residing in this state, or by the surviving and resident parent if the other be deceased or non resident, or if there be no parent resident in this state, then by the guardian or nearest of kin of such child, residing in this state; provided, that if such child be above the age of ten years its consent thereto shall be first obtained.

2. And be it enacted, That any indigent child indentured as provided in the first section of this act shall be subject to such guardianship, discipline and control of the managers, trustees, directors or other governing body of the children's home to which it is indentured, as parents may exercise over their minor children under the laws of this state, until it shall attain the age of sixteen years, and shall in the meantime be entitled to support in such home and to proper food, clothing and maintenance and to such educational and industrial training as are provided for by the by-laws, catalogue or practice of such home for children under its care.

3. And be it enacted, That the managers, trustees or other governing body of any children's home to which any child shall be indentured under the provisions of this act, shall be authorized and empowered to assign such indenture to any proper person who will take upon himself the care, support, education and maintenance of such indigent child under the supervision and oversight of such governing body.

4. And be it enacted, That the managers, trustees or other governing body of any children's home to which any child shall be indentured under this act shall have authority at any time to apprentice such child, with his or her own free will and accord, to serve as a clerk, apprentice or servant in any art, craft, mystery, profession, trade, employment, manual occupation or labor, until, if a male, he arrives at the age of twenty-one years, and if a female, until she arrives at the age of eighteen years, or for any shorter time by indenture as its father and mother might do under the provisions of the act entitled "An act respecting apprentices and servants," approved April tenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, and the supplements thereto.

5. And be it enacted, That any order made by the judges of the court of common pleas of any of the several counties in this state committing any poor child or children to the care and control of the trustees or managers of any such duly incorporated children's home under the provisions of the act entitled "An act for the settlement and relief of the poor," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the several supplements thereto, shall give to such managers or other governing body the same control over and custody of such child or children with the same duty as to education and support as if the latter were indentured under the provisions of this act.

6. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1895.

CHAPTER LXVI.

Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to amend an act concerning corporations," approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, which amendatory act was approved March twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any corporation which has been or shall be included in any proclamation heretofore issued by the governor for nonpayment of taxes shall, within ninety days after the passage of this act, pay into the state treasury the amount of all taxes due from it to the state, with interest, costs and advertising fees, the said proclamation, so far as it affects said corporation, shall be void, and the charter of said corporation shall thereupon be revived to the same extent as if said taxes had been duly paid and said proclamation had not been issued.

2. And be it enacted, That upon the payment of said taxes, interest, costs and advertising fees and the filing of the receipt therefor, signed by the treasurer, and countersigned by the comptroller, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the state to note the said payment upon the original proclamation and record thereof.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1895.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

Supplement to an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to establish a system of public instruction' (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four," and which supplement was approved May twenty-fifth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section twenty-three of an act entitled "Supplement to an act entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four,'" be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

23. And be it enacted, That this act shall apply to all districts in this state receiving any portion of the state school moneys; provided, that in any district acting under a special charter, or under the provisions contained in the charter of any city, town, borough or other municipality, this act shall apply only so far as it is consistent with the provisions of such charter, and that all such charters shall remain and be in full force and effect the same as if this act had not been passed; and provided further, that in any such district acting under a special charter, or under the provisions contained in the charter of any city, town, borough or other municipality, upon the vote of a majority of its board of trustees may hold its annual election for the election of a trustee or trustees, and for determining the amount of money to be raised for taxation for the support of its school or schools upon the third Tuesday of March in each and every year upon like notice and in the same place or places as is provided in said act to which this is an amendment.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1895.

CHAPTER LXIX.

An Act to repeal section eleven of an act entitled "An act to establish and regulate pilots for the ports of Jersey City, Newark and Perth Amboy by the way of Sandy Hook," approved April seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section eleven of an act entitled "An act to establish and regulate pilots for the ports of Jersey City, Newark and Perth Amboy by the way of Sandy Hook," approved April seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1895.

CHAPTER LXX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to establish and regulate pilots for the ports of Jersey City, Newark and Perth Amboy by the way of Sandy Hook," approved April seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever the services of a pilot by the way of Sandy Hook shall be required to pilot any vessel sailing from any other port in the United States bound in or over the bar of Sandy Hook, application must first be made in writing by the master or owner or consignee of such vessel to the board of commissioners of pilots for such pilot, and the said board shall thereupon designate the pilots so to be employed in rotation, according to the designated number of boats in the service, beginning with the lowest number, so that the company of every boat in the service shall in their turn have the right to avail themselves of such employment, and the board shall by proper by-laws enforce this regulation.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 27, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXI.

An Act concerning fire departments in cities of the first class.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the municipal board having charge of the fire department in any city of the first class to fix the annual salary of the assistant engineer of the fire department of such city at an amount not exceeding two thousand dollars, which salary, when fixed under the provisions of this act, by resolution adopted by such board, shall not be increased or diminished during the term of the officer whose salary shall be so fixed.

2. And be it enacted, That all inconsistent acts are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

CHAPTER LXXII.

An Act to authorize the inhabitants of the several boroughs of this state to elect their commissioners of appeal of taxes for the term of three years.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in the several boroughs of this state the commissioners of appeal in case of taxation shall hereafter be elected for the term of three years; provided, however, that at the first annual borough election held in such borough after the passage of this act, the said commissioners of appeal shall be elected for one, two and three years respectively, and at each succeeding election thereafter one commissioner of appeal shall be elected for the term of three years.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act is hereby repealed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 1, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXIII.

An Act relating to townships in this state now or hereafter having a population of twelve thousand and five hundred, and within the territorial limits of which there is no incorporated city, town or borough, and providing for certain municipal officers and powers therein.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in every township of this state which had, by the census of the United States taken in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety, or which may hereafter have by any census which may hereafter be taken under the authority of any act of Congress of the United States or of the legislature of this state a population exceeding twelve thousand and five hundred, and within the territorial limits of which there is no incorporated city, town or borough, there shall be elected at the next annual township election held therein a person resident in such township to be the president of such township; he shall be known as "township president;" he shall be the chief executive officer of such township, and shall possess the powers and privileges and perform the duties hereinafter specified; he shall hold his office for the term of two years from the first Monday in May next following his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified; he shall have authority to appoint, subject to confirmation by the township committee by a majority vote of all the members thereof, the collector, treasurer or receiver of taxes, as the case may be, the auditor, chief of police, chief of fire department, town engineer, a township counsel, a health physician, a police justice and such other officers and employees as may be required in such townships to fill offices which are or may be hereafter created by ordinance; and in townships having such a president all of said officers which are now required by law to be elected by the people or appointed by the township committee shall, from and after the date of the passage of this act, cease to be so elected or appointed, and shall be appointed as herein provided.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall become the duty of the president of the township at the annual meeting of the township committee in each year to present in writing to the said township committee, and at such other times as may be deemed expedient, a general statement of the situation and condition of the affairs of said townships, with such recommendations as he may think proper; he shall countersign all warrants drawn upon the treasurer, collector or receiver of taxes for the payment of moneys for any township purpose; he shall execute all contracts in the name of the township; he shall have control over and supervision of the conduct and acts of subordinate officers, and have authority to examine into all complaints preferred against them or any of them for violation or neglect of duty and to prefer charges against them on his own motion and shall have the power to suspend any officer or employee of such township until the next regular meeting of the township committee next after such suspension shall take place, when he shall report in writing to such committee the fact of such suspension and his reasons therefor, and if said committee shall approve by a majority vote of all the members thereof of the act of said president in so suspending such officer or employee the office of the person so suspended shall from such approval be and become vacant; he shall have authority to call a special meeting of the township committee at any time when he shall deem it necessary, stating in the call the object thereof; and he shall generally do and perform all such duties as may be required of him by law or by any ordinance of such township; he shall receive such compensation as shall be fixed by the township committee by ordinance, not to exceed twelve hundred dollars per annum; in case of a vacancy in the office of township president from any cause, the chairman of the township committee shall succeed to the office of township president until the first Monday in May next after such vacancy shall have happened, when a successor shall be elected, and in case of the absence from the township of the township president or his sickness, or his inability from any cause to attend to the duties of his office, the chairman of the town committee shall for the time being possess all the rights and powers of the township president.

3. And be it enacted, That every ordinance or resolution passed by the township committee in any township to which this act applies shall, before it takes effect, be presented to the president of the township by the township clerk, duly signed by the chairman of the township committee and the township clerk; if he approve it he shall sign it, if not he shall return it with his objections and his written objections with the township clerk within ten days after he shall receive it, and such township committee shall, at its first regular meeting thereafter, enter the objections at length on the minutes and shall proceed to reconsider the same, and if two-thirds of all the members of such township committee agree to pass the same notwithstanding such objections, it shall take effect; the vote shall be taken by ayes and nays and entered on the minutes; if such ordinance or resolution shall not be returned within ten days as aforesaid, it shall take effect in like manner as if it had been signed.

4. And be it enacted, That it shall be unlawful for the township committee of any township to which this act applies to award any contract or purchase any supplies where the amount required to be expended in payment thereof shall be two hundred and fifty dollars or more, except after bids shall have been asked, by public advertisement, as shall be provided by ordinance and publicly received therefor, and such contract shall be awarded to or such purchase made of the lowest bidder therefor, unless the interest of the township will not be promoted thereby, and said committee shall have the right at all times to reject any and all bids which may be made; no award of any contract, and no acceptance of any bid, shall be made in any other manner than by resolution approved by, or passed over the veto of, the township president.

5. And be it enacted, That the township committee shall have power and authority to provide by ordinance for the appointment of a street and sewer commissioner at a salary to be fixed by the township committee, and when said officer is so provided for he shall be appointed by the township president, subject to confirmation by the township committee, and shall hold his office for a term to be fixed in the ordinance so authorizing his appointment, not to exceed a period of two years, and it shall be lawful for the township committee to provide in the ordinance authorizing the appointment of such street and sewer commissioner and fixing his compensation, that he may at the same time hold the office of township engineer.

6. And be it enacted, That all licenses for the sale of strong and spirituous liquors, wine, ale and beer, within the limits of such townships, shall be granted by a board of excise and such board shall have sole power to grant licenses to any person or persons of good moral character, who shall be approved by them, upon the presentation of a petition by such applicant to such board of the same tenor and effect heretofore required to be presented to the judges of the several courts of common pleas in this state for that purpose; the said board of excise shall be composed of three persons to be appointed by the township president and confirmed by the township committee, and shall hold their office for three years from the date of their appointment; provided, however, that in making the first appointment under the provisions of this act, the president shall appoint one person for one year, one person for two years and one person for three years, and thereafter each person appointed shall be appointed for three years, except to fill a vacancy, in which case the appointee shall be for the unexpired term only; all proceeds received from license fees within such townships shall be paid over to and received by the receiver of taxes or other proper officer, before the license shall be issued, and such license shall be signed by the board, or a majority of them, and shall be kept at all times by the person receiving the same in a conspicuous place upon the licensed premises subject to public inspection.

7. And be it enacted, That all ordinances heretofore adopted by any township in this state to which the provisions of this act shall apply, and all special acts now applicable to townships and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, shall be and they are hereby continued in force and effect in all such townships as fully and to all intents and purposes as if embodied herein, and all acts relative to townships in this state heretofore or hereafter passed shall be applicable to the townships to which this act shall apply, unless by the provisions of said act such townships are expressly excepted or they are inconsistent herewith.

8. And be it enacted, That the township committee may provide by ordinance for the enforcement of the ordinances heretofore adopted or hereafter, to be adopted by a fine not exceeding the sum of one hundred dollars in any one case or by imprisonment not exceeding ten days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, and the police force in such township shall have power to arrest without warrant any person who shall be detected in the act of violating any of such ordinances and the police officers of any such township shall have, within the territorial limits of such townships, all the powers of a constable under the laws of this state for the arrest of offenders, and for the service of a process issued out of the court for the trial of small causes, or by a justice of the peace or police justice.

9. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately, but its provisions shall remain inoperative in any township of this state until assented to by a majority of the legal voters thereof voting at an election to be held in such township at any time to be fixed by the township committee thereof, of which the township clerk shall cause public notice of the time and place of holding such election to be given, by advertisements signed by himself and set up in at least twenty public places in such township for at least six days previous to the day of such election; and said clerk shall provide for each elector voting at such election ballots to be printed or written, or partly printed and partly written, on which shall be either the words "for the adoption for this township of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act relating to townships in this state now or hereafter having a population of twelve thousand and five hundred, and within the territorial limits of which there is no incorporated city, town or borough, and providing for certain municipal officers and powers therein,'" or "against the adoption for this township of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act relating to townships in this state now or hereafter having a population of twelve thousand and five hundred, and within the territorial limits of which there is no incorporated city, town or borough, and providing for certain municipal officers and powers therein;'" that the places for holding such election shall be procured by the township clerk under the direction of the township committee, and the polls at such election shall be opened at six o'clock in the forenoon and closed at seven o'clock in the afternoon, and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of the several election districts of such township for the time being and in such manner as may then be prescribed by the law regulating township elections therein, but no previous registration of voters or the maintenance of booths or compartments in the polling places on the day of such election shall be required at any election held under this act; and the officers of each election district shall return to the township committee of such township a true and correct statement in writing under their hand of the result of such election in their respective districts, which return shall be entered at large upon the minutes of said committee; if it appears from such returns so made that a majority of the persons voting have voted for adoption, then this act shall in all respects be and become operative in such township, and binding on the inhabitants thereof and upon all persons and property to be affected thereby, and shall abrogate, repeal and annul all acts and parts of acts now existing, whether general or special, in any wise affecting the government of such township, so far as the same are contrary or inconsistent with the provisions of this act; provided, however, that this act shall not be submitted to the votes of any township by the township committee thereof more frequently than once in any one year under the authority conferred by this section.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXIV.

An Act to amend an act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act concerning cities of the first class in this state and constituting municipal boards of street and water commissioners therein, and defining the powers and duties of such municipal boards and relating to the municipal affairs and departments of such cities, placed under the control and management of such boards, and providing for the maintenance of the same,' approved March twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one," which supplement was approved March ninth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section three of an act entitled "A supplement to an act entitled 'An act concerning cities of the first class in this state and constituting municipal boards of street and water commissioners, and defining the powers and duties of such municipal boards and relating to the municipal affairs and departments of such cities placed under the control and management of such boards and providing for the maintenance of the same,' approved March twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one," which supplement was approved March ninth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, be amended so as to read as follows:

3. And be it enacted, That said board of street and water commissioners shall have power, by a unanimous vote, from time to time, out of said funds, when so set aside, to cause any part of a main thoroughfare in such city to be improved or paved, or both, although the same may not have theretofore been paved, and also by such vote to construct and maintain out of said funds a proper stairway and footpath upon any lands owned or controlled by said city, leading from one street to another street in such city, upon a grade extending ten feet in the hundred.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXV.

An Act to provide for the adjustment, division and creation of wards in certain cities of the third class in this state, and for the election of officers therein and in said cities.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That after the passage of this act, any city of the third class that has been heretofore divided into wards may, by ordinance adopted by a majority vote of the common council or other legislative body thereof, at a regular meeting or at a special meeting called for that purpose so divide, create, re-create or adjust the wards thereof, and increase or diminish the number of such wards once in five years, so that each ward shall contain not more than eight hundred legal voters.

2. And be it enacted, That whenever any city council or other legislative body, in any such city of the third class of this state, shall divide, create, re-create or re-adjust the wards of such city, or increase or diminish the number of such wards, in conformity with the first section of this act, each ward so created, re-created or re-adjusted, shall be entitled to elect to the common council or other legislative body in such city two councilmen or aldermen, as the case may be, and such other officers as were theretofore elected from the different wards of such city, whose term of office shall be for two years; provided, that if, at the date of the first election under this act, the term of office of any councilman or other person shall not have expired, then, in that case, such person shall hold his office for the term for which he was elected, and at the expiration of said term his successor shall be elected for two years; and provided, also, if, in any such wards, there shall be only one councilman or alderman, and his unexpired term is two years, there shall be an election of a councilman or alderman in such ward for one year.

3. And be it enacted, That in addition to the councilman or alderman, as the case may be, and the other officers elected under this act, there shall be elected a councilman or alderman-at-large by all the legal voters of such city; which councilman or alderman so elected shall hold his office for two years, and may reside in any ward therein.

4. And be it enacted, That the word "or" whenever it occurs in this act shall be construed to mean "and" whenever it shall be necessary to give effect to the provisions of this act.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXVI.

An Act relating to assessors in the cities of this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever in any city of this state there are assessors, elected or appointed from districts whose duty it is to assess personal property only, the board of aldermen, common council or other legislative body in said city, shall have power to establish or change the said assessing districts at any time by resolution; provided, however, that no change of districts shall be made within thirty days of any election at which district assessors are to be elected.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXVII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of an agricultural experiment station," approved March tenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the expenses of said station, when presented to the comptroller of the state, accompanied by the proper vouchers, duly certified by the president and secretary of the board of directors, shall, upon warrant of said comptroller, be paid out of the state treasury; provided, such expenses do not exceed the sum of fifteen thousand dollars in any year.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXVIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act respecting the orphans' court, and relating to the powers and duties of the ordinary and the orphans' court and surrogates," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That where an exemplified copy of any will admitted to probate in any state of the United States or territory, or the District of Columbia, or foreign state, has been or shall be filed, pursuant to law, in the office of the surrogate of any county of this state, and it shall not appear by the record of probate accompanying such will whether or not such will was executed in the manner required by the laws of the state to transfer or affect the title to real estate situate in this state, it shall be lawful for the orphans' court or the surrogate of the county in which such exemplified copy of the will is filed, to receive proofs as to the due execution of said will without the production of the original will; and, when necessary, said court may order that a commission issue to take testimony of non-resident witnesses, and the proofs so taken shall be filed with said exemplified copy of the will, and recorded in such surrogate's office, and shall have the same force and effect as if the same were a part of the proofs on which the original will was admitted to probate in such state, territory, District of Columbia, or foreign state; and all conveyances of real estate heretofore or hereafter made by any executor or executors, administrator or administrators with the will annexed, or the survivor or survivors of them, by virtue of the power and authority conferred in any will so duly proved to have been executed in accordance with the laws of this state or by any devisee or devisees named in said will shall be as valid as if said will had been admitted to probate and letters testamentary or of administration with the will annexed, had been issued in this state; and such records or copies thereof, duly certified, shall be received in evidence in all courts of this state.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXIX.

An Act relating to boards of health in cities of this state containing a population of over one hundred thousand.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in cities containing a population of over one hundred thousand inhabitants, the board of health of such cities shall consist of not less than five nor more than ten members, who shall be appointed in such manner and hold their respective offices for such terms as the board of aldermen, common council or other governing body may by ordinance provide; if any vacancy shall occur in any such board it shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointments were made, but for the unexpired term only.

2. And be it enacted, That any board of health now existing in such cities shall be deemed, held and taken to be the board of health created under the provisions of this act, and every such board is hereby perpetuated and continued, and is hereby authorized, without reorganization, to exercise all the powers and required to perform all the duties applicable to boards of health under the laws of this state; the members of every such board shall continue in office until the expiration of the terms for which they were originally appointed; and all ordinances, rules and regulations heretofore adopted or passed by any such board of health as aforesaid which might be adopted or passed under the authority of this act shall continue to be the ordinances, rules and regulations of such board and shall be of the same force and validity as if they had been actually adopted or passed under the provisions and authority of this act.

3. And be it enacted, That the said board of health in said cities are hereby authorized to grant and regulate permits and fix the fees to be paid therefor.

4. And be it enacted, That said boards of health in said city be and are hereby empowered to pass, enact, alter, amend and repeal ordinances relating to the public health of said cities, and fix the amount of fines and penalties for the violation of the said ordinances, and provide for the collection, appropriation and disbursement of the same; the method now in use by the boards of health in said cities for the passing, enacting, altering, amending and publishing ordinances in said cities to be the method used to pass, enact, alter, amend, repeal and publish the ordinances herein mentioned.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts which in anywise conflict with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXX.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act relating to certain contracts for the lease or conditional sale of railroad equipment and rolling stock, and providing for the record thereof," approved the eighth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, and to provide that certain contracts shall not be effected by the act entitled "An act requiring contracts for the conditional sale of personal property to be recorded," approved the ninth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the act approved the eighth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, be amended so as to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any railroad or street railway equipment and rolling stock shall hereafter be sold, leased or loaned, on the condition that the title to the same, notwithstanding the possession and use of the same by the vendee, lessee or bailee shall remain in the vendor, lessor or bailor until the terms of the contract, as to the payment of the installments, amounts of rentals payable, or the performance of other obligations thereunder, shall have been fully complied with, such condition shall not be valid as to any subsequent judgment creditor or any subsequent purchaser for a valuable consideration without notice, unless:

First. The same shall be evidenced by writing, duly acknowledged before some person authorized by law to take acknowledgments of deeds.

Second. Such writing shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state whenever the vendee, lessee or bailee is a corporation operating its line in more than a single county, and in case where the vendee, lessee or bailee is a corporation operating its line in a single county, then in the same book as mortgages of goods and chattels are recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of such county.

Third. Each locomotive or car so sold, leased or loaned shall have the name of the vendor, lessor or bailor, or the assignee of such vendor, lessor or bailor, plainly marked upon both sides thereof, followed by the word owner, lessor, bailor or assignee, as the case may be.

2. And be it enacted, That the provisions of the act of the general assembly entitled "An act requiring contracts for the conditional sale of personal property to be recorded," approved the ninth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, shall not be construed to apply to railroad and street railway equipment and rolling stock which shall be the subject of contracts of the kind specified in the first section of the said act as hereby amended.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall not be held to apply to any contract heretofore made of the character described in the first section hereof, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXI.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any county superintendent shall receive satisfactory evidence that the president or district clerk of any school board in his county has neglected or refused to perform any official duty assigned to him by law, he may declare the office of such president or district clerk vacant; provided, that due notice of his proposed action shall be sent by him to such president or district clerk, who shall have opportunity to present satisfactory reasons for such neglect or refusal, and that the office of such president or district clerk shall not be declared vacant until the expiration of three weeks from the date of said notice; and provided, further, that the action of the county superintendent shall be approved by the state superintendent of public instruction.

2. And be it enacted, That whenever the board of education of any school district in this state, acting under the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement, shall order the calling of a special meeting of the legal voters of the district, a notice thereof specifying the day, time, place and object of said meeting, shall be posted by the district clerk on each school house within the district, and at such other public places as shall be deemed necessary at least ten days before the date of said meeting; provided, that at least seven notices shall be posted within the district, but it shall not be necessary to have the notices calling a regular or special meeting published in the newspapers; and provided, further, that no business shall be transacted at any special meeting except such as is stated in the notice calling such meeting.

3. And be it enacted, That hereafter the payments to county superintendents for expenses incurred by them in the discharge of their official duties may be made semi-annually.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to support fire organizations in the several townships of this state," approved March twenty-ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the several townships of this state having a population of five thousand inhabitants or over according to the last census, in which are located apparatus for the protection of property from loss by fire, to appropriate at an annual meeting, or at any special meeting to be called for that purpose, a sum of money not exceeding fifteen hundred dollars in any year for and towards the support and maintenance of said apparatus, and the organizations using the same, and which sum so appropriated shall be levied and collected in the same manner as other taxes are assessed and collected for township purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

An Act respecting the examination of witnesses before legislative committees and providing for the punishment of witnesses refusing or neglecting to appear or give evidence before such committees.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any investigation or inquiry by any joint committee of the legislature, any standing committee of either house, or any special committee which shall have been or may be by resolution directed to enter upon such investigation or inquiry, all witnesses sworn or affirmed before such committee truly answer all questions put to them which the committee shall decide to be proper and pertinent to such investigation or inquiry; and no witness shall be excused from answering any such question on the ground that to answer the same might or would incriminate him, or tend to criminate him; but no answer made by any witness to any such question shall be used or admitted in evidence in any proceeding against him, except in case of a criminal proceeding for perjury in respect to his answer to such questions; and if any such witness shall refuse to answer any question so decided to be proper and pertinent he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

2. And be it enacted, That if any witness summoned to appear before any such committee shall wilfully neglect or refuse to appear in obedience to the summons or shall refuse to be sworn or affirmed he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXIV.

An Act concerning boroughs.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all ordinances and resolutions heretofore passed, and all acts and contracts done in its corporate capacity by any borough, or by any committee or officials thereof, the validity and full legal force of the incorporation of which borough, by the second section of an act entitled 'An act to repeal an act entitled 'An act for the formation and government of boroughs,' approved March twelfth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety," which said act was passed February third, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, is excepted from the effect of said repealing act, are hereby ratified, confirmed and made as valid and effective as if said act of February third, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, had not been passed.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXV.

Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning corporations" (Revision), approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any society incorporated under the laws of this state, having for its object the relief of clergymen whose advancing years have a claim on the support of the church to which they belong, is hereby authorized and empowered, by a vote of not less than two-thirds of the trustees or directors of said society, to contract with any solvent corporation or corporations of any state of the United States of America, which corporation shall have for its object the same purpose, to assume all of the contracts, obligations, liabilities, policies, stipulations and promises of the said corporation or society incorporated under the laws of this state, and to convey to said other corporation, in consideration of the assumption by the same of the contracts, obligations, liabilities, policies, stipulations and promises of the society incorporated under the laws of this state, all of the moneys, properties and assets of said corporation; provided, however, that before the said act of the trustees or directors of said society shall become operative, and before said contract shall be entered into and said conveyance made, the said act of the directors shall be ratified at the annual meeting of the members of the said society.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

An Act to authorize cities of the second class to erect and make additions to hospitals for contagious diseases, and to provide for the maintenance thereof.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the common council or other legislative body of any city of the second class, whenever it is by it deemed necessary, may purchase land in said city and erect a building or buildings thereon to be used for a hospital for contagious diseases; the plan or plans for such building or buildings and specifications thereof shall, before the same are adopted, or the building or buildings erected, be approved by the mayor, the common council or other legislative body, and the board of health of such city; and for the purpose of obtaining means for erecting said building or buildings and for purchasing the necessary land, the said common council or other legislative body may issue and sell bonds of said city to an amount not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars, said bonds to bear interest at a rate not exceeding five per centum per annum, and the principal to be paid within ten years and the proceeds applied to the purposes aforesaid.

2. And be it enacted, That after the said building or buildings shall be completed, the same shall be in charge of and under the direction of the local board of health of said city, and for the purposes of conducting the same the board of health of said city shall annually certify to the common council or legislative body having power to pass the annual tax ordinance of such city the sum considered necessary to maintain the said hospital for the ensuing year, and the said common council or other board shall incorporate in the annual tax ordinance the above amount or what part of it may to them seem best, and the treasurer of said city shall pay such amount to the local board of health, to be by it used for the payment of the current expenses of maintaining and conducting such hospital and the care and maintenance of the patients confined therein; and the said common council or other legislative body may, whenever considered necessary by the local board of health, pay over to such board such additional sum or sums as shall be required to pay the current expenses of such hospital, such additional sum or sums to be borrowed and inserted in the next tax ordinance.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXVII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act respecting the orphans' court and relating to the powers and duties of the ordinary and the orphans' court and surrogates," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That where a sale has been made for the payment of debts of the testator or intestate by an executrix or administratrix by order of any orphans' court and confirmed by such court and a deed has been given in pursuance of such sale and recorded, such sale and conveyance shall be deemed valid and effectual in law notwithstanding such executrix or administratrix may have married pending such proceedings and executed such conveyance by her name mentioned in the letters testamentary or of administration issued to her.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER LXXXIX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning corporations," approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any incorporated company shall become insolvent, or shall suspend the ordinary business of the said company for want of funds to carry on the same, it shall not be lawful for the directors or managers of the said company, or for any officer or agent of the said company, to sell, convey, assign or transfer any of the estate, effects, choses in action, goods, chattels, rights or credits, lands or tenements, of the said company; nor shall it be lawful to make any such sale, conveyance, assignment or transfer in contemplation of the insolvency of any such company, and every such sale, conveyance, assignment or transfer shall be utterly null and void as against creditors; provided always, that in case of a bona fide purchase made for a valuable consideration, before the said company shall have actually suspended the ordinary business of the said company as aforesaid, by any person having no knowledge, information or notice of the insolvency of the said company, or of the sale being made in contemplation of the insolvency of the said company, such purchase shall not be invalidated or impeached.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER XC.

An Act to validate and confirm proceedings for the formation of borough governments had and taken under the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments," approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the acts amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That no proceedings had or taken for the formation of a borough government under the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the formation of borough governments," approved April fifth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, shall be taken or held to be invalid or inoperative, because the petition of the inhabitants of the district incorporated or to be incorporated, presented to a judge of the court of common pleas, as in the said acts directed, shall have failed, or shall fail, to set forth or state that the district described in the said petition embraced a territory or area not to exceed four square miles and did not contain a population exceeding five thousand, or because the order made on the presentation of the said petition recites that it is made by the court or in the name of the court, instead of by or in the name of the judge of the said court who signed the said order, or because of any other irregularities or errors in the proceedings taken under the said act for the formation of such borough; provided, however, that in any suit or judicial proceeding which has been or may be brought to test the validity of such proceeding or the validity of the incorporation of such borough, it shall be made to appear either by the record of the said proceedings, or by other proof, that such petition was signed by the persons and in the manner required by the said act; that the territory described in the said petition did not embrace an area to exceed four square miles and did not contain a population exceeding five thousand; that an order for the said election was made upon the presentation of the said petition, signed by the judge of the court of common pleas of the county within which the district described in the said petition is situated, and that the order for said election and the notice thereof was published as required by law, and that the said election was held at the time and place designated therein, and that at such election a majority of the votes cast for and against the incorporation of the said borough were cast in favor of the incorporation thereof.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and they are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER XCI.

An Act to establish public parks in certain counties in this state, and to regulate the same.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any county of this state containing a population of more than two hundred thousand it shall be the duty of the justice of the supreme court presiding in the courts of such county, as hereinafter provided, to appoint five persons a board of commissioners, to be known as "the —— county park commission" (inserting the name of the county in and for which such commissioners are appointed); the commissioners first appointed under the provisions of this act in any county shall hold office respectively for the term of one, two, three, four and five years, as indicated and fixed in the order of appointment, and all such commissioners, after the first appointment, shall be so appointed for the full term of five years; vacancies in the said board happening by resignation or otherwise shall be filled by such justice, and the persons appointed to fill such vacancies shall be appointed for the unexpired term only; such persons so appointed, when duly qualified, constituting such board of park commissioners, and their successors, are hereby created a body politic, with power to sue and be sued, to use a common seal and to make by-laws; the members of any such board shall serve without compensation; their necessary expenses shall be allowed and paid and no person employed by the said board shall be a member thereof; before entering upon the duties of his office, each of the members of said board shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation, faithfully and impartially to perform the duties of his office, which oath or affirmation shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the county wherein the board of which he is a member is appointed; every such board shall annually choose from among its members a president, vice president and treasurer, and appoint a clerk or secretary and such other officers and employees as it may deem necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; it may also determine the duties and compensation of such appointees and remove them at pleasure, and make reasonable rules and regulations respecting the same; every such board shall have a suitable office, where its maps, plans, documents, records and accounts shall be kept, subject to public inspection, at such times and under such reasonable regulations as the board may determine.

2. And be it enacted, That every such board shall have power to acquire, maintain and make available to the inhabitants of the county wherein it is appointed, and to the public parks and open spaces for public resort and recreation, and shall have power to locate within the limits of said county such public parks and places, and for these purposes shall have power to take in fee or otherwise, by purchase, gift, devise or eminent domain, lands and rights in lands for public parks and open spaces within said county; deeds of conveyance therefor shall be made to the said board by its corporate name, and it shall be the duty of such board to preserve and care for, lay out and improve any such park and places, and to make rules for the use and government of the same; such board shall have power also to connect any road, park or public open space with any other park or public open space, and also with any city or municipality of the said county by a suitable roadway or boulevard, and for this purpose shall have power to exercise any of the rights and powers granted by this act in the manner herein prescribed, and also to take or acquire in fee or otherwise in the corporate name of the said board for the benefit of the said county, by purchase, gift, devise or eminent domain, any lands or rights in lands, easement or interests in lands within the said county, although the lands so taken, or any part thereof, be already a street or way, and to construct and maintain along, across and upon and over the same, or any other land acquired by the said board under this act, roadways, parkways or boulevards; provided, however, that the concurrence of the common council or other body having authority over highways shall be necessary to take or appropriate any portion of an existing street or road.

3. And be it enacted, That the said board, before proceeding to purchase or condemn lands for a public park or place, shall determine upon the location and quantity of land to be included in any park or place, and cause a survey thereof to be made and a map showing the lands to be embraced therein, which map shall be kept by the commissioners in their office and the boundary lines of every such park or place shall be recorded in a book to be kept for that purpose by said board; and before laying out and opening any roadway, parkway or boulevard, they shall cause a survey of the same to be made and a map thereof to be filed in their office, showing the termini of the said roadway, parkway or boulevard, including the courses and distances, the names of the several owners or reputed owners of land through which the same will pass, so far as the same can be ascertained, and the streets or roads which may be included therein; provided, however, that the said board shall not be obliged to disclose such locations surveys or maps to public inspection until it has taken proceedings to condemn land or rights in lands necessary therefor.

4. And be it enacted, That when the said board shall deem it proper to acquire land or rights in lands for any public park or place which they have located, as herein provided, and the said board or its agents duly authorized cannot agree with the owner or owners of such lands and rights in lands, as to the price and terms of the purchase thereof, or when by the legal incapacity or absence of such owner or owners, no agreement can be made for the purchase thereof, a description in writing of the lands or rights in lands so desired, with the name or names of the occupants, if any there be and of the owner or owners, and other parties interested, if known, and their residences, if the same can be ascertained, by the board or its agents, shall be presented to one of the justices of the supreme court of this state, who shall thereupon cause such board to give notice thereof to the persons interested, if known and in this state, or if unknown or cannot be found or out of this state, to make publication thereof as he shall direct, for any period not less than ten days; and assign a particular time and place for the appointment of commissioners as hereinafter provided, at which time, upon satisfactory evidence to him of the service or publication of such notice, he shall appoint under his hand three impartial and judicious freeholders, residents in the county in which such lands or rights in lands are situate, to examine and appraise the said lands or rights in lands and assess the damages, upon such notice to be given to the persons interested as shall be directed by the justice making such appointment, not less than ten days; and it shall be the duty of the said commissioners (having first taken and subscribed an oath or affirmation before some person duly authorized to administer the same, faithfully and impartially to examine the matter in question, and to make a true report and appraisement as aforesaid in writing, according to the best of their skill and understanding) to meet at the time and place appointed, and to proceed to view and examine the lands or rights in lands, and to make a just and equitable appraisement and assessment as aforesaid, to be paid by the said board, which report shall be made under the hands of the said commissioners, or any two of them, and within fifteen days thereafter, together with the description of the lands or rights in lands, and the appointment or oaths or affirmations aforesaid shall be filed in the clerk's office of the county within which such lands are situate, to remain of record therein, and thereupon, and on payment or tender of payment of the amount so awarded to the party or parties entitled thereto, the said board is authorized and empowered to enter upon and take possession of the said land and rights in lands; and all titles thereto for the purpose for which the same is taken shall, upon payment, or tender, pass from the said owners and parties interested to the said board in trust for the said county in and for which they are appointed; and in case of any dispute between any owner or other party interested as to their respective rights or shares in and to the sum so assessed and ascertained under this act, then the said board is authorized to pay the sum assessed to the clerk of the county in which said lands are situate, to be paid out and disbursed to or among the parties entitled to the same, by the order of the circuit court of the said county, upon the application of any one or more of the said parties interested, on due notice to the others; and the said justice shall, upon the application of either party, or on reasonable notice to the others, tax and allow such costs, fees and expenses to the commissioners and other persons performing any legal duty in the premises as he shall think equitable and right, which shall be paid by the said board; and if any or all of the said owners or other parties interested shall be absent from this state, or under any legal incapacity that disqualifies them from receiving legal payment of the money awarded, then it shall be the duty of the said board to pay the amount awarded to such person or persons, to the clerk of the county in which said lands or rights are situate; and it shall be the duty of the clerk to receive the same, to be paid to the parties entitled thereto by order of the circuit court of the said county, upon application made therefor, and every and all of such payments to the clerk shall be equivalent to payment to the parties entitled thereto, and shall operate to transfer the title of the said lands or said rights in lands to the said board as if payment was made directly to the said parties; provided always, that should the said board, or the owner or owners of said lands or rights in lands feel aggrieved by the report and award of the said commissioners, they, or either of them, may appeal from the said appraisement and award in respect to their interests therein, to the circuit court of the county wherein the said lands are situate.

5. And be it enacted, That every appeal from the appraisement and award of the said commissioners shall be made in the form of a petition to the said court, and notice thereof shall be given to the other parties within fifteen days after the filing of the commissioners' report and award, which proceedings shall vest in the circuit court the authority and power to hear and determine the question of the land or rights in lands and the damages sustained, if any, and thereupon the said court shall direct a proper issue to be framed between the said parties for the trial of the said question, and order a jury to be struck for the trial of the same, and a view to be had of the premises by the said jury, and the said issue shall be tried upon like notice and in like manner as other issues of fact are tried in said court; and it shall be the duty of the said jury to assess the value of the said land in question or rights in land, and the damages sustained, if any; and the party or parties appealing shall recover costs in such suit, if they shall succeed at the trial on the appeal in changing the valuation or assessment in his, her or their favor, and shall pay costs, if they shall fail so to do, but no appeal shall prevent the said board from taking the land upon filing the commissioners' report and award, and payment or tender to the parties of the amount thereof, as herein provided; that upon the verdict of the jury fixing the value of the lands or rights in lands and damages, the court shall enter judgment for the amount thereof, with or without interests and costs, according to the provisions of this act and the principles of law applicable to the trial of similar issues in other cases, and the judgment so entered shall be the sum which the owner or owners and other persons interested are entitled to have from the said board for the said lands or rights in lands and damages, and may be enforced in manner and form similar to other cases in which judgment is pronounced in the said court, and when the commissioners' award is paid by the said board into court, as hereinbefore provided, it shall be the duty of the court to order the moneys so paid, into court applied to the payment of the said judgment, and the surplus, if any, repaid to the said board.

6. And be it enacted, That the said board shall have power and authority not only to lay out and open roadways, parkways and boulevards, connecting parks and open spaces as herein provided, but shall have authority to establish the grade of such highways, and change and alter the same, to grade, curb, flag, pave and otherwise improve the said parkways, roadways and boulevards, and to regulate the use thereof.

7. And be it enacted, That whenever the said board shall determine to open and lay out a boulevard, parkway or roadway, or to make any improvement thereof which shall require the condemnation of lands or rights in lands, the said board shall give notice by publication, at least ten days, in one or more of the newspapers circulating in the county wherein the lands to be condemned are situate, of its intention to apply to the circuit court of the said county for the appointment of three disinterested commissioners to make an appraisement of the value of the lands and rights in lands necessary to be taken in the judgment of the said commissioners, and the damages occasioned thereby for the opening and laying out of any boulevard or roadway, or for the improvement thereof; and also to ascertain, fix and determine the amount of the special benefits which the laying out of the said street or the improvement thereof will confer upon any owner of property benefited thereby; and at the time and place specified in such notice the said court shall appoint three disinterested freeholders resident in the said county to make a just and true appraisement of the value of the lands or rights in lands to be condemned and taken by the said board for the purposes specified in the said notice and the damages, and also to make a just and true estimate and appraisement of the special or peculiar benefits which the opening of any such boulevard, parkway or roadway, or the improvement thereof, may confer upon any owner of property benefited thereby in proportion, as nearly as may be, to the benefit which each owner may be deemed to acquire; and the said commissioners, when so appointed shall forthwith take and subscribe an oath or affirmation, faithfully and impartially to perform the duties imposed upon them by law, and such oath or affirmation shall be filed in the office of the clerk of said county; and the said commissioners shall fix a time and place when they will hear the persons interested in the property to be taken and appropriated as aforesaid and in the benefits to be conferred by the proposed improvement, of which time and place public notice shall be given by the said commissioners for at least ten days prior to the day of meeting in two or more of the newspapers published and circulating in the said county, and after having viewed the premises and heard the parties interested, the said commissioners shall proceed to estimate and fix the value of lands and rights in lands taken and the damages caused by such taking, and also ascertain and determine the amount of special or peculiar benefits conferred upon the owners of property benefited by the said opening or improvement, in proportion, as nearly as may be, to the benefits which each owner shall be deemed to acquire, and to make report of their assessment to said court; the said commissioners may report the damages awarded and the benefits assessed in any case in the same report or separately as they may determine, and upon the coming in of any such report, signed by the said commissioners, or any two of them, the said court shall cause such notice to be given as it shall direct of the time and place of hearing any objections that may be made to such award or assessment, and after hearing any matter which may be alleged against the same, the said court shall, by rule or order, either confirm the said report or refer the same to the same commissioners for revision and correction; and the said commissioners shall return the same, when referred to them again, corrected and revised, or make new report thereof to the said court without unnecessary delay, and the same, on being so returned, shall be confirmed or again referred by the said court in manner aforesaid, as right and justice may require, and so from time to time until a report shall be made or returned in the premises, which the said court shall confirm, and such report, when so confirmed, shall be final and conclusive, as well upon the said board of commissioners as upon the owners of any land and real estate, or rights therein affected thereby, and the said court shall thereupon cause said report so confirmed to be filed in the office of the clerk of said county, there to remain on record; and the said court shall have power and authority to make such rules for the regulation of the practice and procedure under this act as shall be deemed expedient and consistent with its provisions; the said court shall, upon application made by the said board or on its behalf, fix and determine the compensation to be paid the commissioners so appointed, and allow any other expenses necessarily incurred in making any such assessment, all of which shall be paid by the said board of park commissioners; provided, however, that the cost and expense of making any assessment for benefits, including the fees of commissioners, may be included in making up the entire cost for the purpose of such assessment.

8. And be it enacted, That in every case in which damages are awarded under the provisions of this act to an owner or owners of lands, and benefits are assessed against the same owner or owners, it shall be lawful for the said board, when both the award of damages and the assessment of benefits have been finally confirmed, to deduct the amount of the benefits assessed from the damages awarded, and to set off such benefits against such damages by proper charges and credits, in order that the excess of damages, if any, shall be paid, and the excess of benefits, if any, only collected.

9. And be it enacted, That any person or persons to whom an award shall be made as aforesaid, subject to the deductions for benefits assessed as aforesaid, may sue for and collect the said award after the same shall have been confirmed as aforesaid, in an action of debt against the said board in any court of competent jurisdiction, and a certified copy of the award so made shall be presumptive evidence of the claim sued upon.

10. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the said board to collect the assessments for benefits so made as aforesaid, either by a suit in an action in debt in the name of the said board against the person or persons from whom such assessment is due, together with the cost of making the same, and interest at the rate of six per centum per annum from the date of confirmation, or by a sale of the property benefited, or by both of the said remedies, which are to be cumulative, and every such assessment shall be a first lien upon the property benefited as ascertained by the said commissioners, to the amount of the assessment so made as aforesaid, with interest and cost from the date of the confirmation of such assessment.

11. And be it enacted, That all sums of money received from assessments for benefits shall be set apart by the said commissioners and devoted exclusively to the payment of bonds or obligations issued on its requisition, for the purpose of providing a fund to meet the expenditures of the said board and to the payment of the interest thereon.

12. And be it enacted, That any and all assessments which may be made under and by virtue of this act for benefits conferred shall be and remain liens upon the lands and real estate benefited as aforesaid, from and after the time when the same shall be confirmed, and any such lien shall remain until the same shall be fully paid and if any such assessment shall remain in arrear for a period exceeding six months after confirmation suit may be brought for its collection as aforesaid with interest and costs, and the said board may proceed to advertise said lands and real estate upon which any assessment may be a lien to be sold at public auction at the court house of the said county on some day not less than two months distant between two and five o'clock in the afternoon; that such advertisement shall be published at least once each week for a space of at least three weeks next preceding the said sale, in two of the newspapers published and circulating in the said county; such advertisement shall be the only notice required, and shall contain the names of the owners of land in default, if the same be known, if not, shall state the name of owners to be unknown, and shall give the amounts due from them respectively, with a short description of the lands and real estate to be sold, and at the time and place of said sale, said lands and real estate shall be openly sold to the person or persons who will take the same for the shortest period of time, not exceeding fifty years from the date of sale, and pay to the said board before the close of the sale the full amount due upon said unpaid assessments, with interest thereon from the time when the same was confirmed, at the rate of six per centum per annum, together with such sum as the said board may fix and determine to be a fair proportion of the expenses of advertising, conducting and making such sale; in the event that any purchaser shall neglect or refuse to make payment aforesaid, he shall forfeit all claim to said lands and real estate, and the same shall be resold by the said board upon like advertisement as aforesaid; the said board may adjourn any such sale from time to time by making proclamation thereof, and proceed therewith on the adjourned day, and the said board shall make and deliver to any purchaser at any such sale, who shall have made payment as aforesaid, a certificate of sale, signed by its officers thereunto duly authorized, and sealed with the seal of the said board, which certificate shall be acknowledged or proved according to law, and shall set forth as concisely as may be, the facts of said assessment, advertisement and sale, together with a short description of the lands and real estate sold, the amount actually paid therefor by the purchaser and the length of time for which he shall have purchased the same; every such certificate shall, before its delivery, be recorded in one of the books to be kept by the board for this purpose; such certificate may be assigned by deed of assignment under seal, duly acknowledged as aforesaid, and every such assignment may be recorded in the books of said board upon the payment of a fee of one dollar therefor; every owner of land and real estate so sold, his, her or their legal representative, or any mortgagee or mortgagees thereof, or any judgment creditor or creditors, having a legal or equitable interest therein, may, by payment to the said board, for the benefit of the said purchaser, his heirs or assigns, of the amount originally paid by the said purchaser, and of any tax or assessment which such purchaser may have paid, and of which he may have given written notice to the said board, with interest on all such payments at the rate of ten per centum per annum, redeem the said lands from the lien so imposed, but in case no such redemption is made the said board shall, at the expiration of the said period of three years, upon the surrender of any such certificate, execute and deliver to the purchaser, his legal representatives or assigns, a declaration of sale, to be executed in the same manner as the certificate of sale, and to be duly proved or acknowledged, stating therein briefly the facts of said assessment, advertisement and sale, giving a short description of the lands and real estate sold, and the time for which the same was sold; said declaration of sale shall be recorded in the books of the said board, and also in the record of deeds in the office of the register of said county, upon the payment of a fee of one dollar in each case; and until the recording of such declaration the time for redeeming said lands and real estate shall remain open, notwithstanding the expiration of the said term; every such declaration of sale shall be presumptive evidence in all courts and places that such sale and proceedings were in all respects regular and according to law; and such purchaser or purchasers, his, her or their legal representatives, shall, by virtue thereof, lawfully hold and enjoy such lands and real estate, with the rents, issues and profits thereof, for his, her or their own proper use against the owner or owners thereof, and all persons claiming under them, until the said term mentioned in the said declaration shall be fully completed and ended; every such purchaser so holding shall be liable for any injury or waste done or committed in the same manner and to the same extent as a tenant for years, but no mortgagee whose mortgage shall have been recorded or registered before any such sale shall be divested of his rights in and to the said lands and real estate, unless after notice shall have been given to him by any such purchaser for a period of six months (such notice to be in writing), such mortgagee shall neglect to redeem the said lands and real estate by paying the amount actually paid by such purchaser, including taxes, and including assessments subsequently made, with interest at the rate of six per centum from the date of payment, and also any costs or charges which he may have been by law obliged to pay; notice to every such mortgagee shall be served personally, if he be a resident of the said county, if not, it shall be addressed to him by mail at his place of residence, as stated in the said mortgage or any assignment thereof; every such mortgagee holding a lien on lands sold, redeeming as afor said may collect the amount paid as a part of the debt due, and every such person shall be entitled to receive and hold by assignment the declaration of sale as evidence of such payment, and as further security for the repayment of the sum so paid, with interest.

13. And be it enacted, That lands and real estate which are not bid off and sold when offered for sale, or for resale, according to the provisions of this act, shall be struck off to the said board by its corporate name, for the longest term for which such sale is authorized to be made, and said board may hold said lands and real estate and sell, assign and dispose thereof and use the proceeds of the same in the same manner as directed in the case of moneys paid for benefits assessed, and such board shall have in relation to the said lands so struck off to it all the right and privileges of a purchaser at such sale.

14. And be it enacted, That to meet the expenses incurred under the provisions of this act in addition to the sum of money received from benefit assessments as herein provided and otherwise, the board of chosen freeholders of the said county shall, from time to time, on the requisition of said board of park commissioners, in the name and on the credit of the said county, borrow money by issuing the bonds of the said county to a sum in the aggregate not exceeding two million five hundred thousand dollars, such bonds to run for a term not exceeding fifty years, to bear interest at a rate not exceeding four per centum, payable semi-annually; such bonds shall not be sold or disposed of at less than their par value, and may be made payable at any place which the said board of chosen freeholders may determine and they shall also determine the form of the bond; a sinking fund shall be established by the said board of chosen freeholders upon the issuing of any such bonds sufficient, with the accumulations thereof, to extinguish the principal of the said bonds so issued when due; the interest and principal of all bonds issued under the authority of this act shall be the debt or obligation of the county wherein they are issued and the payment thereof shall be provided for by taxation in the same manner that other debts and obligations of the county are provided for by taxation.

15. And be it enacted, That where sinking fund commissioners exist in any county in which such board of park commissioners shall be appointed under this act, and any such bonds issued, such sinking fund commissioners shall have the care and custody of the funds to be provided for the extinguishment of such bonded debt, but if no sinking fund commissioners shall exist therein, then it shall be the duty of the board of chosen freeholders of any such county to provide for the care of such fund, and it shall be the duty of the officers of the county charged by law with the raising of moneys for county purposes to provide annually in the tax levy for the interest which may fall due during the succeeding year on any bonds issued under the authority of this act, and also each year to provide by taxation a fund sufficient, with the amount received from benefit assessments by the said board of park commissioners, which shall be turned over for this purpose by said commissioners, and the accumulations of the sinking fund thus provided, to pay and extinguish the principal of all such bonds when they mature.

16. And be it enacted, That all lands taken or held under this act for the purpose of public parks shall be forever kept open and maintained as such and no steam or other railroad shall be laid out on, or maintained or operated in or on, any portion of the parks, open spaces, boulevards, parkways or roadways laid out and located under this act except at such places and in such manner as the said board of park commissioners shall in writing duly approve.

17. And be it enacted That every such board shall have power and authority to make rules and regulations for the government and use of all such parks, open spaces, boulevards, parkways and roadways, and to enforce the same by prescribing and affixing for the violation thereof suitable penalties, not exceeding fifty dollars for each offense; such rules and regulations shall be plainly printed and posted within such parks and public places or on such boulevard and other highways; and the said board shall have power and authority to sue for and collect the penalty prescribed and affixed for any violation of the rules and regulations so made in an action of debt in any court of competent jurisdiction; all fines and penalties recovered as aforesaid shall be used by the said board for the same purposes and in the same manner as other funds provided for its use.

18. And be it enacted, That any city or municipality within such county, or any local board in such city or municipality, having control of the parks or streets therein, is hereby authorized and empowered to transfer the care, custody and control of any park, public place or street under its care or control to the said board of park commissioners for the purposes of this act, with its consent, which consent such board of park commissioners is hereby authorized to give.

19. And be it enacted, That upon the appointment of commissioners in any county under the first section of this act, the commissioners appointed in any such county under the act entitled "An act to establish boards of county park commissioners, and to define their powers and duties," approved May eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, shall turn over to the board appointed under this act all their maps, plans and other property, and their powers shall terminate, except for the purpose of closing up their work.

20. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, both general and special, inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately; provided, however, that none of the foregoing provisions shall take effect in any county, nor shall the commissioners to be appointed under the provisions of this act, be appointed in any county, until the acceptance or rejection of this act shall have been submitted, as herein provided, to a popular vote; such submission shall be made, and the vote hereinafter provided for taken, at the next election, whether general, municipal or special, wherein the people of all the county qualified to vote are authorized to vote for local officers, and it shall be the duty of the county clerk at least ten days before any such election, to give public notice by publication in two or more newspapers published and circulating in the county that such submission will be made at the ensuing election, stating briefly the question to be submitted as herein provided, and it shall be the duty of the said clerk to provide ballots sufficient in quantity for the legal voters of the said county, not less than five to each legal voter as the number of voters appear by the last preceding election, and make distribution thereof as far as practicable in the manner provided by law for the distribution of other ballots at such election; every such ballot shall contain either the words "for the new park bill," or the words "against the new park bill," and an equal number of each kind of ballots shall be so printed and distributed; and the legal voters of said county may at such election decide upon the acceptance or rejection of this act by the use of such ballots; such ballots shall be cast at such election, separate and distinct from other ballots used at such election, and shall not, except as herein provided, be regulated by the laws regulating ballots used in the election of public officers; such ballots, however, shall be deposited when offered without being enclosed in an envelope by any legal voter in the ballot boxes used at such election for the election of public officers; and all ballots so cast for or against this act shall be counted and the result thereof returned by the election officers holding such election as herein provided; and the acceptance or rejection of this act shall be determined by the result of such election, and if there shall be found on a canvass of all the votes cast to be made as herein provided a majority of ballots in favor of this act, then this act, but not otherwise, shall take effect immediately in such county; the return and certificate of the result of the votes cast in every election district or voting precinct in such county for and against the acceptance of this act shall be filed forthwith after the close of the said election by the officers conducting the same, with the clerk of the county wherein such election is held, and it shall be the duty of such clerk to tabulate the said returns and canvass the votes so cast in all the election districts in said county and certify upon such tabulated statement the number of votes cast for the acceptance of this act, and the number of votes cast against the acceptance of this act, and he shall file such tabulated statement with his certificate thereon in his office, there to remain of record; and it shall be the duty of the said clerk, within five days after the filing of such tabulated statement and certificate, in case the same shall show that this act has been accepted in such county, to deliver a certified copy of the said tabulated statement and certificate to the justice of the supreme court presiding in the court of such county; and it shall be the duty of the said justice, within ten days thereafter, to appoint the commissioners which he is authorized by this act first to appoint; all expenses incident to this election properly certified by the president judge of the court of common pleas of such county shall be paid by such county wherein such election is held as other election expenses therein are paid.

21. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately as regards the submission thereof to a popular vote as aforesaid.

Approved March 5, 1895.

CHAPTER XCII.

A Supplement to the act entitled "An act respecting sewerage and drainage," approved March twentieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty, and to provide for the payment of the cost of sewers heretofore constructed, without authority of law, in or by and for towns and townships.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the town council, township committee or other governing body of any town or township in the state, if deemed by them best for the interest of the same, or any part thereof, to build and construct one or more main sewers in said town or township, and thence to tide-water, or to some other outlet sewer or sewers leading thereto, across the territory of adjoining or other municipalities intervening between such towns or townships and tide-water or outlets aforesaid, with the necessary laterals and appurtenances thereto, first making and entering into contract or contracts in the name of said town or township for the building and construction of said sewers and with the owners of lands necessary to be occupied or crossed thereby, and with such municipalities for permission for such occupation or the use or crossing of their streets and highways respectively for such occupation, or with the owner or owners of any sewers built or building by the owners of land advisable to be connected therewith.

2. And be it enacted, That all outlet sewers or sewers leading to tide-water across intervening territory aforesaid and necessary laterals and appurtenances aforesaid, or any of them, including such connecting sewers last above mentioned, if contracted for, shall be treated and regarded as parts of such main sewers, and all costs and expenses attending their construction or price shall, for the purpose of assessment, be included in and form part of the cost of any main sewer in connection with which it shall be built, to be collected from property benefited according to the provisions of the act respecting sewerage and drainage, to which this act is a supplement as aforesaid; provided, that no such sewer or sewers shall be so constructed as to empty or discharge any of its or their contents into any creek, stream, lake, pond or water course, the waters of which are used for or connect with waters used for the supply of water to any aqueduct, water main or reservoir of any city, township or other municipality of this state.

3. And be it enacted, That whenever there has heretofore been constructed or contracted to be constructed by the governing body of any town or township any sewer as aforesaid, whether within or beyond the territorial limits of such town or township, which has in fact been accepted by such governing body, or to raise and pay the cost of which or any part thereof, bonds of said township have been issued or agreed to be issued and delivered, but for the construction of which sewers and issue of which bonds there existed at the time of such delivery or contract for the same, no valid statute or law authorizing the same, or where the validity of such statute is disputed or doubtful, it shall be lawful for said town council, township committee or other governing body to issue bonds of said town or township in lieu of or in exchange for such bonds before delivered or contracted for, and to deliver the same to the holders thereof, or persons entitled thereto, taking up and cancelling any such first-issued bonds, and paying any interest due thereon out of the general fund of said town or township; any person having right to receive such original bonds may require such issue, substitution and delivery; and further, that in order to raise the costs and expenses agreed to be paid by such town or township for the construction of said sewer or sewers or the said outlet or outlets, connection or connections therewith, or the remainder thereof, it shall be lawful for the said town council, town committee or other governing body to issue, if in their judgment expedient, bonds in the corporate name of such town in such amount as may be necessary for that purpose; and all bonds contemplated by this act may be registered or coupon bonds shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, shall be payable severally in not more than twenty years from their date, and shall not be sold or disposed of for less than their par value.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 6, 1895.

CHAPTER XCIII.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to authorize the appointment of a board of commissioners to represent the state of New Jersey at the world's Columbian exposition, to be held in Chicago, in the year of one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three," approved March eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the geological exhibit, as the same was produced and exhibited in Chicago, shall be turned over to the geological survey of this state, and be under its control and management; the seminar exhibit shall be turned over to the state library, and the furniture and household effects and decorations of every sort shall be turned over to such departments of the state as may be advised and directed by the governor of this state; the agricultural exhibit shall be turned over to the state board of agriculture.

2. And be it enacted, That there be and is hereby appropriated the additional sum of twelve thousand five hundred dollars in excess of the sums heretofore appropriated in order to pay off and discharge and liquidate all debts due from and by said commission, and that same shall be paid by the treasurer of the state, upon warrant of the comptroller, to the treasurer of the commission in such sums as may from time to time be required and requested by resolution of the commissioners duly certified by the president of said commission, with the approval of the governor, and said sum so paid by the treasurer of the state to the treasurer of the board shall be expended and paid out only by resolution of said board upon the approval of the president of said board, and this appropriation when made and paid, shall be in full and final discharge of all debts and demands of said commission, and the transfer of the property named in this act shall be finally made by the officers of the said world's fair commission as herein declared, immediately after the passage of this act, and the respective state departments to which the said exhibits and property are transferred shall maintain, use and control the same as they use and control all other property of the said state in the control of said departments respectively.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 6, 1895.

CHAPTER XCIV.

An Act to enable towns, villages and municipalities governed by boards of commissioners or improvement commissions to construct sewers through tide-water creeks or water courses within their corporate limits.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any town or village or in any municipality governed by a board of commissioners or improvement commission in this state wherein any tide-water creek or water course now exists into which sewers and drains now empty, it shall and may be lawful for the governing body of any such municipality having the charge and control of sewers in such municipality, whenever they deem the same necessary, to cause to be constructed through such tide-water creek or water course an inclosed sewer to receive the sewage from the sewers and drains emptying into such creek or water course and from such point in such creek or water course or from such boundary thereof to such point in said creek or water course, or to such outlet of the same as shall be determined upon as most advisable and expedient, or upon any of the tide-waters or other waters bounding upon such town, village, or upon such municipality governed by commissioners or improvement commission into which the sewers thereof now enter; and further, to cause such creek or water course to be thereupon filled up, and such governing body are hereby invested with full power to locate and construct such sewer in manner aforesaid, together with all necessary drains, pumps, docks, dams, tide-water banks and such other works as they shall deem necessary either upon or across any private lands or other place, with full powers of condemnation of any lands taken for the purposes aforesaid.

2. And be it enacted, That the costs, damages and expenses of such improvement, including the cost of real estate required therefor as hereinafter provided, shall be assessed upon all the property benefited thereby in like manner as the costs, damages and expenses of constructing other sewers constructed by any such municipality are or may be assessed; provided, whenever the benefits of such improvement are extended to other property by the building of lateral sewers or connections, there shall in like manner, be assessed upon such property a just portion of the costs, damages and expenses of such improvement, which assessment may be made in connection with an assessment for such lateral sewers, or as an independent assessment.

3. And be it enacted, That the costs, damages and expenses of constructing such improvement, including the cost of real estate acquired therefor, beyond the amount assessed for special and direct benefits, shall be paid by the municipality constructing any such sewer, and such municipality may issue its bonds to the amount not exceeding in the aggregate the total cost of said sewer, and of the lands acquired therefor, in like manner as bonds are issued by such municipality for the payment of the costs, damages and expenses of other sewers constructed by any such municipality.

4. And be it enacted, That when any such improvement shall be located upon any lands other than public highways or streets, and such land or any easement, right or estate therein, shall be necessary for the construction of said sewer and appurtenances, then it shall be lawful for any such municipality as aforesaid to acquire the said land by purchase, or by condemnation; and in case condemnation proceedings are necessary, they shall award the owner or owners of such land just compensation therefor, and for the damages sustained by said land owner, over and above any special benefits derived from said sewer, and shall add the amount of such compensation to the cost of building or constructing such sewer and works; before fixing the compensation in any case, such governing body shall notify the owner or owners of the land sought to be taken for the purpose aforesaid, to the end that such owner or owners may have full opportunity to be heard upon the question of the value of such land; the award of compensation shall be final, unless such governing body reconsider the same and make a new award, or unless said owner or owners within twenty days after notice of the amount fixed as compensation for said land shall, on two days' notice to such governing body, apply to the circuit court of the county wherein such improvement is located for the appointment of three disinterested freeholders residing in such county, to review the assessment for the value of the land to be taken and damages sustained thereby, whose report shall be made to said court within twenty days from and after their appointment, and upon the confirmation by said court of such report and assessment for damages so make as aforesaid by said freeholders, the same shall be final and conclusive, unless either party shall, within ten days after confirmation of said report, appeal to the circuit court of the county, which is hereby invested with full power to direct an issue and try such appeal by jury, and to make such order as may be necessary therein; such award shall bear interest at the rate of five per centum per annum from the date of making the same until paid.

5. And be it enacted, That the money for such improvement as aforesaid may be raised by any such municipality by sale of improvement certificates or temporary loans, or by the bonds of such municipality, the issue and sale whereof for the purpose of this act are hereby authorized.

6. And be it enacted, That this act shall be deemed a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 6, 1895.

CHAPTER XCV.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to enable cities in this state to furnish suitable accommodations for the transaction of public business and an armory for the use of the national guard therein organized," approved April fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in any city of this state wherein there has been or may hereafter be erected a new city hall, pursuant to the provisions of said act and supplements, the commissioners appointed under said act are hereby authorized and directed to furnish and equip the said building for occupancy, to improve the surrounding grounds and to purchase all necessary furniture and fixtures and other articles in order to fully furnish and equip the said building for immediate use by the officers and departments of city government, and to this end said commissioners shall use their judgment as to the furniture, fixtures and other articles necessary to furnish and equip the same, but shall not expend for said purpose, however, more than twenty-five thousand dollars without the consent of the board having charge and control of the finances of such city; that for the purpose of obtaining the money necessary for the purposes aforesaid the said commissioners shall, in writing, notify the said board having charge and control of the finances of such city of the amount which, in their judgment, will be necessary to furnish and equip the said building as aforesaid and improve the surrounding grounds, and thereupon said board shall raise, either upon the notes or bonds of said city, drawn for such time as the said board or body shall deem necessary, the amount of money named in said request and place the same to the credit of said commissioners, to be expended for the purposes aforesaid; the notes issued as aforesaid may be afterwards replaced by bonds of the city issued to take up and pay off said notes, which said later bonds the said board are hereby authorized to issue for such time as they deem best, not exceeding ten years.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 6, 1895.

CHAPTER XCVI.

An Act respecting the assessment of taxes in cities of the first class in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it may be lawful in cities of the first class for the board having charge of the assessment of taxes for said city, with the approval of the mayor of said city, to make such assessments by numerical block numbers, irrespective of the existence of ward or district lines.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 6, 1895.

CHAPTER XCVII.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act to set off borough commissions from the townships in which they are located, and providing for their government," approved May second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever a borough commission has heretofore or shall hereafter become separated from the township in which it is located, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to set off borough commissions from the township in which they are located, and providing for their government," approved May second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, the said borough commission so separated shall hereafter be designated as a borough instead of borough commission.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 6, 1895.

CHAPTER XCVIII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of police justices in cities of the first class," passed May eighteenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the courts established by the act to which this act is a supplement shall be courts of record and have official seals, and that all persons shall be amenable to punishment for contempt of said courts in the same manner as in other courts of record of this state have power to punish for contempt of court; and that said courts shall hereafter be designated as the first and second criminal courts respectively of the city in which they are established, and the police justices of each of said courts shall hereafter be, and be designated, the judges of said criminal courts of said city; and the judges of said courts in each city shall make such rules as shall be necessary for the orderly conduct of the business and proceedings of the said courts, which rules shall be approved by and be subject to the revision of the president judge of the court of common pleas of the county in which such city is situated.

2. And be it enacted, That the board of police commissioners in such city where said courts are established shall provide suitable rooms for the transaction of the business of such courts, and procure suitable furniture therefor, and such books and stationery as may be necessary, and shall designate the police officers to attend the sittings of such courts and preserve order therein.

3. And be it enacted, That said courts shall have, possess and exercise, in addition to the powers, authority and jurisdiction which the said police courts and the said police justices thereof may now have, all the powers, authority and jurisdiction of the court of two justices of the peace, and of the justices of the peace in and for the several counties of this state, except such as are conferred upon the said justices of the peace by the following acts; an act entitled "An act constituting courts for the trial of small causes," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the various supplements thereto; an act entitled "An act concerning landlords and tenants" approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the various supplements thereto; an act entitled "An act for the relief of creditors against absconding and absent debtors," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the various supplements thereto; an act entitled "An act concerning forcible entries and detainers," approved April sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

4. And be it enacted, That no person tried in said courts shall be entitled to a trial by jury, except in all suits for the violation of city ordinances, and in cases arising under section five of an act entitled "An act concerning disorderly persons," and under an act entitled "An act for the maintenance of bastard children."

5. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for all commitments, writs and other processes of said courts either to be signed by the judge thereof or to be tested in the name of the said judge and signed by the clerk of the said court, and the said clerk shall have authority to take any complaint or complaints, or affidavit or affidavits, to be used in said courts respectively, and to administer any oath or affirmation proper to be administered in said courts, and by the instruction of the judge to receive in the judge's absence the verdict of any jury, and in the absence of the judge to adjourn the court to the following day; and that the dockets of said courts shall be kept by the respective clerks thereof, and the papers and records of said courts shall be filed by them, and be and remain in their custody, to be delivered to their respective successors; and that the said clerks shall have all the power and authority appertaining by law to clerks of courts of record, and the judge of said courts, or the clerk thereof in his absence, may take bail in all cases except treason, murder or manslaughter, provided that the amount of such bail when taken by the clerk shall have been first fixed by the judge; and in all cases of summary convictions had in such courts the complaint, warrant, record of the proceedings and conviction of the offender shall be and remain in the custody of such clerks as a part of the records of said courts, and it shall not be necessary to take or keep any record of the evidence or testimony taken on trial of any case in said courts.

6. And be it enacted, That in all cases when a complaint shall be made in said courts a summons or warrant may issue thereon in the discretion of the judge thereof; if a summons is issued it shall as near as may be, be served and returned in the same manner as in courts for the trial of small causes, except that the summons may be made returnable in two days from its service; if any trial or examination before any of the said courts shall be adjourned, the judge or clerk thereof may take bail to such city in which said court is established that the defendant shall appear in said court at the time to which the said trial or examination is adjourned, and not depart the said court without leave; and that if a defendant who has been duly summoned shall not appear on the return day, or on the day when such cause shall be tried, the said cause may be heard and determined in his absence, and if a commitment shall be issued, it shall be lawful for the defendant to be taken into custody under the said commitment in the same manner as under a warrant, and to be delivered to the keeper of the county jail as directed in the said commitment.

7. And be it enacted, That if any person shall be convicted in any of said courts, it shall be sufficient for the conviction to set out the name of the defendant, and the number of the section and the title of the statute or ordinance under which the conviction is had, the names of the witnesses sworn and a list of the exhibits produced at the trial, and a statement that the defendant was convicted, with the date of such conviction, which conviction may be signed by the judge of such court or tested in the name of the judge and signed by the clerk thereof under seal of such court; it shall not be necessary to set forth in said conviction the whole or any part of the testimony upon which such conviction is had.

8. And be it enacted, That the judge of any of said courts may, at the request of the clerk thereof, designate in writing a deputy clerk, who shall have authority to write for said clerk and to sign his name to all papers the said clerk being responsible for all the acts of his said deputy.

9. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for a judge of any of said courts to sit as judge of any other of said courts, and any duly qualified justice of the peace, at the request of the judge of said court, may sit in the place and stead of said judge; and the judge or justice so sitting shall have the same power and authority as the judge of said court.

10. And be it enacted, That any person found violating any ordinance of any of said cities, or of any board of such city, may be arrested by any police officer of such city or by any employee of said city or said board whose duty it shall be to enforce said ordinances, and taken before any of said courts to said city, when the case shall be summarily heard and disposed of by the judge of said court, without the filing of any pleadings, and if the defendant shall be found guilty the judge of said court may impose upon him a fine not exceeding the penalty prescribed for the violation of such ordinance, and in default of the payment of the said fine the defendant shall be committed to the county jail for any number of days the said judge may determine, not exceeding in number the number of dollars of the fine so imposed.

11. And be it enacted, That in all cases where any person shall be convicted in said courts of having violated any of the provisions of the act entitled "An act concerning disorderly persons" (Revision), approved April ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, or of the various supplements thereto, it shall and may be lawful for the judge before whom such person was convicted to commit such person to the work house or common jail of the county in which such person may be convicted, for a period not to exceed ninety days, or to impose a fine of not more than thirty dollars on the person so convicted; provided, that this section shall not apply to persons convicted under the fifth section of said act.

12. And be it enacted, That in case any person convicted in said courts shall have been committed to the work house or common jail in default of paying the fine or penalty imposed upon such conviction, it shall be lawful for the judge imposing such fine or penalty to remit the whole or any portion thereof, and to discharge the person committed from further custody; and in case any person convicted in said courts shall have been committed to the work house or common jail without a fine, it shall be lawful for the judge before whom such conviction was had, upon application made to him for that purpose, to order the person so committed to be brought before him for a rehearing and if on such rehearing it shall appear to the satisfaction of said judge that the person so convicted should be discharged from further custody, it shall be lawful for said judge to discharge said person.

13. And be it enacted, That in case any person shall be convicted in said courts of keeping or maintaining a disorderly house or house of ill-fame, in violation of the provisions of the ordinances of the city in and for which such courts exist, it shall be lawful for the judge to impose upon the person so convicted the penalty prescribed in the ordinances, or to commit the person so convicted to the work house or common jail of the county in which such person may be convicted, for a period not to exceed ninety days.

14. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the justice of the peace of the supreme court holding the circuit in each of the counties wherein such courts exist, or for the president judge of the court of common pleas of such county, upon application made for that purpose by any person summarily convicted in said courts, to order the complaint and warrant (if there be a complaint and warrant) the commitment, and the record of conviction, to be forthwith brought before him, and if such complaint, warrant, record of conviction or commitment shall be found illegal, such conviction shall be forthwith set aside, and the person so convicted discharged from further custody.

15. And be it enacted, That the said justice of the supreme court, or judge of the court of common pleas, for each case brought before him under the provisions of the preceding section, shall be entitled for his services therein to the sum of two dollars, to be paid by the applicant, and said fees, when paid, shall be disposed of as now required by law.

16. And be it enacted, That it shall not be necessary for judges of the said courts to take in writing the examination of any person brought before them charged with any crime, misdemeanor or offense not triable in said courts unless the person so charged shall ask for such examination.

17. And be it enacted, That the salaries of the judges and the clerks of said courts shall be payable monthly, in the same manner that other officers of such cities are paid.

18. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 7, 1895.

CHAPTER XCIX.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to remove the fire and police departments in the cities of this state from political control," approved May second, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the board of police commissioners in cities of the first class, created by the act to which this act is a further supplement, shall fix the compensation of the patrolmen at the rate of three dollars per day, the said compensation to begin on the first day of the next calendar month after this act shall go into effect.

2. And be it enacted, That on or before the first day of May in each year the board of police commissioners created as aforesaid shall estimate in detail the expenses of the police department for the ensuing year and shall transmit such estimate to the common council of such city or other body having charge of the finances thereof, which sum so estimated the said body shall cause to be assessed and raised by making provision therefor in the tax ordinance of each year; provided, however, that if said estimate for the expenses of the police department shall in any year exceed an amount equal to two mills and seven-tenths of a mill on every one dollar upon such valuation that it shall be optional with such common council whether the excess or any part thereof be raised by taxation in said city or not; provided further that the said board shall not make any expenditures or incur any indebtedness exceeding the amount so appropriated and raised; provided, however, that where in any city the amount now authorized to be raised for current general expense is fixed and limited that so much of the sum required by this act to be raised therein as exceeds the amount now by law required to be raised by taxation therein for the purpose aforesaid shall not be included in such limitation but shall be raised in addition thereto.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately, but its provisions shall remain inoperative in any city in this state until the same shall be accepted by the voters of such city by a majority of the votes cast for or against such act at any charter or general election hereafter to be held in such city; if a majority of those voting for the acceptance or rejection of this act shall be in favor of its acceptance then this act shall go into effect immediately, and the provisions thereof shall be deemed to be accepted by such city, and such city shall be bound by the terms of this act; persons entitled to vote at any charter or municipal election shall express their assent to or rejection of this act by depositing their ballots in the box provided for depositing ballots at such election in the election precincts or districts or wards of any such city; the words "for act to increase compensation of patrolmen" shall be printed on each ballot beneath the list of candidates thereon; if said words or proposition be marked off or defaced upon the ballot it shall be counted as a vote against the same, if not marked off or defaced it shall be counted as a vote in favor thereof; there shall be a canvass of the return of the votes upon the question of such acceptance or rejection made by the election officers in the same way and manner as for officers voted for at such election and if the majority of the votes cast for or against this act shall be found to be in favor of its acceptance it shall then, but not otherwise, go into effect and be binding upon such city wherein such vote shall have been taken.

4. And be it enacted, That in all cities which have heretofore accepted the provisions of the act to which this act is a further supplement the question of the acceptance of this act shall be submitted at the charter election to be held in such city first after the passage of this act, and thereafter the question of the acceptance or rejection of this act may be submitted at any election upon the order of the common council of other governing bodies of such city, expressed by resolution and voted for by a majority of all the members of said body.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby repealed.

Approved March 7, 1895.

CHAPTER C.

A Further Supplement to an act entitled "An act to remove the fire and police departments in cities of this state from political control," approved May second, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the board of fire commissioners in the cities of the first class created by the act to which this act is a further supplement, shall fix the compensation of the permanent members of the fire department as follows: to the captain or foreman of each respective company the sum of twelve hundred dollars per annum; to each permanent member who has served three years and over, the sum of eleven hundred dollars per annum; to the other permanent members of said fire department as follows: for their first year of service, the sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars per annum; for their second year of service, the sum of nine hundred dollars per annum; and for their third year of service, nine hundred and fifty dollars per annum; the above sums to be paid in monthly payments to the above captains, foremen and permanent members; the said compensation to begin on the first day of the next calendar month after this act shall go into effect.

2. And be it enacted, That on or before the first day of May in each year the board of fire commissioners created as aforesaid shall estimate in detail the expenses of the fire department for the ensuing year, and shall transmit such estimate to the common council of such city or other body having charge of the finances thereof, which sum so estimated the said body shall cause to be assessed and raised by making provision therefor in the tax ordinance of each year; provided, however, that if such estimate for the expenses of the fire department shall in any year exceed an amount equal to one mill and seventy-five one hundredths of a mill on every one dollar upon such valuation that it shall be optional with such common council whether the excess or any part thereof be raised by taxation in said city or not; provided further, that the said board shall not make any expenditure or incure any indebtedness exceeding the amount so appropriated and raised; provided, however, that where in any city the amount now authorized to be raised for current general expense is fixed and limited, that so much of the sum required by this act to be raised by taxation therein for the purpose aforesaid, shall not be included in such limitation but shall be raised in addition thereto.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately, but its provisions shall remain inoperative in any city in this state until the same shall be accepted by the voters of such city by a majority of the votes cast for or against such act at any charter or general election hereafter to be held in such city; if a majority of those voting for the acceptance or rejection of this act shall be in favor of its acceptance then this act shall go into effect immediately, and the provisions thereof shall be deemed to be accepted by such city and such city shall be bound by the terms of this act; persons entitled to vote at any charter or municipal election shall express their assent to or rejection of this act by depositing their ballots in the box provided for depositing ballots at such election in the election precincts or districts or wards of any such city; the words "for act to increase compensation of firemen" shall be printed on each ballot beneath the list of candidates thereon; if said word or proposition be marked off or defaced upon the ballot it shall be counted as a vote against the same; if not marked off or defaced it shall be counted as a vote in favor thereof; there shall be a canvass on the returns of the votes upon the questions of such acceptance or rejection made by the election officers in the same way and manner as for officers voted for at such election, and if the majority of the votes cast for or against this act shall be found to be in favor of its acceptance, it shall then, but not otherwise go into effect and be binding upon such city wherein such vote shall have been taken.

4. And be it enacted, That in all cities which have heretofore accepted the provisions of the act to which this act is a further supplement, the question of the acceptance of this act shall be submitted at the charter election to be held in such city first after the passage of this act, and thereafter the question of the acceptance or rejection of this act may be submitted at any election upon the order of the common council or other governing body of such city expressed by resolution and voted for by a majority of all members of said body.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

Approved March 7, 1895.

Continued from Page 8.

take is taken or condemned, the said board of assessors shall first estimate and assess in the manner herein required, the damage sustained by the owner or owners of lands and real estate taken therefor, and after having ascertained the amount to which the owner they shall declare in their report thereof the same and expense incurred, which shall include the damages awarded, and they shall thereupon at once proceed to make an estimate and assessment of the benefits conferred by the said improvement, as required herein, and they are hereby authorized to declare the damages awarded and benefits assessed in one report, or they may make their report of the damages and benefits separately, as they may deem best.

52. And be it enacted, That after the filing of any such report, the same shall be, at the next meeting of common council, presented by the city clerk, and the same being ratified by the common council shall be binding and conclusive upon the owner or owners of any such lands and real estate; and the lands condemned for any such improvement shall thereupon be and become the property of the city for the purposes for which the same are condemned; provided, however, that any person or persons considering himself, herself or themselves aggrieved by the proceedings of the said common council or of the said board of assessors in making an estimate and assessment of damages may appeal therefrom to the supreme court of this state within thirty days after the time of the making of the final order of the common council confirming the said report; and the supreme court shall order a trial by jury to assess the damages sustained by the party aggrieved, the trial whereof shall be conducted as in other cases of trial by jury; and the said court shall have the power to order an issue framed and proper proceedings to be had for the purpose.

53. And be it enacted, That in case of nonpayment on demand of any damages estimated and assessed as aforesaid, with interest from the date of the confirmation of such assessment, in case of an appeal to the supreme court as aforesaid, the person or persons entitled thereto may sue for and recover the same from the said city in an action of debt, with costs, in any court having cognizance thereof; and the said proceedings of the said commissioners and common council or the award of the said jury, as the case may be, shall be conclusive evidence against the defendant; provided, however, that where benefits for any such improvement have been assessed against any person or persons entitled to any award of damages, no recovery shall be had of the damages awarded until such benefits have been paid, and it shall be lawful for the said city to offset the benefits so ascertained against the damages so awarded; and if in any case the damages awarded exceed the benefits assessed the balance only shall be recovered; if the benefits assessed exceed the damages awarded, then the excess benefits may be collected in the manner hereinafter provided.

54. And be it enacted, That the city treasurer shall, under the direction of the common council, tender and pay to the owner or owners of such land and real estate, if resident in the said city, the amount of such estimate and assessment of damages due to him or them, and if any such owner is not resident in said city, or, upon due inquiry, cannot be found therein, or is a lunatic or idiot or under age, or if for any other lawful cause is incapacitated to receive the same, or if such owner will not receive the same and sign a proper voucher therefor when tendered, then the said treasurer shall make affidavit of such fact and file the same with the city clerk; and the common council shall thereupon direct the amount of such assessment so due as aforesaid to be placed in the city treasury for the use of the person or persons to whom it may be due; and the said moneys so placed in the city treasury shall be paid by such city to the person or persons entitled thereto on demand, but without interest, except from the time demand is made and payment after demand refused.

55. And be it enacted, That before making any assessment for benefits against any owner or owners of lands and real estate benefited, the said board of assessors shall give notice in the manner hereinbefore directed of the time and place when and where they will meet for the purpose of considering the same, at which time and place all persons interested therein may be heard, and the said board may adjourn from time to time until they have completed the consideration thereof and made report thereon as herein directed; and any person who may deem himself aggrieved thereby may present his objections to any such report to the common council of said city at its next stated meeting after the filing of such report; and if the said common council shall refuse to ratify the same it shall be returned by the said common council to the said board of assessors for further consideration, and so from time to time until such report shall be duly ratified and confirmed.

56. And be it enacted, That, upon the ratification of any such assessment of benefits, the report thereof shall be transmitted immediately to the officer charged by law with the collection of taxes, and it shall be the duty of such officer thereupon to give notice, in two of the newspapers published in the said city, that such assessment has been duly returned to him for collection; all such assessments shall draw interest from the date of confirmation, at the rate of seven per centum per annum, and, with the costs of collection, shall be and become, from the date of confirmation, a first and paramount lien upon the lands and real estate so assessed, which lien shall remain until such assessment is paid.

57. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the collector of taxes to whom any such assessment shall have been returned, in addition to the publication of the return thereof to him for collection as herein provided, as far as practicable, to cause a notice to be given to every person assessed of the amount of the assessment so made against him or her, with the cost which have been incurred in the collection of the same and the interest which has accrued thereon; but if, for any reason, such notice is not given to or received by the person or persons assessed, it shall in no way impair the right of the city to collect the assessment so made; in all cases in which assessments so made and returned shall remain unpaid for the space of six months from the date of confirmation, it shall be lawful to collect the same by a sale of the property assessed, and it shall be the duty of the said collector within one year after any such assessment shall have been returned to him to make sale thereof as herein directed; he shall, before making such sale, make advertisement thereof in two of the newspapers published in said city for the space of four weeks, at least once each week, giving notice of the time and place of sale together with a description of the lot or tract of land assessed by the letter or number by which it is designated on the city atlas, and specifying the amount of money so assessed, laid out and expended on the same; and he shall at the time and place so designated sell the said land and real estate at public sale for the lowest term of years at which any person will agree to take the same, not exceeding fifty years, and pay the assessment with interest thereon, and all other expenses incurred subsequent to the confirmation thereof; and thereupon the mayor of said city, at the request of the common council, and under its corporate seal, shall make, execute and deliver a declaration of sale to the purchaser thereof, and such purchaser, his executors, administrators, or assigns, by virtue thereof and under the authority of this act, shall lawfully hold and enjoy the said lands and real estate, for his and their own proper use, until said term shall be fully completed and ended; and they shall be at liberty to remove therefrom all buildings and improvements they shall erect or place thereon, during the said term, and every such purchaser, his heirs and assigns, shall pay all taxes which shall be lawfully assessed against the said lands and real estate during the said term; provided, however, that if the owner of any such lands and real estate, or any person having an interest therein or any mortgagee thereof, shall within six months after such sale pay to the purchaser, his executors, administrators or assigns, the amount of money so paid by him to said city, with the amount paid for any improvement made thereon, and all taxes paid by such purchaser, with interest at the rate of twelve per centum per annum, such owner or person having an estate therein or mortgagee, as the case may be, shall be entitled to re-enter and repossess the said lands and real estate and hold the same, and have such rights therein as if the said sale had not been made.

58. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the common council in every case to cause so much of the cost, damage and expense of any public improvement authorized by and made under the authority of this act as represents the special and peculiar benefit conferred upon the owners of land and real estate benefited thereby, to be assessed thereon in the manner herein provided, in proportion to the benefit of each shall be deemed to acquire, the balance of such cost, damage and expense to be imposed upon and borne by the city and provided for by general taxation; or the said common council may, at its option, provide that the entire expense of any such improvement shall be borne by the city at large, and shall have power within the limitations herein imposed to provide therefor by taxation.

59. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the common council to establish, by ordinance, the grades of the several streets and alleys which now are or may hereafter be opened in said city, and it shall not be lawful, after the same have been established to alter the grade of any street or alley except by ordinance, nor shall any such ordinance be passed until common council shall have caused a notice of such contemplated alteration to be served upon the owners of lots fronting or bordering upon that part of said street or alley, the grade of which is proposed to be altered, or to be published for two weeks in two of the daily papers of such city; which notice shall state the time when the common council will proceed to consider said matter, which time shall not be less than two weeks from the time of serving or first publication of said notice; at the time said matter is considered by the common council all persons interested may appear and be heard by themselves or their counsel for or against the alteration proposed; all changes which such alteration of grade may render necessary in gutters, sidewalks, front fences or other property of any land owner shall be made by the common council at the time of altering such grade, and said common council shall have a right to recover of any land owner who was an applicant for such alteration the expense of making such change in his or her gutter, side walk, front fences or other property, together with costs of suit, by an action of debt in any court of competent jurisdiction, in the name of any such city, against such land owner for so much money laid out and expended by them for the use of such owner and declare generally and give the special matter in evidence.

60. And be it enacted, That the common council are hereby authorized and empowered to pass and adopt such ordinances, rules and regulations as to said council may seem proper for regulating, controlling and prescribing the manner in which any sewer or drain constructed by order of said council shall be used, and the manner in which connections therewith, from any house, building, yard or other place shall be made, and for the keeping of the same in proper repair, and providing for the costs thereof; and sewers and drains constructed under the provisions of this act shall be constructed in accordance with the maps and surveys made, or hereafter to be made, for that purpose.

61. And be it enacted, That all assessments upon lot owners in said city, which may be made for any purpose authorized by this act or to be authorized by law, shall be made upon the lots or subdivisions of lots as they stand recorded on the city atlas; and in advertising the same for such assessments or for taxes, or in entering liens thereon, it shall be sufficient to describe said lots or subdivisions of lots by the letters and numbers and streets by which they are distinguished on the city atlas, together with the name or names of the owner or owners thereof, as the same appears in the register by the city surveyor; if in any case the name of the owner or owners is unknown and cannot be ascertained, such assessments may be made against the lots as so designated with the declaration that the owner's name is unknown.

62. And be it enacted, That whenever, by the judgment of any court wherein any certiorari has been, is or may be brought, or any assessment made under the provisions of this act has been or is set aside or reversed for irregularity or informality in such assessment, it shall be lawful for the common council to cause a new assessment to be made of so much of the amount of the original assessment as may be so set aside, or of the amount thereof still remaining unpaid, to become a lien as of the date of the confirmation of the original assessment, and to be proceeded with in all respects in conformity with the provisions of this act and the laws relating thereto.

63. And be it enacted, That whenever, by reason of any informality or illegality in any proceedings of the said common council or of the board of city assessors, surveyor or other agent of the common council or official of the city, in laying out, opening, altering, widening or closing streets, avenues or public squares, or in grading, altering the grade, paving, curbing, guttering and flagging the sidewalks of any street or avenue, or constructing any sewer or drain, any assessment shall be set aside by judicial authority, it shall be lawful for the common council to reinstitute the proceedings set aside, upon the same basis upon which the original proceedings were based, or otherwise if they see fit so to do, and lawfully proceed therein the same as though the former proceedings had not been had, or the said common council may reinstitute said proceedings from the point where such informality or illegality may have been so decreed, and whenever the common council shall discover that any such proceedings are liable to be set aside by judicial authority, they may reinstitute said proceedings from the point where such informality or illegality commences, and no assessment shall be deemed invalid in consequence thereof, but no writ of certiorari shall be allowed or issue to remove any assessments made upon the owner or owners of lands and real estate for any work or improvement made or to be made, unless the same be applied for within sixty days after the confirmation of such assessment by the common council of such city.

64. And be it enacted, That whenever any public improvement shall be made, or ordered to be made, and the expense thereof ordered to be assessed by the board of city assessors, and any member of the board of city assessors shall be interested in said improvement, either as an owner of property to be taken or to be assessed, or in any other way, except merely as a taxpayer in said city, such assessor shall not be deemed competent to assist in making the assessment connected with such improvement, but the common council shall, by a majority vote of all its members, elect some disinterested resident in said city to act with the remaining members of the board of assessors in making said assessments; such person, before entering upon his said duties, shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation before the city clerk, to be filed by him, faithfully and honestly to perform said duties; no report of assessment shall be considered illegal in consequence of the incompetency of any of the persons making such report, if a majority of the persons making such assessments were competent and disinterested; and it shall be lawful for the common council to make such reasonable compensation for the services of any person so appointed to fill such vacancy as it may determine.

65. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful, whenever the common council shall deem it necessary and for the public good, to purchase or condemn the plant, property and franchises of any person or corporation used for the purpose of supplying any city or the inhabitants thereof with gas, electric or other light, or for the removal and disposition of the sewage thereof; and if, under the authority conferred in this section, any plant, property or franchises used for any or either of the purposes herein specified shall be condemned, the method of procedure for this purpose shall conform to and be regulated by the provisions of an act entitled "An act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," approved April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and the supplements thereto; provided, however, that the power conferred in this section shall not be exercised by the common council until the same shall first be authorized by a majority vote of the legal electors of any such city, which election shall conform to and be regulated by the method of procedure, as near as may be, to the act of April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, above referred to, and the supplements thereto.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND SO FORTH.

66. And be it enacted, That if in any city of this state there are not public buildings, the property of the city, suitable and proper to accommodate the different officers and departments of the municipal government, and for public and municipal uses, it shall and may be lawful for the common council of such city, by ordinance, to provide for the erection and construction of any and all such buildings, and to purchase, appropriate and condemn suitable lands and real estate therefor, and to suitably furnish and equip the same.

67. And be it enacted, That if it shall be found proper and necessary to condemn any lands for any of the purposes mentioned in the foregoing section, authority is hereby given to the common council of such city so to do; and the method of procedure in every such case shall conform to and be the same provided for in the act entitled "An act to empower cities to acquire land for public use by condemnation," approved March seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, constituting chapter one hundred and four of the session laws of one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

BONDS.

68. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the common council, in the name of the city, under the authority of this act, to issue its corporate bonds for any sum not exceeding eight per centum of the taxable value of the property rated for assessment; and such obligations shall be issued in the name of the city and under its corporate seal, and shall be signed by the mayor and attested by the city clerk and countersigned by the city treasurer; they shall be of such denomination and bear interest at such rate, not exceeding five per centum per annum, and be payable at such times and places, not exceeding thirty-five years from the date of issue, as the common council may determine; they shall be disposed of at not less than their par value; the proceeds of such securities may be used for the purpose of making any of the improvements authorized by this act and for other lawful purposes; provided, that no issue of bonds exceeding the sum of ten thousand dollars at any one time, shall be made without the concurrence of two-thirds of all the members of council; and provided, further, that no permanent issue of bonds in any one year exceeding fifty thousand dollars shall be made, unless the incurring of the expenses for which said issue of bonds is to be made shall be first decided upon by a majority vote of the legal electors of any such city at a special election held for that purpose in the manner pointed out in section sixty-five of this act; in every instance the issue of bonds shall be authorized by ordinance, and the purpose for which the bonds are to be used shall be expressed therein, and the proceeds thereof shall be used for no other purpose; whenever bonds are issued to provide funds for any of the purposes authorized by this act any part of the cost and expenses of which is authorized to be assessed upon the property benefited, the assessment for benefits in every such case shall be exclusively appropriated for the redemption of the bonds so issued, and shall be kept separate from the other funds of such city and devoted exclusively to this use; and it shall be the duty of the common council to provide by taxation in the annual tax levy of such city such sum, in addition to the benefits so assessed, as will be sufficient in every case to provide for the annual interest of the bonds so issued and a sinking fund for the redemption thereof, which shall not be less than two per centum of the amount so issued.

69. And be it enacted, That the mayor, comptroller and city treasurer and the city solicitor, ex-officio, shall constitute a board of commissioners whose duty it shall be to take charge of the sinking fund of such city, and shall have power to make investments thereof from time to time, and to pay therefrom the obligations of the said city for which said fund is provided, as they may mature and the interest thereon as it falls due; they shall annually report to the common council the condition of the funds under their charge and the investment thereof; and the common council shall have the power to direct the manner in which such investments shall be made.

70. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the common council of such city to make temporary loans for a period not exceeding, with any renewals thereof, two years, which loans shall only be in anticipation of city taxes and of assessments for laying out and opening, straightening, altering or widening any street, road, highway or alley, and for the construction of sewers and drains, and the regulating, grading and paving of streets and sidewalks, and for fees imposed for licenses, and shall not exceed the amount of such anticipated assessments, taxes and license fees; and all such temporary loans shall be retired and paid when the revenues anticipated are received; and it shall be lawful to appropriate and use the moneys so obtained on temporary loans in anticipation of revenues for city purposes; and all moneys so appropriated and used shall be provided for in the annual tax levy.

71. And be it enacted, That whenever any bonds shall be issued under the authority of this act it shall be the duty of the city clerk and the city treasurer, under the direction of the common council and subject to such regulations as may be made by the common council in relation thereto, to keep an account of all such bonds in proper books, with the numbers, dates and amounts thereof, when redeemable, the place of redemption, the place where interest shall be paid and when payable, with the title of the ordinance authorizing the same and the names of the person or persons to whom the same shall be issued; and they shall supervise the negotiation thereof, and shall make report thereof to the common council from time to time and whenever required so to do; and it shall be the duty of the city clerk to furnish to the commissioners of the sinking fund a statement showing the amount of every such issue and all the particulars herein required to be recorded, as soon as the bonds authorized in any case shall have been disposed of.

COMPTROLLER.

72. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful in any such city to create and establish the office of the comptroller whenever the common council thereof shall by the passage of an ordinance determine so to do, which ordinance shall define the duties of such officer in conformity with the provisions of this act.

73. And be it enacted, That when such office shall be established therein by an ordinance therefor, the legal electors shall, at the next city election, elect some suitable person, a resident of such city, to serve therein; and the person so elected shall hold his office for the term of three years, and until his successor is in like manner elected and has qualified.

74. And be it enacted, That the said officer, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe, before any officer authorized to administer oaths and affirmations in this state, an oath or affirmation faithfully to execute the duties of his office to the best of his knowledge, skill and ability, which oath or affirmation shall be filed in the office of the city clerk of such city; and he shall give a good and sufficient bond for the faithful performance of the duties of his office in such sum as the common council electing him shall direct, which shall be approved by the common council, and he shall receive as compensation for his services such salary as the common council of such city shall prescribe, not exceeding two thousand dollars per annum.

75. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of such officer to sign all warrants on the city treasury, to superintend all fiscal concerns of the city in such manner, and to report thereon at such times as the common council shall by ordinance direct; to keep separate accounts of all appropriations made by the common council to each and every department of the city government, and to require all warrants on the treasury to state, particularly against which appropriation the said warrant is drawn; the said officer, on receiving a bill or warrant, shall examine the same, and if it be for any purpose for which there is no appropriation, or the appropriation for which is exhausted, or to which for any other cause he cannot give his approval, he shall report the fact to the common council, and the warrant in such case shall not be signed except by special authority from or direction by the common council; he shall, upon the death, resignation, removal, or expiration of the term of office of any officer or person who by law may be authorized to receive or disburse the moneys of such city for which said comptroller is acting as aforesaid, audit and examine the accounts of such officer or person and report the condition of his business to the common council; he shall, before the payment of any warrant against such city, first audit the bill containing or making up such claim, with a view to ascertain whether the supplies charged to the said city, or the services alleged to have been rendered, have been furnished and rendered as stated, and whether the sum or sums demanded therefor are proper, and after so auditing shall return said bill to the officer or department having control of the appropriations against which said claim is made and against which the warrant is to be drawn; he shall, as often as he may deem necessary, or as the common council may require, suggest plans to the said common council for the improvement, advantage and better management of the finances of such city; he shall have control of the fiscal concerns of all departments and officers of the city, and may require at any time, from any and all of its departments and officers, a full exhibit of their business and a statement and account, in writing, of any and all moneys and property of said city within the control or in the hands of said department and officers, and the said comptroller shall immediately, in case of any default, delinquency or official misconduct, report the same to the common council; and in order that he may fulfill his duties and make complete audits of the account, he shall have power, whenever he shall see fit, to examine all books, papers and vouchers pertaining to any and all departments of the city's business, and shall have free and unrestrained access to them for the purposes aforesaid; and the said officer shall also be authorized, whenever in his judgment the interests of the city shall require, to examine, under oath, any person presenting a bill or claim against such city for the payment of moneys; and also to examine witnesses and to investigate, by other evidence and inquiry, all facts relating to such claim which, in his opinion, are necessary to establish the accuracy and good faith of such claim, and to ascertain the city's liability therefor; that it shall be deemed a misdemeanor for such officer to sign any warrant or order, or otherwise procure the payment of any money from the city treasury, not authorized by law.

POLICE COURTS.

76. And be it enacted, That there shall be constituted in every city a court to be called "the city police court" (inserting the name of each city), which shall have power, authority and jurisdiction as follows: the said court shall have, possess and exercise all the jurisdiction, powers and authority in civil and criminal matters which are or may be conferred upon justices of the peace in and for the several counties of this state, excepting such as are conferred on such justices of the peace by the following acts: an act entitled "An act constituting courts for the trial of small causes," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the various supplements thereto; an act entitled "An act concerning landlords and tenants," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the various supplements thereto; an act entitled "An act for the relief of creditors against absconding debtors," approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and the various supplements thereto; an act entitled "An act concerning forcible entries and detainers," approved April sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, and the various supplements thereto; and an act entitled "An act to increase the jurisdiction to justices of the peace," approved March twelfth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, which jurisdiction shall, within the corporate limits of said city, be exclusive of all other courts, judges and magistrates, excepting the courts of oyer and terminer and general jail deliveries, quarter sessions, and special sessions of the counties of this state, and the judges thereof; and the said court shall have exclusive jurisdiction for the purpose of enforcing and recovering any penalty for the violation of any ordinance, by-law or regulation of said city, or any board thereof, and is hereby empowered, on oath or affirmation made according to law, that any person or persons has or have been guilty of any violation of any of the ordinances or regulations of said city, or any board thereof, to issue process at the suit of said city, either in the nature of a summons or warrant, as to the police justice thereof shall seem most advisable, against the person or persons, corporation or corporations so violating such ordinance or regulation, which process shall, when in the nature of a warrant, be returnable forthwith and when in the nature of a summons, be returnable in not less than two nor more than fifteen days; such process shall state what ordinance or regulation has been violated by the defendant or defendants named therein, and on the return of such process or at the time to which the matter shall have been adjourned, the said police justice shall proceed to hear testimony, and to determine and give judgment in the matter, without the filing of any pleadings; and such police justice shall, if judgment be rendered for the plaintiff, forthwith issue execution against the goods and chattels or body of the defendant or defendants, which execution shall be issued and returned as near as may be in the manner in which executions are now by law issued and returned in courts for the trial of small causes; such police justice is further empowered to inflict and impose fines not exceeding the sum of fifty dollars on such person as shall be brought before him charged with disorderly conduct, or breach of the peace, if found guilty; or, in his discretion, to order such person committed to the city prison or county jail for any period not exceeding ninety days; provided, that in all cases where the penalty shall exceed twenty dollars, an appeal may be taken in the same manner as an appeal might be had from judgments in courts for the trial of small causes; and such judge is hereby empowered to cause any person or persons who shall be found guilty of the violation of any ordinance or regulation of said city or any board thereof, and any person or persons found guilty of disorderly conduct, breach of the peace or any other offense within his jurisdiction, and who may refuse to pay any fine or penalty imposed by him by reason of the same to be sent to the city prison or county jail, for a term consisting of one day for every dollar of such fine or penalty, and each day's imprisonment of the defendant or defendants shall be taken to satisfy one dollar of such fine or penalty; the said court shall also have jurisdiction to try and determine all cases of simple assault and battery and petty larceny, where the offense is committed in the corporate limits of the city in which the court is established; provided, that the person or persons charged with any such offense shall, in writing, waive indictment and trial by jury.

77. And be it enacted, That the said police justice shall keep a docket of the proceedings in such court, which docket shall contain the names of the parties and a record of all the proceedings in every case, excepting the evidence given; this docket shall be the property of the said city and shall be kept in the court room, subject to the inspection of all persons lawfully entitled thereto; and all papers in every case (excepting complaints and recognizances required by law to be delivered to the prosecutor of the pleas of the county or grand jury) shall be filed and remain in said court; and no conviction other than the record in said docket shall be necessary in any case.

78. And be it enacted, That the common council shall have power, by a majority vote of all its members, to appoint a police justice of said court, who shall hold office for the term of two years, and until his successor has been in like manner appointed; every such officer shall, before he enters upon the discharge of his duties, take and subscribe before some person authorized to administer oaths, an oath faithfully and impartially to execute the duties imposed upon him by law, according to the best of his skill and ability; and shall enter into bond to the said city, in its corporate name, in such sum and with such sureties as the common council may approve, conditioned for duly accounting to the proper authorities for all moneys that may come to his hands as such officer, and for the payment of the same on demand to the person or persons entitled to receive the same.

79. And be it enacted, That the officers empowered to serve any process issued by any such police justice shall be, besides the constables elected or appointed in such city, the officers or members of the police force of such city; and such process shall be returned in the same manner, as far as circumstances shall permit, as similar processes shall be out of the courts for the trial of small causes or before a justice of the peace; and that such defendant or defendants shall, if such police justice see fit to adjourn the hearing of the charge, and so order, enter into recognizance as near as may be in the same manner directed in courts for the trial of small causes, or before a justice of the peace in such sum, and with such surety as may be approved by such justice; such recognizance to be given to such city for the appearance of the said defendant or defendants on the day to which the said hearing may be adjourned; and in default of appearance, the said recognizance may then be collected in the same manner as it might have been had the said recognizance been taken in a proceeding in a court for the trial of small causes, or before a justice of the peace; if a commitment shall be issued in any case when the defendant is not in custody, it shall be lawful for such defendant to be taken into custody under such commitment in the same manner as under a warrant; and to be delivered to the keeper of the city or county jail, as directed in such commitment.

80. And be it enacted, That in any proceeding had before such police justice for recovering the penalty for the violation of any ordinance or regulation of such city or any board thereof, such ordinance may be proved by a copy thereof certified under the seal of the city clerk, or by the introduction in evidence of any compilation of the ordinances of such city or any public board of such city duly authorized and recognized as the ordinances of the same; and due publication of all ordinances or regulations of any public board of such city shall be presumed to have been made until the contrary is proven.

81. And be it enacted, That the common council of such city where a police court is established shall provide a suitable room or rooms for the transaction of the business of such court and procure suitable furniture therefor, and such books and stationery as may be necessary; and such common council shall designate the place in said city where such police justice shall sit, for the transaction of business, and the time during which said court shall be open on each day, to the end that the administration of justice by such police justice throughout such city may be facilitated and made convenient; and it is hereby made the official duty of such justice to be in attendance at the time and place so designated; and the said common council shall designate and provide the police officer or officers to attend the sittings of such court and preserve order therein.

82. And be it enacted, That such police court shall be a court of record and shall have an official seal, and all persons shall be amenable to punishment for contempt of said court in the same manner as other court of record in this state having power to punish for contempt of court; and such police justice may make such rules as may be necessary for the orderly conduct of business and proceedings in such court; such rules shall be approved by and subject to revision by the president judge of the court of common pleas of the county in which such city is situate.

83. And be it enacted, That such police justice shall pay over daily to the treasurer of such city, for the use of such city, all fees, fines, penalties and costs which he may receive for the violation of ordinances and other offenses whereof complaint is made before him, and the receipt of such treasurer therefor shall, on the payment thereof, be a sufficient discharge for the same.

84. And be it enacted, That such police justice shall, whenever required by the common council, make a report in writing of the moneys received by him, as such police justice, not before reported, for fines, penalties and costs of suit, when and from whom, and for the violation of what ordinance or ordinances received, and what judgments remain unpaid; and when such written report shall have been audited by the comptroller of such city, said police justice shall, without delay, pay over to the treasurer of such city all moneys thereby appearing to be due from such police justice, taking the receipt of such treasurer for the amount so paid.

MISCELLANEOUS.

85. And be it enacted, That all laws in force in any city of this state not inconsistent with or repugnant to the provision of this act shall remain and continue in force, and all the powers conferred and duties imposed thereby upon the governing body or any municipal officer thereof shall apply to and be conferred upon all boards and bodies hereby created and officers to be elected or appointed under the authority of this act having like or corresponding powers and duties.

86. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately, but its provisions shall remain inoperative in any city of this state until assented to by a majority of the legal voters thereof voting at an election to be held in such city, at any time to be fixed by the common council of such city, or other legislative body of such city, of which the city clerk of such city shall cause public notice of the time and place of holding the same to be given by advertisement signed by himself, and set up in at least twenty public places in such city, and published in two or more daily newspapers printed therein, for at least six days previous to the day of such election; and said clerk shall provide for each elector voting at such election ballots to be printed or written, or partly printed and partly written, on which shall be either words "For the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act relating to and regulating the government of cities,'" or "Against the adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act relating to and regulating the government of cities;'" that the polls for such election shall be held at the usual place of holding the annual charter election in such city, and shall be opened at six o'clock in the forenoon and closed at seven o'clock in the afternoon, and such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of such city, for the time then being, and in the manner as may then be prescribed by the law regulating elections therein, and such officers shall return to the common council or other legislative body of such city, a true and correct statement in writing, under their hand, of the result of such election, the same to be entered at large upon the minutes of said body; and upon such adoption, and not otherwise, this act shall in all respects be and become operative in such city and binding on the inhabitants thereof, and upon all persons and property to be affected thereby, and shall abrogate, repeal and annul all acts and parts of acts, now existing, whether general or special, in any wise affecting the government of such city, which are contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

Approved February 4, 1895.

CHAPTER III.

An Act to render valid the proceedings of towns and other municipalities in the matter of the construction of sewers and the issuing of bonds to pay for the same.

Whereas, Some of the towns and other municipalities have proceeded to construct sewers and to issue or provide for the issue of bonds to raise money to pay for the same and there are grave doubts as to the constitutionality of the laws under which such towns and municipalities have acted, because the said laws are or are claimed to be special; and whereas, such towns and municipalities should have the right to finish the construction of such sewers and to issue bonds or to provide for the issuing and sale of bonds for the purposes aforesaid; therefore,

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all the proceedings heretofore taken by the council of any town or other municipality providing for the construction of any sewer therein and the issue and the sale, or proposed issue and sale, of any bonds to raise and pay the cost of any such sewer or sewers, shall be and the same are hereby ratified and confirmed, and the said bonds issued and sold, whether delivered or not, or to be issued and sold, are hereby made valid and binding obligations upon any such town or municipality as fully and as effectually as if the said proceedings were had and the bonds issued and sold or to be issued and sold, under an act of this legislature free from all constitutional objections and the assessments for benefits when made shall be as valid and effectual as if likewise made under an act free from all constitutional objections.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 5, 1895.

CHAPTER V.

An Act to provide for the compensation of certain officers of the legislature.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That as compensation for the legislative session for which the following named officers are elected or appointed there shall be paid to the second assistant engrossing clerk of the house of assembly the sum of six hundred dollars; to each additional doorkeeper of the senate, the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars; to the assistant bill clerk of the senate, the sum of five hundred dollars; to each of the two assistant bill clerks of the house of assembly, the sum of five hundred dollars; to the assistant private secretary of the speaker of the house of assembly, the sum of four hundred dollars; to the postmaster of the house of assembly, five hundred dollars; to the officer known as assistant to the clerk of the house of assembly, three hundred dollars; to the clerks of the following committees of the house of assembly, namely, judiciary, corporations, railroads and canals, municipal corporations, towns and townships, banks and insurance, and revision of the laws, the sum of three hundred dollars each, and to the clerks of the following committees of the senate, viz: municipal corporations and (judiciary and revision of laws combined, the sum of ($350) three hundred and fifty dollars each.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately, and shall apply to the present session of the legislature only.

Approved February 6, 1895.

CHAPTER VI.

An act concerning cities of the first class in this state, and providing for the purchase of lands and the construction and repair of buildings for high school purposes in such cities.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever the board of education or other body having charge of the public schools in any city of the first class in this state shall, by resolution, determine that the property or buildings devoted to high school purposes in such city are improperly located, or said buildings are unsanitary, inadequate or otherwise unsuitable for high school purposes in such city, by certificate signed by the secretary or clerk of said board or body, it shall be lawful for the common council or other governing body of such city, or board having charge of the finances of such city, by resolution, to appropriate such sum of money, not exceeding three hundred thousand dollars, as they, in their discretion, shall determine, for the purchase of lands and the erection of buildings, and the furnishing of the same, or for the repair and improvement of buildings, and for the furnishing of the same, used or to be used for high school purposes.

2. And be it enacted, That such city, by or through its common council or other governing body, or board having charge of the finances of such city, may, from time to time, or at once, as may be deemed most advantageous for the credit of such city, borrow the money so appropriated by the common council or other governing body of such city, pursuant to the provisions of this act, and may issue bonds of such city to the amount so appropriated, and may negotiate and sell the same at any sum not less than par, and the moneys so raised by the sale of such bonds shall, upon the books of the said city, be carried to credit of the board of education or other governing body having charge of the public schools of such city, to be used by such board or body for the purpose provided for in this act and for no other purpose whatsoever; said bonds so to be issued shall be made payable in not less than twenty nor more than thirty years, shall bear interest at a rate not greater than four per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, and may be registered or coupon bonds, or may be registered and coupon bond combined, at the option of the city; and there shall be raised by tax in each year, the interest on the whole amount of the bonds so issued, together with three per centum for the purposes of the sinking fund, to be paid to the commissioners of the sinking funds of said cities, for the purpose of meeting the said bonds as they may become due.

3. And be it enacted, That when, pursuant to the provisions of this act, the common council or other governing body of any such city, or board having charge of the finances of such city, shall have appropriated for the purposes of this act any sum or sums of money, it shall be the duty of the board of education, or other body having control of the schools of such city, to at once proceed to purchase lands and erect buildings suitable and adequate for high school purposes in said city, or to reconstruct, repair, improve and furnish such buildings; provided, however, that no lands shall be purchased for the purpose of erecting thereon a high school, except with the concurrence and approval of the common council, or other governing body of such city, or board having charge of the finances of such city, which concurrence shall be expressed by resolution of said common council, or other governing body or board having charge of the finances of such city, and the title to all lands so purchased shall be in the mayor and common council of such city.

4. And be it enacted, That all moneys raised by the sale of bonds, or otherwise, pursuant to the terms of this act, and carried to the account of the board of education, or other body having charge of the public schools in any city of the first class in this state, shall be carried in an account to be designated "high school construction account," and all warrants drawn by the board of education, or other body having control of the public schools in any such city, upon this account, shall have stamped or printed thereon conspicuously the words "high school construction account," and such warrants in other respects shall conform to the warrants now required by law for the drawing of moneys from the city treasury for the construction of other school buildings in such cities.

5. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect on May fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

Approved February 11, 1895.

CHAPTER VII.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to provide for the division of incorporated towns, townships and boroughs into wards, and to regulate representation therein," passed February fifteenth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in cases wherein any incorporated town, township or borough shall have been or shall hereafter be divided into not more three wards, pursuant to the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement, and there shall have been polled in any one of such wards at any subsequent election more than six hundred legal votes, it shall be lawful for the governing body of said municipality, at least fifteen days before the annual municipal election next succeeding the approval of this act, in case such votes have been heretofore polled, and in other cases at least fifteen days before the annual municipal election next succeeding such future election at which such votes may be hereafter polled, by resolution passed by a majority of their number at a special meeting held for that purpose, of which meeting notice, in writing, signed by the said clerk of said municipality, shall be set up at five of the most public places therein, for at least five days prior to said meeting, to redivide said incorporated town, township or borough into not less than three and not more than five wards, each of which shall consist of contiguous territory, having regard in making such division to equality of representation and to designate such wards by names or numbers.

2. And be it enacted, That from and after the annual municipal election next succeeding such redivision the township committee or other governing body of every such incorporated town, township or borough shall consist of seven persons, in case said division is into three wards, and of nine persons in case such division is into four wards, and of eleven persons' in case such division is into five wards, two of whom shall be elected by the legal voters of each ward, and one of whom shall be elected by the legal voters of the municipality at large; that at the annual municipal election next succeeding such division the legal voters in each ward shall elect by ballot one person to serve as a member of the township committee or other governing body for the term of one year, and one for the term of two years, and the legal voters of said municipality, voting in their respective wards, shall at the same time elect one person from the municipality at large to serve as a member for the term of one year, and annually thereafter there shall be elected in and for each ward one person to serve as a member of said governing body for the term of two years, and by the legal voters of the municipality at large, voting in their respective wards, one member for the term of one year; provided, that if at the date of the first election under this supplementary act the term of office of a member of the township committee or other governing body theretofore elected to represent a municipal subdivision or ward shall not have expired, then and in that case such member shall serve out his term of office as a representative of the ward in which his residence may be, and nothing in this act shall be so construed as to give more than two ward representatives to any ward.

3. And be it enacted, That in cases wherein any incorporated town, township or borough shall have been divided into four or more wards under the provisions of this act, and the legal voters resident in any one of said wards, and owning more than one-half in assessed value of the real estate in such ward, shall petition the township committee or other governing body of said municipality within ten days after the organization of said governing body, and request that the money to be levied, assessed and collected within such ward for that year for street paving, road repairs, road construction, crosswalks, sidewalks, street lighting and water purposes, shall be expended for said purposes within the limits of said ward, then it shall not be lawful for the said governing body to expend the money assessed and collected for the said purpose within said ward, otherwise in accordance with the request of such petition, unless such expenditure thereof shall be assented to by both of the representatives of said ward in said governing body.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 12, 1895.

CHAPTER VIII.

An act abolishing days of grace.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That on all notes, drafts, checks, acceptances, bills of exchange, bonds or other evidences of indebtedness made, drawn or accepted by any person or corporation after this act shall take effect, and in which there is no expressed stipulation to the contrary, no grace, according to the custom of merchants shall be allowed, but the same shall be due and payable, as therein expressed, without grace.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Approved February 12, 1895.

CHAPTER IX.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act to authorize the inhabitants of the several townships of this state to vote by ballot at their town meetings," approved March twenty-second, one thousand eight hundred and sixty.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in the several townships of this state the commissioners of appeal shall hereafter be elected for the term of three years; provided, however, that at the first annual town meeting held in such townships after the passage of this act, the said commissioners of appeal shall be elected for one, two and three years respectively, and at each succeeding election one commissioner of appeal shall be elected for the term of three years.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 12, 1895.

CHAPTER X.

An Act to authorize the counties of this state to renew matured and maturing bonds.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever any bonds heretofore legally issued by the board of chosen freeholders of any county in this state, under the authority of law, are now due and unpaid, or shall hereafter become due, the board of chosen freeholders of any such county may renew ninety per centum of said indebtedness, or any less part thereof, by the issuing of bonds for that purpose in the corporate name and under the corporate seal of any such county, signed by the director and attested by the clerk of the board of chosen freeholders of any such county; which bonds shall be made payable at periods of time not exceeding twenty years from the date of issuing the same, and shall draw such rate of interest not exceeding five per centum per annum, and be issued in such sums, not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, as the said board of chosen freeholders shall by resolution determine, and which bonds shall, except as hereinafter provided, have coupons attached for every year's interest until due, and which coupons shall be signed by the collector of said county, and numbered to correspond with the bond to which they shall be respectively attached; and when the said board judge best said bonds, or any of them, may be registered and made payable to the order of the purchaser, and shall thus be registered as provided by said board and issued without coupons, and be transferable only in person, or by power of attorney, on the books to be provided by said board for that purpose; and all bonds issued under this act shall be numbered, and a register of the number, denomination, date of issuing and name of person to whom issued, if registered, and time of payment, shall be made by the collector in a book to be provided by said board for that purpose; which bonds may be sold at public or private sale for the best price which can be obtained for the same, but shall not be for less than the par value, and all real estate and property within the county shall be liable for the payment of the principal and interest that may become due on the bonds to be issued by virtue of this act, but nothing in this act contained shall be held to permit any board to issue bonds the legality of which is now questioned or contested in any court of this state or of the United States, nor to renew or re-issue bonds held by any such court not to have been legally issued.

2. And be it enacted, That the board of chosen freeholders of any such county shall have power and authority to provide by taxation for the payment of said bonds and the interest thereon and shall yearly, and every year until the said bonds shall be redeemed and paid off, order and cause to be assessed and collected by tax, at the same time and in the same manner that other taxes in any such county are assessed and collected, a sum of money sufficient to pay the interest on the said bonds as the same shall become due and payable, and to pay and discharge the principal at the several times it shall become due and payable.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 12, 1895.

CHAPTER XI.

An Act authorizing the sinking fund commissioners of certain cities in this state to cancel the municipal bonds of such cities held by them for the redemption of the debts of their respective cities.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever the municipal debt of any city in this state exceeds, or shall hereafter exceed fifteen per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal property in such city for purposes of taxation, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of the sinking fund of such city to cancel all bonds that have been or may hereafter be purchased by them for the redemption of the debts of such city notwithstanding such bonds may not be by their terms due and payable at the time of such purchase.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general, special or local, and inconsistent herewith, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 12, 1895.

CHAPTER XII.

An Act for the establishment and government of a naval reserve of New Jersey.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the commander-in-chief be and he is hereby authorized to organize a naval reserve by voluntary enlistment for the defense of the sea coasts and navigable waters; in time of peace there shall not be maintained more than two such battalions organized as herein provided and which shall constitute the naval reserve of the state of New Jersey, but the commander in chief shall have the power in case of war, insurrection, invasion or imminent danger thereof, to increase the force beyond such limit of two battalions and to organize the same as exigencies of the service may require; the commander in chief may alter, annex, divide, consolidate or disband the said naval reserve or any battalions or divisions thereof, whenever, in his judgment, the efficiency of the state service will thereby be increased.

2. And be it enacted, That one battalion shall have headquarters at Jersey City and be known as the battalion of the east; one battalion shall have headquarters at Camden, and be known as the battalion of the west.

3. And be it enacted, That to each naval battalion there shall be a commander, who shall command the same; one lieutenant-commander, who shall act as executive officer, who shall be next in rank, and one lieutenant who shall act as navigator; these officers shall be chosen by the commissioned officers of their respective naval battalions; each battalion shall consist of not less than two nor more than four divisions; to each division there shall be one lieutenant to command the same, one lieutenant (junior grade), two ensigns, all chosen by the division, and thirty-six petty officers and seamen as a minimum, and eighty-one petty officers and seamen as a maximum; to each division there shall be allowed such and so many petty officers as the commander in-chief shall from time to time prescribe, which officers shall be nominated by the commander of the division to the commander of battalion of which such division is a part, who shall appoint and issue warrants to the persons so nominated when approved by him or order new nominations when disapproving.

4. And be it enacted, That the commander shall have power to nominate on his staff one adjutant, one ordnance officer, one paymaster, one surgeon, each with the rank of lieutenant (junior grade), one assistant surgeon, with the rank of ensign; the non-commissioned staff of the battalion shall consist of one master-at-arms, two yeomen and one chief bugler, who shall be appointed by the commander and warranted by him.

5. And be it enacted, That the uniform of the naval reserve and the insignia and designation of grade and rank shall be prescribed by the state military board, which may change and modify the same from time to time.

6. And be it enacted, That the naval reserve shall perform the same amount of duty in each year as is required of the national guard except that such duty, or any part of it, may be performed afloat.

7. And be it enacted, That officers and enlisted men of the naval reserve shall be paid for active duty in such amount only as is allowed to officers and enlisted men having the same relative rank or position in the national guard; members of naval courts shall receive the same compensation for services as members of similar courts in the national guard.

8. And be it enacted, That the system of discipline and exercise of the naval reserve shall conform generally to that of the navy of the United States, prescribed by congress; all matters relating to the organization, discipline and government of the naval reserve not otherwise provided for in this article, or in the general regulations, shall be decided by the custom and usage of the national guard, if applicable, and if not applicable, by the custom and usage of the United States navy.

9. And be it enacted, That the naval reserve shall be commanded by a captain, who shall be chosen by the commanders and lieutenant-commanders of the naval reserve when two battalions shall have been completely organized; the captain shall have power to appoint a staff, to consist of an aide, a paymaster, a surgeon, each of the grade of lieutenant.

10. And be it enacted, That the rank given in this article is naval rank; the relative rank of officers in the naval reserve and in the national guard is as follows: captain with colonel, commander with lieutenant-colonel, lieutenant-commander with major, lieutenant with captain, lieutenant (junior grade) with first lieutenant and ensign with second lieutenant; the relative position of seamen shall be that of private in the national guard, and the relative position of petty officers in the naval reserve, and non-commissioned officers in the national guard, shall be determined by the state military board.

11. And be it enacted, That the appointment, composition and powers of naval boards, delinquency courts, courts of inquiry and courts martial shall be as is now provided by the military laws of New Jersey for similar bodies in the national guard.

12. And be it enacted, That the divisions in the naval reserve shall be considered the equivalent of companies of the national guard, and the battalions shall be treated as battalions in the national guard not parts of a regiment.

13. And be it enacted, That the State military board shall make and publish regulations for the government of the naval battalions, which regulations shall conform as nearly as practicable to those governing the United States navy; the members of each battalion and division may form themselves into an organization and adopt by-laws in the same manner with the same powers, and subject to the same limitations as are now prescribed for members of companies in the national guard.

14. And be it enacted, That the armories of the naval battalions shall be situated on or near the navigable waters of the state, in such position as best to promote the efficiency of the service; the word "armory" as used or applied to the laws relative to the New Jersey naval reserve, shall be held to include a vessel anchored, moored or secured to the land, while used only as an armory for the purposes of instruction, drill or defence.

15. And be it enacted, That the quartermaster-general shall upon due requisition therefor, approved by the commander in-chief, furnish the naval battalions with suitable arms, uniforms, equipments and colors, in such number and quantity as are furnished to the national guard.

16. And be it enacted, That the commander-in-chief whenever it shall in his judgment be necessary or advisable for the public interest, may cause to be organized additional divisions of the naval reserve, not to exceed two, which divisions shall be attached to the battalions authorized herein, as the commander-in-chief may direct.

17. And be it enacted, That the commander-in-chief is authorized and empowered to make his requisition upon the treasurer, to meet the necessary and proper expenses to carry out the provisions of this act in such amount and not more for each division of naval reserve than is now allowed for a company of infantry.

18. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts not consistent with the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed.

19. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 12, 1895.

CHAPTER XIII.

An Act in relation to the manner of paying teachers in the public schools of certain cities in this state, and giving the common council or other governing body power in relation thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the common council or other governing body in any city of the first class of this state to provide by ordinance for the manner in which payments shall be made to teachers of the public schools in such cities, and for the form and manner in which warrants upon the public treasury of any such city shall be drawn and signed for this purpose; and all payments and disbursements made, and all warrants drawn in accordance with the terms of an ordinance duly passed for that purpose, in any such city, shall be deemed and taken to be in all respects regular and lawful.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 15, 1895.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Further Supplement to "An act for the construction, maintenance and operation of water works for the purpose of supplying cities, towns and villages of this state with water," approved April twenty-first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the first section of the act to which this is a supplement be amended so as to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any number of persons, not less than seven, a majority of whom shall reside in this state may form a company for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating water works in any city, town, township, village, seaside resort or borough in this state having a population of not more than fifteen thousand and not less than five hundred, and for the purpose of supplying such city, town, township, village, seaside resort or borough, and the inhabitants thereof, with water.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 14, 1895.

CHAPTER XV.

An Act fixing the time for holding the annual or charter elections of cities of the second class in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cities of the second class of this state the annual or charter elections thereof shall be held on the second Tuesday in April.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall go into effect immediately.

Approved February 14, 1895.

CHAPTER XVI.

An Act to provide for the purchase of water works and water-supply plants and the operation of the same, and to provide the money necessary for the purchase thereof in townships of this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for the township committee in the townships of this state to purchase any system of water works or water-supply plant now constructed and in successful operation in such township, owned and operated by any person, persons or corporation, upon such terms as may be agreed upon by said township committee and the said person, persons or corporation owning and operating the said system of water works or water-supply plant.

2. And be it enacted, That before the township committee of any township of this state shall purchase or enter into any contract for the purchasing of any water works or water-supply plant, such township committee shall, by resolution, submit to the legal voters of any such township, the question whether such township will purchase such water works or water-supply plant; if the proposition be to purchase any system of water works or water-supply plant, the ballot to be deposited by those in favor of such proposition shall have printed or written thereon the words "in favor of purchasing water works or water-supply plant," and the legal voters opposed to the purchasing of water works or water-supply plant shall deposit a ballot with the words "opposed to purchasing a water works or water-supply plant," printed or written thereon; there shall be a canvass upon the return of the votes upon the question submitted, made by the board of registry and election in the same manner as for officers voted for at any charter or municipal election; and if a majority of the ballots on which there shall be either the words "in favor of purchasing water works or water-supply plant," or "opposed to purchasing water works or water-supply plant," be found to be in favor of purchasing such water works, it shall then be lawful for the said township committee to purchase a system of water works or water-supply plant in conformity with the first section hereof.

3. And be it enacted, That the township committee of any such township may submit the question of purchasing a water works or water-supply plant to the legal voters of any such township at a special election to be held for that purpose, causing thirty days' notice of such election to be posted in five conspicuous places in such township and to be published in two or more newspapers printed and published in such county and circulating in such township, which notice shall be signed by the township clerk, and shall state the time and purpose of said election, and place where the same will be held in the several precincts or voting divisions of said township.

4. And be it enacted, That the said election shall be held and conducted on the day appointed by the township committee of said township by the board of registry and election and registry or poll clerks that held the last annual or municipal election in such township, in conformity with an act of the legislature of the state of New Jersey, approved May twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety, entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act to regulate elections,'" approved April sixteenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and the supplements to said act of May twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety, except as herein otherwise provided, there shall be no registration for such elections, but said board of registry and election shall procure and use at such special election a certified copy of the register of the voters filed with the register of the township; and no person shall be entitled to vote whose name does not appear on said registry.

5. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the clerks of such township to provide a room in such election district in which to hold said election, and to notify the clerks and board of registry and election that said room has been procured and where the same is located, in conformity with the act above mentioned, but said clerks shall not have booths or apartments prepared in said rooms nor shall any booths or apartments be used at such election.

6. And be it enacted, That at such election the persons entitled to vote therein shall vote by ballot, and each voter shall give his vote by a single ballot, which shall be a paper ticket, on which shall be written or printed the words provided for in the second section of this act; and no official ballot or official envelope shall be required at such special election.

7. And be it enacted, That if at the hour of seven o'clock in the morning of the day of such election, or at any other time during such election, any member of the board of registry and election, or any registry or poll clerk, shall be absent from the place where such election shall be appointed to be held, or shall be disqualified, or being present shall neglect or refuse to perform the duties of such office, it shall be the duty of such board to appoint some other person, qualified to vote in said election, in said election district, who shall then and there be present, to fill such vacancy.

8. And be it enacted, That in order to provide for the purchase of a system of water works or water-supply plant under the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for the township committee of such township, in the corporate name of the said township, to issue its bonds in any sum not exceeding in the aggregate five per centum of the taxable valuation of each township as shown by the tax duplicate, to be designated "water bonds," which shall run for any period not exceeding thirty years, and bear interest at any rate not exceeding five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, which bonds may be sold and disposed of by the township committee of such township at any sum not less than par, the proceeds of which shall be devoted exclusively for the purchase of a system of water works or water-supply plant owned and operated by any person, persons or corporation; and it shall be the duty of the said township committee to provide by taxation the amount of money necessary to pay the interest on the said bonds so authorized to be issued as the same falls due, and the principal of the said bonds when the same shall mature, and every such township shall have authority to levy and collect taxes for this purpose in case the rents and income from the operation of the said system of water works or water-supply plant shall not be sufficient to provide for the interest on the said bonds, and the payment of the said bonds at their maturity, after deducting such sums from the rents and income as may be necessary to extend the said system of water works or to make repairs thereto.

9. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the township committee of such township, from time to time, to pass such ordinances as may be necessary for the proper management, control and operation of the said system of water works or water-supply plant, and to appoint such officers as may be necessary, and to define their respective duties and term of office and compensation, and to enforce the collection of rents, rates and charges in any court of law in this state in the corporate name of the said township.

10. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 15, 1895.

CHAPTER XVII.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act relating to cities of the first class in this state, and requiring the publication of names of applicants for license to sell spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors," approved March seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section two of the act to which this is an amendatory act shall be amended to read as follows:

2. And be it enacted, That the cost of publication and proof required by the first section of this act shall be paid by the said municipality to said newspapers in the same manner as the other bills of said municipality are paid, and the amounts thus paid for publication shall be deducted from the whole amount of license fees received by said city before such license fees shall be carried to any special fund or funds to which the same may be appropriated; provided, that the costs of the insertion of the publication required as aforesaid in any such daily newspaper, including the cost of proof of such publication, shall not exceed the sum of ten cents per applicant for each of said insertions.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 14, 1895.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Supplement to the act entitled "An act relating to and regulating the government of cities," approved April twenty-fourth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the provisions of the act entitled "An act relating to and regulating the government of cities," approved April twenty-fourth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, shall not apply to or affect any city of the first class of this state.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 18, 1895.

CHAPTER XX.

An Act to repeal an act entitled 'A further supplement to 'An act to reorganize the board of chosen freeholders in counties of the first class in this state,' approved April third, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine," being chapter seventy-four of the laws of one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, which further supplement was approved March seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the act entitled "A further supplement to 'An act to reorganize the board of chosen freeholders in counties of the first class of this state, approved April third, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine," being chapter seventy four of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, which further supplement was approved March seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety two, be and the same is hereby repealed.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 18, 1895.

CHAPTER XXI.

An Act in relation to the writ of quo warranto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all acts of quo warranto, the Supreme court may, if the writ return and pleadings are properly framed for the purpose, determine by its judgment, not only the title of the respondent to the office or franchise in question, but also the title of the relator or relators to the same office or franchise, and shall have power, by appropriate process or orders, to enforce its said judgment.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

CHAPTER XXII.

An Act concerning the formation of borough governments.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That no election for the formation of any borough government shall hereafter be ordered unless the petition for that purpose shall be signed by persons owning at least one-half in value of the taxable real estate in the limits of the proposed borough, as the same appears upon the assessor's duplicate of the township; provided, also, that in case said proposed borough shall embrace parts of more than one township no such election shall be ordered unless said petition be signed by persons owning at least one-half in value of such real estate in the limits of said proposed borough in each of the townships.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 18, 1895.

CHAPTER XXIII.

An Act concerning the office of overseer of the poor in certain cities in this state.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cities in this state having a population of not less than fifty-five thousand, the common council, board of aldermen or other governing body of such city shall, within one month after this act shall take effect therein, appoint an overseer of the poor in lieu of and to be substituted for, and to act in the place of, and who shall be invested with and shall have all the powers and perform all the duties of such officer, by whatsoever title he may be now designated by law, to act in such office.

2. And be it enacted, That such officer shall be appointed for two years and until his successor shall be appointed and shall receive such salary as the body appointing him shall prescribe; and the term of office of every person holding such an office in any such city at the time of such appointment, by whatsoever name the same may be known, shall end at such appointment, and every such officer whose term of office shall so end shall immediately deliver up his office and all property, books and papers, matters and things whatsoever connected therewith, to his successor.

3. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts, general, special, public or local, inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 18, 1895.

CHAPTER XXIV.

A Further Supplement to the act entitled "An act respecting conveyances" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the fifty seventh section of the act entitled "An act respecting conveyances" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, shall hereafter read as follows:

57. And be it enacted, That all acknowledgments or proofs of deeds heretofore made or taken, or hereafter to be made or taken, after the lapse of ten years from the date of such acknowledgment or proof, notwithstanding any errors or imperfections in said acknowledgments or proofs, shall be taken and held to be good and sufficient in law; provided, however, that all such deeds shall have been duly recorded, and that this act shall be construed to apply to deeds executed by married women, and such deeds shall be sufficient to convey their estates in the lands described therein, whether the execution of the same shall have been acknowledged by such married women or their execution thereof proved by the oath of a subscribing witness thereto.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 18, 1895.

CHAPTER XXV.

An Act respecting certain township officers in townships whereof the territorial limits have been or shall hereafter be changed or altered.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever the territorial limits of any township have been or shall be altered or changed by taking or setting off and excluding therefrom the portion thereof which is included within the corporate limits of a town or city lying within said township, then and in such case all the township officers of said township excepting the assessor, collector and chosen freeholder shall retain, hold and exercise their respective offices in and for said township, with the powers and privileges thereto belonging, until the expiration of the terms of office for which they were severally elected.

2. And be it enacted, That the township assessor and collector of said township, if they reside within the part of said township that has been set off, shall cease to be officers of said township, but shall exercise and enjoy the office of assessor and collector respectively in said township or city so set off as aforesaid until the terms for which they were elected shall expire and until their successors are elected; provided, that the offices of assessor and collector exist under and by virtue of the provisions of the charter of said town or city or are authorized therein by any law of this state.

3. And be it enacted, That if the chosen freeholders of said township reside in the incorporated town set off as aforesaid, and said town shall be entitled to elect freeholders by wards, then said chosen freeholder shall hold his said office until the expiration of his term and until his successor is elected as the chosen freeholder from the ward in which he resides, and his successor shall be elected for a term ending at the same time as the terms of the other chosen freeholders of said town or city.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall be a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 18, 1895.

CHAPTER XXVI.

An Act in relation to debts fraudulently contracted and obligations fraudulently incurred.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever a debt shall be fraudulently contracted or an obligation shall be fraudulently incurred; it shall be lawful for the party defrauded to institute a suit, action or proper proceeding at any time after such debt was so fraudulently contracted, or such obligation fraudulently incurred to recover the money owing on any such contract or obligation or thereby contracted to be paid, notwithstanding the fact that by the terms of any such contract or obligation the debt contracted or the money secured to be paid thereby shall not then be due or payable, and that in such cases, upon discovery of the fraud, the party defrauded may either rescind the contract wholly, and recover any property so obtained by fraud, or may at any time proceed by action on contract for the recovery of the moneys owing thereon, and that in all the cases mentioned in this section, the plaintiff or complainant in such action, suit or proceeding, shall be entitled to all the remedies and processes to which he would be entitled in case the said debt or obligation was due and payable at the time of the beginning of such suit, action or proceeding.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall be construed in all courts of judicature in the most liberal manner for the detection of fraud, the advancement of justice and the benefit of creditors, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 19, 1895.

CHAPTER XXVII.

An Act in relation to the organizations, powers and jurisdiction of district courts.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the practice of courts of law," approved March tenth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, and being chapter ninety-seven of the laws of one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, and any and all supplements thereto heretofore passed or hereafter to be passed, be and the same are hereby extended to any and all district courts, whether organized under a general or special law.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed February 19, 1895.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Further Supplement to the act entitled "An act to ascertain the rights of the state and of the riparian owners in the lands lying under the waters of the bay of New York and elsewhere in the state," approved April eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four.

Whereas, The Palisades situate in this state are liable to be irreparably injured or destroyed unless measures be adopted for the preservation thereof; and whereas, by the insertion or imposition of proper and appropriate terms, conditions, restrictions and limitations in leases, grants and conveyances of the lands lying under water adjacent to or in front of the Palisades, the threatened injury or destruction thereof may in a great degree be averted;

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That hereafter the riparian commissioners shall not make any lease, grant or conveyance of any lands lying under the waters of the Hudson river adjacent to or in front of Palisades or adjacent to or in front of the strip of land between the base of the Palisades and the lands under water, unless there be inserted in the lease, grant or conveyance such terms, conditions, restrictions and limitations as will, so far as possible, forever thereafter preserve unbroken the uniformity and continuity of the Palisades, and also, so far as possible, prevent the lands leased, granted or conveyed from being in any way used or devoted to injurious or destructive work or operations against the Palisades or in connection with or for the encouragement, aid or promotion of injurious or destructive work of any kind against the Palisades.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 19, 1895.

CHAPTER XXIX.

An Amendment to an act entitled "An act to authorize the purchase or acquirement of lands for school purposes and the construction of school houses," being the title of the act as amended by chapter fifty-nine of the laws of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, approved February twenty-second, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section two of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for building school houses in townships,' approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty," being chapter fifty-nine of the laws of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, which amendment was approved February twenty-second, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

2. And be it enacted, That section one of the act entitled "An act for building school houses in townships," approved March eleventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall be lawful for any school district of this state at their annual meeting or at any special meeting called for that purpose upon legal notice, by a majority vote of the persons present at any such meeting, to vote and appropriate money for the purchase or acquirement of lands and the construction of a school house, or for the purchase or acquirement of additional lands to increase the present school grounds of said district, at such place in said school district as the trustees thereof may designate, and for that purpose the said trustees may acquire the said land by purchase or condemnation, provided a majority of the persons present at any such meeting shall vote on any proposition presented for the condemnation of lands; and any money heretofore raised by tax for any of the purposes aforesaid in any school district, and not otherwise appropriated or expended, may be used for such purpose upon the order of the school trustees of such district.

2. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved February 19, 1895.

CHAPTER XXX.

An Act to enable cities to lease lands for school purposes and to raise money to build school houses thereon.

